Once you study and see these New Testament forgeries for yourself which are chronicled by numerous scholars of the past centuries as well as the present and factor in the harsh reality and fact from your own study which will reveal to you that any existing historical evidence for a historical Jesus Christ that exists today outside this one book, the New Testament, is of a highly dubious nature or a forgery as shown by scholars today. When all this is done the "thinking believer" can see very clearly that this "evidence" for a "historical Jesus Christ" as a "human being" was manufactured and often invented along with forgery of historical records like Josephus for example and Suetonius and Pliny, etc.. Once all these things are factored together such as Egyptian study, Comparative religious study and a through understanding of Sun Worship, Gnosticism, study of the apostate Essenes and the Inter-Testamental Literature, the forgery of the Hebrew Scriptures when translated into Greek by these Essenes, the authentic Pauline Epistles and the Gnostic Christ, Marcion and the collection of the First Gnostic New Testament, the later refutation of Marcion's New Testament by Rome and the later invention of much New Testament writings along with forgery of existing Epistles, then it is not hard to see the puzzle come together for the "thinking believer. What we have is the fabrication of the New Testament "Jesus Christ" where Rome has taken the allegories and myths of the Ancients since Egypt and turned these "allegories" and "symbols" into a "literal history" of a man who never existed and created his life around the "literalization" of the events of the allegories taught about the Pagan gods and goddesses. Let me close with this reminder that is of immeasurable importance. Don't discount these myths and allegories of the Ancients when understood "allegorically" and not "literally". On prior websites Bet Emet has shown the fallacy of the "literalization" of these myths but on our Egypt site I show the truth of these "myths" when understood "allegorically".

In my opinion when one fully understands Egypt and Egyptian Religion CORRECTLY then there is not a truer expression of God on this planet! Sadly we have been taught to approach these "Pagan Myths" again "literally" but when they are seen "allegorically" and as "metaphors" that capture for all time "Divine and unspeakable truths" of the Creator then they shine in all their splendor and often are breathtaking in their simplicity and honest truth. Again these "myths" that capture "Divine Truth" must be understood as the Ancients who formed them understood them and in so doing we see God as never before; untainted by the fictional creation of mankind who molds God after their dreams of power and conquest.

These Ancient myths capture the workings of the Divine and His laws that order the Cosmos and the Universe and reveal Him and His ways to all mankind. This "order" and "law" was captured in myth by the Ancients and the messenger to mankind of this Revelation was "the Christ within" and not "without". This is the sad truth kept from us today and no greater tragedy is that we never see this misrepresentation of "the Christ" in Rome's New Testament when reading the "literalized synthesis" of this "Jesus Christ".

THE TUBIGEN SCHOOL...NOTICING THE JAMES/PETER VS PAULINE SPLIT

In the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries a conservative school of theology existed at Tubingen fostered by G C Storr (1746 - 1805) that stressed the supernatural character of revelation and biblical authority. Also, a Catholic "Tubingen school" attempted in the late nineteenth century to reconcile the church's teaching with modern philosophy and biblical studies. By far the best known, however, is the one headed by Ferdinand Christian Baur (1792 - 1860), which opened up new avenues in NT study and was the most controversial movement in biblical criticism in the midnineteenth century. Its major contribution was calling attention to the distinct strands and theologies within the NT itself and establishing the principle of a purely historical understanding of the Bible. The constrasts between the Synoptic Gospel and the Gospel of John, the various letters attributed to Paul, and Paul and the other early church leaders were carefully examined. Baur, much influenced by idealist philosophy, applied Hegelian dialetic to the New Testament. He found that the New Testament reflected, not a homogeneous development, but a fundamental tension between the Jewish church of Peter/James and the later hellenistic Gentile Chruch of the Romanized Paul.

The New Testament documents attempted to reconcile the conflict between an earlier Petrine and a later conflicting Pauline theology by formulating a new synthesis (making it appear as if the Apostles supported Paul when earliest church historians record that they did not). Baur believed that the authenticity of the various books could be determined by the degree to which they revealed "tendencies" of this conflict. He also traced out a similar kind of dialectical movement in the history of the church.

Ferdinand Christian Baur, b. June 21, 1792, d. Dec. 2, 1860, was a German theologian who founded the Tubingen school of New Testament interpretation. He received his education at Tubingen University, where, from 1826 to his death, he was professor of ecclesiastical and doctrinal history. Although Baur began teaching at Tubingen in 1826, the school's founding is properly dated from the appearance of his pupil D F Strauss's Life of Jesus in 1835. By the late 1840s the Tubingen School came under severe attack and the various members gradually drifted away. Baur himself became isolated within the Tubingen faculty as well as the German academic community, and spent his last years defending his views and producing a multivolume history of the church from a naturalistic standpoint, which explained all events by a combination of political, social, cultural, and intellectual causes but without any consideration of divine influence. Although relatively short - lived, the school with its emphasis on dialectical conflict within the early church, rejection of Pauline authorship of most of his epistles, and completely antisupernaturalistic outlook contributed significantly to the development of a historical - critical approach to the Bible that completely ignored the divine element in it.

As stated above Baur applied the philosophy of Hegel to New Testament interpretation. He was thus an early advocate of the historical or scientific study of the Bible. In 1845 he published a book on St. Paul, in which he applied the Hegelian principle to the history of early Christianity: Primitive Jewish (Petrine) Christianity, represented by the Gospel of St. Matthew, was the original force or thesis; Pauline Christianity was the antithesis or reaction against Peter - Matthew; and early Catholic Christianity, which brought these two forces together, was the synthesis. In the process, Baur rejected the traditional attribution of a number of Epistles to Paul. He held that Paul was the author only of Galatians, the two Epistles to the Corinthians, and most of Romans. Later Baur wrote extensively on historical theology. He developed a school of followers, mostly at Tubingen; but the movement declined with his death but the truth of his "thesis" has been borne out by subsequent study into this very interesting topic.

THE DATE OF THE APOSTLE PAUL'S CONVERSION.....DARE WE LOOK CLOSE?

It is the universal assumption that Paul, the persecutor of the early Christians, was converted by a vision of the risen Jesus, who proved his historic nature and identity by appearing to Paul in person. So it is recorded in the Acts of the Apostles.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever compared the conversion accounts of Paul for yourself? Are you aware that the account of Paul's conversion in the Book of Acts, thought by many scholars to be a second century documents, contradicts Paul's personal account in his authentic Epistle to the Galatians?

The account, however, is entirely opposed to that which is given by Paul himself in his Epistle to the Galatians.

Gal 1:15-16 15 But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace, 16 To reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood: (KJV)

He tells how the change occurred, which has been called his conversion.

Answer for yourself: How did it occur according to Paul?

It was by revelation of the Christ within, but not by an objective vision of a personal Jesus, who demonstrated in spirit world the reality and identity of an historic Jesus of Nazareth, who had lately lived on earth. Such a version as that is rigorously impossible, according to Paul's own words. His account of the matter is totally contradictory to the account in the book of Acts. He received his commission to preach the Christ, as he declares, "when it was the good pleasure of God to reveal his Son in me [notice Paul did not say "to me" but "within me"]," and therefore not by an apparition of Jesus of Nazareth outside of him! His Christ within was not the core of later Christian belief, but the Christ of the Gnosis. He heard no voice external to himself, which could be converted into the audible voice of an historic Jesus; and nothing can be more instructive to begin with, than a comparative study of these two versions, for showing how the true religious beliefs of the Gnostic Paul and his assumed conversion has been manipulated, and the facts perverted, for the purpose of establishing or supporting an orthodox history. What he did hear when caught up in the spirit he tells us was unspeakable; words which it is not lawful for a man to utter! Paul never makes mention of a Jesus of Nazareth in his authentic writings. Indeed, Jesus of Nazareth is unknown to Paul! His name never once appears in the Epistles; and the significance of the fact in favor of the present view can hardly be exaggerated.

The name of "Jesus of Nazareth" does not appear in the First New Testament and the Gospel of Marcion either and Marcion we remember just happens to be the strongest advocate of the Gnostic Paul that we could ever find since Marcion states that only Paul understood "the Christ" correctly. In combating this fact in their day the Christian Fathers, when cornered on this fact of the absence of "Jesus of Nazareth" from the earliest writings of Paul which made up most of the First New Testament, charged Marcion in removing the the name of Jesus of Nazareth from his particular Gospel--being so virulent a heretic! Yet here we find the early and authentic Paul in agreement with Marcion, the Gnostic rejecter of Jesus of Nazareth, and of historic Christianity. We also saw in an earlier article that Marcion's "Gospel" was the earliest Gospel foundation from which the later Gospel of Luke will be taken which teaches us that Marcion's Christ was the earliest Christ of the Christian Church. As if that was not enough let us never forget that Paul was the only apostle of the true Christ who was recognized by Marcion. Now, as Marcion had rejected the human nature of the Christ of Rome's making, and left the sect which ultimately became the church of historic Christianity. Having understood all of this as it has been so far presented than it is impossible that Marcion could have adopted or upheld the Epistles of Paul and a "Pauline literalized Christ" as it has come down to us in our current version of the Epistles. Hence, Irenaeus complains that Marcion dismembered the Epistles of Paul, and removed those passages from the prophetical writings which had been quoted to teach us that they announced beforehand the coming of the Lord! That is, Marcion, the man who knew & recognized his fellow-Gnostic in Paul, but rejected the literalizations and the spurious doctrines which had been secretly inserted by these proto-Catholic founders, who were the forgers of Historic Christianity which we have inherited today. Further, with regard to the Marcionites, Irenaeus says the Marcionites allege that Paul alone, of all the Christian teachers, knew the truth; and that to him the Mystery was manifested by revelation. These Marcionites spoke as Gnostics of a Gnostic and that Gnostic was Paul.

Now let us hear the words of an early Church Father that is not cut from the current mold and who give us a more truthful picture of the events handed down to us by Rome. Clement Alexander asserts that Paul, before going to Rome, stated that he would bring to the Brethren not the true Gospel history, but the Gnosis, or Gnostic communication, the tradition of the hidden mysteries, as the fullness of the blessings of Christ, which Clement says were revealed by the Son of God, the "teacher who trains the Gnostic by mysteries," i.e., by revelations made in the state of trance. He was going there as a Gnostic, and therefore as the natural opponent of Historic Christianity.

Now let us examine more closely Paul's supposed conversion.

Answer for yourself: Have you put on your thinking hats yet? You may need one for the following example. The conversion of Paul, according to the Acts, is supposed to have occurred sometime after the year 30 A.D. at the earliest; and yet if we accept the data furnished by the book of Acts and Paul's Epistle to the Galatians, he must have been converted as early as the year 27 A.D. Paul states that after his conversion he did not go up to Jerusalem for three years. Then after 14 more years he went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas. This second visit can be dated by means of the famine, which is historic, and known to have occurred in the year 44, at which time relief was conveyed to the brethren in Judea by Barnabas and Paul. If we take 17 years from 44, the different statements go to show that Paul had been converted as early as the year 27. Thus, according to the dates and the data derived from the Acts, from Paul's epistle, and the historic fact of the famine, Paul was converted to Christianity in the year 27 of our era!

Answer for yourself: Now for the $64,000 question: What was Paul supposedly converted to then if Jesus was not dead yet in the year 27 A.D./C.E.? Why did not Paul go up to Jerusalem and hold a conversation with Jesus personally since by all Christian scholarly accounts he is yet alive at this time? What does this whole deception teach us or should teach us? Well first of all that what we are reading in our New Testaments given to us by Rome might not be true and we have to dig out the truth from other sources available to us today.

This could not have been by a spiritual manifestation of the supposed personal Jesus to Paul, who was not then dead, and had not at that time been re-begotten as the Christ of the canonical history. This is usually looked upon (by Renan, for example,) as such an absurdity that no credence can be allowed to the account in the Acts. Such a supposed conversion by its own account is dubious if not an impossibility; whether you look at Galatians and the conversion account which evidently is forged as well or the book of Acts and its conversion account. This betrays the action of textual forgers trying to write into history and the texts grounds and support for their religious beliefs long after Paul is dead. They are trying to destroy the Gnostic Paul and his real faith in the "Christ within" which the earliest Christians held sacred. We know this for certain today since archeology has come to sound clearly the truths of that era that Rome tried to destroy and burn out of existence as they purged the great libraries of the world to hide the truth of their treachery. Study reveals Paul was a Gnostic and not an advocate in the Historical Jesus of Rome's invention. You cannot date one event by another which never occurred, or, if it did occur, is not recorded by Paul, especially when his own account offers negative evidence of its non-occurrence. It is only using plain words justifiably to say that the creators of the Acts of the Apostles falsify whenever it is convenient, and tell the truth when they cannot help it!

Answer for yourself: Well if Paul supposedly did not want to visit a still-alive Jesus at the time of his supposed "conversion" then why would he not want to see those of who followed him; his apostles and disciples?

In Paul's own account of his conversion he continues: "Immediately, I conferred not with flesh and blood; neither went I up to Jerusalem to them who were Apostles before me; but I went away into Arabia."

Answer for yourself: Dare we detect in Paul's mention and disdain for "flesh" more of his Gnostic thought? More than likely "yes".

It is recorded for us that Paul did not seek to know anything about the personal Jesus of Nazareth, his life, his miracles, his crucifixion, resurrection, and ascension; had no anxiety to hear anything whatever from living witnesses or relatives about the human nature of this Divine Being, who is supposed to have appeared to Paul in person; completely changed the current of his life, and transformed his character; no wish even to verify the historic or possible ground-work for the reality of his alleged vision of Jesus!

Answer for yourself: Don't you find that amazingly strange?

THE THEOLOGICAL SPLIT BETWEEN MESSIANIC JUDAISM AND GNOSTIC CHRISTIANITY

When reading the accounts of the New Testament we are told that when he did go up to Jerusalem, three years afterwards, and again in fourteen years, he positively learned nothing whatever from those who ought to have been able to teach him of the supposed historical Jesus and tell him all things on matters of vital importance (for historic Christianity), about which he should have been most desirous to know, but had no manifest desire of knowing. We are told in Galatians chapter 2 that Paul saw James, Peter, and John, who were the pillars of the church and persons of repute, but whatever they were it made no matter to him; they imparted nothing to him. He says these respectable persons, these pillars, who seemed to be somewhat, communicated nothing to him; contrariwise, it was he who had a gospel of his own, which he had received from no man, to communicate to them...the good news of the "Christ within" which was now to be taken to the Gentiles.

Col 1:27 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

Rom 11:13 13 For I speak to you Gentiles, inasmuch as I am the apostle of the Gentiles, I magnify mine office: (KJV)

These accounts need to be understood correctly for they depict contrary to what you might have supposed up to now; no doubt that Paul had come to bring them the Gnosis which according to him he was commissioned by God to take to the heathen Gentiles of the known world. They privately gave him the hand of fellowship, and offered to acknowledge him if he would keep out of their way with his other gospel--go to the Gentiles and leave them alone. There was a compromise, and therefore something to compromise, though not on Paul's account; but the only point of genuine agreement between them was that they agreed to differ! On comparing notes, Paul found that the Jerusalem Synagogue were preaching quite another gospel, and another Jesus, another form of "God's Salvation" [remember "Jesus" in Latin is the same as the Hebrew "Joshua" and both words mean "Yahweh is Salvation"] in the coming of a longed and prayed for Jewish human Messiah. Besides the Jewish nation had the Torah and already knew the consequences of awakening to God within and the righteousness that would come from such a spiritual enlightenment. It was the Gentiles who needed the awareness of "Joshua" or "Joshua-Jesus" or "Jesus" or "God's salvation". This human Messiah was not for Paul as his "Christ" was not a human but a Divine manifestation of God which was to be awakened within men and women as they recieved the mystery of Christ and the Christ awoke within them.

Eph 3:4 4 Whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ) (KJV)

Eph 5:14 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Could it be that Paul, when speaking of another Joshua or Jesus (in Hebrew Joshua means "Yahweh is Salvation" and Jesus is Latin for "Yahweh is Salvation), has in mind a spiritual salvation as taught by the Gnostics and the Jerusalem Church another salvation from Yahweh in the person of a human Messiah? Most likely yes. Both were speaking and looking for "salvation" but one political-military and the other in the souls of men.

Answer for yourself: Again we have to ask: "Just what was Paul converted to"?

Paul did not derive his facts from history, nor his gospel from the Apostles; he was neither taught by man nor book. Paul derived his gospel from direct personal revelation of the Christ within. This is Gnosticism!!! In short, his Christ was not that Jesus of Nazareth whom he never mentions nor the one suspiciously absent for the First Gnostic New Testament of 140 C.E. Once you see this and understand Paul's "Christ" is not the one that the Jerusalem Church-Synagogue preached and not the "historical Jesus" of Rome's production and once you do a comprehensive study of the true origin of the New Testament and its canonization which includes manuscript evidences that reveal the changes, omissions, additions, inventions, etc., of our texts in the New Testament over the earliest centuries of the Gentile Roman Churchthen you will understand in light of the absence in the earliest First New Testament of the Gnostic Christians of the:

- genealogies of Jesus Christ
- the birth narratives of Jesus
- the infancy narratives of Jesus and the later inclusions in 180 C.E. of:

forged Epistles in Paul's name (Pastoral Epistles for instance) which make Paul give an anti-Gnostic slant to his theology when his earlier authentic Epistles teach just the opposite Gospel forgeries in the names of the dignitaries of the Jerusalem Church-synagogue that have been used and created in order to futher the transformation of the "Gnostic Christ" into the "historical Christ", which had been understood "allegorically" since time immemorial.

By such cunning and deception and literary falsity and forgery the "Gnostic Christ" of Egypt and Paul was turned into a "historical being" which was placed in a historical time line by Rome in their ultimate religious synthesis where they fused together in "one person":

- The Jewish Messiah
- The Gnostic Christ

Once you study and see these New Testament forgeries for yourself which are chronicled by numerous scholars of the past centuries as well as the present and factor in the harsh reality and fact from your own study which will reveal to you that any existing historical evidence for a historical Jesus Christ that exists today outside this one book, the New Testament, is of a highly dubious nature or a forgery as shown by scholars today. ADOPTIONISM...THE EARLIEST BELIEF ABOUT JESUS

Put most simply, adoptionism is the theory that Jesus was in nature a man who became G-d by adoption. Most identiy this event with his baptism. Ebionism is similar to Adoptionism. It denys the Jesus' divine sonship with the Father. Ebionism also teaches that the Father and the Son (Jesus) are not consubstantial, meaning of the same substance, the same "person" or being. The Ebionites were the earliest to teach "adoptionism" concerning the nature of Jesus.

The earliest extant work which expresses this position is the Shepherd of Hermas, thought to be written by the brother of the bishop of Rome about A D 150. It taught that the Redeemer was a virtuous man chosen by G-d, and with him the Spirit of G-d was united. He did the work to which G-d had called him; in fact, he did more than was commanded. Therefore he was by divine decree adopted as a son and exalted to great power and lordship. This book was consistently considered "scripture" by the earliest church writers and finds its way into the earliest "canon" lists of the Early Church Fathers. Later it will be removed and we no longer have it in our New Testament for obvious reasons.

Adherents of this Christology who were declared heretics in the third century asserted it had at one time been the dominant view in Rome and that it had been handed down by the apostles. This view was perpetuated in the second and third century church by the dynamistic monarchians, who taught that Christ was a mere man on whom the power of G-d came and who was then adopted or constituted the Son of G-d. A leader in that general movement was Theodotus, who came to Rome from Byzantium about 190. He taught that Jesus was a man who was born of a virgin through the operation of the Holy Spirit. After the piety of his life had been tested, the Holy Spirit descended on him at the baptism. By this means he became Christ and received the power for his special ministry. But he was still not fully G-d; that was achieved through resurrection. Theodotus was excommunicated by the Roman Church, and the effort of his followers to found a separate church early in the third century had little success.

Adoptionism was an attempt to explain the divine and human natures perceived by some in Christ and their relation to each other. And as the great Christological debates raged during the fourth and fifth centuries, there were always a few who could be accused of taking this position. It did not flare again extensively, however, until the latter part of the eighth century, when it produced a commotion in the Spanish and Frankish churches. Elipandus, bishop of Toledo from c. 780, in his writings on the Trinity expressed the view that Christ was an adopted son; Felix, bishop of Urgel in the Pyrenees, taught a similar position soon thereafter. Numerous local churchmen opposed them; and their teachings were condemned by three synods under Charlemagne, who assumed the position of ruler of the church in his realm and who was concerned with its unity. Pope Adrian I also became involved, and the recantation of both men was obtained. They had a numerous following, however, and extensive efforts were required to bring these people back into the fold. The effects of the controversy lasted for decades in Toledo. Possibly remnants of the old Arian heresy contributed to the popularity of adoptionism at this time. A sound refutation of adoptionism was never made, and leanings in that direction appeared in some scholastic writings during the late Middle Ages.

DO YOU HAVE "THE FAITH OF JESUS" OR "FAITH IN JESUS"? #1

I remember it well. I had just finished my last final exam at Southwestern Theological Seminary in Ft. Worth, Texas. It was May, 1988 and I was "bewildered" at my 3 years of intense study where I obtained a Masters in Divinity. I had just spent 3 years of the most in-depth study imaginable of my Christian Faith and I had learned not one thing about the "Jewish Jesus" of my Bible. I had taken, for example Systematic Theology and learned in-depth the logical categorization of Biblical truths in my New Testament by tracing the various Christian "dogmas" and "doctrines" through the Christian Scriptures as a whole and then organizing them by doctrine. After 3 years I knew for certain what the good Baptist folks believed about the Bible. But nowhere in this "Christian Belief" did I find any mention of "Jesus the Jew" and what he believed "as a Jew" and I all the while knew certainly that Judaism does not accept the Christian revelation of the "Christian Jesus". For the life of me I could not understand "why" at that time in my life; it seemed so simple to me growing up reading my Bible. Devoid of any perspective of the "Jewish Jesus" after 3 years of intense study I recalled that prior to my entering Seminary that I read only one book entitled Understanding The Difficult Words of Jesus written by Roy Blizzard and David Bivin. I recalled how upset I became, page after page, as these Hebrew and Aramaic scholars showed me that so much of what I read and had heard preached from my New Testament was in error when the original Greek and Hebrew words and concepts were consulted and sought out and them compared to the "literal" and "historical" reading of the Bible in English. I was shocked beyond belief knowing that although I was reading my Bible in English that I did not have the "words" of this Jesus nor understood the original concepts that really laid behind what he taught and said let alone the many English words of my Bible. In fact it appeared to me after Seminary that I had a "Replacement Religion" since little if anything "Jewish" was mentioned or taught at all while I was there. Well, after 3 years in Seminary I was no further along in the pursuit of this "hidden Spiritual Truth" that is in this "mind of the Jewish Christ" because Seminary never addressed such things. I was only made a "better Baptist". But this "Jesus" is a Jew and not a Christian I kept telling myself and this only provoked my continued personal study for the answers to the questions that Seminary never provided. I recall setting there and talking to God on a park bench my last day at Seminary and this is what I said: "If Jesus were setting on my left, what does he believe that I have not been taught here; and if setting on my right, what does a Jew like Jesus not believe that I have been taught here"? I confessed to God that I simply did not know but made a promise to find out. I wanted the "mind of Christ" and a old book read with much passion 3 years earlier reminded me constantly that I did not have it! That was basically 20 years ago and God has been faithful to lead me to the answers of those questions that I posed to God on that Seminary park bench and He has done so without a doubt. That is one major reason why I no longer continue in my full-time Pastorate in my Dallas "mega" Church and why Bet Emet Ministries was birthed.

If you are reading this article and you are a typical Christian your experience most likely parallels mine. We both grew up being told, upon reading our Bibles "literally" and "historically", to have "Faith in Jesus"; that by "believing in Jesus" we obtain "Eternal Life" and possess right standing with God. Our security with God is obtained by by "believing" that Jesus Christ is both true God (the second Person of the Trinity) and true man (the Incarnate Son of God). Furthermore our "Salvation" and "Eternal Life" is likewise secured by "believing" the "literal" and "historical" great events surrounding Jesus Christ's life and ministry; that God sent His Son, born of a virgin, attested by miracles and by a sinless life, to bear the full penalty for humanity's sin. We are told that we are "saved" by "believing" that a physical and "literal" and "historical" Jesus Christ suffered and died in the place of sinners, thus satisfying the Father's just wrath against human sin, and effecting true reconciliation between God and mankind for those who have faith in these "redeeming deeds" and only "believe". We are told to "believe" in the physical scarifying death of Jesus on the cross which is the prophesied fulfillment of the atoning death of Christ-Messiah in which both God's love and God's justice are fully manifested and available to only those who "believe". We are told that the physical death of Jesus was an atoning death for those who "believe" in his death, burial, and glorious physical bodily resurrection from the death that culminated with his ascension into Heaven. We are told to "believe in Jesus" and his physical resurrection from the dead in which He conquered sin, death, and all the powers of Satan. We are told to "believe" that the physical resurrection of Jesus is God's historical affirmation and vindication of Jesus Christ's unique identity, mission, and message. We are told to "believe" that the righteousness of Jesus Christ in perfectly fulfilling the law of God is graciously credited to all who "believe" and have "faith in Jesus"; his identity and his works for mankind. It is "faith in Jesus" that obtains for the "believer" the imputed righteousness of Christ. Justification is strictly a work of God's grace, apprehended through "faith in Jesus" alone. We are told that redemption is solely a work of God's grace, received exclusively through "faith in Jesus Christ", and never by works of human merit. We are also told to "believe" that He will physically return in glory to resurrect and judge all mankind. Lastly we are taught to "believe" that "faith in Jesus Christ' is the only way of salvation and that there is no other way for mankind to "be saved" and "no man cometh to the Father" other than through "faith in Jesus. Let us sum it all up with this:

"For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God. (I Jn 5:13 13)

The above satisfactorily describes the normal "faith in Jesus" as taught generally by the vast majority of Christian Churches based upon a "literal" and "historical" reading and interpretation of the New Testament Scriptures. My focus now shifts to make the reader think thoughts that he has never possibly thought before; the real gift of a teacher. Let us concern ourselves now looking at Jesus while considering "the Faith of Jesus". Jesus, also known as Jesus of Nazareth, is the central figure of Christianity. He is commonly referred to as Jesus Christ, where "Christ" is a title derived from the Greek "christós", meaning the "Anointed One", which corresponds to the Hebrew-derived "Messiah". The name "Jesus" is an Anglicization of the Greek "Iesous", itself believed to be a transliteration of the Hebrew "Yehoshua" or Aramaic "Yeshua", meaning "YHWH is salvation".

It was after Seminary that I became interested in thinking about the differences between "faith in Jesus" and the "faith of Jesus". I was full of more questions than answers. I was staggered at the thought of how a community rooted in the life and teachings of a this Jesus of Nazareth, a Jew, who brought his message to other Jews (the disciples, those who heard him teach during his lifetime, the apostle Paul) developed into a community conspicuous for not living by Jewish law and indeed defined by its hostility to Judaism! This problem bears much thought by the "thinking believer" and "truth-seeker" as well as intense study to fathom the hidden answers to this question.

My life after Seminary and during my Pastorate years was consumed by scholarly reading trying to find acceptable answers to these troubling questions like the one posed above. I became acquainted with the best religious scholars, both Gentiles and Jews who have in the last two hundred years, written on the "Jesus Story". One of the most highly recognized scholars, E. P. Sanders of Duke University, is one of the leading contemporary scholars of ancient Judaism and Christian origins. He is well known for his work on what is known as "the quest for the historical Jesus." This "quest for the historical Jesus" is distinctly modern because it is based, as Sanders points out, on the thesis that not every statement or action the Gospels attributed to Jesus is attributed accurately. This leads to the further assumption that it is possible through exhaustive scholarly study to distinguish between what the man Jesus actually taught and did, and those teachings and actions incorrectly attributed to him by later writers.

Anti-Judaism enters the picture, however, when scholars apply their own values to judge a man who lived two thousand years ago. Since most "historical Jesus" scholars are Christian, they want a Jesus who is in line with their own values and beliefs, and often wind up concluding that what they find compatible and agreeable with their present Christian Faith represents the "true Jesus of history", while what they don't like is attributable to the "Jewish context" in which Jesus lived and taught. And that context, of course, was Palestinian Judaism in the late Second Temple Era. They would rather have "Faith in Jesus" than the "Faith of Jesus" which was Jewish; a Judaism I must remind the reader which all "non-Jews" could find a home, both in "conversion" as well as "non-conversion" as "Godfearers".

Scholars who try to distance Jesus Christ from Jewish historical context and in so doing many Christian writers portray the Jewish Christ as opposed to the Judaism of his time, or as an "anti-Jewish Jew." This distancing move then exposes the scholar to charges that he or she is himself or herself anti-Jewish. E. P. Sanders argues that not every accusation of "anti-Judaism" hurled at a particular scholar is necessarily correct. While a particular scholar may well be critical of aspects of Jesus' society, that does not always mean that he or she is anti-Jewish. He or she may simply be "anti-ancient," since the aspects of Jewish life that are often criticized (rituals, purity, apocalyptic eschatology) were common in the ancient world and by no means exclusively Jewish. At the same time, Sanders convincingly demonstrates that the Jesus Christ depicted in the New Testament was by no means opposed to the Jewish religion, though he may well have been critical of some of the Jewish leaders of his day.

Quietly these last twenty years or so there has been a revolution in Pauline studies. A "paradigm shift" has taken place in much of the scholarly world, a shift that stands the old view of Paul on its head. The new scholarship attempts to replace our picture of Paul as "the father of Christian anti-Judaism, the author of rejection-replacement theology, who claimed that God has rejected his people Israel and replaced them with a new people, the Christians." The dilemma that has bothered Paul's readers for centuries has up until recently been unsolvable but no more; given that Paul teaches that God has rejected the Jews and their religion, how do we account for a number of pro-Jewish passages in Paul's letters?

- For his insistence that God has not rejected his people (Rom. 11:1)?
- For his statement that "all Israel will be saved (Rom. 11:26-noting that Paul says 'will be saved' and not 'will come to recognize Christ')?"

Many of the seeming problems in Paul disappear when one strips away subsequent assumptions about what Paul "really" means and allows Paul's words to speak for themselves. Let us notice clearly that Paul is not speaking about Jews outside "the Jesus Christ-Messiah movement" at all. The argument is not about what Jews ought to do, but rather what Gentiles need to do: Should they adopt bits and pieces of Jewish observance in a haphazard and random way or in a more purpositive way? The "issue" for the "non-Jew" was never about "not" submitting to Jewish instruction and teaching about God, but rather as to "how much" of Judaism and its Biblical Revelation of God was to be imposed upon the "non-Jew" as "necessary" and which seemed at the same time "good to the Spirit of God".

Acts 15:19-21 19 Wherefore my (James) sentence is, that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles are turned to God: 20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood. 21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day. (KJV)

Here we find James, the leader of the Jerusalem "Messianic moment" and Jerusalem Messianic Synagogue/Church, declaring that the "non-Jews" and Gentiles follow the Divine instructions in the Torah and the Hebrew Scriptures pertaining to them that were written by Moses and the later Prophets. The reference to "in every city" encompasses the known world "outside" of Israel and involves Asia, Minor, and especially Antioch from which the later Gentile Churches would spread all over Asia, Minor and beyond. What is important to note at this most early time in history is that the injunction is sent with supreme authority from Jerusalem and the Mother Synagogue/Church headed by James as the "pattern" for all later Gentile evangelism and religious instruction. Due to the importance of Antioch as a major center in the ancient Roman Empire, many of the missionary efforts commanded by Jerusalem were launched from that city. In the early centuries of the Church's history, it was natural that the Church sojourning in Antioch would come to be traditionally regarded as one of the centers of world Christianity. It is also important at this time in our study to note that in Acts 11:23 the writer records that it was in that city that the disciples of the Jewish Christ were first called Christians; previous to this time period archeology and history records for us that the followers of the "Jewish Christ" were called "Chrestians" reflecting a more Metaphysical and Gnostic understanding of "the Christ"; not a "literal" and "historical" understanding as we have today. Note also again this further instruction for the "non-Jew":

Acts 15:28-30 28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us (the Jerusalem Messianic Synagogue/Church), to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; 29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well. 30 So when they were dismissed, they came to Antioch: and when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the epistle: (KJV)

It is not our purpose nor do we have time in this article to purse the hidden meanings under these 4 instructive headings for to do so would taken several in-depth articles; suffice to say that there is much more here than causally meets the eye upon cursory reading in English. As we get back on track with the purpose of this article please notice that "salvation" for the "non-Jew" came historically not having a "faith in Jesus" but rather to submitting to and observance of the Laws, Commandments, and Ordinance contained in the Hebrew Scriptures and the Jewish Torah which were contained in Biblical Judaism. The reader is strongly encourage to see that here, historically, we find the earliest example of Gentile evangelism and the message of the "Jewish Christ" as taken to the "non-Jews" of the world consisting of admonitions to observer those parts of the Jewish Scriptures that pertained to the "non-Jew"; more sussinctly said we find that the "non-Jews" of the world were instructed to follow those parts of the Jewish Faith pertaining to them and in so doing follow "the faith of Jesus"; not have a "faith in Jesus" as we have been so incorrectly told today by Rome's Bible which history again shows us is the "radical reinterpretation" and "addition" to the earlier Gnostic "First New Testament" of Marcion given the world some 30 years earlier.

Again, please notice there is not one instruction in any of the teachings from the Jerusalem Synagogue/Church for anyone to have "faith in Jesus"; that should strike the reader and "truth-seeker" as very problematic in light of how successive theology has been molded around this "Jewish Jesus" over the last 2,000 years by Rome and their creation of our "Second New Testament"; a collection of religions writings which under the exhaustive study of modern scholarship these last two hundred years has been shown to be highly unreliable and untrustworthy as to both doctrine and history. At the heart of this "literal" and "historical" unreliability of the New Testament, for instance, lies the problem of the numerous verbatim parallels found in the narrative about Jesus in the Gospels and Epistles of the New Testament when contrasted and compared to other parallels to ancient Mystery Religions since ancient Egypt on down through history until the emergence of the "Jesus Story" which is a composite "clone" and "synthesis" of all previous others. To approach these accounts of the New Testament Jesus with a "literal" and "historical" interpretation from prior Christian indoctrination while unaware of such parallels that exist between our "Jesus Story" and the other "Christ stories" of the ancient nations is one thing; but to approach this same "Jesus Story" with the same "literal" and "historical" interpretation once seeing these undeniable facts concerning the parallels and identical "stories", "events", and "sayings" that are shared between the New Testament Jesus and all the other "Krst/Christs" as taken from the ancient religions and Comparative Religious study is another. At first this might be alarming to say the least to the typical Christian but it need not be when you obtain the missing "keys" to properly understand and interpret the "Jesus Story" as it has been cherished and told from over 13,000 years before Rome's "radical reinterpretation" of it during the 2nd through the 5th century. We find upon study that our "Jesus Story" can be found repeated in the Spiritual allegories and Spiritual myths of Osiris, Horus, Dionysus, Attis, Orpheus, Hercules, Apollo, Greenman, Mithra, etc. This is a fact that the earliest of the Church Fathers always knew. Let me show you.

Eusebius, in his Church History, tells us that Justin, in his Dialogue with Trypho, says "there exists not a people, civilized or semi-civilized, who have not offered up prayers in the name of a crucified Savior to the Father and Creator of all things" (Hist. Eccl. lib i. ch. iv). Now let us listen to Augustine.

That which is known as the Christian religion existed among the ancients, and never did not exist; from the beginning of the human race until ...the true religion, which already existed began to be called Christianity. (Retractt. I, xiii,* cited by Dr. Alvin Boyd Kuhn in his Shadow of The Third Century , Elizabeth N.J.: Academy Press, 1949, p.3).

You should wonder what this "True Religion" actually consisted of given the fact that we inherited a "radical reinterpretation" of it at the hands of Rome during the 2nd through the 5th century, the same time for the writing and re-editing of their Second New Testament where the beautiful Mystical and Metaphysical Spiritual Allegories of the Descent of the Soul and Christ Mind into "matter" and the whole of humanity was tragically raped of its true meaning by Rome's antisemitism and repeated "literalization", "historicization" and limitation of the Christ to but one person of their own making; our Jesus of Nazareth as depicted in the New Testament as a "historical reality".

The reader must now take serious note of the fact that contained in the "sayings of this Jesus" and this "Jewish Christ" in our New Testament is the precious "Logia" and the "Wisdom Sayings of the Christ" cherished by Spiritualized humanity since the beginning of recorded time as far back as ancient Egypt and mankind's first every Bible; the Egyptian Book of the Dead. Every nation has had its "Christs" which expressed to humanity through each nation's culture and religion, century after century, the "Mind of God" to mankind concerning the incarnation of the Soul and its progressive Spiritual evolution and perfection. Judaism is no different here; it has its own "Christ" which spoke through Moses and the Prophets as did ever major world religion who heard God's voice through their Avatars. We find this same "Divine Message" to mankind concerning the Soul as far back as we go and in every major world religion without exception.

Such knowledge coupled with Judaism's denial of the New Testament Jesus not being their longed-for Messiah since the true and unadulterated, unforged, and uncorrupted Hebrew Scriptures have not been fulfilled, Scriptures not contained in our forged and purposefully mistranslated Roman Bibles, brings pause to the mind of the Christian as to what to do with our inherited "Jesus Story". It should be obvious now that "faith in Jesus" and Rome's theologies surrounding him are in great suspicion since possessing the knowledge mentioned in this article. This should give a "believer in Jesus" and "truth-seeker" all the more reason to look deeper at his "Jesus Story" than ever before; it did me. Only in this way when I committed myself to serious study to find the "keys" that unlock my "Jesus Story" did the answers finally come over the years. No longer could I have "faith in Jesus" as Rome had led me to believe was necessary for my salvation; it was clearer than ever that like the early Jerusalem Synagogue/Church that I needed to be a "follower" of the Jewish Christ and have "the faith of Jesus" as expressed through Judaism. Little did I know way back then that in my studies of Judaism that I would find the "motherload"; besides the steps for the Spiritual perfection of my Soul, I would find the unbroken links to the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of antiquity and see Biblical Judaism as the legacy of the great ancient Egyptian Religion that set the Spiritual Mark for mankind and yet does today!

But as simple as it sounds it is not; for we meet two different Pauls in the New Testament as our studies advance; a "Romanized" Paul and the true Gnostic Paul. Discerning the differences between these two different Pauls and their conflicting theologies is possible only when the reader becomes familiar with and possess sufficient knowledge of Gnosticism, the ancient Egyptian Religion and Astro-theology as did the ancients who gave us these Scriptures in the first place. We make the fatal mistake over and over again in reading these thousands of years old Scriptures that the ancient wrote their Scriptures "literally"; they did not. Spiritual ideas were cloaked behind symbol, myth, allegory, ciphers, etc. Unless we approach our Bibles armed with these facts then we have no hope of ever interpreting them correctly and understanding their true message and bringing its relevance to our lives.

So we have settled one thing so far; we must be focused not so much as having "faith in Jesus" and all the religious theologies surrounding his "Roman reinterpred identity" of which we read so often in Rome's Second New Testament but living in our lives the "faith of Jesus" or "the faith of the Jewish Christ" which was taught through Judaism to the Gentile world which we earlier saw was done as letters from the Jerusalem Church were sent by Paul and Silas into the whole of Asia, Minor, carrying with them the authority of the first century by the Jerusalem Synagogue/Church. It is important to note that true Paul is not arguing in his 7 authentic Epistles that Jews should not observe the Torah in the New Testament, he is not maintaining that the Torah and Laws of God are ineffective or "ceased" as a means of preservation, sanctification and salvation of the Soul; rather the Torah and its Laws are the God-given methods by which the Soul achieves its own Self-unfoldment whereby it evolves into the "stature and fullness" of Christ. The true Paul is not saying that God has rejected the Jews; rather, the true Paul is arguing that God has now, through "the faith of Jesus", the Jewish Faith, which has always provided a seat for the "non-Jew" at God's table, provided a path to salvation for Gentiles without the requirement of "full conversion" which many in Judaism had unfairly required of the "non-Jew". But that was over; now, in spite of various sects of Judaism who desired otherwise, God was reaffirming what He had always taught. God was reminding the Jews that He has always grafted "into His family and "Israel" the "non-Jew" and joined him with the Jewish people in God's economy of salvation through faith in God and obedience to His Laws and Commandments. It is in Biblical Judaism that the "non-Jew" finds his Covenants with God; not the replacement religion of Rome and their self-created Christian religion which is the anthesis of Biblical Judaism!

Since now affirming the "Faith of Jesus" instead of "Faith in Jesus" it behooves the reader to understand the simplicity of the "message of the Jewish Christ-Messiah". The prime elements of the message given mankind by the "Jewish Christ" were:

- a call for personal repentance and realignment of behavior which would lead to the creation of the Kingdom of God, a new social and religious order on earth.
- a call to fully love God with all your resources.
- a call to love your neighbors, including your enemies, and to take no aggressive acts against those that oppress you.
- a new interpretation of Jewish law which gave priority to one's responsibility to God and to one's fellow man, while downgrading the relative importance of ritual and ceremony.

DO YOU HAVE "THE FAITH OF JESUS" OR "FAITH IN JESUS"? #2

We begin this second article by reiterating what we learned from the first article; namely, that a "believer" in "the Jewish Christ" should be more concerned about having "the Faith of Jesus" and following the message and teachings of the "Jewish Christ-Messiah" than having "Faith in Jesus" and the associated religious and theological dogmas created around this depiction of Jesus and his "identity" as created by and taught by Christian Church tradition. We continue to solidify this premise in the further evidences and facts presented in the following article and we now take up were we left off from the first article and proceed to even greater Divine Truths than we learned previously.

Many Christians suffer from what I call "double vision" when they behold the the depiction of Jesus in the New Testament. When he is referred to as "Jesus," they can vaguely envision him as a Jew whose example shows us that he observed and practiced the Jewish Faith (Biblical Judaism) and taught Moses and the Jewish Prophets all the days of his life and who, by the examples given in the New Testament, never intended to start a "new religion" that would replace the great Jewish Faith of Israel. When Jesus taught the crowds on a hillside, he taught as a Jew. The Sermon on the Mount was a Jewish sermon. The prayer we call The Lord's Prayer was taught by a Jewish teacher to his Jewish followers and had been taught centuries before by other Jews and is known as the Amidah. They called him, "Rabbi." Jesus never repudiated Judaism and He never renounced it for himself as the way that man should seek and worship God. Jesus taught compassion and love; like other Jewish teachers, he was inspired by profound respect for the Scriptures and the Jewish laws of Moses. Jesus not only taught others how to live a devotional Jewish life, he lived it Himself. The outward signs of this were such things as wearing tzitzit (tassels) on His clothing (Luke 8.43, Matt. 14:36, Strong's New Testament) to serve as a reminder of the commandments (Num. 15:37-39). He observed Passover (John 2:13). He observed Succot (John 7:2-10) and went up into the temple (John 7:14). He also observed Hanukah (John 10:22). The depiction of Jesus in the New Testament only affirms the teaching of a unique "Spiritualized" form of Judaism, but he does not see himself as starting a new religion. Especially distinctive is the way that Jesus directs the teachings of Judaism to all--including women, children, sinners, the sick and even the Gentiles--and not just to the educated class or to a particular religious group; it was God's message to the whole of mankind, both "Jew" and "non-Jew" and yet is today. Within this Judaism lays the very high Divine Truths of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom first given to mankind; Divine Truths that sadly fall into decay and misrepresentation by the pens of Rome when the "Faith of Jesus" is mutated into a "Faith in Jesus". To recap, the example of the Jewish Christ is one that is part of the Jewish world. All of his friends, associates, colleagues, disciples, all of them were Jews. His example to all was one of commitment to worship of God in Jewish communal worship, what we call synagogues. He preached from Jewish texts and not the Greek Septuagint. His example shows us that he followed the "pattern of worship" that surrounded the observance of the Jewish festivals. His example shows us that he went on pilgrimage to the Jewish Temple in Jerusalem where he submitted to the authority of the Jewish priests. His example is of one who lived, died and taught as a Jew. What's striking is not so much that He was a Jew but that the gospels make no pretense that he wasn't. The gospels have no sense yet that the human example of Jesus was anything other than a Jew who valued highly the Spiritual Truths within Judaism. The gospels don't even have a sense that he came to found a new religion--an idea completely foreign to all the gospel text, and probably completely foreign to Paul who was a Gnostic Jew by conversion. Jesus as a founder of a new religion is an idea that comes about much later at the hands of the post-Easter Gentile Church which later created the idea of his divinity.

We see this desire by the "Jewish Christ" to uphold Judaism and this deeper Spiritual presentation of it where the emphasis is not to create a "new religion" to replace Judaism but elevate it above "form" and rote "ritualism and ceremony" clearly stated in the New Testament where this Jesus confirms his commitment to God's Laws and Torah:

Matt 5:17-19 17 Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. 18 For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. 19 Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven. (KJV)

We read the words "fulfill" and immediately think of "fulfilled prophecy" but the word "fulfill" in this passage carries a completely different meaning when examined in the Greek language from which our English translation is taken. The word "fulfill" when examined in a Strong's Concordance, a Greek Lexicon, reveals that the English word is taken from the Greek word "pleroo".

4137 pleroo (play-ro'-o); from 4134; to make replete, i.e. (literally) to cram (a net), level up (a hollow), or (figuratively) to furnish (or imbue, diffuse, influence), satisfy, execute (an office), finish (a period or task), verify (or coincide with a prediction), etc.: KJV-- accomplish, X after, (be) complete, fill (up), fulfil, (be, make) full (come), fully preach, perfect, supply.

If we look at another Greek Lexicon, Thayer's Greek Lexicon, we find even more enlightening information.

4137 pleroo- 1) to make full, to fill up, that is, to fill to the full, to cause to abound, to furnish or supply liberally; I abound, I am liberally supplied 2) to render full, that is, to complete

- a) to fill to the top: so that nothing shall be wanting to full measure, to fill to the brim
- b) to consummate (a number):
 - 1) to make complete in every particular, to render perfect
 - 2) to carry through to the end, to accomplish, to carry out, (some undertaking)
- c) to carry into effect, to bring to realization, to realize
 - 1) used of matters of duty: to perform, to execute
 - 2) used of sayings, promises, prophecies, to bring to pass, to ratify, to accomplish
 - 3) used to fulfil, that is, to cause God's will (as made known in the law) to be obeyed as it should be, and God's promises (given through the prophets) to receive fulfillment

Being indoctrinated to think that "fulfill" refers only to prophecy, we must remember that the subject being modified is the word "LAW", not prophecy. It is the Law of God, His Commandments and Ordinances given mankind, which have been taught since ancient Egypt and their "42 Negative Confessions" and which were elaborated upon later by Moses which the "Jewish Christ" only later came to, by the above definition, furnish, diffuse, execute, verify, make full, fully preach, perfect, supply, render full, complete, cause to abound, carry through to the end, carry out, perform, accomplish, spread and make known as God's will so that they should be obeyed by the whole of mankind in the perfection of their Soul. Only one "small" part of all of these meanings refers to prophecy; the great majority and the whole of these understandings refer to God's Laws and Commandments and we hear it taught incorrectly every time we hear this passage mentioned in our Churches and pulpits. So we see basically that the "Jewish Christ" came to "to preach" the Law and warned in so doing that we "think not incorrectly" that he has come to "do away" or "destroy" the Law; the very thing our Christian Spiritual leaders have led us to think and do with our lives.

If we read the text again this Jewish Christ tells us that he has not come to "destroy" the Law but to "preach it". Roy Blizzard, the Hebrew Scholar at the University of Texas, in Austin, Texas, who wrote an amazing little book entitled Understanding the Difficult Words of Jesus showed me many years ago that one of the meanings of the word "fulfilled", when taken back beyond the Greek into the Hebrew culture means "to interpret correctly". Therefore the task of the "Jewish Christ" was to "interpret the Laws and Torah of God correctly" and model them so before men and in so doing clearly reveal the path for the Soul's Spiritual perfection; this was his mission and message. Amazing! I never heard that ever taught in my Christian Church who prides itself "not being under the Law" as well as believing that "Christ is the end of the Law" as we read in the English translation of our New Testaments. Again, not looking beyond the English words of our Christian Bibles so often misleads us and we never glean and extract the true meaning of the words and the message before us! Here is another great example.

"For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth."—Romans 10:4.

The word "end" in the Greek as used in this verse and normally interpreted from the English of our Bibles as "cessation"; that the Law has ceased thereby implying that one only needs only have "Faith in Jesus" or just "Believe in Jesus". Amazingly, that is not what it says or intended; in fact it says just the opposite when viewed in the Greek. The key word here is the word "end" which when examined in the Greek is the word "telos" which means "the eternal aim or purpose"; not "the cessation of anything" as in "ended" which we most likely would think when only reading this passage in the English. Again we miss the mark of proper interpretation of this Scripture and miss the intended meaning. This Jewish Christ teaches us that Christlikeness is the "eternal aim and purpose of the Law". I cannot think of one "believer" or Christian who does not want to "be like Jesus"; or be a "follower of Jesus; it appears then when correctly understanding this tragically erroneous interpreted verse in the English that to do so requires one to pattern his life and live out the Laws of God daily in his life. This verse tells us explicitly when viewed in the Greek that to be like "Jesus Christ" is the "aim" and "purpose of the Law" and that performing the Laws of God in our daily conduct is the way that "Christlikeness" is molded into our lives. This goes 180 degrees against other passages in our New Testaments that teach completely different; here we have in the "red" of our Bibles the very words of the "Jewish Christ" which make suspect all of those other words in the "black" when say differently. And what is more when one's study advances to the point where they begin their study of ancient Egyptian Religion we find the "First Torah" of mankind that basically is only repeated in the later Jewish version of it. This glaring contradiction to our Christian experience as found from the mouth of Jesus alerts us to the fact that there are hidden problems in our New Testaments the way in which we received them. Rather than burying our heads in the sands of apathy and denial when seeing this the "thinking believer" and "truth-seeker" should be only motivated more to march on to find the answers to these problematic texts in his Bible. I sure did and the rewards have been beyond description.

This little teaching that you just saw should take your breath away being most likely a member in good standing in a Christian Church which teaches the "Law has passed away" and that we are "no longer under the Law but grace". To the "thinking believer" and "truth-seeker" to say this is problematic is at best a gross understatement. If you had ever spoken to a Jew about Judaism and the place of Law within it then you would have learned that the Law of God and God's Commandments as found in the Torah have always been understood at the "teacher of the Soul" of mankind. The Jewish people and their Rabbis absolutely never taught that the Law of God has to be obeyed "perfectly" or else one is damned to a hell the way Christianity presents it; rather it has always been taught thatthe Laws of God are a "training ground" to progressively sanctify and elevate the Soul of mankind and in so doing transform man into the "image of his Father God" in Heaven. Let us understand clearly that the "Torah" or the Law of God is understood to mean "Instruction" as in God's instructions to man as the Divine Mind of God comes to be expressed through Israel and the religion of Judaism as it had previously been expressed likewise in the other great Spiritual nations of antiquity like Babylon, Persia, and ancient Egypt who adhered to the Laws of God. Ancient Egypt had their "42 Negative Confessions", the Laws of the Medes and Persians have acquired universal fame, and the most ancient code of laws is understood by Western scholars to be the code of Hammurabi, an ancient king of Babylonia, who ruled about 2100 B.C. We find even in ancient Sumer the beginnings of the Laws of Noah upon which Moses adds the "Laws for Israel" known today as the Torah.

But as we all know Christianity prides itself at not being under this "eternal aim and purpose of God" which is only found in obeying God's Torah and Laws as the Christ teaches us. I could go on but now you know why I asked those questions my last day in Seminary having seen enough "Swiss cheese Christian theology" in my 3 years of Seminary which, due to such studies on my part "outside of the box" in copious reading outside of the normal class schedule during my time there, made me see that much of my Christianity and Christian theology is "full of holes". A "thinking believer" and "truth-seeker" cannot help see such irregularities and contradictions not only in these Christian texts when he does the necessary studies to acquire the truth about our Christian Bible but the problems inherent in the "literal" and "historical" approach to his Christian texts as presented to the world in Rome's Bible which has a different message than the one taught by the Jewish Christ and Gnostic Paul. Such insight is obtained when he studies for himself scholarly books not obtainable in your normal Christian book store today. It is my hope that the readers of Bet Emet Ministries has the personal desire to want the Truth about God and the truth that lies behind our Jesus at all costs. I wanted the truth for myself more than my next breath and realized that as much as I loved being in Seminary for those 3 years that I did not have God's Truth when I left there for the last time; but I did learn the necessary skills to do such scholarly studies that too few Pastors continue to do once embarked upon their ministries. Unlike most, I did them daily to find these truths that I now teach. That last day at Seminary I realized that I had been taught a Roman anti-Semitic Church tradition filtered down through the centuries likewise through her Protestant illegitimate sister; this was my inheritance which I would see progressively clearer the more that I studied; continually such research only affirmed that the whole of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom that had been with mankind since the beginning of recorded time had been badly distorted by the pens of Rome during the 2nd through the 5th centuries and such pernicious influence was spread throughout the world through the presentation of Rome's anti-Messiah and their denouncement and mischaracterization of the Hebrew Scriptures and the Laws of God. My promise to God that last day was that I was going to find God's Truth and with God's help and my persistence over the years I succeeded.

Back to the point, if you take a second you should notice that Christians almost never call Jesus by his Hebrew name "Yeshua", or "Jesus of Nazareth," or "the Nazarene," the way Jews do. They almost always refer to him as "our Lord Jesus" or as "Jesus Christ". I hope you are seated because although I did not know it back then in 1988 when I graduated Seminary, my later studies over the years into the ancient Egyptian Religion would reward me immensely as I would find the equivalent name for "Jesus Christ" carved in ancient Egyptian stones as found in the Egyptian hieroglyphics as far back as thousands and thousands of years before the time of the New Testament and the time for the supposed "historical" Jesus of Nazareth. Besides that I would find that Nazareth was not even built as a city in the first century in Israel; rather strange for a person to named after a city that does not exist in the time that he supposedly lived. All doubters of this fact should read The Dead Sea Scrolls Deception by Michael Baigent and Richard Leigh for on page 174 the truth of the matter again can be found. Nazareth did not even exist as a city at the time period given for the Jewish Jesus; the designation "Nazareth" later added to the name Jesus by the "non-Jewish" writers of the Gospels who were totally mistaken as to the understanding the Aramaic and Hebrew language where they confuse the term "Nozrim" (a term used for of of the earliest designations of the followers of the Essenes who desired the coming of the "Jewish Christ-Messiah"). Being unfamiliar with the term "Nozrim" or "Nazorean" the writers of the Gospels were mistakenly led to think from only the oral traditions from which they will create these later "Gospels" that this Jesus and his family had come from a city named Nazareth which by the time these documents were written finally had appeared on the map of Israel. Again, we see that such errors in geography and as well as the writers being unacquainted with the language of the Jews as well as the religion of Judaism betray "non-Jewish" pens producing these Gospels which has misled us to believe otherwise than "the Truth"; being falsely assured by Rome that these New Testament writings were written under the unction of the Holy Spirit by Jewish followers and Apostles of "the Christ" which they were not! It is in these documents which Christians cherish and look no further for Divine Truth that we are set up to accept "another Gospel" never knowing that we are falling for the greatest deception ever given mankind. Seeing one contradiction after another contradiction, day after day, month after month, and year after year did not make me lose my faith; it only made me more hungry for "the Truth" that I knew all the while laid behind my "Jesus Story". As my studies advanced over time I came to see very clearly that Rome and its "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom Religions and Mysteries, whereby they were subjected to a false "literalism" and "historicization", had keep me from the highest Spiritual Truths that the Soul of mankind could obtain. I came over time to the firm conclusion that there existed a foundation or origin of the Christian Religion other than that which is commonly accepted. I further became convinced that under this erroneous "literal" and "historical" approach to the New Testament lay hidden and inner truths or doctrines that lay much deeper than those forms, creeds, or doctrines which are associated with the term "Christian" in the popular conception. The historical difficulties of the Bible narratives, the want of reliable information respecting the central figure of the Gospels, the uncertainty respecting the date and authorship of the various books of both the Old and New Testaments, the obscurity of the early centuries of the Christian era, and the astonishing contradictions among various sections of the Christian community with its more than 2,000 different denominations and sects respecting the various essentials of their faith, though all claim their authority from the same records; these matters and more are well known to all who grow beyond the mere Bible-class curriculum and the Sunday sermon, and are seeking far more light and certainty than can be made available from the orthodox presentations so common today. I realized that although the "literal" and "historical" approach to understanding the New Testament Christ and New Testament might be "full of holes" and faulty that beneath these Scriptures yet laid a "gold mine" of Spiritual insight that had been purposely concealed; I was going to find the "keys" to unlock this Divine Mystery with God's help. There was a reason why my "Jesus Story" had been told since the beginning of time; at that time in my life I did not have the "keys" to solve this puzzle but they would come the more that I studied and the Divine Truth acquired through such study of my "Jesus Story" redeemed it and showed me it is the highest Spiritual Truth that the Soul of mankind could ever hope to receive. This theft of Divine Truth from the "non-Jewish" world has gone on now for over 1,800 years and will continue forever unless one begins serious study into his Bible and the false "literal" and "historical" approach to it as applied to the "Jesus Story". Again, to recapitulate, this makes the "Faith of Jesus" paramount over a belief and "Faith in Jesus" since the true identity of this "Krst/Christ" has been so "radically reinterpreted" and "distorted" by Roman creative anti-Semitic theologies during the 2nd through the 5th centuries.

Again, as we see it behooves us to have the "Faith of Jesus" instead of a "Faith in Jesus" since such personal scholarly study makes such faith appear often to be founded upon fiction and fable instead of facts and verifiable truths. A "thinking believer", finding such evidence as I just shared in just these few examples which can be easily found upon some simple outside reading when doing serious study into the "Jewish Roots" of Christianity surely is not naive enough to believe that this ancient Egyptian expression equivalent to "Jesus Christ" is prophetic of a later Jewish Rabbi some 5,000 years later; especially when his study of the ancient Egyptian Religion reveals the same "Krst/Christ Story" shared by Horus and Jesus; let alone all the others down through recorded history and as found in Comparative Religious studies! It is there in ancient Egypt that we find what we read in Luke chapter 1-3 cut into the stone walls of the Temple of Luxor as far back as 3,000 years B.C.E. This meant something other than a "Jewish Rabbi" and I wanted to know the truth behind my "Jesus Story" and just whom this "Christ" truly is. It is ancient Egypt that gave the world the Divine Concept of "the Krst/Christ" in the first place; never "historical" and never "literal" until it is "birthed in you" which is your "awakening from the dead" (Spiritually dead) which this later Gnostic Paul thousands of years later yet teaches in unison with the ancient Spiritual Mysteries in numerous places in the New Testament as we find it scattered among other "Romanized Pauline" theologies. Rome did not want the world to know this Divine Truth that would make their Roman legions and its oppressive military obsolete; by "literalizing" and "historizing" this ancient Spiritual Truth and "limiting" it to one person to whom access for "salvation" for man's Soul is obtainable only through the doors of the Roman Church, and by which any continued life of sin and depravity of mankind or nation could be forgiven by a simple "mental assent" to a religious dogma, Rome was able to conquer the minds of the world with such "easy-believeism" when coupled with fear of hell and damnation and continued ignorance of the truth. Fear and ignorance has always been the allies of religion gone awry. By now I hope the reader and "thinking believer" is awakening to the possibility that we have missed the Truth in our Christian Faith as it now stand and is coming to see, maybe for the first time, that at the very heart of such scholarly study and the evidences it produces lies the crucial question regarding the "literal" and "historical" approach and interpretation of "Jesus Christ" and many of the other theological dogmas surrounding such a "literal" and "historical" interpretation of the "Jesus Story" which we have come to know and receive through the hands of Rome and its very successful indoctrination of approaching the "Jesus Story" only through these methods of interpretation. This "Jesus Christ" certainly meant something to the ancient Egyptians and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom Religions but not what it has come to mean to us today when we think of "Jesus Christ" as limited to the first century since such an idea was created by Rome during again the 2nd through the 5th century. "Radical reinterpretation" of the ancient "Krst/Christ" and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom was the "modus operandi" commanded by Rome. By limiting this "Jesus Christ" to the first century we almost lose the hope of ever recovering the ancient Divine Truths behind the "Christ" due to the fact that the concept of the "Krst/Christ" has been so altered and adulterated by men with religious agendas down through history to the point it is almost unrecognizable today without the "keys" to awaken one to the Divine Truths that lie behind its "literal" and "historical" presentation. Inquiry into such possibilities is met with the greatest resistance by Pastor and Church. The very attitude of mind to seek a "deeper Spiritual Truth" that might possibly lie beneath our New Testament texts is regarded by Christianity as a want of "faith" on one's part and ostracism and alienation is usually the outcome of such Spiritual inquiry where they should find sympathy and help. This again cries out the importance of learning the true message of "the Christ" given to the Souls of humanity which we are blessed today to have before us as found in the "Faith of Jesus" as preserved and taught through Biblical Judaism over the last several thousands of years; a Divine Truth almost blurred beyond recognition in Christianity today with its "Faith in Jesus" which has tragically replaced the "Faith of Jesus". We have to wait until our studies advance quite a bit to pursue such issues to their core and find the answers to such deeper questions regarding ancient Egypt and "the Krst/Christ" because our focus here is only contrasting the "Faith of Jesus" as expressed through Biblical Judaism against the Christian idea and religion built upon "Faith in Jesus". One message of the two I found as you will is the highest truth; one message of the two is distorted and debased prior Spiritual Truth to which such debasement has almost no end. But in your heart if you are honest with yourself and the Spirit of god you have an inkling that that behind the exoteric forms and records we have inherited in our New Testament lie a real basis of Truth, which those forms serve to conceal rather than to reveal. The reader, the "thinking-believer" and "truth-seeker" must choose between the two perspective concerning our "Jesus Story" and this can only be done when equipped with the facts, evidences, and truth; only then can you be certain that you choose the truth over fiction.

Jesus as the "Jewish Christ", as depicted in the New Testament, may have been Jewish, but by deifying Jesus in "non-Jewish" terms the Christians have in essence taken this "Jewish Christ-Messiah" out of his strictly Jewish context and distorted the real truths, teachings, and true message of this "Jewish Christ" or, better said, the "Jewish Messiah". Let us not forget that the Hebrew equivalent to the Greek "Christ" is the term "Messiah". We made mention before to the fact that the word “messiah” is an English rendering of the Hebrew word “mashach”, whose translation is “anointed”. No where in the Hebrew Scriptures do you find the word "mashach" or "anointed" ever used in "capital letters", even in the Hebrew Scriptures and especially in the Hebrew Book of Daniel, chapter 9, when discussing the Seventy Weeks of Daniel. But when looking at the Christian corruption and translation of our Bibles where they adopt the earlier mistranslation of the text of Daniel 9:25 as found in the LXX, the Greek Septuagint which deviates from the Hebrew Scriptures by "capitalizing the word anointed where it was not capitalized in the Hebrew Scriptures, we find that only here in this passage in the Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures the capitalization of the word "anointed" as translated "Christ/Messiah". Ever time the word "anoint" or "anointed" is translated in the Hebrew Scriptures it is always used with a "small a" until we come to Daniel 9 where the Essenes "capitalized" it and transliterated the word as "Messiah/Christ" inferring the concept of a "literal God-man" when the original Hebrew Scriptures from which it was taken never did. It is here in the Essene's deviation from traditional Jewish Scriptural interpretation that later Christianity will follow the same footsteps and accept this corrupted Daniel 9:25 from the Greek and we find today in our Christian Bibles in verses 25 and 26 the word is transliterated as "Messiah" with a "capital M" when the original Hebrew Scriptures never write it this way. Again, creative theology is at work here and we never notice it when only reading the English of our Bibles. The human seed from the line of King David now has become a "Super-man Messiah" by "creative theology". For this, and a host of other corruptions to the Greek Old Testament which misrepresents the Hebrew Scripture, the Jewish people and the Rabbis refused to accept the corrupted Greek translations of the Hebrew Scriptures for over 2,000 years at present. But Rome will accept them and it is not because their scholars did not understand Hebrew; the theology better suited their purposes in creating a "new religion" to replace Biblical and Rabbinic Judaism and in so doing bury the ancient Spiritual Divine Mysteries under a false "literalism" and "historicization".

This word "anoint" usually refers to a person who is initiated into God’s service by being anointed with oil. There are many messiahs in the Bible. Since every King and High Priest was anointed with oil, each may be referred to as “an anointed one” (a mashiach or a messiah). The Hebrew word “hamashiach” (lit. "the" messiah) describing a future anointed person to come does not appear anywhere in the Hebrew Scriptures and the Bible. Since the Hebrew Scriptures make no explicit reference to the messiah, it is unlikely that it could be considered the most important concept in the Bible. Indeed, in Jewish thought, the "messianic idea" is not the most crucial dogma in the Bible by any means. However, in Christian thought, "the Messiah", the "God-man" is paramount; a great difficulty in light of its conspicuous absence from the Hebrew Scriptures. But again few Christians if any ever compare their English Scriptures in their New Testament with the Greek texts from which then were translated and take them even one step backwards to the Hebrew Scriptures from which they originally were translated. Had they done so, or been taught to do so, then these "creative false theologies" that swirl around our "Jesus Story" would easily be seen by all and the Christian Church would be on is knees Sunday after Sunday in repentance for teaching "another Gospel". I wish to share before we move on a few thoughts about the Jewish Messiah in relationship to the New Testament Jesus. This again lays at the very heart of "Faith of Jesus" vs "Faith in Jesus".

We as Christians need to understand the Jewish Messiah properly; something few Christians do in Christianity today. One of the central themes of Biblical prophecy is the promise of a future age of perfection characterized by universal peace and recognition of God. Many of these prophetic passages speak of a human descendant of King David who will rule Israel during the age of perfection. Since every King is a messiah, by convention, we refer to this future anointed one in Christianity as " The" Messiah. The above prophecy to King David is the only description in the Bible of a Davidic descendant who is to come in the future. The Jewish Rabbis and people testify that they will recognize this descendant of King David, their "messiah" (small "m") by seeing who the King of Israel is at the time of complete universal perfection. Notice if you will that since the destruction of the Temple in 70 C.E. Israel has had no reigning King. More pertinent to our study the Bible never speaks about "believing in the messiah". This is fatal to accepting "Faith in Jesus" over "the Faith of Jesus"! The total silence regarding the necessity of "believing in the Messiah of Israel" betrays the erroneous dogmas of Christianity as tied to "believing in Jesus as the Messiah of Israel" for man's Salvation and Eternal life. Because the reign of this descendant of King David will be an historically verifiable reality, self-evident to any person, it won't require belief or faith. One only needs to look around and read his newspapers and see the one promised setting on the throne of Israel, but no throne exists in Israel today nor for the last 2,000 years. This has never happened and the Jewish people and their Rabbis are correct because their Hebrew Scriptures are the highest Truth unlike our Christian counterparts. Because no person has ever fulfilled the picture painted in the Hebrew Scriptures of this future King, Jewish people still await the coming of their messiah. All past messianic claimants, including Jesus of Nazareth, Bar Cochba and Shabbtai Tzvi have been rejected by Judaism because none fulfilled the unforged and uncorrupted Hebrew Scriptures over the last 2,000 years. One must look to the cleverly purposeful mistranslated, purposefully misquoted Scriptures in our Christian Bibles as well as the many texts taken out of context as well as purely "invented" Scriptures in our Christian Bibles to find such contorted Scriptures wrestled from their original meanings to find man-made fulfillments that supposedly make this New Testament Jesus the "Roman Messiah". Again, "thinking believers" and "truth-seekers" should find these facts troubling and highly problematic for Christian creative theology which teaches otherwise from their own Scriptures which can today, in the light of modern scholarship, be shown to be purposeful mistranslations, purposeful misquotations, and pure Scriptural invention when compared to the prior Hebrew Scriptures. Seeing again this deception only solidifies our premise; one need "the Faith of Jesus"; not "Faith in Jesus". We have a website devoted to nothing more than each example of these "purposefully misrepresented" Scriptures as they read in our Christian Bibles and when your awareness and Spiritual growth is of such a level you will find it time to examine these in depth to see the truth of what I share.

A related Christian problem is the inability to see "Jesus the Jew" and his message contained in the "Faith of Jesus" without also seeing him as the "Divine Christ" the Jews had "rejected" and yet today "reject" some 2,000 years later. This begins with the earliest documents of the Christian Church and its sacred "Scripture," the New Testament but actually has its roots all the way back in the Essene's "reinterpretation" of the promised anointed one to the Jews as found in such Old Testament Scriptures like then ones found in the book of Daniel mentioned above as well as elsewhere. It is here in the Christian translation of the book of Daniel and the Seventy Weeks prophecy were we find Christian historical deception and creative theology at is very best. All of this mind you is to cause the reader to have a "Faith in Jesus" instead of following "the Faith of Jesus". Let us never forget that it is in these Hebrew Scriptures where we find the promised human Messiah which is later to be altered by these Essenes through erroneous and creative interpretation into a supposed coming Super-Messiah and "literal Godman". This was done in Alexandria, Egypt, with the Essene's translation of the Hebrew Prophets into Greek. Let is be said the Rabbis of Jerusalem only translated the first 5 books of the Torah when asked by the Ptolemaic king, Ptolemy II Philadelphus, 285-247 BC. It is then that these Torah was translated into the Greek by the Rabbis of Israel and placed in the great Alexandria Library, but the rest of the Hebrew Scriptures and their translation into Greek were done at the hands of the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt, who were most familiar with the Osiris Myth, the "original allegorical Godman". The crux of the whole problem before us is one of interpretation; Divine Allegories and Spiritual Myths reflecting the Metaphysical Realm which point to Spiritual Realm and Concepts which have been "literalized" and "historicized" and placed in the first century and we never know this or recognize this not possessing the necessary knowledge to understand this and not discerning such alteration of prior Spiritual meaning and interpretation from simply reading the stories in our Bibles. Again, lost in all of this is the "Faith of the Christ", this "Faith of Jesus". this "Faith of the Krst/Christ" which has remained intact since the ancient Egyptian Religion and which passed down through history and was later inherited and adopted by Moses and Biblical Judaism. To compound the issue, modern scholarship has maintained for over two hundred years that none of these New Testament Scriptural writers were contemporaries of this Jesus in the time period given for his life. You might find that hard to believe but it can proven that the majority of the New Testament documents came from "non-Jewish" hands and not from Jewish writers, let alone the supposed apostles. So much for "inspiration of Apostolic authority."

Things like this, when known, are very problematic for us when we look at the New Testament and try to discern the truth about the "Jesus Christ". Given the anti-Semitism of the era in which the New Testament was written one should approach the New Testament with a heavy dose of skepticism as much which is said in our New Testament carries with it a heavy emphasis of anti-Semitism and anti-Judaism in the texts we read. It truly is an amazing thing to find "anti-Semitic" Jews who are touted to be the supposed writers of such New Testament documents. As with the Old Testament, we just don't know who wrote most of the New Testament but countless errors as seen in geography, historical accuracy, and errors in the accurate depiction of the Jewish Faith along with glaring errors concerning the Temple and its workings are a wake-up call to the reader of the New Testament that someone other than a Jew is writing these documents; a person totally unaware and unfamiliar with the Jewish culture and religion. These abundant mistakes are of such a nature quite often that we would not expect a five year old Jewish child could be capable of making such unbelievable glaring errors. Here we are introduced to our first indications that someone other than a Jew is writing these texts about a "Jewish Jesus". Basically what we find is that we have a "Gentile anti-Semitic perspective" of Judaism and amazingly this "Jewish Jesus" is placed right in the middle of it and we hardly ever notice it not possessing an adequate knowledge of Judaism before we ever read the New Testament for the first time; had we known Judaism we could have easily spotted the false misrepresentations of it by these Gentile writers. But without such competent knowledge in Judaism and Biblical history before reading our New Testament then these things escape the casual Christian reader and they pass unnoticed. Church tradition has assigned these writings, take the Gospels and most of the Epistles for example, to certain authors, all of whom were supposedly important figures in Jesus' life or the early days of the faith. What we fail to take note of when looking at the possible identities of these writers is what they wrote is taken from "oral tradition" only. It was important for the emerging Gentile Church to believe these designated Jewish associates of Jesus and other Jewish authors wrote the works which will be attributed to them, since their eminence and supposed closeness to Jesus lent the writings a supreme authority for the "religious dogmas" presented in them! This is very clever and only those knowing the truth about Israel and Judaism would be able to "spot" these errors; that excludes almost ever Gentile who reads them! That is what is so deceptive; we approach these New Testament writings with the mistaken idea that the writers are Jewish and therefore by default all that is expressed in them is the typical expression of the Jewish Faith; but serious study will show you as is consistently did me that the New Testament is anti-Jewish propaganda at its best which we find in expressed in many "key" theological places which are cleverly crafted to lead the uninformed and unenlightened reader to look to Rome and not Jerusalem for Spiritual nourishment and direction for his Soul. But since we don't have the original signatures, none can be verified except through internal textual clues.

DO YOU HAVE "THE FAITH OF JESUS" OR "FAITH IN JESUS"? #3

We continue with this study in the next article in this series.

The first generation of Gentiles who are later to be called "Christians", unlike the earlier Gnostic "Chrestians", accepted this same "Christ Story" as cherished in the ancient Spiritual Wisdom Religions but only after it had been "literalized" and "historicized" in the second century. Unlike the millions who before them who had accepted this "same Krst/Christ Story" but never as a "literal" or "historical" account of but one one person, these later Christians deviated from a Spiritual tradition that can be traced basically unchanged for over 13,000 years. These later "Romanized Christians" were not taught the "gnosis" of the "Christ Stories"; they were not taught that all previous "gods", "goddesses", and "Christ Stories" were personifications and Spiritual allegories depicting the descent, incarnation and birth, life and progressive Spiritual maturation and evolution, eventual death and rebirth of their Soul" in an animal body. They like us, being so far removed from this "gnosis" and the "keys" so necessary to correctly interpreting these "Divine allegories" relied upon oral traditions handed down to them from Roman orthodoxy for their understanding of their "Christ Story" and its implications for their Soul. The only difference between these earlier "Chrestians" and the later "Christians" of the second century was that their "Christ Story" of the second century had been "radically reinterpreted" as a "literal" history which had been placed in a time line of Rome's making. The common "key" to all of these "Christ Stories" before the second century and its "radical reinterpretation" was that they all depicted mankind's true being; that he was, as Plato had said, a "god Spiritually evolving in an animal body". To those who had "ears to hear" and "eyes to see" this Divine Truth of man's True Being came an inborn desire of these Spiritually inclined to "identify with" and "awaken to" the "Indwelling Christ" within them. In so doing they awakened to an indwelling Presence that rewarded them as Souls to a higher walk with God than could ever be achieved from a religion that separated God from man. Earth was a training ground for the Soul and the path of their Soul's progressive Spiritual evolution was laid out before them in the Laws and Commandments of God as taught through these Spiritualized earlier nations. Amazingly we find these earliest of nations, nations like Sumer, ancient Egypt, Babylon, Persia, and many others valuing the Laws and Commandments of God and esteeming them to the highest degree possible in their cultures and religions. Israel was no different; the Spiritual tradition of God's Torah and Laws as the molding of man's Soul while on this plane of existence on Earth was paramount in the Jewish Faith and was so it was likewise to the Gentiles of the world who followed the religious tenants of the Jewish Faith in the earliest centuries C.E. Awakening to the indwelling Presence of Divinity within them and its continual guidance and direction for their Soul's evolution they came to understand how to live a higher expression of human existence than afforded by a religion that robbed them of their True Being and the "indwelling Christ" within them. The unfolding of man's Soul was made plain in the Divine Mysteries as man came to know his true Self, his origin, his purpose, and true destiny as a child of the Most High God. In so doing he evolved Spiritually toward the "fullness and stature" of "the Christ Mind and was assured that upon the biological death of the body that he would be rewarded with Eternal Life since he was "one with this Krst/Christ" and so modeled his life according to God's Laws and Covenants that assured proper Soul maturation and evolution. In other words, they followed "the Faith of Jesus" more than just having a "Faith in Jesus".

The children of Christian parents are brought up by the millions to accept the Bible as literal history, presumably because their adult parents do so also. From thousands of pulpits, and in thousands of Sunday schools, the Bible stories are put forward as reliable history. The result is deplorable, and is seen in two ways:

- In the narrowness and bigotry of "orthodoxy" and "dogmatism", cramping and warping the judgment and intuition of man's Spirit and Soul
- In a reaction upon coming to the truth concerning the reliability of the "literal" and "historical" understanding of the Bible which eventually casts them altogether out of a religion because they discovered they have been misled; being so often led eventually into a reaction of a life of irreligion, if not of positive vice

And this because, as we have seen, is because they were never given the truth in the first place when their minds were so impressionable when first hearing of the "Christ Story".

It is well recognized that religion, like philosophy and science, is necessarily progressive; that is has its "outer" or "popular" form, and its "inner" or "esoteric" aspects. There has always been an "outer mystery" and an "inner mystery" as far back in religious studies that one may look. It is a natural law of the Cosmos for all life to "progress"; no different in religion which is dealing with the progressive Spiritual evolution of the Soul in mankind. It is only natural to progress from the "exoteric" to the "esoteric"; or said more plainly from "Faith in Jesus" to the "Faith of Jesus" which can perfect the Soul of man which "Faith in Jesus" can never do. This is what is missing in our Christianity today and the failure of our "Faith in Jesus" theologies as taught by the vast majority of Christianity in the world today. But as it is, there is no choice offered us but to accept or reject an "exoteric form" of the "Christ Story", to accept or reject the "literal" and "historical" interpretation of our "Jesus Story". Few voices if any are raised today because of scholarly study to lift the veil from the "Jesus Story" and reveal the truth that lies behind the "exoteric" Jesus Christ. As we can imagine rejecting the "literal" and "historical" interpretation and approach to our "Jesus Story" leaves one "damned" or at best "ostracized" by the Christian community as well as family. Amazingly, most having never studied the ancient Spiritual Wisdom which was the earliest expression of this "religion of the Christ" by the Gnostic Chrestians, we all consider ourselves authorities because we read one book and read it only one way never knowing the methods by which all the "earliest Christ Stories" were understood. Most all today come from a later "literal" and "historical" indoctrination of this same ancient story that has only existed in humanity for 1,800 years and apply this "new" interpretation across the board when viewing our "Jesus Story". Never having done the studies necessary to show such an interpretation and approach to our "Jesus Story" is wanting of both "historical" and "traditional" truth we sadly and readily accept such an approach to our "Jesus Story" never knowing the mountains of evidence today from modern scholarship and archeology which proves such a limited perspective and interpretation to be false.

If therefore there exists such a thing as an "esoteric" basis for Christianity, an inner Divine Truth underlying the external forms and doctrines, either not yet discovered, or if known at one time, now lost and obscured, such an "esoteric" basis of understanding the "Jesus Story" is no part of the teachings and methods of professed Christianity; and it is more than likely that any attempt to disclose it will meet with strenuous opposition and denunciation from those who are unqualified to judge such knowledge and who should be the first to welcome it.

It is a fact that there exists an "esoteric" basis underlying the historical presentation of Christianity; "esoteric" in the sense that the original meaning has been entirely lost or obscured, with the result that Christianity has nothing left but the merest husk and shell of what were once its Spiritual Truths. But having an inner meaning at one time well understood, the Church has built is fabric of Christian dogma and doctrine accepting the "exoteric" and outward records of Rome as "literally" and "historically" true, and investing the very letter and word with a Supernatural and arbitrary authority which it was never intended to bear. It is time for the truth of the matter; in fact way past time.

The earlier nations who relied upon oral traditions for the ancient Spiritual Wisdom were no different from the later Gnostic "Chrestians"; they in common didn't see any need for a permanent written record of the sayings and stories of this "Krst/Christ" as expressed in their own culture and religion. This oral tradition carried with it down through history its own unique interpretation; absent from such an interpretation was any "literal" or "historical" approach to this ancient Spiritual Wisdom for man's Soul. Oral tradition had served the ancients well and would do so into the earliest centuries of the Age of Pisces.

Again, the "key" to understanding the "Jesus Story" correctly lies in its approach; whether one is to interpret it as "literal" and "historical" or as a "Spiritual Allegory" for the Divine Mind incarnated into humanity for the sole purpose of leading and guiding the Soul back to its Father's House. To the writers of the New Testament who in the second century adapted the prior oral traditions of this "Christ Story", no longer possessing the "keys" for its correct interpretation, approached the idea of the "coming of the Krst/Christ" as a "literal" and "historical" return and restoration of the Kingdom of God on Earth which was to them supposedly imminent as they would make it appear so in the New Testament. This was done since these writers of these later New Testament documents, being influenced to reject the "gnosis" and "Gnostic interpretation" of the "Christ Story", had lost the "gnosis" and "keys" to the "rebirth of the Krst/Christ" that accompanied each new Age as connected with the Precession of the Equinoxes. The Age of Aries had passed and the Age of Pisces had begun in 255 B.C.E. With such "birthing of a new Age" hope renewed for mankind's perfection and continual Spiritual elevation. The only difference is that in the second century in which these New Testament documents were created, some mere 400 years later we find that these writers of the New Testament documents had "lost" the "keys" to unlock correctly their "Christ Story". This means that they looked "without" for the coming elevation of mankind; not "within". Forgotten by them is the teaching of "the Jewish Christ" as well as all the previous "personifications" of the nation's Christ which carried the same message: The Kingdom of God lies within mankind; not outside of mankind!

2 Cor 13:5 5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates? (KJV)

Here again the "definite article" in the above verse, the word "the", cries out to us that there is only "one" Faith, "the Faith" that all mankind must embrace, the Faith that teaches that the only true "Christ" is the one within a person; not external to him. This is the "esoteric" dogma lost to Christianity today with is "exoteric Jesus Christ" which is separated apart from mankind. Lost to these writers of these later New Testament documents is the fact that with each new emergence of a new Age there was always a new interpretation of symbolisms connected with the teachings and sayings of "the Christ" and "Divine Mind" of the Universe and its evolution in and through humanity.

This evolution of "the Christ" in mankind has always been associated with the changing of the Ages. Esoterically, the cycle of World Ages traces an aspect of the Spiritual evolution of consciousness. It has as its astrological basis the circle of the Zodiac (hence, the "Age of Pisces", the "Age of Aquarius," etc.). Humanity evolves as a whole by expanding and developing the collective consciousness of the race; at the same time that each of its members is evolving in his or her own personal way. Individual evolution, therefore, proceeds simultaneously with and complements racial evolution. The Cycle of World Ages traces the development of humanity's racial consciousness. When one looks long-term these Cosmic Cycles or World Ages reveal the collective Spiritual evolution and development of mankind; all of which is the work of the Indwelling Divine Mind or "Christ" upon the Souls of humanity. When we discuss the World Ages then, we are dealing with evolution on a global scale. In a sense we are studying the Spiritual evolution of all life on the Earth itself; or more specifically the evolution of the Planetary Being, the Logos, "the Christ Mind" in mankind, whose physical body of manifestation is the globe we call Earth and all life-forms within it. Since all existence on every level of being is constantly evolving and progressing, this Logos or "Christ" continues to evolve on its own level. This evolution of the Logos and "Jesus Christ" is reflected in the evolution of humanity. This great cosmic cycle is based upon an astronomical phenomenon called the precession of the Equinoxes.

I am aware that most Christians are not familiar with this cycle of World Ages nor the Precession of the Equinoxes associated with the evolution of the Logos, Divine Mind, or "Krst/Christ" in mankind. So we take a second to catch up on this concept before we go on relating it to the "Faith of Jesus" instead of a "Faith in Jesus" that plays such a huge part in the evolution of man's Soul and Spiritual consciousness.

As stated above, this great cosmic cycle is based on an astronomical phenomenon called the precession of the Equinoxes. The precession, in turn, arises from the fact that the earth's axis does not always point to the same place in the sky, relative to the fixed stars. The Earth, in fact, has a slight "wobble" in its motion, much like that of a spinning top. This results in the line of the earth's polar axis (extended in imagination from the North Pole) tracing a rough circle through the fixed constellations in the northern sky. The present pole star -- the star at the end of this imaginary extension of the North Pole -- is Polaris, in the constellation Ursa Minor. But due to the "wobble" in the Earth's motion, Polaris was not always the Pole Star, and it will not remain in this position. The North Pole points to a series of stars in succession, as the polar axis gradually changes its direction. Thus, in the period around 4000 B.C., the pole star was one of the stars in the constellation Draco; in 4000 A.D. it will be a star in the constellation Cepheus. The entire polar cycle -- that is, the length of time it takes for the North Pole to complete one circuit -- is just over 25,000 years. This period is known as the Great Sidereal Year or Platonic Year; and it is this cyclic motion of the polar axis that gives rise to the precession of the Equinoxes. The equinoctial precession is what we actually use to measure the passage of the World Ages. As a result of the earth's gyration (the axial "wobble"), the Sun is not found in the same location in the sky at each Vernal (spring) Equinox (Again, this is in reference to the fixed, visible constellations). Instead, the location of the Equinox moves slowly backward through the zodiac, completing one passage through the circle every 25,800 years. It is this motion that we use to measure the cycle of World Ages and the progression of mankind's Spiritual consciousness. The equinox takes roughly 2,150 years to pass through each constellation ("roughly" because the constellations are not evenly spaced through the zodiac). This period is the length of a single World Age. At the present time, the equinoctial point is passing through the visible constellation (not the sign) Pisces. It entered this constellation near the time of the birth of Christ and will reach Aquarius in the next one. We are therefore concluding the Age of Pisces and preparing to enter the Age of Aquarius. Central to this understanding of the World Ages and evolution of "Krst/Christ" from his "re-birth" in mankind on a higher Spiritual level from Age to Age (here is the symbolic death and rebirth of the Christ) is the fact that this Metaphysical Concept has always been understood "allegorically" and "symbolically" and was captured for all time for all humanity in their "Spiritual Myths" of their "gods" and "goddesses" who descended into the grave of "material incarnation" which we see as humanity today. This again is the "death of the God" from which he must awaken "anew" in mankind. Thus in this Metaphysical concept we have the first teaching of the "death and resurrection" of God in His Christ. This mind you was always an "internal work" of Divine Mind, this "Krst/Christ" man in mankind and never was this Metaphysical Concept to be understood in an aberrant "literal" and "historical" sense where it could be limited to but "one person" instead of the whole of humanity nor to "one period of time" of human evolution but forever in the life of the human species from World Age to World Age. Understand that in the most basic terms, the cycle of World Ages signifies the steps on the ladder of global evolution. Each sign is a phase of Spiritual growth for mankind's Soul. The entrance into a new World Age indicated the emergence of the consciousness of humanity into a new and broader level of awareness of its True Being. It is an "initiation" of the race as a whole. Our collective consciousness expand as we grow Spiritually and evolve, and this eventually manifests on the physical level as a new world order. Mankind today lies upon the threshold of a New Age, the Age of Aquarius which is his next step in Spiritual awareness for humanity; all of which is the world of the indwelling Christ Mind within the whole of humanity; not limited to but one person. To fail to grasp this "esoteric" Divine Truth that lies at the very heart of our "Jesus Story" and to limit it by "literalizing", "historizing" and "limiting" it to but one person is the greatest theft of Spiritual Truth that mankind has ever suffered. To fail to recognize that behind this vulgar "literalization" of our "Jesus Story" lies the highest "esoteric" Divine Truth ever given to mankind about his true Nature and Being is a tragedy of unbelievable proportions to which all of Christianity has fallen since the 2nd century with Rome's "literalization", "historicization", and "limitation" of this Divine Christ to one supposed Galilean Rabbi.

The Bible is an astronomical book from cover to cover. The average Christian is unaware of the times and cycles through which our planet passes, under influence of solar progression. Lost to most readers of the Bible in the importance of the astronomical and Spiritual interpretation of the passage of the Sun through the signs of the zodiac which undergirds most of the pseudo-historical stores in our Bibles, both Old and New Testament. Yet, in The New Testament, that recognition is clearly revealed and colors the presentation of the entire Gospel story. For example the sin of the Children of Israel in the desert was a failure on their part to accept the new message of "the Christ" to mankind's Soul associated with the changing of the Age from Taurus to the Age of

Aries. The Sun had been "in the sign of Taurus, the Bull," as it is technically called. We find that they fell down and worshipped the golden calf and forgot the new teaching of the age of Aries, the Ram, into which they were entering, the teaching of the Scapegoat which colors Jewish history. The fact that the "Krst/Christ" was the Teacher of the new period into which the Sun was entering, the period of Aries, was forgotten to them but not to Moses who acts swiftly to move his people into the Age of Aries symbolized by the Lamb and not the Bull. The fact that Christ was the Teacher of the new period into which the Sun was entering, the period and Age of Pisces (255 B.C.E.), is forgotten by most if not all Christians today, but is clearly evidenced in the fish symbology which runs consistently through all four Gospels; the symbol of the Fish is the astrological symbol for the sign Pisces, and has been for untold ages. But Christ also looked ahead to the work He would have to do in the Aquarian Age, in the next sign into which the sun would enter. Prior to His "disappearance," which accompanies the end of every World Age, the Jewish Christ referred to the symbol of the Aquarian Age and to the task He would then perform. With His twelve disciples, the Jewish Christ enacted a dramatic episode which epitomizes the work which He would later undertake when the two thousand years of the Piscean era would have passed away. He told His disciples to go into the city and that there they would meet a man, carrying a pitcher of water, that they should follow him to the upper room and there make ready the communion feast in which He and they would share (Luke 22:10). This they did and the Last Supper took place. The ancient symbol for the sign Aquarius (into which our Sun is now entering) is that of the Water-carrier, the man with a pitcher of water. This passing of the Sun into the sign Aquarius is an astronomical fact, as any one can ascertain by writing to any observatory; it is not an astrological prognostication. The great Spiritual achievement and evolutionary event of that age will be the communion and human relationships established among all peoples, enabling men everywhere to sit down together in the Presence of "the Christ", by whatever name they call Him, and share the bread and wine (symbols of nourishment). Preparations for that shared feast (symbolically speaking) are on their way, and those preparations are being made by the masses of men themselves, as they fight and struggle and legislate for the economic sustenance of their nations, and as the theme of food occupies the attention of legislators everywhere. This sharing, beginning on the physical plane, will prove equally true of all human relations and this will be the great gift of the Aquarian Age to humanity. This the church has ignored and yet their ecclesiastics cannot explain away the fact that the Jews demonstrated their liking for the Taurian worship of the Bull in the golden calf, that, the Jewish dispensation used the symbol of the scapegoat or ram in the age of Aries, the Ram, and that the Christian emphasizes the fish in the Piscean era, the Christian era. Ye who have "ears to hear" and "eyes to see" have before you another "key" to rightly understanding the fallacy of the "literal" and "historical" limitation of the indwelling "Christ" as Rome fashioned it during the 2nd through the 5th century. Here before us again we see the fallacy of trusting in a "Faith in Jesus" built upon Rome's dogmatic theologies build around their "literalized" created "historical" identify of the "Indwelling Christ" common to all of humanity. Our focus needs be upon "the Faith of Jesus" which is built upon the expression of "the Christ" and his message to the Souls of mankind through the Jewish Faith and their Torah; God's instruction manual for the progressive Spiritual evolution of man's Soul and his Spiritual consciousness.

Among the manifestations of the new Piscean Age (the constellation of the two fishes) was the rise of a global religion centering primarily on symbols of water: baptism, walking on water, changing water into wine, and so forth. Indeed, for the student of astrological symbolism, Christianity offers a mother lode of correspondences in connection with Pisces. For example, Christian scripture speaks extensively of fishermen, wine, helping the downtrodden and outcasts of society, and the washing of feet; all traditional symbols of Pisces. One of the defining miracles of Christ's ministry was the feeding of the multitude with two fishes and five loaves of bread. More subtly, the eating of fish on Friday by Catholics is linked by some to the fact that Friday is governed by Venus, the planet that is "exalted" (i.e., attains its optimal expression) in Pisces. If we study these symbols associated with the changing of the Age of Aries to the Age of Pisces and its newly "re-birthed Christ Mind" in the human species we find new revelations about the archetypal dynamics of man's True Being as evolving in his present plane of Being. Viewed as a whole, they tell us that humanity was learning to relate to the Divine and the world-at-large through a more emotional and Spiritualized filter. In its more constructive aspect, this brought about a new found element of compassion and faith in society, especially within Christian society and the followers of "the Christ". We see the emergence of a spiritual sensibility that spoke of "turning the other cheek" rather than the smiting of one's enemies. But sadly with this newly emerging Age of Pisces the emphasis upon the developing Soul within mankind was lost and replaced by an "external and exoteric religion" rather than a newly and heightened "esoteric" Spiritual sensitivity and consciousness emanating within the Soul of mankind.

Esoterically, the cycle of World Ages traces an aspect of the Spiritual evolution of consciousness. It has as its astrological basis the circle of the zodiac (hence, the "Age of Pisces," the "Age of Aquarius," etc.). It is hoped by now that the "thinking believer" and "truth-seeker" sees clearly that humanity evolves as a whole as it expands and develops the collective consciousness of the race while at the same time that each of its members is evolving in his or her own personal way. Individual evolution, therefore, proceeds simultaneously with and complements racial evolution. The cycle of World Ages traces the development of humanity's racial consciousness and the actual process of involved in mankind's progressive Spiritual growth and Spiritual development as a whole. In other words, the cycle of World Ages reveal the collective Spiritual development of mankind which is in the final analysis the "ministry of the Christ" within mankind toward his Soul.

In a more negative vein, this same emphasis on emotionality ushered in a spirit of dogmatism and persecution in the emerging "literalized" and "historicized" religion created by Rome during the 2nd through the 5th century. Pisces is intensely concerned with matters of faith. However, taken to extremes, this can lead to zealotry, self-righteousness, and the urge to establish absolute and inflexible guidelines in the form of dogmatic theology imposed upon all who must adhere and follow to be "accepted" or "saved". At its worst, the Piscean Age was an era of religious intolerance, when large populations were expected to show unquestioning allegiance to a monolithic Roman Christian belief system, as we see progressively exhibited in much of the dogmatic theologies of Roman Christianity over these last 2,000 years. With such an emphasis the "Faith of Jesus" that elevates mankind's Soul through the Torah as taught in the Jewish Faith took a back seat to the newly created "Faith in Jesus" as implemented by emerging Roman Christianity. Excluding the Gnostic Paul and the writer of the Gospel of John, had these later writers of these ungenuine New Testament documents possessed adequate knowledge of the Divine Spiritual Mysteries and the teaching of the evolving "Logos" and "the Krst/Christ Mind" being "re-born" anew in mankind on a higher Spiritual plateau with each new World Age then surely no one in his right mind would have debased such a lofty Spiritual concept held sacred in the ancient Spiritual Mysteries by the Gnostics by subjecting them a vulgar "literal" and "historical" approach as has been done.

It is in the course of Precession, about 255 B.C.E., the Vernal birthplace of the new Sun, symbolic for that Divine Spark of Living Cosmic Energy which has "fallen into mankind" which in reality was the Divine Spark of God, passed into the sign of the Fishes, and the "Egyptian messiah" (symbolic for the the Krst/Christ Mind and Logos in mankind) whom had been represented 2,155 years by the Ram or Lamb (2,410 B.C.E.), and previously before that for another 2,155 years by the Apis Bull (4,565 B.C.E.), was now newly imaged as the Fish, or the "Fish-man", called Ichtyus in Greek. What is astronomical and Metaphysical and of the most lofty Spiritual significance to mankind I hope you see was tragically debased by Rome by its vulgar "literalism" and "historicization" of "the Christ" when limited to but one person in a supposed pseudo-history of their own making. So we see about 255 B.C.E., the "messiah" and "the Krst/Christ", as the "Fish-man", was to expected to be "re-birthed" once more in connection with the emerging Age of Pisces and in so doing with it arose the hope of the continued elevation of human Spiritual consciousness as well. Concurrent with this "new birth" of "the Christ" in humanity we find an increasing expectancy for the "coming of Christ" to mankind the world over as connected to the newly emerging World Age of Pisces. The "birth of Christ" or the "coming of Christ again" or the "return of Christ" to mankind was imminently expected by those who "know" these Cosmic and Divine Spiritual Truths; we call them Gnostics or "the knowers". Expected was the coming "anew" of God's Divine Mind to mankind as "the Krst/Christ" as the Manifestor of mankind's Divinity evolving within him on a higher level than ever before and finds its ultimate source in the celestial waters. If you recall from earlier studies, the ancient Egyptians called these primordial waters "Nun"; this explains why the Old Testament speaks of Joshua, a cognitive name for "Jesus", as having as his father "Nun". Amazing! Here before us lies a great "key" to unlocking the "esoteric" secrets and hidden "gnosis" behind our "literalized Jesus Story" and we miss it because we have never been taught about the great Egyptian Religion which is the foundation for all later world religions in one way or the other. But let us not overlook something equally amazing. Here we see that the earliest Jewish religion possessed at one time the "keys" to this ancient Spiritual Wisdom and "the Christ-Messiah" and does so yet today when looking at Mystical Judaism and the Kabbalah. The coming "messiah" and "Christ awakening" in mankind is called "Dag", or "the Fish", in the Talmud and does so because of the connection of "the Messiah Mind" with the Age of Pisces and the two fish; symbolic of the needed two births of mankind (one natural, one Spiritual). One only needs to look at Judaism to find the teaching of being "Born Again" long before Rome will appropriate the name and "radically reinterpret" it as has done for most of Judaism today. But here before us we see that the Jews at one time connected his "coming" of the "Messiah Mind" in mankind and his "Spiritual awakening" with a stellar conjunction in the sign of Pisces and the Fishes. This shows that the Jews were not only in possession of the astronomical allegory at one time in their history, but also the tradition by which it could be interpreted correctly. But over time not only the Jews but the "non-Jews" as well will lose and misplace the "keys" to the Mythos and in time fall back upon a "literal" and "historical" interpretation of this "coming messiah". But one key difference remains between the two; the Jews expected a "literal" human descendent to come who was anointed and from the loins of a past great King; it was the "non-Jews" who changed this Spiritual concept the most drastically making this "coming messiah" no longer applying to the awaking Spiritual enlightenment in mankind as a whole but a supposed "literal Super-man messiah" which never could come since it was mystical and mythical to its very core and applied to the whole of humanity in its original intent.

To say that you have learned a lot so far is an understatement; but let us keep before us in all of this the importance of our Soul's Spiritual evolution that cannot occur in a "Faith about Jesus" but only when one follows "the Faith of Jesus" as he dedicates himself to training his Soul by observing and following the Torah through his life which molds his character and behavior into "Messiah-likeness" and "Christ-likeness".

The nations, when exposed to and accepting this "radically reinterpretation" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom at Rome's hands saw no great need for preserving these "Krst/Christ" stories in writing if the world was "literally" about to end in a literal fashion. But the ancient Spiritual Wisdom never taught the end of the "world"; only the end and beginning of a new "Age" which we will see momentarily. Again, with such "literalization" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom they reasoned that there was no need for written records. Such an idea was created by excessive apocalypticism and fatalism as connected with Precession and the changing of the World Ages. Instead of the "world" dying the only "death" that was to be experienced was that of mankind's old animal nature which had been only been partly sanctified to the degree possible during the Age of Aries. Further progressive "birthing" of his evolving Spiritual nature and Christ Mind within him was necessary and this could only happen with the further alignment of the Cosmos and its life-giving energies internalized in mankind by the "rebirth" of the "indwelling Christ" once again to mankind which only further progressed his Spiritual evolution to the "fullness and stature" of Christ. Over time with the oral traditions mistranslated so badly as we see in Matthew we find "the Christ" promising to be with mankind till the end of the "world". Such a rendering implies the finality of all life and fosters a spirit of fatalism among mankind. Fear and ignorance is the cause. The Greek text so badly misinterpreted in this verse speaks not of the "end of the world" but rather instead of this "Krst/Christ" being with mankind to "the end of the Age" and beyond in the newly emerging Age of opportunity and Spiritual advance which historically we see in the Age of Pisces with its emphasis upon mankind's Second Birth. Again, it was at each ending of a World Age that "the Christ" was "coming again to mankind" anew being "awakened" in humanity in a higher progressive Spiritual consciousness that impacted man's True Being. Stories taken from this ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Logia were simply passed along orally, primarily as a means of preaching and convincing outsiders who were already aware of the soon coming of the Age of Pisces which was to replace the Age of Aries. But as we see over time this "Logia" falls into the hands of the "literalizers" and "carnalizers" of the Christ. The "end of the Age", or more importantly the "literalization" of the "end of the world" as incorrectly translated in the Gospel of Matthew, was ignorantly believed by many to be coming upon the world in that day and time. Fear of death and extinction of the human species instead of hopeful expectation of man's further Spiritual evolution gripped the minds of men and they flocked to this new "literal" salvation message of "Faith in Jesus" provided by the Roman "literalizers" of the Spiritual Mythos. There was no time for a life devoted to "the Faith of Jesus" or the evolution of one's Soul and Spiritual perfection in light of such a pernicious theological dogma and interpretation of the text that the end of the world was near. For those who did not known the difference between the teaching of the end of the "Age" vs the "end of the world" such theology was frightening to the core; again fear and ignorance is the power of religion gone awry. Let us look at this "key" text hardly ever read or understood correctly in our Bibles. This again speaks to us of why Roman Christianity so opposed science down throughout history; knowledge of the truth liberates the minds of mankind.

Matt 28:20 20 Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen. (KJV)

If we look up this very important verse in the Thayer's Greek Lexicon we find something amazing; it never says "world" for the word in the Greek mistranslated again as "world" is the word "age".

- 1) forever, an unbroken age, perpetuity of time, eternity
- 2) the worlds, the universe
- 3) a period of time, an age

Here we see that "the Christ" and "Divine evolving Mind of God" in humanity promises to be with man "forever" but more to the point the promise is made not only until the changing of the Age which was imminent upon the nations at this time of the world but beyond it; even through the constant changing of World Ages until the whole of humanity comes to the "unity of the Faith". Notice the use of the definite article "the" indicating "one and only Faith"; not two or three or more than 2,000 as we find today splintered in all manifestations of the Christian Faith today. Notice if you will the purpose of this evolutionary cycle of World Ages and its implications for the evolving Soul.

Eph 4:13 13 Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ: (KJV)

Man, like Plato said is truly a "god in an animal body"; a Spiritual work in process that is to be terminated by man evolving and becoming the living example of God's Mind, the Christ Mind.

So as we see the oral traditions of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom has always taught the "rebirth of the Christ-Mind" anew in humanity from each World Age to World Age. Our story picks up especially for us in 255 B.C.E. with the changing of the age of Aries to the Age of Pisces. Again, unknown to most Christians, with each changing of the Age in symphony with the Precession of the Equinoxes, with each 2,155 years, there was always a "reinterpretation" of the symbols surrounding God's "Krst/Christ" or Divine Mind in mankind. We saw this is the Age of Leo and the symbol of the Lion of God as in the Sphinx which is 13,000 years old, in the Age of Taurus with the symbol of the Bull of God and the ancient Egyptian Religion, the Age of Aries with Moses and the sacrificial scapegoat as the Lamb of God, and the two fishes of the Age of Pisces. With Pisces and the "rebirth" of "the Christ" we see the Divine Message that mankind needs two births, one natural and one Spiritual, as symbolized these two fishes in Pisces as connected to the "rebirth of the Krst/Christ" and a heightened state of Spiritual consciousness within humanity. Here with this "coming of Christ" and "rebirth of Christ" we have but a glimpse of this deeper "gnosis" than previously known during the Age of Aries or Taurus; a glimpse that goes much deeper than the barbaric "literalization" of such a Divine Concept when limited to but one person. Each Age brings a new "rebirth" of the "Krst/Christ Mind" and Spiritual consciousness to humanity and the fruit of this is the continued Spiritual evolution of mankind's Soul. Here we see the secret; the hidden mystery of the Spiritual evolution of the Soul in mankind and his progressive Spiritual consciousness as associated with each new Age and with the accompanying "rebirth of the Divine Krst/Christ Mind" in mankind from Age to Age. If you study this for yourself then you find this ancient Spiritual Wisdom and its "same message" expressed through varied symbolisms, allegories, and myths in every nation under the Sun as far back as you can go in the study of archeology, astronomy, and Comparative Religion. Each culture expressed this evolving Divine Mind in mankind, this "birth of Christ" anew in mankind uniquely and had their own special symbols unique to their own culture which they used in expressing these same Divine Concepts which were common among the ancient Mystery Religions. But what once was Spiritual Allegories and Myths depicting origin, purpose, and destiny of mankind's Soul over time become "debased" and outlandishly "literalized" and "historicized" and with it the "keys" to the proper interpretation of the ancient Divine Wisdom regarding man's Soul will become buried and lost to mankind. Only in the last two centuries with the discovery and restoration of the ability to read the Egyptian hieroglyphs, and the archeological finds of the Dead Sea Scrolls and the Nag Hammadi Library in Egypt, have the "keys" to correctly interpret our "Christ Story" been returned to mankind; and in time for the beginning of the Age of Aquarius where the "external Christ" will be seen to been revealed in a higher understanding than before where it can now rightly be "internalized" in the whole of humanity.

Let us again return to the evolution of the Logos Mind as connected to the changing of the World Ages. An important Christian Gnostic teaching was the "Logos" which in Greek is translated as "the image of the Word." It is an important concept found in the gospel of John: "In the beginning was the Word (Logos), and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." (John 1:1) Logos is the part of God that acts in the world. The Logos represents the perfect unity of the human and the Divine. This is affirmed by John when he wrote that "the Word was made flesh and dwelt among (referring to humanity)." When John stated that Jesus is the Logos, he is stating that Jesus is the human representation and personification of the Divine Principle of the Logos, the Christ. The Logos is the Divine "spark" of God within humans that needs to be awakened. Everyone has the "image of the Word (Logos)" within them and it is for this reason that Genesis describes humanity as created "in the image and likeness of God." The Logos is the divine Spirit in humanity. By using the Christian Gnostic idea of the Logos, John is affirming that all sons of God are created in the "image of the Word" as Jesus, the personified perfect Divine Mind which preexisted in Spirit before being born in human incarnation into "matter". In other words, every human is an incarnation of the Logos and every human has the potential of becoming like this personified perfect man, this Jesus, an allegorical manifestation of the human-Divine unity. Every human can be a "Christ" and because of this, every Soul will eventually be drawn back to God.

The term Logos was widely used in the Greco-Roman culture and in Judaism. It has many meanings such as "word, speech, statement, discourse, refutation, ratio, account, explanation, reason". But the meanings which have philosophical and religious implications are basically two:

- as an inward thought or reason, an intuitive conception, and
- as an outward expression of thought in speech.

In any theistic system it could therefore easily be used to account for a revelation or to be personified and designate a separate being. Through most schools of Greek philosophy, this term was used to designate a rational, intelligent and thus vivifying principle of the universe; that being the Divine Mind or "Christ Mind" that was and is expressed today through proper understanding of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and religions like ancient Egypt and Biblical Judaism. I wish I could say Christianity but with its imposed dogmatism upon the "literal" and "historical" interpretation of "the Christ" that cannot be said. This principle was deduced from the understanding of the universe as the living reality and by comparing it to the living creature.

In the Septuagint version of the Old Testament the term logos (Hebrew "davar") was used frequently to describe God's utterances (Gen. 1:3, 6,9; 3:9,11; Ps. 32:9), God's action (Zach. 5:1-4; Ps. 106:20; Ps. 147:15), and messages of prophets by means of which God communicated his will to his people through His Divine Mind, the "Messiah-Christ Mind" (Jer. 1:4-19, 2:1-7; Ezek. 1:3; Amos 3:1). Logos is used here only as a figure of speech designating God's activity or action. In the so-called Jewish wisdom literature we find the concept of Wisdom (hokhmah and Sophia, the term for the feminine counterpart of the masculine "Christ") which could be to some degree interpreted as a separate personification or individualization, but it is contrasted often with human stupidity. In the Hebrew culture it was a part of metaphorical and poetic language describing Divine Wisdom as God's attribute and it clearly refers to a human characteristic in the context of human Earthly existence. What the reader should understand from this is that the "Christ-Mind" is not foreign to Judaism; rather it is termed "wisdom" and is the same as the "Christ Mind" we are so acquainted with in our New Testaments.

Philo's philosophy adheres to the Platonic picture of the Souls descending into the material realm in need of enlightenment and instruction that only comes by the unfolding of the "Christ Mind" within humanity; only this allows the descended Soul to return back to the realm of Heaven where they came from. This is true

Gnosticism at its very core; the ancient Spiritual Wisdom restated. No where here is to be found a "Faith in Christ" or a "Faith in Jesus"; rather it reveals the disciplining and subjugation of the animal body to the higher Spirit-Soul in mankind when "awakened from the death" of material incarnation by the "resurrected Christ-Mind" in mankind. Nowhere in any of this is the "literal" and "historical" limitation of the Christ to one person as Rome would have us later believe; no where in any of this is the "Faith in Jesus" or "Faith in Christ" to be found; rather mankind by submitting his Soul to the instruction and Torah of God trains his Soul in righteousness and "Krst/Christlikeness and this cannot be found in any antinomian or anti-Law teachings of the later carnalizing Christian Church.

DO YOU HAVE "THE FAITH OF JESUS" OR "FAITH IN JESUS"? #4

We continue our study in the 4th article of this series.

Mentioned before as the first generation of "literal believers" in the "Christ Story" began to die off and hopes for the "literal" and "historical" Second Coming of "the Christ" dimmed following the arrival of the Age of Pisces and yet no "historical messiah" could be found on the throne of Israel, and with Israel's later dispersion following the destruction of the Temple, there arose a pressing need, unlike before, to preserve the words and teachings of this "Jewish Messiah-Christ" (the Logia) as expressed and taught through the Jewish Faith, Judaism and Jewish culture for later posterity. Quite a few collections of stories and "sayings" as the collected wisdom of the "Jewish Christ-Messiah" were collected and eventually written. This "wisdom" was circulated in connection with the early Synagogue-Church, both in and outside of Israel. Amazingly we find that along side the Torah, Moses, and the Prophets that other such works like the The Gospel of Thomas, The Gospel of Mary, and the Secret Book of John were just some of these. These earliest accounts taken from earlier oral traditions along with the teachings, message, and "Logia" of "the Christ" within them were all Gnostic to their core. These earliest accounts were Gnostic but as history records for us in the 2nd century were to be replaced by the supposed "literal" and "historical" accounts we have today due to the successful emergence and influence of the Roman Church. Some of these earliest writings of the Gnostic "Chrestians" gave very different and in some cases conflicting accounts of "the Krst/Christ" when compared to the "literalized" and "historicized" gospels of which we are most familiar today. Central to these differences involved the method of interpreation of the "Krst/Christ", or should I say Jesus' alleged "literal" and "historical death and resurrection". Due to the oral traditions and their diverseness in different geographical localities and with the continued loss of the "gnosis" for proper interpreation of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom some of these oral traditions came over time to argue for the "physical resurrection" of "the Christ", with the mantle of leadership falling on those who had also, according to inherited oral traditions, supposedly experienced it firsthand as told in certain versions of the oral traditions that circulated at that time which pointed to the supposed apostles and followers of "the Christ-Messiah" of Judaism. Others, the Gnostics and the majority early on who called themselves "Chrestians", not to be confused with the later "Christians" of Rome's invention, said the death and resurrection of "the Christ" had always been Spiritual and Mystical and never "literal" or "historical"; in fact this "resurrection from the dead" was the "coming of Krst/Christ" as a Spiritual "awaking within humanity" and will always be a Spiritual and Metaphysical event that was amazingly termed by the ancients as "being Born Again". Needless to say the Divine concept of being "Born Again" does not carry today its original meaning.

When we look at the "resurrection" we find that two of the Gospels, Matthew and Mark, teach a "physical resurrection" of a "literal Jesus" from the dead and two others, John and Luke do not; they teach a "mystical" and "Metaphysical resurrection" from the dead in contrast to the two others. These parts of John and Luke reveal the Gnostic teachings that lie yet today under Rome's attempts to destroy it with their false "literalization" and "histroication" of the "Christ Story". These earliest Gnostic believers in "the Krst/Christ" within humanity, without denying the "resurrection", reject only the "literal-historical" interpretation" of the resurrection. Let us look at these other two accounts in the New Testament which teach other than a "literal" and "historical" resurrection of "the Christ".

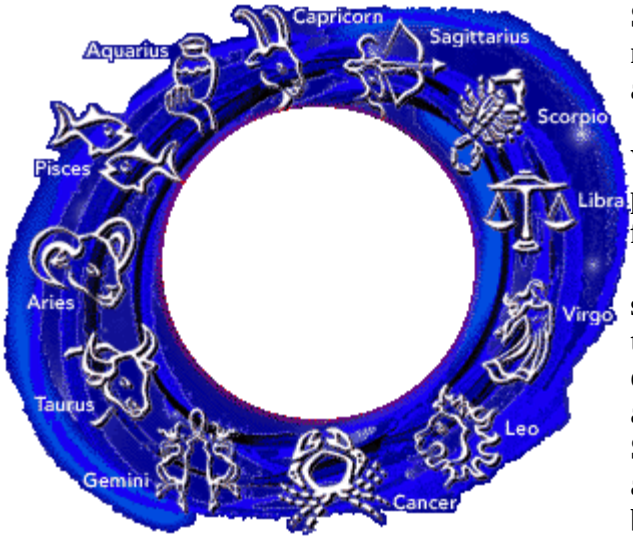
Luke relates that the disciples, deeply troubled about Jesus' death, talked with a stranger for several hours and invited him to dinner; when he sat down with them to bless the bread suddenly they recognized him as Jesus. At that moment "he vanished out of their sight" (Luke 24:31).

Luke 24:29-32 29 But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them. 30 And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them. 31 And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vanished out of their sight. 32 And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures? (KJV)

The writer of the Gospel of John relates a similar "mystical" resurrection and not a "literal" or "historical" resurrection of "the Christ". Mary Magdalene, mourning for Jesus near his grave, sees a man she takes to be the gardener. When he speaks her name, suddenly she recognizes the presence of Jesus, but he orders her not to touch him (John 20:11-17).



John 20:14-17 14 And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus. 15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away. 16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master. 17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God. (KJV)

Needless to say this "vanishing into thin air" and "inability to recognize" one previously known by Mary Magdalene speaks of the unreliability of interpreting these events as "literal" and "historical" events. So if some of the New Testament stories insist upon a "literal" view of the resurrection of "the Christ", others lend themselves to completely different interpretations (Elaine Pagels, The Gnostic Gospels, p. 5-6). Such disagreement and contradictions should make the "thinking believer" and "truth-seeker" again reflect upon the reliability of a "Faith in Jesus" as opposed to following "the Faith of Jesus". Chrstianity is replete with the undercurrent theme that if one choosees not to believe in Jesus and His message of eternal salvation through His physical and literal death on the cross, then he is told he will die in his sins and go straight to hell when he dies; no if, ands or buts about it! But above we see that half of the testimony of our New Testaments deny such a "literal" and "historical" resurrection from the death for Jesus. This is hardly ever noticed by the vast majority of the Chrisatian Church. It appears to a "thinking-believer" and "truth-seeker" that even our New Testament cannot agree on the matter and this is very problematic for Holy Spirit being the author of such revelations.Concurrent with these articles is that we again have reason to question seriously the "Faith in Jesus" theologies we have inherited by Rome.

Let us see what deep Spiritual Truths regarding the Soul of mankind we missed when looking only at a supposed "literal" and "historical" resurrection of this "Jesus" of which our New Testaments cannot agree. Let us not ever forget our whole focus here is to reevalute the reliability of living a life believing in dogmas that are connceted to having a "Faith in Jesus" as a "literal" and "historical" person whose deeds provide for manking an Eternal Life in Heaven as opposed to Spiritually perfecting the Soul of humanity by training it through the message, teachings, and the "Logia" of the "indwelling and awakened" Presence of the Christ "within"; accomplished through following and observing the "Faith of Jesus". One way to see this correctly is to see the Astronomical background for this "Logia" found in the teachings of Biblical Judaism and the need for man to be "Born Again" long before such concepts were stolen and "radically reinterpreted" by Rome. So let us look at this "Second Born Again" experience and what really lies behind it as found in the teachings of the "Jewish Christt" and "the Faith of Jesus" as found in Judaism as opposed to its later reinterpretation of it by Rome when creating a "Faith in Jesus" or a "Faith about Jesus".

With the coming of the rebirth of "the Christ" at the Age of Pisces, the constellation of Pisces, who now would rule the Vernal Equinox for 2,155 years, consists of the image of "two fish" in water. This spoke to the ancient Spiritual Masters of mankind's need to have "two births"; one natural in "water" and one by "Spirit". In the Zodiac if we look at the sign of the two fish in Pisces and gaze 6 signs away or "across" the Zodiac from it we find the alternate sign of the Virgin, Virgo, symbolic of mankind's "first birth" in "water", the physical birth of man in the womb of woman which is to be followed in time by a second "Spiritual birth of man" through the "Krst/Christ Mind" into a higher Spiritual Consciousness symbolized by the two fish of Pisces. These two fishes symbolize the need for mankind to experience two "birth" during his life; one natural and physical in water of the womb and one from above which is the work of the "Krst/Christ Mind" upon man's Soul. Amazing it is to realize that the ancients as far back as ancient Egypt understood the need for mankind to experience two births; one natural and one Spiritual. This birth in "Pisces" was the birth "of the Christ Mind" in the Soul of man and each child of God is to experience this "coming of Christ" anew to his Soul during his life; at least this is his incarnational goal. This was but one of the new Spiritual understandings for man's Soul associated with the new Age of Pisces. Humanity was shown by the Creator above his head in the Heavens and Sky the "pattern" and "path" for his Soul's Spiritual evolution. Trutly, the ancient always knew that God's Bible was written in the Heavens and Sky as found layed our for mankind in the Constellations. It is here that insightful and Spiritually illuminated minds found the "pattern" for the birth, life, maturation, and rebirth of man's Soul in the only Bible which man could not forge or purposefully misquote; God's Word in Sky and Heavens. Ancient Egypt saw this and diagramed it for all humanity forever in theiruranograph. What was written in the Sky was cherished in the oral traditions of mankind since time began. What was Spiritual and Metaphysical and intended for the whole of the human race was grosly "literalized" and "historicized" and "limited" to but one person. What a loss of Divine Truth we have sufferred. We see this Divine Concept of the "birth of the Krst/Christ" in mankind symbolized not only in the Heavens and Sky above but elaborated in the Gnostic Paul's admonition to all:

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

Notice if you will this "resurrection from the dead", this awakening from Spiritual slumber, was designated by the ancients as a "death". All mankind was expected to experience this "mystical resurrection of the dead" while yet alive in his body; this is the true "Born Again" experience and the "birth of the Divine Christ Mind" in humanity and the Spiritual experience of which we read that is so tragically misunderstood and interpreted by Christianity these last 1,800 years because of its "literalization" and false "historicization". The ancient taught that the incarnation of Divine Mind as "the Krst/Christ" was allegorically the "death of God" and the resurrection of "the Krst/Christ" was mankind's awakening to higher Spiritual consciouness Age after Age; it has been that way since recorded time. Most of Christianity that follows a "literal" and "historical" interpretation of the "Jesus Story" by and large perceive a second coming is yet to come rather than one which has already come to them since their first breath. Awaiting within each of us as a "Silent Witness" is the indwelling "Krst/Christ" man awaiting his "resurrection from the dead".

Rev 3:20 20 Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me. (KJV)

However, a correct reading of the ancient Spiritual and Divine Mysteries which are repeated in our New Testament in our "Jesus Story" is about such an appearing or "coming" of "Krst/Christ" to the whole of mankind. It is all about Spiritual awareness of man's True Being, and it correctly understood explains this

"second coming" of "the Krst/Christ" to mankind or "second birth of Spirit-man" which is yet to come hopefully to all mankind. In such an understanding of the earliest "Christ Stories" there is no room for a "Faith in Jesus"; only the "Faith of Jesus" which progressively sanctifies the Soul of mankind on its way to perfection. To those who have awakened, as the Gnostics state so eloquently, this "Jesus Christ" has already come:

I Jn 4:2-3 2 Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God: 3 And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world. (KJV)

I Jn 4:9-15 9 In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. 10 Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. 11 Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another. 12 No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us. 13 Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit. 14 And we have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world. 15 Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God. (KJV)

Here is the mystery. Had we first been introduced to this "indwelling Krst/Christ" which when "birthed" in man, as expressed as a Divine Spiritual Allegory as taken from the previous ancient Spiritual Wisdom of the ancients that existed for over 13,000 years, then the "literal" and "historical" understanding of our "Jesus Story" would have been absurd. This same sentiment is voiced by the earliest of our own Church Fathers believe it or not. Tertullian, one of the Christian Fathers (A.D. 200), himself states as much since having been previously acquainted with the Divine Spiritual Wisdom and the Divine Spiritual Allegories regarding "the Krst/Christ" and at one time a Presbyter of the Christian Church in Africa. Here he tells the truth and reasons in the following manner on the evidences of a "literalized" and "historicized" Christianity:* "I find no other means to prove myself to be impudent with success, and happily a fool, than by my contempt of shame, - as, for instance, I maintain that the Son of God was born. Why am I not ashamed of maintaining such a thing? Why, but because it is itself a shameful thing. I maintain that the Son of God died. Well, that is wholly credible, because it is monstrously absurd. I maintain that after having been buried he rose again; and that I take to be absolutely true, because it was manifestly impossible" (Taylor, Diegesis, p. 326). Taylor goes on to say more about Tertullian: "Quintus Septimus Forens Tertullianus, the last that can be read into the second century, and the very first of all the Latin Fathers, was, like the rest of them, originally a heathen, was afterwards a most zealous and orthodox Christian, and finally fell into heresy". History validates what the great Rev. R. Taylor maintains; that one adhering to the "gnosis" and later converting to a "literalized" and "historicized" adaptation of "the Christ" we find that Tertullian later in his life renounced a "literalized" Christ and returned once again to the ancient Spiritual understanding of the "Indwelling Christ" in mankind; the "only true Christ" that man will ever know. Here we have a picture of the newly emerging "radical reinterpetation" of a prior "gnosis" which Tertullian calls "monstrously absurd" and "manifestly impossible" and his example of renouncing such an "absurd" and "monstrous" destruction of higher Spiritual Truths by their vulgar "literalization" and "limitation" to but one person fuels his later denial of the whole of Rome's abberant theologies. Tertullian wanted in the end nothing to do with a "Faith in Jesus".

Tertullian knew what all the earliest of the Christian Fathers knew and what traditional Chrsitians do not today; namely, that the New Testament contains indications that the ancient church possessed extra-scriptural teachings that were not made available to the public but were reserved for worthy followers of Christ. "I have fed you with milk," Paul told the Corinthian saints, "and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet are ye now able" (1 Corinthians 3:2). If Paul ever gave this doctrinal "meat" to the Corinthians, it is not recorded in any extant version of the New Testament. This is very problematic when we try to fathom the reasons why this information that lies at the very heart and Scriptures was not made public. Truly there was a different "interpreation" to the Scriptures other than "literal" or "historical" which only those who possessed the "keys" to the Gnosis would comprehen. Moreover, since Paul's first letter to the saints at Corinth discusses everything from the order and glories of the resurrection to the various kinds of Spiritual gifts found in the church, one can only wonder what could be greater and most lofty understandings than these doctrines which could not be shared with the "believers" of Paul's day. The Corinthians were "babes" in Christ; they were still unable to handle the "meat" of the gospel (1 Corinthians 3:1-2). However, Paul told them that "mature" saints were taught a "secret and hidden wisdom":

1 Cor 2:6-7 6 Howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect: yet not the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, that come to nought: 7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory: (KJV)

This secret wisdom undoubtedly constituted part of the "meat" that the apostle withheld from the Corinthians; "meat" that went far beyond what the typical mind could envision when limited to only a supposed "literal" and "historical" understanding of "the Christ".

When Paul was blessed to visit Paradise, he heard "things that must not be divulged":

2 Cor 12:4 4 How that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter. (KJV)

The Greek here is very interesting:

Strong's Concordance teaches us: 731 arrhetos (ar'-hray-tos); from 1 (as a negative particle) and the same as 4490; unsaid, i.e. (by implication) inexpressible: KJV-- unspeakable.

Thayer's Greek Lexicon also helps us:731 arrhetos-

- 1) unsaid, unspoken
- 2) unspeakable (on account of its sacredness)

The adjective "unspeakable" was often used of things disclosed in Mystery rites and the ancient Sacred Wisdom religions which the initiates were charged to keep secret (Victor Paul Furnish, II Corinthians, The Anchor Bible, Grden City, New York: Dubleday & Company, Inc., 1984, p. 527).

The early Church father Ignatius told the Trallians he possessed sacred information that they were not yet ready to receive:

"Am I incapable of writing to you of heavenly things? No, indeed; but I am afraid to harm you, seeing you are mere babes. You must forgive me, but the chances are you could not accept what I have to say and would choke yourselves. Even in my own case, it is not because I am a prisoner and can grasp heavenly mysteries, the ranks of angels, the array of principalities, things visible and invisible--it is not because of all that that I am a genuine disciple as yet" (Cyril C. Richardson, Early Christian Fathers, New York: Macmillan Publishing Company, 1970, pp. 99-100).

These "heavenly things" or "heavenly mysteries" were obviously not recorded in the scriptures, and Ignatius did not think the Trallians were ready to receive them. Obviously they went far beyond the traditional "literal" and "historical" understanding applied to the oral traditions givent he fact that at the time of this quote the written New Testament was not in existence.

Clement of Alexandria also acknowledged that the church had secret teachings and his remarks are astounding:

"Clement concedes that the Scriptures open salvation to the many, who experience the "first saving change," when they pass from heathenism to faith, ...But these are "saved only in the first degree" (Frank N. MaGill, Masterpieces of Christian Literature, New York: Harper & Row, 1963, p. 47). That is really interesting: "saved only in the first degree" indicating that a progressive "salvation" is in order. Here is where we come to the very hidden "gnosis" that we find in the New Testament. It is a fact that besides his public teaching, Christ is shown to also teach his followers, called Apostles, the "gnosis" [hidden sacred knowledge] which leads to the Soul's perfection that goes so much further than the "peshat" or the "liteal"/"historical" interpreation of these Sacred texts. This knowledge, Clement claims, has descended by transmission to a few, having been imparted unwritten by "initiates" into the higher Spiritual Wisdom and Sacred Mysteries of God and man. Clement goes on to say that "great preparation and previous training are necessary to receive it. But those who can obey it, achieve here and now as a foretaste of eternal bliss, and, in the world to come, will take their places with the Apostles in the highest sphere" (Ibid.).

Beyond this supposed "literal" and "historical" interpreatation and understanding of "the Christ", this "first degree of salvation" so mentioned by Clement is the knowledge that this "Krst/Christ" and his "Coming to man" is the same as this "Krst/Christ" being birthed into "matter" and humanity as depicted in the allegories of the birth of the "Krst/Christ" in sables, mangers and the many cave stories regarding "the Krst/Christ". John E. Remsberg relates to us that Justin Martyr states that Jesus was born in a cave: "Justin Martyr, the Apologist, who, from his birth at Shechem, was familiar with Palestine, and who lived less than a century after the time of our Lord, places the scene of the nativity in a cave". He goes on to state : "This is, indeed, the ancient and constant tradition both of the Eastern and the Western churches, and it is one of the few to which, though unrecorded in the Gospel history, we may attach a reasonable probability" (John Remsberg, Life of Christ, p.3). Out of darkness, symbolized by a cave and the "darkness of matter", light (Spiritual illumation of man's True Being) is to come.

Eph 5:14 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead (symbolic of darkness), and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

The awaking of the Divine Mind in man is the "Spiritual Second coming" of "the Krst/Christ" within each child of God. Gnosticism and Hermeticism looked to Jesus, Paul and the Bible as sources for this higher understanding about the nature of man, God, Christ, and savlation; a higher understanding than any that could be provided by a "literal" or "historical" understanding of Jesus or "the Christ". "Faith in Jesus" simply won't open the door to this higher knowledge like walking the path of "the Faith of Jesus" and "the Faith of the Christ". This is the true "Born Again" experience that goes so much further than signing a card and mouthing a prayer at some Church altar and then waiting for some deliverance from above. It goes so much further than some "literal" and "historical" birth limited to but one person as Rome would fashion it. This watery birth of man in the womb of woman, the Virgin Virgo birth symbolized in the Heavens and Sky above, is the first birth of the Soul in "matter" and humanity. The "incarnation" of "the Krst/Christ" within each child of God and man's awaking to the presence of God and His "Krst/Christ" within him is the "Second Birth" symbolized by the Age of Pisces and the two fish which speaks to mankind of his expected Spiritual evolution and progression of his Soul and its Spiritual awaking and progressive Spiritual perfection and maturation in this life. This "birth" has already come to billions down through history who possessed the truth of this ancient Spiritual Wisdom and only awaits your "awakening" to your Divine Self and your True Being. When we descended into morality we left behind our Divine Image and became an incomplete person. We "fell asleep" as phrased by the ancinets and we forgot our true origin and all of live if for the purpose of finding our way back to the realm of light and reintegrate our Divine Image. There is no place in such an understanding of the exclusive Divinity of but one person as seen in the "literalization" and "historization" of Jesus as the only "Christ-man". As orthodoxy evolved in the first five centuries after the time given for the death of Jesus by Rome St. Augustine's unmerciful doctrine of original sin was adopted by official Chirstendom; a doctrine that maintains that because Adam and Eve portook of forbidden knowledge that all of mankind is intrinsically sinners and cannot look up Jesus simply as our example, as the eariest Chrestains and even the Christians did, but rely upon his exclusive Divinity and that of the Church for our access to salvation. Biblical Judaism had always taught the salvatin of the Soul but under the consistent efforts of Rome the original Divine origin and Spiritual path for the Soul's evolution was all but stamped out, surviving only among a few sects and teachers throughout the succeeding centuries. Lost in all of this due to Rome's "radical reinterpreation" of the ancinet Spiritual Wisdom and "gnosis" is the role of the "Faith of Jesus" as taught in Biblical Judaism that helped perfect the Souls of mankind. The "Faith in Jesus" doctrine created by Rome, a doctrine containing required assent for salvation of such doctrines as the Trinity, the deity of Jesus, Jesus' physical and literal bodily resurrection, Jesus' physical and literal atonement, personal salvation by grace, the inerrancy of the Chrsitain Bible through God's inspiration of the Bible's authors, the virgin birth, and the anticipated second coming of Jesus is opposed by Biblical Judaism and "the Faith of Jesus". It is perhaps ironic that if one considers the very earliest Christian movement, the Jewish Chrestian Gnostics and later Jewish Christians in Jerusalem under the leadership of James, the supposed "brother" of Jesus and in the period immediately after the time given as the time for Jesus' execution, they might not be considered Christian by today's Orthodoxy and standards. Here is the dicotamy of which we have been speaking: the "Faith in Jesus" later created by Rome as opposed the "Faith of Jesus" as practiced by Judaism, both Jews and "non-Jewish" adherents to the same "Faith of the Jewish Christ". To Christians, Judaism is unique among world religions. It is to historic Judaism, the Judaism of the Old Testament, that Christianity traces its roots. Christianity does not supplant Old Testament Judaism; it is often called the "fruition of it" which is rather amazing since so many of its religions tenants in its "Faith in Jesus" contradict and surplant the ancient Spiritual Truths in Judaism and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of the ancients. One cannot hold to the Bible, Old and New Testaments, as God's divine revelation without also recognizing and honoring the place God has given historic Judaism. As the apostle Paul recited, these are some of the blessings God has given to the Jewish people:

To whom belongs the adoption as sons and the glory and the covenants and the giving of the Law and the temple service and the promises, whose are the fathers, and from whom is Christ according to the flesh, who is over all, God blessed forever. Amen (Romans 9:4,5, NASB).

Judaism, while admitting the existence of sin, its abhorrence by God, and the necessity for atonement, has not developed a system of salvation teachings and doctrines as found in Christianity. Atonement is accomplished by a sinner's repentance, good deeds and a little of God's grace. No concept of substitutionary atonement (as in Christianity in the person of Jesus Christ) exists. Judaism holds no concept of original sin. According to Christian belief, all human beings are born into the world with a sinful nature because of the transgression of Adam (Romans 5:12-21). Judaism's emphasis is not on original sin but original virtue and righteousness. Although Judaism acknowledges that man does commit acts of sin, there is not a sense of man being totally depraved or unworthy as is found in Christian theology. Unlike Christianity which prides itself on being "not under Law" Judaism teaches that the study of the Torah can overcome our inclination to evil. Judaism, the "Faith of Jesus", teaches that a proper relationship with God comes through repentance, prayer, and obedience to the Laws of God. Judaism is about being good to be good and to have a healthy relationship with God, man, and oneself--not to be saved. The role of the Torah and the Jewish law is to provide tools for the Soul of mankind to learn how to do that, and values that one ought acquire in this life. In line with the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and "gnosis" we find the Propehts teaching what is later to termed "Gnosticism":

"The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit, and a broken and contrite heart" (Psalm 51:17)

"I desire kindness and not sacrifices, the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings." (Hosea 6:6)

Few ever take their Lexicons and follow the train of "thought" regarding such words as "knowledge" or "wisdom" in their Bibles. Let us take a second to just look at the idea:

Job 36:12 12 But if they obey not, they shall perish by the sword, and they shall die without knowledge. (KJV)

Ps 14:4 4 Have all the workers of iniquity no knowledge? who eat up my people as they eat bread, and call not upon the LORD. (KJV)

Ps 119:66 66 Teach me good judgment and knowledge: for I have believed thy commandments. (KJV)

Prov 1:22 22 How long, ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity? and the scorners delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge? (KJV)

Prov 2:3-6 3 Yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding; 4 If thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures; 5 Then shalt thou understand the fear of the LORD, and find the knowledge of God. 6 For the LORD giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding. (KJV)

Isa 28:9 9 Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand doctrine? them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts. (KJV)

Hosea 4:6 6 My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me: seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children. (KJV)

1 Cor 15:34 34 Awake to righteousness, and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame. (KJV)

Eph 4:13-14 13 Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ: 14 That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; (KJV)

Phil 3:8 8 Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, (KJV)

Col 3:10 10 And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him: (KJV)

1 Tim 2:4 4 Who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth. (KJV)

Eph 3:4 4 Whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ) (KJV)

Notice if you will the continual connection between "Law", Commandments", "Knowledge", "Obedience", "Knowledge", "Seeking Knowledge of God", "Moving beyond the milk of the Word", "unity of 'The' one and only Faith", "Shame for lack of Knowledge of God", "Knowledge of the Son of God and Christ Jesus", "Truth", and finally the "Mystery of Christ". Each one of these has for its underlying and common theme the "Faith of Jesus" which are linked to God's Laws, righteousness, and "Christlikeness"; a Jewish Christ who said in the beginning of these articles that we are not to "think" that he has come to "destroy the Law" but to elevate it in its highest comprehension for humanity. The Laws of God bring Spiritual Truth to man's Soul and are the steps to its Spiritual evolution as taught by the Indwelling Christ in mankind. This "truth" regarding the importance of the Laws of God for the Spiritual growth and Spiritual progression and perfection of the Soul of man is tied to the awaking of "the Krst/Christ" and Divinity within man. This is the true "Second Birth" that eclipses Christianity's reinterpretation of being "Born Again". True "Born Again" experience culminates in one receiving and interpreting correctly the various theological dogmas and truths as found in the ancient Spiritual Mystery Religions which are as old as ancient Egypt and even much older even as the stars above which taught it first to men and women who "have ears to hear" and "eyes to see". Lost in this "literal" and "historical" view of "the Christ" and its imposed limitation to but one supposed person by Rome is your True Being; as Plato said "man is god in an animal body". All of life is for the purpose of growing ourselves and our True Self into the "fullness and stature" of the "Krst/Christ" which makes us true Sons and Daughters of our Father in Heaven: "Be ye holy, for I am holy"! When John wrote that Jesus is the Logos, he did not mean that some supposed "literal" and "historical" person was this Logos had always been God the Logos nor did he mean this evolving Logos was to be limited but to one person; instead, the proper interpretation of this is that the Logos, personified as the continual Spiritual evolving Divine Mind of God incarnated into humanity "becomes" the Logos. The Logos, then, is the Spark of Divinity that is within the heart of every child of God awaiting "awakening from the deadness" of material incarnation. Again, lost in all of this Divine Truth is the "Faith of Jesus" which is centered upon the Laws and Commandments of God which are given mankind to mold and train his Soul into a heightened Spiritual perfection progressively through life. In the place of this Divine Spiritual Wisdom and the role of the Torah in making such a Spiritual metamorphosis happen in every child of God Rome "radically reinterpred" the whole of this "gnosis" and aplied to it a false "literalism" and "historicity" and "limitation" of the "indwelling Christ" that is mae to stand upon religious dogmas which are anti-Semitic and anti-Judaism to their very core and which have deceived billions yet to this day because of their ignorance of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and the true interpretation and meanings of the "Christ Stories" that preceded Rome's theological inventionism by thousands of years. Our "Jesus Story", like every "Christ Story" before,, is to teach that Jesus, our example as the the personified man for all mankind, is to become the Logos just as in our Divine Allegory in the New Testament that Jesus becomes "the Christ" at his immersion (second birth) in our "Jesus Story". The early conception in the Gnostic Chrestian tradition was that Jesus became the Logos just as he became "the Christ". But that did not mean that he was the only one who could ever do it! Jesus gives us a clue to this "mystery" when he broke the break at the Last Supper. He took a single loaf, symbolizing the one Logos, the one Christ, and broke it and said:

1 Cor 11:24 24 And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me. (KJV)

Here before our eyes and not recognizable to Christians devoid of the "keys" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom, is one of the 3 key dogmas of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom; namely, the "Dismemberment of God" and His "incarnation" into matter (the bread is internalized in mankind when eaten). The Gnostics Chrestians interpreted this teaching to mean that there is one absolute God and one Universal Christ, or Logos, but that the body of that Universal Christ can be broken and each piece will still retain all the qualities of the whole. Jesus was telling his disciples that the seed of Christ is not diminished qualitatively, no matter how many times his body is broken. The smallest fragment of God, Logos, or Christ contains the entire nature of Christ's Divinity. This is the meaning of the fragmentation of the host in the communion ritual, undoubtedly lost on Irenaeus and the later Church Fathers even as they participated in it.

Beginning with Justin Martyr in about 150 C.E., and then continuing through Irenaeus, Tertullian (of Carthage), and others, certain Church Fathers fought hard against Gnostic ideas. Rejected by them is the idea that if the "Christ," Christ-Spirit, or Holy Spirit were seen as separate from or greater than Jesus, then that same Christ-Spirit might also descend upon anyone who was worthy. Thus we would have the impossible situation of there being more than one Christ! This would never do, since the orthodox movement in Christianity had claimed Jesus and God were the same entity. If God was One and indivisible, it naturally followed that there could be only "one Lord Jesus Christ," as Church Creed affirmed, and that no one else could ever aspire to that title. Some Christian sects of a Gnostic persuasion affirmed that a believer in Christ could become Christ, that it was possible to attain a level of Christhood commensurate with that of Jesus, taking seriously his words: "Behold, greater things than I do, ye shall do." These sects and their teachings were branded heretical by the orthodox. But this makes us wonder today where such authority of one kind Christianity could come for censuring another.

Because few nowadays are familiar with even the basic tenets of Gnosticism, misunderstanding attaches freely to the faith. But in the earliest centuries of Christianity it was sectarian animosity rather than ignorance that drove popular misconception, as numerous propagandistic screeds written to discredit the Gnostics and other early Christian groups came to be regarded as truth. Penned by the early Church Fathers—the men who first codified orthodoxy—books like Irenaeus's five-volume Against Heresies characterized Gnosticism as the refuge of perverts; of insane, depraved, life-hating freaks who held orgies, practiced promiscuity and homosexuality, aborted and devoured fetuses, and refused to bear children. By discrediting the morals of Gnostics, early theologians convinced their followers that the Gnostics' teachings were absurd and misguided. The chief attacks on the Gnostics were authored by Church Fathers Irenaeus, Tertullian, and Epiphanius. But their work is seriously flawed and must be seen for what it is: religious polemic rather than history. Irenaeus, known as the First Church father, devoted five volumes to a work, Adversus Haereses, which purported to expose the Gnostics. Scholars have criticized it for its lack of objectivity and muddled thinking. Tertullian composed numerous works against the Gnostics which was renouned later in life by his rejction of "literalized" Christianity and his return to the ancient Spirtual Mysteries. The fourth century bishop Epiphanius of Slamis entitled his work Panarion, meaning "medicine chest," because it was intended to ward off influences from Gnostic groups. He portrayed all heretics, including Gnostics, as "vain-glorious," "worthless" and "evilminded" (See Epiphanius, quoted in Randolph's Gnosis: The Nature and History of Gnosticism, San Franscisco: Harper and Row, 1987, pp. 15, 19.)

The portrait of Gnostics as dangerous counter-Christians, a portrait painted by power and enshrined as truth, held for sixteen hundred years, until 1945, when an archaeological find known as the Nag Hammadi Library was discovered inside a cave in a mountain in upper Egypt. This remarkable collection of fourth-century Coptic texts, thought to have been copied from material that may date back to as early as the second half of the first century, cast new light upon long-obscured Christian history: a history that revealed no suggestion that Gnostics hated life or favored any of the repulsive behaviors falsely attributed to them by Irenaeus and other Church Fathers later, but rather that they advocated individualism in pursuit of their primary goal, the search for Spiritual enlightenment for man's Soul. What the Nag Hammadi texts also disclosed of dynamic importance is that from the very beginning of Christianity, there existed an alternative theology, a competing and compelling alternate and much earlier interpretation of Sacred Scripture which, had it not been actively suppressed by Rome during the 2nd through the 5th century, might have continued as it had in the ancinet Spiritual Wisdom Religions going as far back as 13,000 years B.C.E. This Nag Hammadi library discovery has undermined the entire fabric of Christianity as taught by Rome over the last 1,800 years. Before our eyes we see the need to repent of a "Faith in Jesus" and begin seriously to investigate the "Faith of Jesus" as it applies to non-Jewish believers in God and His "Krst/Christ" as we determine it properly understood by the earliest Chestians/Christians and not the later anthesis of it at the hands of Rome.

This "sacred wisdom" termed "Gnosticism" also shares characteristics with Mystical Judaism and even Buddhism. It is through Biblical Judaism, the "Faith of Jesus", not "Faith in Jesus" that the legacy of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of the ancients, as found in ancient Egypt and the other great Mystery Religions, is to be found veiled but yet undergirding the Christian Religion today. It is here in the ancient Spiritual Wisdom Religions that these higher Spiritual Truths, teachings, and messages that elevates the incarnated Soul of mankind are to be found; not in the later "Replacement Religion" of Rome and their "literalization" and "historicization" of these ancient Mysteries and their anti-Semitism which is expressed in their "Faith in Jesus". It is here in Rome's "Faith in Jesus" where we find that Rome did away with the Laws of God and replaced them with "faith only" as seen in their "Faith in Jesus" theology. Understand only when our "Jesus Story" is again "reinterpreted" correctly by applying these same "keys" of allegorical, mystical, and mythological interpretation can our "Christ Story" be restored to the highest Spiritual understanding that it always carried until the rise of Roman Orthodoxy in the 2nd century. As Elaine Pagels points out in The Gnostic Gospel, this personation of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and its interpretation, an interpretation that was 180 degrees different when contrasted between Biblical Judaism as well as Mystical Judaism and the later Roman Christian "literalized" interpretation of it, was no trivial matter. The decision on which interpretation was "correct" was central to the future of the emerging Gentile Roman Church.

But Rome had a plan to circumvent Judaism and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom Religions. Irenaeus, the bishop of Lyons in 180 AD, decided that the validity of any work had to be judged by whether it was "apostolic." In other words, Rome had to make their "reinterpretation" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom appear to carry the authority of the "Jewish Messiah-Christ". Thus, their "radical reinterpretation" of both the Spiritual Dogmas as found in Biblical Judaism as well as the ancient Spiritual Wisdom that preceded it, had to carry Jewish as well as Messianic "authority" and such authority was found in attaching to this Roman "radical reinterpretation" and "literalization" and "historicization" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom the supposed Jewish names of supposed followers and Apostles of a "historical Messiah". Thus names of supposed Jewish apostles were attached to the 4 Gospels in the presentation of Irenaeus' "Second" New Testament which was basically a re-working of and "literalization" and "historicization" of the prior Gnostic New Testament given the world by Marcion in 150 A.D. But, as Elaine Pagels goes on to say in the Gnostic Gospels that regardless of whether the names given to the Gospels are those of the actual authors or merely reflect a claim to apostolic authority, "we know virtually nothing about the persons who wrote the Gospels."

DO YOU HAVE "THE FAITH OF JESUS" OR "FAITH IN JESUS"? #5

We continue with the next article in this series.

We have been examining and contrasting the "Faith of Jesus" vs "Faith in Jesus" theologies as we find opposed in the New Testament. There can be no greater example of the alteration of the center message of the Hebrew Scriptures than the following example where we find the focus altered for the reader from "Faith of Jesus" into the "Faith in Jesus". Lost in this transformation is the necessity of the continued perfection of man's Soul by the indwelling "Christ Mind" of God. Judaism and Christianity are two closely related Abrahamic religions that in some ways parallel each other and in other ways fundamentally diverge in theology and practice. Christianity is based upon a belief that its purpose is to provide all human beings with what it holds to be the only valid path to salvation; that path being that one much have a "Faith in Jesus" and his saving acts on their behalf.

John 14:6 6 Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me. (KJV)

Christians believe people are, in their current state, sinful. Christians believe that Jesus was both the "literal" and "historical" Son of God and God the Son, God made incarnate; that Jesus' death by crucifixion on an old rugged cross was a sacrifice to atone for all humanity's sins, and that acceptance of Jesus and belief in Jesus as the promised "Christ-Messiah" saves one from sin (John 3:16).

Judaism, to whom the "anointed one", this "messiah" was promised, denies all of the above. Judaism is a religion based upon man carrying out the Covenant stipulations, requirements, Laws, and Commandments given God to both the Jewish as well as the "non-Jewish" peoples of the world. The Torah (lit. "teaching"), both written and oral, both tells the story of this Covenant, and provides Jews with the terms of the Covenant. The Torah thus guides mankind in walking in God's ways (Deut 30:16) and helps them learn how to live a holy life on earth, and to bring holiness into the world and into every part of life, so that life may be elevated to a high level of sanctity whereby they "imitate" God. This will allow the Jewish people as well as "non-Jews" who live by the Laws of God be a "light unto the nations" (Isa 42:6, 49:6, 60:3). In such a way they are a "role model" to their neighbors. Judaism likewise teaches that over the course of history such a life lived in obedience to the Laws of God molds mankind and society whereby it can raise itself to experience an age of peace and sanctity; literally "Heaven on Earth". Judaism does not see the afterlife as a core part of this, or a major factor needed to justify why it is necessary. Ideally a faithful life and good deeds should be ends in themselves, not means.

The differences between a "Faith in Jesus" vs "the Faith of Jesus" cannot be more dramatically contrasted than when examining the opposing concepts of the "messiah".

Judaism teaches that a descendant of King David will one day appear to restore the Kingdom of Israel. Jews refer to this person as "moshiach", translated as "messiah" in English and "Christos" in Greek. The Hebrew word "moshiach" (messiah) means "anointed one," and refers to a mortal human being. The moshiach is held to be a human being who will be a descendant of King David, and who will usher in an era of peace, prosperity, and spiritual understanding for Israel and all the nations of the world. The traditional Jewish understanding of the messiah is fully human, born of human parents, without any supernatural element.

The Christian view of Jesus goes beyond such claims. Jesus is the culmination and union of the three anointed offices. In Him, we have the Prophet, the Priest (according to the order of Melchizedek), and the King (as both son of David and God Himself). Although Jews and Christians both refer to biblical prophecies concerning the coming of the messiah, they are completely different and that being so then the interpretations of the "messiah" are likewise completely different. Lost is all of this is the fraudulent mistranslations of the Hebrew Scriptures in our Christian Bibles that produce such divergent understandings of the "messiah". For Christians, the messiah, Jesus Christ, is fully human and fully Divine. In this view, Jesus offers salvation to all humans by his "literal" and "historical" self-sacrifice. He is the divine Word of God who clothes himself in our humanity, so that human beings can be participants in divine life. Jesus sits in heaven at the right hand of God and will judge humanity by his very presence in the End times. The liberation and peace brought by the messiah, in Christian terms, is primarily the result of his manifesting the truth of God in all spheres of life. Prophetic references to the future glory of Jerusalem are not interpreted in merely political or geographical terms, but as indications of the restoration of all creation that his unveiled presence will bring about. Christian readings of Christian Old Testament given the world by Rome finds hundreds of references to Jesus; Jews reading their Hebrew Scriptures find none. These supposed references to Jesus take the form in some cases of specific prophesy, but in most cases are but "types" and "shadows" or forerunners. Traditionally, most Christian readings of the Bible maintained that almost every prophecy was actually about the coming of Jesus, if read correctly as they have been taught to read their Old Testaments in the Christian Bible. In other words, Christianity traditionally has taught that the entire Old Testament of the Bible was a prophecy about the coming of Jesus. It is here, in these contrasting views, that we find opposing each other a "Faith in Jesus" and "the Faith of Jesus".

But among these two expressions of the Hebrew Scriptures and their fulfillment we find two opposing religions with opposite beliefs; rather hard to imagine if they were both built upon the same "Scriptures". The problem, as I have maintained is right here; Christianity is not built upon the same Scriptures but purposefully misinterpreted and mistranslated texts to lead the "hearer" and "believer" away from Judaism. Let us look at one example where a human messiah becomes a "godman" in the New Testament. We presently look at a quoted passage in the New Testament that reflects a forged Greek translation of a Hebrew Scriptures. Very well known is the distinction between the Masoretic text on Psalms 40:6 and the so-called LXX or Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures.

First the passage as it exists in the Hebrew Scriptures (note it is verse 7 in the Hebrew; verse 6, chapter 39, in the Christian translations):

6 ¶ (40:7) Sacrifice and meal-offering Thou hast no delight in;mine ears hast Thou opened; burnt-offering and sin-offering hast Thou not required.

The Soncino version says in Psalm 40:6-8 "Many things hast Thou done, O Lord my God, Even Thy wondrous works, and Thy thoughts toward us; There is none to be compared unto Thee! If I would declare and speak of them, They are more than can be told. Sacrifice and meal-offering Thou hast no delight in; Mine ears hast Thou opened; Burnt-offering and sin-offering hast Thou not required. Then said I: 'Lo, I am come With the roll of a book which is prescribed me". Here we see that God had opened David's ears and mind to His Torah and "teaching" and sacrifice and sin-offering was not required of God, but obedience to His Word. These verses have absolutely nothing to do with the Messiah. In fact, I fail to see how this has anything to do with Jesus. In the context of the entire psalm, it seems to me David is talking about himself here. I realize that "my ears have been opened" could also read "my ears have been pierced". Jesus never had his ears pierced. This simply means the person talking has had his ears opened so he is able to hear the declaration of God's will and thank Him in this Psalm. Obedience to God's law is superior to sacrifice, as is told time and again by the prophets. Not only that but this is the message reiterated by "the Christ" in later Judaism in Matthew 5:17 which we saw before:

Matt 5:17-18 17 Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. 18 For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. (KJV)

When this same verse is translated into the Greek we find in the Septuagint, the LXX:

Psalm 39 (40):6 LXX: Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared for me....

Here is a terrible mistranslation tended to bolster the "literalized" concept of the "godman" by the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt. This will be picked up upon by Rome in their New Testament quote of this Greek passage; Rome did not use the earlier Hebrew text as the correct one! This gross error we find repeated in false Messianic prophecy as found in Hebrews 10:5 (KJV):

Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me:

Here very plainly is the forgery of the Hebrew Scriptures as first misquoted on purpose in the Greek and later English Bibles; one passage of many which will later find its way into the New Testament with Rome's "literalization" and creation of its "Faith in Jesus" theologies. Before our eyes the very foundations for the later creation of a "Faith in Jesus" are being built which Rome will take advantage of some 400 years later.

The true Jewish Scriptures, when interpreted conservatively, never taught the "literal" godman, but when they were altered in such ways by the Essenes in 200 B.C.E. then the Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures would carry theologies that now read differently than the prior Hebrew originals. Since the time for the translation of the Prophets from the Hebrew into the Greek then the Old Testament is made to be the carrier of this "literalized" godman idea and this Greek translation later becomes the foundation for every Christian Old Testament version which comes later Latin of the Catholic Church would be influenced by it). Carried over with the Greek are such ideas as this one revealed to the reader which, when taken together, lay the foundations for Rome to weave its "literalization" and "historicization" of its later "Faith in Jesus" religion. As if that is not bad enough every quote in the New Testament is taken from these corrupted Greek forged texts which are not true and accurate to the Hebrew. This means that many of the concepts espoused as "Messianic" are in reality the fruit of "literalized" Sun-worship and have been applied to Jesus and few know this has occurred. The great loss for us is that the "keys" to the true ancient Spiritual Wisdom are being lost before our every eyes and in their place we find the "literalization" of Spiritual concepts the further the minds of man fall away from Divine Spiritual Ideas and "gnosis" of the ancients.

Later, we see that the Jewish community would not accept the LXX nor the "divine" Jesus as its Messiah because such ideas were totally foreign to normative Biblical Judaism and their Sacred Scriptures when interpreted correctly. Not only that but the true Hebrew prophecies went without fulfillment and the Temple was destroyed and Israel scattered. The time-frame for the coming of the Hebrew Messiah was, according to the Hebrew of Daniel chapter 9 and the Seventy Weeks, had come and gone. Few Christians read Hebrew and it is there we find the "conditional" promise made by God through the Prophets that Israel's coming Messiah was conditional on them "meriting" their Messiah. If Israel did not "merit" their "Redeemer" then judgment was to follow; they were given 490 years to Spiritually prepare. Jewish history and their Rabbis tell us that Israel was weighed in the balance and found wanting. No Messiah ever appeared that accurately fulfilled the Hebrew Scriptures and has not yet to this very day. After the Jew's rejection of the "Christian Messiah" which never fulfilled the true Hebrew Scriptures and which was make to fulfill the "altered Hebrew Scriptures" as they exist in our Christian Bibles today, and after the Jew's rejection of this "literal Godman" instead of a human messiah anointed of God, then this "neo-pagan Christian message" was presented principally to the Gentiles, to whom the Jewish Bible, Jewish life, and traditions were alien, and in many ways too rigorous for their liking. To stress the Jewishness of Jesus to a Jewish audience was totally irrelevant and even counterproductive considering the difficulties listed above involving the recharacterization of the Jewish "messiah" as written in the Hebrew Scriptures. Here before our eyes once again we see in the later false translations that the emphasis is slowly fading from "the Faith of Jesus" to "a Faith in Jesus" as later theologies are created around the "person" and "identity" of Jesus by Rome (Christology). We fail to understand as Christians today that the Jewish people "knew" their Scripture and could quote them verbatim yet the New Testament often make is appear as if they were "slow" and "dumb" and as if they "knew not the Scriptures"; nothing could be further from the truth if one has ever studied Judaism. The Jewishness of Jesus as the "Jewish Christ" and the Jewish "Faith of Jesus" fared little better when presenting the message of the "Jewish Christ" to the Gentile pagans. Such Jewishness implied for them not only an ethical monotheism but ethical and ceremonial rituals containing Jewish religious teachings as given by God, which ironically, were given to not only the Jews but Gentiles as well as seen if one undertakes a serious study of the Torah and the Tanakh. Lost to these Gentiles is the fact that below the "Jewish cultural expressions" of the Sabbath and the Jewish Biblical Festivals, for example, lies the very hidden mysteries and secrets of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom regarding man's Soul and its intended Spiritual development and evolving perfection. These Spiritual ideas, given man in the beginning of time as related to the Spiritual growth and maturation of his Soul as connected to the "signs" and "seasons", or the Sun, Equinoxes, and Solstices, are completely lost in Rome's further "radical reinterpretation" and replacement of the Jewish Biblical Holy Days and Festivals with one's of their own creation and substitution.

Obedience and repentance to the Word of God has never been a popular message nor is it today! Easy believeism is what sells and is the fruit of the corruption of the Christian's Bible as we literally are presented with a "get out of hell free" gospel which is just "another Gospel" of which we are warned to avoid. So not only the message and teachings of Jesus, "the Faith of Jesus", was changed but the ideas concerning the Jewish "messiah" were altered in "keys" places in the selling of Rome's "Faith in Jesus" to the Gentile world; only this time the concept of the Jewish messiah was altered to make it appear has if he had come in order to lend Jewish authority for Rome's remanufactured messiah. But at the same time this "literalized" and "historicized" and "limited" version of "the Christ" or "messiah" at the same time robbed from humanity the Divine Truths of the "indwelling Christ" and the Spiritual evolution of man's Soul for the whole of humanity.

So upon examination of the evidence we find that the non-Jewish New Testament authors subordinated the "religion of Jesus" (Sinai religion-Torah-Judaism) to their new religion-in-the-making; the "religion about the identity of Jesus" (Faith in Jesus), which was centered not so much on the message of the "Jewish Christ" and his teachings (which it should have been) as upon the "literalization" and "historicization" of his mystical death and resurrection as emphasized by the "Romanized Paul". Upon close study we find that the "Gnostic Paul" never mentions a human Jesus or a human Jewish messiah. Rome takes the "resurrection from the dead", a Spiritual awakening to the indwelling Mystical Christ within every child of God which is supposed to occur during the life of every person, and "radically reinterprets" it and moves it beyond after the biological death of the body and in so doing mankind lost the very purpose of his incarnation in such an tragic misrepresentation of this most important Spiritual quickening of man's Soul. This mind you was a cardinal doctrine of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and was taught by the Gnostic Paul as seen in the passage:

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

Now, this "quickening" of man's Soul is lost to his Earthly life and falsely made to appear post-mortem. This "Christ" of the Gnostic Paul was the Mystical Christ of humanity; the original Krst/Christ taught as far back as ancient Egypt when it was personified as "Horus" as was the same Gnostic Christ of the first century when personified as well as our "Jesus". The indwelling and incarnating "Christ within" humanity has always been and will always be the only Savior of humanity and the Spiritual teacher of man's Soul. This Christ is the "mind of God" in mankind that opposed the animal nature of his body. The universe in which we live is a Spiritual System governed by the laws of God's Mind. There are not two minds; there is but One Mind of God, which is God. The influence of the Mind of God through the human mind is the self-realization of Spirit seeking a new outlet for its own expression. Ideas come from the Great Mind and operate through the human mind. The two are one. In this way the Infinite Mind is personal to every person. As the Divinity of God as His "indwelling Christ consciousness" and "Divine Mind" is awakened through the humanity of humankind, the Divine Spark within man is awakened to its self-realization that there is within him an indwelling Reality, an Infinite Person at the core of his very being; that at the very depth of his being that there exists a unity between God and himself. He comes to see "upon awakening" of the Christ Mind within himself that he is a "Potential Christ" in the making. From the least to the greatest the same life runs through all humanity, weaving itself into the patterns of our individuality. God is "over all, in all and through all". Humanity, due to the incarnated Christ in every person, is the voice of God in the world. Every person should aspire to Divinity; since we are incarnations of God. The indwelling Spirit in man is God and is expressed in man as "the Christ". It could be nothing less, since we have Spirit plus nothing as our very being. Behind each of us is the Infinite; within each of us is "the Christ" who is "growing in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and men." As Plato said; man is a god in human flesh. Humanity is not "half God and half man". Humanity is fully divine and fully man and all of life is a search for the manifestation of man's Divinity. That is, as man we have two distinct natures: divine and human. The "Christ Mind" is the Word who was God and was with God and was made flesh, (John 1:1,14). This means that a single person has both a human and Divine nature. The Divine nature was not changed. It was not altered. Man's two natures are not "mixed together," nor are they combined into a new God-man nature. They are separate yet act as a unit in every one of us. There is no boundary line that separates the human mind from the Christ Mind which is God. Behind each of us is the Infinite; within each of us is "The Christ". Human personality should be ,and may become, the highest manifestation of God. This is the "secret" that Rome held from the world in its "literalization", "historicization", and "limitation" of "the Christ" to but one person which so cleverly crafting a new religion and a "Faith in Jesus" that replaced "the Faith of Jesus" as expressed in Judaism which trains the Soul to become the earthly evolving manifestation of God on Earth. This is mankind's greatest loss imaginable!

This "replacement" of "the Faith of Jesus" into a "Faith in Jesus" was accomplished by Rome by the "radical reinterpretation" of prior "Spiritual allegories" whereby they were so mistranslated on purpose to be made to appear to the unknowing and unsuspecting as if "literal" and "historical" events limited to but one person. This "literalized Jesus" would later become crystallized as we have come see it and understand it today conveniently termed as "Pauline Christology", wherein all of life and creation are centered in the belief in the literally crucified and physically risen Christ. This ancient Spiritual Wisdom involving the "crucifixion of God in the Heavens" and "resurrection of God's Krst/Christ Mind" in the whole of humanity unfortunately became "literalized" and "limited to but one person" and in so doing over time it became the "official" salvation message of the post-Constantine church of 325 A.D. Pauline Christology, and those who preached or accepted it, transformed the "religion of Jesus" into the "religion about Jesus"; no longer do we find God's "anointed" messenger (anointed=messiah/Krst/Christ) which "allegorically dies" by emanating, incarnating, or "falling" into incarnation in "matter" and the flesh of humanity, but now becomes the "literal" and "historicized" Christ or Rome who is made to die by being crucified to a wooden cross to bring salvation to the whole world through his Roman church.

We can now understand what has happened to Judaism and "the Faith of Jesus" which always taught an Ethical Monotheism as revealed through the Torah for both Jew and "non-Jew". Speaking of Asia, Minor, James give us an accurate historical verification of the Jewish faith in the mid-first century. Please pay attention:

Acts 15:21 21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day. (KJV)

Instead of "Moses being read in every city" we have the "Romanized Paul" and a "Faith in Jesus" being taught instead of teaching our flocks to follow "the Faith of Jesus". Instead of Jewish ethical and religious teachings, traditions, and ordinances, as contained in the Torah, along with its Laws and Commandments shared by both Jew and "non-Jew", instead of teaching the Hebrew prophets and the Wisdom literature in the Hebrew Scriptures, we have in Christianity today a religion based upon a "Faith in Jesus" which has transcended, replaced, outdated, and even overturned the "Faith of Jesus". Due to Rome's new "literalized" and "historicized" and "limitation" of "the Christ" to but one person the true "Religion and Faith of Jesus" lies untaught to the vast majority of Christians today. What a shame. The Mystical crucifixion and fall of the Divine Mind of God in its "fall into matter" and into the whole of humanity, into you and me, has tragically lost its true meaning and now is relegated and limited to but one person as the expense of the loss of Divine Truth to the whole of humanity for the last 1,800 years.

Answer for yourself: Once one come to understand how these New Testament documents were created as well as misquoted on purpose as well as coming to understand the origin for many of the religious concepts in our New Testaments which have fallen under the pen of a "radical reinterpretation" by Rome, then one has to ask if God, the God of the Jewish and Hebrew Scriptures, agrees with what is being said in certain "key" places in the New Testament concerning this Jesus. Would He?

Rome had a plan to circumvent Judaism and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom Religions as it rose to being a world power uncontestable by other nations. Irenaeus, the bishop of Lyons in 180 AD, was instrumental in replacing the "Faith of Jesus" by a "Faith in Jesus". Irenaeus decided that the validity of any work had to be judged by whether it was "apostolic." In other words, Rome had to make their "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom appear to carry the authority of the "Jewish Messiah-Christ". Thus, their "radical reinterpretation" of both the Spiritual Dogmas as found in Biblical Judaism as well as the ancient Spiritual Wisdom that preceded it had to carry Jewish as well as messianic "authority" and such authority was found in attaching to this Roman "radical reinterpretation" and "literalization" and "historicization" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom the Jewish names of "supposed" followers and Apostles of a "historical Messiah". Thus names of supposed Jewish apostles were attached to the 4 Gospels out of hundreds of other Gospels that circulated in that day and time. Now understand that in our 4 Gospels today we find they are "adaptations" of oral traditions circulating of the earlier Spiritual Wisdom and the "sayings" or "Logia" of "the Christ" which had been with man since the beginning of time; but unlike the earlier oral traditions from which they were drawn these 4 were not presented as "Divine Allegories" representing the evolving Divinity within mankind. Instead they were presented by Irenaeus as "literal" and "historical" accounts of "the historical Christ". These 4 Gospels were prepared and presented as the ultimate authority in Irenaeus' "Second" New Testament which was basically a re-working of and "literalization" and "historicization" of the prior Gnostic New Testament given the world by Marcion in 150 A.D. But, as Elaine Pagels goes on to say in theGnostic Gospels that regardless of whether the names given to the Gospels are those of the actual authors or merely reflect a claim to apostolic authority, "we know virtually nothing about the persons who wrote the Gospels." What proves the validity of the four Gospels, Irenaeus says, is that they actually were written by Jesus' own disciples and their followers, who personally witnessed the events they describe. Lacking is any proof of such a statement and much proof that says otherwise. Some contemporary Biblical scholars have challenged this view: few today believe that contemporaries of Jesus actually wrote the New Testament Gospels (Elaine Pagels, The Gnostic Gospels, p. 3-17).

The truth of the matter that flies in the face of our inherited Roman Church traditions is that the writers of these New Testament documents neither witnessed the events they described nor did they personally hear a historical Jesus say the words they quoted. The fact alone again tells us that they were basically written from circulating oral traditions and circulated teachings and sayings of "the Christs" of previous nations which had been handed down for thousands of years. These "sayings of the Krst/Christ", which are called the "Logia", were synthesized and harmonized for unity by "non-Jewish" hands in the making of our New Testament. Christians today are not aware that this "Logia" and "sayings of the Krst/Christ" can be traced almost verbatim as far back as Horus in ancient Egypt. Amazingly when these "sayings of the ancients Christ" are compared with the "sayings of Jesus" we find that our Jesus so often "said the same things" and "taught the same things" to the Souls of mankind. Not only that but the events shared in the lives of these so called "Pagan Christs" are "parallels" to those we find in our "Jesus Story". To a "thinking believer" and "truth-seeker" and idea that only our "Jesus Story" is the real truth as expressed as a "historical" or "literal" account is beyond belief and is absurd. That is why our "literal" and "historical" account of our "Jesus Story" can be found repeated verbatim in the nation's Mystery Religions since the beginning of recorded time in almost every nation under the Sun and in their various Sacred Books the world over. The various identities of these "Pagan Christ" are not important for us right now but what is of importance to us is the fact they every one of them are "personifications" of the same thin, the evolving Soul and "Christ Mind" in man when the "keys" to their correct interpretations are found. Unlike our "Jesus Story", our cloned story, all the earlier "Christ Stories" are "Spiritual Allegories" of the incarnated Divine Mind and its Spiritual evolution in humanity. Their message to the Souls of mankind is of utmost importance for the incarnated Souls like you and me passing through this present physical existence; a message that I found for myself that is yet preserved in Biblical Judaism but lacking in our contemporary "literalized Christianity of today. Gerald Massey, in Gerald Massey's Lectures, states on page 49: "It is the commonly accepted orthodox belief that Christianity originated with the life, miracles, sayings, and teachings; the birth, death, resurrection, and ascension of an historic Jesus the Christ at the commencement of our era, called Christian; whereas, the origins were manifold, but mostly concealed. It is impossible to determine anything fundamental by an appeal to the documents which, alone out of a hundred Gospels, were made Canonical. And when Eusebius recorded his memorable boast that he had virtually made "all square" for the Christians, it was an ominous announcement of what had been done to keep out of sight the mythical and mystical rootage of historic Christianity".

These two words, "mythical" and "mystical", are the "keys" that opens Truth for the Christian Church and their received tradition concerning our "Jesus Christ". In summary, we know from history that the story of "the Christ", which we find today under different names and in different nations down through recorded time, had been told as early as ancient Egypt and was repeated orally down through history from nation to nation. As your studies advance and many of our "recommended books" are read by the reader then you will see for yourself that Christian History was pre-extant as Egyptian Mythology. This fact has been buried out of sight for thousands of years in hieroglyphical language. The Egyptian hieroglyphs, being a dead language, it could not be read by Greek or Roman alike. It was not recovered until Champollion in 1824 B.C. It has been less than 200 years that the hieroglyphs could shout their message to the ears of Christians but we never hear about this in our Churches. Without the language of Egypt made alive again the original sources for our "Jesus Story", our Mytholatry and Christology remained hidden. It is this same mystical knowledge of man's True Being and Soul/Krst/Christ which has been faithful preserved in the Egyptian Book of the Dead which was placed reverently beneath the pillows of the Egyptian dead, or clapsed to their bosoms, in their coffins and their tombs (Gerald Massey, Gerald Massey Lectures, A & B Publishers, New York, 1900, p. 1). The ancient Egyptians know what Christians of today don't; namely, that they were "evolving Christs".

Gerald Massey goes on to say: "The mythos having been at last published as a human history, everything else was suppressed or forced to support the fraud. Christology is founded on the Christ, who is mythical in one phase and mystical in the other; Egyptian and Gnostic in both, but historical in neither" (Gerald Massey, Gerald Massey Lectures, A & B Publishers, New York, 1900, p. 50). But Egypt was not the only one who possessed this "Krst/Christ Story"; each nation had their "Christ Story". Each of these "Christ Stories" carried the same ideas of the "death", "burial" and "resurrection" of "the Krst/Christ"; all of which were "mystical", "symbolic", and "mythological" and personified the internal truisms that go on in the hearts and Souls of humanity; never were they "literal" or "historical" unless applied to the "knower" of this Divine Spiritual Mysteries of mankind's True Being.

Those who taught and preached these stories for thousands of years relied on their memories. Over time, these "mythical" and "mystical" understandings of "the Krst/Christ", cherished by the ancients, was debased in the days of Rome supremacy as seen in their anti-Judaic "reinterpretation" and "literalization" of the "indwelling Christ". This was the Rome's ultimate apostasy as seen in their "radical reinterpretation' of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and their accepted interpretation for thousands and thousands of years. Their eagerness to exalt "the literalized Krst/Christ", their strong convictions, and their reliance upon their fading memory of earlier Gnostic Spiritual traditions in light of this new and imposed "literal" interpretation, caused Rome to exaggerate and embellish the story down through time as a "literal history". They passed their exaggerations and embellishments on to others, who kept repeating them (Andrew D. Benson,The True Origins of Christianity and the Bible, Prudential Publishing House, 1997, p. 253). Such an erroneous "literalized" and "historicized" approach to "the Krst/Christ", imposed at the point of a sword by Rome over time, became in the wake of Rome's further burning of the world's libraries to destroy all Gnostic teachings to the contrary, an unmovable "literal" and "historical" interpretation that became chiseled in the stones of time. No longer possessing the "keys" to the interpretation of this most ancient "Krst/Christ Story" Rome relegated the whole of them as if "heretical" and persecution and extermination of such "Gnostic believers" and their "knowledge" was the order of the day. This tragic event has cost mankind untold amounts of Spiritual Truth generation to generation going on now for 1,800 years. You and I have likewise been conditioned to approach this same "Christ Story" in our Bibles today with the same mistaken "literal" and "historical" hermeneutic. But that all changed in December 1945 when an Arab peasant made the world's most astounding archeological discovery in Upper Egypt. Out of the ground came a voice heard around the world that too few Christian ears have heard; that being the truth behind our "Jesus Story". Only study can liberate us from such mind-control imposed by a false hermeneutic when reading our New Testaments and the stories in them that were never meant to be interpreted as if "literal" and "historical" events let alone limited to but one person instead of the whole of the human race. Only through such study where we contrast the "Faith in Jesus" theology of Rome with the "Faith of Jesus" theology as found expressed yet today in Judaism can we see the "truth" as it existed before being adulterated by Rome almost beyond recognition.

These "Divine Spiritual allegories" of the "Krst/Christ/Messiah", the "Divine Mind" that descended into mankind can be found as far back as ancient Egypt. This is what lies at the very core of the nations' "Sun-worship" and "astral-worship". But not ever possessing the "keys" to properly interpret these stories we are conditioned by Christianity today to discount all of these ancient Religions; never giving them a fair hearing to learn the "hidden truths" within them. However unlike the ancient nations this Divine concept of the "Descent of the Soul and Krst/Christ/Messiah" which was always understood to be Spiritual allegory of mankind's true Nature was first "literalized" under the influences of the Essenes of Egypt during the inter-Testament period and later only further "literalized" and "historicized" under the later influence of Rome. In so doing mankind began loosing the "keys" to interpret the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and the nations "Christ Stories" correctly; that is until the Egyptian religion was restored through the correct interpretation of their hieroglyphs along with such momentous archeological finds as the Nag Hammadi Library in Egypt some 60 years ago. It is important to note that the Gospel of John is Gnostic to its core and something else is totally meant in the Gospel of John than a "literal" and "historical" understanding of "the Christ" that is not portrayed in the other Synoptic Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke. Lost in all of this "literalization" and "historicization" of the Jewish Christ expressed through Judaism is the teachings of the ancient Wisdom Religions and ancient Divine Spiritual Wisdom that comes from the mind of the "Jewish Christ" that teaches and prepares the Souls of mankind to reach for the high mark of the calling of God in "Christ". The discovery of the Mystic Christ in you is truly being "Born from Above" and there is no substitute for this enlightened truth to mankind. This knowledge is of the utmost importance to human victory over the lower self. It was said: "Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born, If He be not born in thee thy Soul is still forlorn" (William Kingsland, Anthology of Mystical And Mystical Philosophy, Kessenger Publications, p. 45).

This again is why the study and correct understanding of Judaism is so important for the "Law" of God as seen in the Jewish Torah. Judaism teaches us that although "study is the highest worship of God" study is not the primary thing but action is" (Pirkei Avos 1:17). God did not give mankind the Torah just so that we'd have good hearts or live with some basic tenets of belief; rather, God realized that humankind has an enormous potential for good -- for being giving, spiritual, Godlike individuals. But it is only potential. Realizing that potential takes work: if we want to make anything our of ourselves our deeds must far outweigh our intention. Being good is hard work. It is natural to be like God, but it does not "come" naturally. And this is the mission God presented us with when He created us: developing our latent abilities for good and bringing them to actuality. Towards this end God gave us the Torah and the mitzvos -- the tools for our training. Knowledge and understanding alone are not sufficient. The Jewish mishna tells us that we must practice if we want our wisdom to endure and truly become a part of us. By studying and practicing, we both develop good traits and sublimate "bad" ones in positive directions. But it does not happen automatically; it takes heroic efforts. As above, being good is hard work. Being great takes a lifetime. The Torah teaches us how we must act and what is God's will, but words alone will never change us. For one's wisdom to endure, he must apply it and practice it. The purpose of the Torah is not to impart knowledge. It is to fashion individuals -- into human beings in the image of God through internal direction; this is the work of the "indwelling Christ". Our "thought" is an instrument of Divine Mind. Christ is the reality of every man. God is in mankind as "the Christ Mind", the "Divine Mind", leading man to self-perfection whereby he may become the living example of the "Image of God" and Judaism gives the pathway and the examples of the "Christ-Messiah Mind" being created in mankind as revealed through Moses and the Prophets. By accepting and living by the Torah a person enables God's presence to permeate every aspect of his life; whether public or private. By keeping the Torah, we demonstrate to the world that not only individuals can aspire to holiness; but a whole nation. Not only hermits or monks, divorced from society, can be spiritual; but a whole society and even the political state with all its organs.

The purpose of the Torah is to bring one to the love of God or fear of God in such a way that he could show his love by becoming "holy" like God is holy through proper righteous conduct and behavior. This was set out in patterning his life through certain deeds and the refraining from others that did not serve that purpose. Even the prophets faithfully declared plainly that sacrifices were not of God and that they did not make a man right before God. They were but civil laws to control sin in the nation. They had a purpose in fining violators and keeping sin at bay (I'm sure some of the cattle cost quite a lot). Public humiliation also kept violators at bay. This was all right. Ancient man comprehended this, and God understood. It was when man began to think that these practices and rituals purged the soul before God that the purpose of the Torah was lost.

DO YOU HAVE "THE FAITH OF JESUS" OR "FAITH IN JESUS"? #6

We continue examining the replacement of "the Faith of Jesus" by a "Faith in Jesus" given us by Rome.

Moving on, the distinguished scholar E. P. Sanders says it's fairly clear the true Paul, the Gnostic Paul as we find him, was unaware of the four Gospels, and the authors of the Gospels didn't know of Paul's letters. Thus this late writing of and selection of 4 Gospels by Irenaeus, the first quote from any of them found no earlier from a Gospel which is called by "name" than around 200 A.D. in any of the Church Father's writings, is very telling and problematic for an early date for the supposed writing of these Gospels by supposed apostles of a "historical Jesus". Even more, it attests to their very late writing no matter what accepted "Church tradition" maintains and would have you believe. This late date removes any possibility of eyewitness testimony of a historical "Jesus Christ" let alone apostolic authorship. Besides the delay in writing the story down, the autographs are missing. There are no autographs of any New Testament book.

This late dating for these writings not only betrays the identity of the authors of the New Testament as "non-Apostolic" and exposes such writers as not "eyewitnesses" but also explains why so much anti-Jewish propaganda is put into the mouth of both the "Romanized Paul" as well as even Jesus at "key" places in the New Testament. Any Jew knows that Judaism never taught nor believed many things which are often made to come from the mouths of the New Testament Jesus let alone the "Romanized Paul". The Four Gospels which have traditionally been regarded as the very oldest of the writings, are now almost universally understood by scholars to have actually been written long after the time of Paul, or several generations after the time given for Jesus's death and by "non-Jews" no less! In fact no quote for a "gospel" can be found in any Christian writers' legacy until 200 A.D.! This is food for great concern! Had these Gospels existed earlier and not only just the oral traditions and the "Logia" and "Sayings" of "the Christ" from antiquity then we surely should have expected to find Gospel references in the writings of early Church Fathers before the 2nd century but we don't! Devoid from all these early prolific writings by Gentile Christians are any reference to the Gospels "by name" until after 180 C.E. This is a huge problem for the "thinking believer" for a religion that debated Judaism tirelessly for 200 years and never once restored to any Gospel reference to bolster their views. Such Gospel references are never to be found in these earliest debates and had they existed they would have surely been used to counter the charges made against this new emerging "literal" and "historical" Christianity by the Jews. We should surely have expected their reference by the early Apologist Justin Martyr in 150 A.D. and other earlier Christian writers like Ignatius even earlier but again we find none; such silence by these earliest Church Fathers testify that it is "oral traditions" that are being referenced by the earliest Christian writers in their writings and not written Gospels and it is these "oral traditions" that are later mistakenly believed to have come from Gospels that have no proof that they existed or were written early in these earlier times.

Although the Gospels sound as if they are contemporary eyewitness accounts, the 7 authentic Epistles of Paul were actually written closer to the time given for this Jesus than were the Gospels. First of all, let us never forget that none of the four canonical Gospels names its own author, none of them claim to be eyewitness accounts or even to have spoken to eyewitness of Jesus. All are written in the third person and none of the authors tell us anything about themselves. All of the traditional ascriptions of authorship come from basically 2nd century traditions. As stated, this explains partly why we find anti-Judaic and anti-Semitic characterizations of Biblical Judaism and other such treatments throughout the Gospels. It can be summed us thusly; the Gospels were written and selected for anti-Jewish and anti-Judaic persuasion when presented to the Gentile readers of Asia, Minor who knew no different the truths of Judaism so terribly mischaracterized by the New Testament Church and its later New Testament. Again, it was imperative from Rome's view that in order to stop the spread of Judaism as a world religion they had to change the view of mankind from Jerusalem to Rome and no better way could be found that producing a book of their own to combat the Torah of Judaism and out comes the Christian Bible by Irenaeus in its earliest form in 180 A.D. By now you should realize that such mischaracterizations of Judaism and the Hebrew Scriptures as found in our Christian Bible is due to the desire of its earliest fashioners to eradicate the "Faith of Jesus" which taught progressive Spiritual evolution and perfection of the Soul of mankind. In its place Rome created a "replacement religion", a faith built upon "easy believeism" which is built upon mental assent to various dogmas and doctrines built around the identity and life of Jesus which is at its core only basically a "Faith in Jesus". The Gospels were not written as biographies of Jesus and they tell us practically nothing about whom this Jesus was and what he did before being proclaimed as the Jewish Messiah by the Christian Church of the 2nd century. The aim of the Gospel writers was not an objective complete historical report of this Galilean but selective accounts whose purpose was to support and justify Rome's claims about their "re-interpretation" of the "Christ Story" both "literally" and "historically". They were written to motivate and persuade the readers: "But these things are written, that you might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God" (John 20:31 KJV). Here we see clearly that the writer of the Gospel of John writes propaganda, not history.

Even more problematic, as Oxford scholar Geza Vermes has clearly demonstrated, is the fact that in his lifetime, Jesus is depicted in the New Testament as being most vague and evasive whenever asked whether he was indeed the Jewish Messiah. It was only after Paul's death, in the post-Easter Gentile Church, that our first view our a "Romanized Paul" emerges. This is quickly followed later by the writers of the New Testament maintaining that the Gospels publicly proclaimed Jesus as the Jewish Messiah. It was then and no earlier that we find the development of this new emerging religion built upon the these writer's own perceptions of Jesus gathered from oral traditions which can easily be shown, when compared to the ancient Spiritual Wisdom Religions, had more in common with allegorized and personified "Christs" than any "literal" or "historical" Jewish "messiah" of Biblical Judaism. Again we see that "the Faith of Jesus" is being replaced by a " Faith in Jesus". Understand that we have in our "Jesus Story" the ancient Spiritual Wisdom found not only in the teachings of the Gnostic Paul but in the teachings and sayings of the "Jewish Christ" as well. Had our studies been more advanced at the time of reading this article and had they covered the great Egyptian Religion then we would all recognize that most of what is said coming from the mouth of the "Jewish Christ" is found originally in the mouth of Horus as we find in the Egyptian Bible, the Egyptian Book of the Dead. The Gnostic Paul only elaborated on the Mystical Christ in his authentic writings; we have to wait for the later "Romanized Paul" to find any support for a "literal" and "historical" Christ Messiah of Rome's making. Again, problematic for us at first is when we first see the parallels to the ancient's personified Sun-Gods and Goddesses when examining our "Jesus Story" but once we understand that these parallels and teachings were never viewed as "literal" or "historical" but only as "personifications" of Spiritual Concepts applying to the Spiritual evolution of the Soul and "Krst/Christ Mind" in mankind then our problems vanish into thin air. Both the "mythical" and "mystical" incarnating "Krst/Christ" was always imaged by the ancients as personifications of the Descent of the Universal and Divine Mind into humanity and the Soul's material incarnation. This was always the Divine Spiritual Truth behind the ancient Spiritual Myths and our "Jesus Story" and all other similar "Pagan Christs"; the "Jesus Story" when rightly restored with the "keys" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom is the story of man's Soul; its descent, its birth (allegorically a death from which it is to rise), Spiritual growth and progressive evolution and perfection, and release and ascension at the eventual death of the body where the Spiritualized Soul returns once again to its Father's House being "strengthened and matured" by victory over "matter" and the animal nature that forced its Spiritual growth. Along the way the entire purpose of the Soul's Spiritual evolution and progressive perfection transcends the intellect of man; only when the Divine Mind of the "Krst/Christ" raises the Soul from its darkness and "death" of its material incarnation in "matter" can the Soul "be resurrected from the death" and see and value the importance of God's Laws and the Torah in is own Self-perfection and Self-unfolding into the "fullness and stature" of "the Christ". Only then can we as indoctrinated Christians see the beauty and value of the Torah which is so denounced and made obsolete by Rome's New Testament and their creative "theologies" that oppose the ancient Spiritual Wisdom. Only then does mankind raise himself to experience the reality of "being" true Sons and Daughters of God. When finally understood and interpreted correctly, both "allegorically" and "Spiritually", we can redeem our "Jesus Story" from absurdity and see and appreciate the unbelievable parallels that exist with the ancient Spiritual Wisdom. Only then can we begin to fathom the real Spiritual truths that lie behind our so badly interpreted, misunderstood, "literalized", and "historicized Jesus Story" given us by Rome. Only then can man see the latent Divinity within ourselves awaiting "resurrection" from the dead; only then can the indwelling "Krst/Christ Mind" raise to life the "Father" in us as Horus raised his father Osiris from the dead. This is goal of all human incarnation and is supposed to happen to the whole of mankind; this is man's greatest story and not a story about another or limited to but one person. It is your story. It is my story. It is mankind's story and "pattern" for Spiritual evolution of the whole human race on our present plane of existence.

Once one's study comes to such a degree that you can spot true Biblical Judaism from the false presentation of it when reading your Bible, then you are coming very close to discerning as well the legacy of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom from Rome's later "radical reinterpretation" of it. Only then are you able to discern the truth between a "Faith in Jesus" vs "the Faith of Jesus" as the Divine Truth intended for mankind. Only then can you see the truth concerning the Jewish anointed "messiah" as contrasted with the falsified Roman Messiah. Only then are you able to see the truth behind "the Krst/Christ" in "you" from the supposed "literal" and "historical" one depicted in the forged texts of both the Greek Old Testament and later English misquotation in our Christian Bibles that Rome gave the world. These study skills, when mastered, and when applied to our Bibles bring findings and evidence to the "thinking believer" which are very problematic to the "literal" and "historical" understanding and interpretation of our "Jesus Story". When you possess enough knowledge of Comparative Religions, Gnosticism, and Hermeticism then you begin to see the repetition of our "Jesus Story" over and over again down through thousands of years of human history beginning as far back as from ancient Egypt. It won't be long in such studies that you begin to see it this ancient "Christ Story" and trace it down through history the "world-over"; no longer accepting it as "limited" to but one person in the first century as taught by Rome since such a view as being a "limited literal" and "historical" understanding is beyond believability to a "thinking-believer" and "truth-seeker". Never was this "same Christ Story" ever to be understood by either the "tellers" or "recipients" as a "historical" or "literal" reality; it was purely Metaphysical relating to the indwelling Nature, Soul and "Christ Mind" in man. Completely lost in this post-Easter understanding of the "Jewish Christ-Messiah" is not only the birth of the Soul in human incarnation but its likewise descent and crucifixion in "darkened matter" and "flesh" along with the co-crucifixion of "the Krst/Christ" when it likewise fell as the Christ Mind into "matter" to "seek and save the Soul". Such a "fall" was termed a "death" and a "crucifixion" by the ancients; this is the allegorical "co-crucifixion" expressed in the falling of Divine Intelligent Energy, or Divine Mind through the various planes of visible and invisible existences in the cosmos finally ultimately reaching a level of "matter" where it tabernacles in humanity. This was termed by the ancients for thousands of years the allegorical "death of the Krst/Christ" and the "crucifixion of the Krst/Christ" so often spoken of in the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and of which we see in mentioned in the Gnostic Paul's writings in Philippians chapter 2:

Phil 2:5-8 5 Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: 6 Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: 7 But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: 8 And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. (KJV)

This is the hidden truth that exposes the fallacy of a "literal" and "historical" limitation of any crucifixion and death of "the literal and historical Christ". "The Krst/Christ", in following the Soul into material manifestation to "seek save" the lost Souls which fell into the darkness of incarnation which was again termed a "death" by the ancients, is the true "incarnation" of "the Christ" into the whole of humanity which could never be limited to but one person. This is why the infant Christ was wrapped in swaddling clothes (burial, grave clothes) as were so many of the ancient Egyptian personified gods who were wrapped as mummies; all conveying the same image of the confinement of material and fleshy constraints to both Soul and Divine Mind/Christ within humanity and our fleshly bodies.

Understand that when properly interpreted these parallels in our "Jesus Story" with the ancient's personified Sun-worship, gods and goddesses as found in the ancient Mystery Religions, is not a bad thing at all; it fact when the Gospels are examined and interpreted using the "keys" of allegorical and mystical interpretation as were used in interpreting the ancient Divine Mysteries and Mystery Religions which all recount over and over the same "Jesus Story" from nation to nation for thousands and thousands of years, then we have no problem at all since both describe the Metaphysical Descent of the Soul and its Spiritual evolution by the Krst/Christ Mind culminating in the progressive perfection of the Spirit/Soul within an incarnated humanity that comes with the aid of the direction and teaching of the Divine Mind and indwelling "Krst/Christ". The "Christ story" has always been centered on the progressive Spiritual maturation of the Soul in Earthly experience. Key to this "understanding" is the "message of the indwelling Christ" fashioned in such a way to lead the evolving Soul of mankind to self-perfection by being trained to obey the Laws of God and His Cosmos. God's Torah is first written in the Heavens and Sky before it was written on papyrus in the ancient Egyptian Religion and later in Judaism. The "message" of God and His Laws are paramount to one's self-perfection and obtainment to the "fullness and stature" of "the Christ"; a Christ who is known "within" and not "without".

It is only when we rigidly hold to a dogmatic "literal" and "historical" interpretation whereby this "Christ" is "limited" to but one person do we run into trouble with our interpretative analysis of the Gospels and our "Jesus Story". Such an approach to Scripture absolutely robs us of our True Being and Nature and incarnational purpose. Again, when understood properly, the "literal" and "historical" understanding and approach to our New Testament might be severely problematic in many places but the "historical" understanding of many of the teachings of this New Testament Jesus reflect the path for the Soul's perfection which we find in the "Jewish Religion" verbatim; it is when we find put into the mouth of this Jewish Jesus and this "Romanized Paul" anti-Semitic and anti-Judaic teachings that we have irreconcilable historical problems since the whole of the New Testament reports itself as being the Divine Revelation of God through the Israel and the Jewish Religion. Anti-Judaic theology and anti-Semitism has no place in such a supposed "Divine Revelation" imparted to Israel for the Gentile world of its day. That being so then when we find "anti-Judaism" and "anti-Semitism" in the New Testament then the "thinking believer" and "truth-seeker" has found examples of Textual forgery bolstering Roman Orthodoxy at the expense of the Divine Truths contained within the Jewish Faith. This simply was not the historical case owning to the fact that the Divine "Jewish Christ" expressed the Mind of God through the Jewish Culture, Moses, and the Prophets and the entirety of the Jewish Religion; itself called a "light unto the Gentiles" by Isaiah the Prophet. Let us read it again:

Isa 42:6 6 I the LORD have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles; (KJV)

Judaism is called a "light to the Gentiles". Had we ever studies in the brilliance of the light within the Jewish Faith we would have seen that Judaism taught a hope in a human birth and the lineage of a human being tied to their ancient King David; only apocalyptic sects deviated in such an understanding in Judaism and taught a divergent coming "Superman" and "Super Messiah". These groups never survived the destruction of the Temple as did the Pharisees and Rabbis who taught a more conservative and Biblically sound dogma in Judaism. Their extinction betrays the fallacy of their aberrant theologies. Yet in place of saneness we find at Christian hands the emphasis being made not on self-perfection of the Soul being trained by the Torah and God's laws; in its place we find more absurdness.

Rom 4:5 5 But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness. (KJV)

But God has a different view of this Roman "easy believeism" as expressed in Rome's "Faith in Jesus". Let us examine the truth of the matter as we see God clearly states through Moses:

"I will not justify the wicked" (Exodus 23:7).

Implied here is the need for mankind to obey the commandments of God in order to be justified before God. Rome has a different take on the matter in its "Romanized Paul". I challenge anyone to find just one reference in the Hebrew Scriptures when God justified the "ungodly"! There are none! Self-perfection of the Soul was not to be the Roman agenda with an invincible legion whose only creed was "might makes right". Rome was brutal and responsible for the murder of over 18 million people during the Dark Ages; usually for non-religious conformity to their "saving dogmas". Today they are no less brutal where they kill the mind and Spirit of a person and not their body through their pernicious theologies in this black leather Bible which completely distorts the ancient Spiritual Wisdom intended for your Soul's Spiritual awakening and maturation. Again, the "Faith of Jesus" has taken a back seat to a "Faith in Jesus".

A careful search of the Four Gospels reveals how difficult it is to separate the human Jesus from the Divine Christ, even when studying these Christian sources which proclaim to be eye-witness accounts of his life, which they are not. If one reads only the Synoptic Gospels one comes away with a human "messiah" of Judaism and that is what Judaism has always taught. You need to take note of this very important statement. The true messiah of the Hebrew Scriptures was never to be a "Superman" as he has become with Church tradition and Rome's "radical reinterpretation" of the Jewish messiah. But if one reads the Gospel of John you see the legacy of the Essene's God-man concept that began as "human messiah" with the Prophets but under Essene influence was later changed into a "literal expectation of a coming super-Messiah" to counter the threat of Roman persecutions of the Jewish people; especially when with the awesome power of Rome's legions most believed that an supernatural intervention from God would be the only power that could defeat the mighty Roman Empire. The invincible power of Rome, greater than any nation before them, surely needed a Super-Savior to be adequate to vanquish them. Thus the need by the Essenes to build the hope of the people by "reinterpreting" Scriptures that originally applied to a "human deliverer" but under pressing needs created by an invincible Rome Empire led them to the "reinterpretation" of the Jewish messiah. What had began as a hoped for son of David from his loins now had become a "Super-Savior". Rome will follow this idea and when "literalized" and "historicized" the end result could be no more than the disappearance of the "Faith of Jesus" where "Faith in Jesus" becomes supreme.

Of course other Gentile nations will fall prey to these later "literalized" and "historicized" ideas Jewish messiah which will later be taught by Rome but understand that the New Testament presents two completely different views of this Jesus. Unless I knew better I would think that he had two personalities and needed psychotherapeutic evaluation. The same can be said for Paul; there are two different Pauls in the New Testament as well. One is Gnostic; the other Roman Catholic. Two of these Gospels, Mark and John, do not even discuss or describe Jesus' human birth or boyhood. Instead, they present us with a mature Jesus from the "get go". This, by the way, is the way that the Gnostic New Testament first described the "descending Christ" into "matter" and humanity as the Bishop of mankind's Soul which had previously descended "matter" and humanity. Despite many differences and contradictions among the Four Gospels concerning certain events in Jesus' life, all of them have one overriding interest in common: the events of his final week on Earth, which center on his impending death, yet these again are full of contradictions. This is problematic to the "thinking believer" that men, supposedly full of the Holy Spirit, cannot relate Divine Truth under the "anointing of God" and in such a way that it is not full of contradictions. Concerning these events, there is abundant confusion: the trial and crucifixion, in John, take place on the day prior to Passover; in the other three Gospels, these events occur on the first day of Passover. This makes it very hard to swallow that "Jesus fulfilled the Feasts" of Israel; again the "historicity" is problematic. The resurrected Jesus, in Matthew, appears in Galilee; Luke identifies the location somewhere else altogether in Emmaus, near Jerusalem. Mark does not contain an account of the reappearance of the resurrected Jesus at all. Such discrepancies are numerous in the New Testament and conflicts among the passages abound to the discriminating reader; we will look at individual examples when we get to the website dealing with the forged Scriptures and Prophecies that are intended to make it appear that this "historical" Jesus is the fulfillment of the Hebrew Scriptures relating to the Jewish messiah. These discrepancies and problems are so vast that no one article could begin to touch them but you need to be advised that they exist and do so abundantly. Again, in the light of such evidence one has more firm footing upon obtaining the truth about "the Christ" when considering the "Faith of Jesus" as compared to a "Faith in Jesus".

Answer for yourself: What do all of the New Testament contradictions as found in our New Testament texts, and we have only seen a few so far, say for our cherished doctrines of inerrancy and infallibility, let alone the reliability for accepting a "literal" and "historical" approach to interpreting our "Jesus Story"? What do all of these contradictions, and we have only touched on a selected few so far, say for the authority for such religious documents which we have been taught to interpret "literally" and "historically"? How confident can we be that a "literal" and "historical" interpretation of them should be the building blocks for one's life? Have we been led to accept a "Faith in Jesus" built upon contradictions of the Hebrew Bible and the Jewish concept of their own messiah? What does such discrepancies say for our understanding of our New Testament Jesus, his true identity and his true being? What do these host of irregularities say for a "literal" or "historical" approach to the "Jesus Story"? What is Rome hiding and what really lies behind our "Jesus Story"?

Answer for yourself: What again does all of these contradictions in the events recorded from the life of this "historical" Jesus say for its reliability as a "literal" and "true account" which can be trusted for one's Eternal Life? What about the "teachings" and "sayings" of the Jewish Christ"? Are they by any chance repeated in Biblical Judaism long before the time for this Jesus of Nazareth? Can they be found previously existing not only in ancient Judaism, in Moses, and the Prophets which long antedate the time for this supposed "historical Jesus" but more importantly can they be found existing singularly in the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of the nations as well as Gnostic Christianity that predates the rise of Roman anti-Judaism and anti-Gnosticism? Upon finding that these sayings of "the Jewish Christ" are extant in both the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of the nations, Judaism as well as the earliest expression of Christianity which was "Gnostic" then does it not seem to reason that one should focus more upon the "Faith of Jesus" and its "message" more than having a "Faith in Jesus" with all of these contradictions that abound in Gospel comparisions? How much more important are these teachings of the "Jewish Christ" as compared to the theologies surrounding the imposed Roman identity of this "Christ-messiah"? What are we to think and do when these earlier "teachings" and "sayings" of this Jewish Christ are corroborated by earlier teachings in Biblical Judaism and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom as the way for the Spiritual maturation of the Souls of mankind? Could it be that, especially in light that our "Jesus Story" can be found repeated verbatim over and over in the ancient Divine Spiritual Wisdom of the ancients, that another interpretation as to the "identity" and "nature of the Jewish Christ" is warranted and needed other than that imposed upon the same story as taught by the ancients by Rome? Are we desperately in need of a different approach to properly understand and interpret our "Jesus Story" other than the normal "literal" and "historical" approach which we have been given? What really lies behind our "Jesus Story" in the first place?

You will have to answer that for yourself but the good news is that you can as your studies advance. But without seeing the facts and the evidence from modern scholarship one remains unable to evaluate and answer such questions confidently.

We will continue in the last article in this series where we begin to lift the veil of Isis and peer into the ancient Spiritual Wisdom contained in our "Jesus Story".

DO YOU HAVE "THE FAITH OF JESUS" OR "FAITH IN JESUS"? #7

We continue our study in the last article in this series. We end this series with a little "insight" into what the ancient Divine Spiritual Wisdom always taught concerning the Metaphysical understanding of God, "Krst/Christ", mankind and his Soul. Man's Soul incarnated into an "animal body" was recognized by the ancients in need of Spiritual and ethical teaching and instruction for its necessary Spiritual and progressive evolution. In this noble cosmic endeavor by God the ancients saw two great needs for mankind:

- man's need for God's instructions to his Soul for its Spiritual unfoldment which is related to the training of man's Soul in Godliness which is to be accomplished by submitting to the Laws and Commands of God. We look no further than the Torah of Israel for such instruction for man's Spiritual evolution of his Soul.
- man's need for the overall picture of the Soul's Spiritual evolution in this Earthly plane of existence as seen in the "pattern" presented him in the many nation's "Christ Stories" including our "Jesus Story" which was filtered down through early Christianity but sadly ultimately "reinterpreted" after the 2nd century both "literally" and "historically" when limited to but one person.

Central to this ancient Spiritual Wisdom is the concept of the Divine Spark or seed buried within each person. It was the purpose of the ancient mysteries to bring to life this Divine Spark so that it would illuminate life on this Earth. This Divine Spark was symbolized and allegorized by various figures at different times and in different places. Their names were Horus, Orpheus, Dionysus, Mithra, Krishna, Adonis, Tammuz, Hercules and lastly Jesus. These were all "pagan" Christs. The philosophers of the ancient world knew that these figures were symbolic for mankind's Divine Nature which is to be "awakened" from a pure animal-like existence by the indwelling "Christ Mind" in mankind symbolized variously by Horus, Dionysus, Mithra, Krishna and Jesus; never was it intended to be limited to but one person as it has been when made falsely historical and literal when limited to but one person termed "Jesus". Over time the Gnostic Chrestians, both Jewish and Gentile, who possessed the "keys" to this Divine Spiritual Wisdom, fell into the minority with the rise of Roman Orthodoxy with its "literalism" and "historicization" of the ancient Spiritual Mysteries during the 2nd through the 5th century. At the same time the Gnostic understanding of the true "Born Again" resurrection of man while he yet lives, which was his "Second Birth" (birthed from being "Spiritually Dead while one yet lived"), was termed by Orthodox Catholic Christianity a "heresy" and Rome persecuted such beliefs and believers to the ends of the Earth. We must understand why this was done by Rome. Such a powerful Spiritual dogma of the Gnostics and Hermetics, which, if understood correctly as the ancient Spiritual Wisdom had always taught in its various "Krst/Christ Stories", would have led humanity away from the doors of the emerging Gentile Roman Church and Judaism and the "Faith of Jesus" would have been the legitimate choice of the Gentile for his Soul's Spiritual salvation. Rome was clever; it devised a false "literalism" and applied it to the Divine Spiritual Mysteries and their "Krsts/Christs" and few would know the truth after Rome burned to the ground the libraries of the known world containing this [preexisting "Spiritual" knowledge along with the "keys" for the proper interpretation of its Spiritual Myths and Spiritual Allegories of man's Soul. In our present day archeology has dug up so much of this "buried theological treasure" that the ancient Truths are crying out to the ends of the Earth today. The absurdity of limiting "the Krst/Christ" to but one person whose only access again was through the doors of the Roman Church and their Sacraments is being exposed for the lie it truly is and has been for the last 1,800 years. This means that a whole new "look" at Christianity as well as the Torah of Judaism for the path of mankind's Soul through this world is needed in light of these archeological treasures unearthed in our generations. With this "radically reinterpreted" ancient Spiritual Wisdom and with Rome's new "Faith in Jesus" as the road to Salvation no longer would Gentiles find their way into the Synagogues of Judaism found throughout the known world and Asia, Minor; no longer were they to be taught Mystical Judaism and the ancient Spiritual Mysteries in Judaism which could be likewise found in the ancient Mystery Religions like the ones in ancient Egypt, Babylon, Sumer, Persia, India, Mexico, and the world over. Replacement Religion was the order of the day which was implemented at the point of a Roman sword through its might legions. Let the reader understand then that it is in Biblical Judaism with God's Torah and "Instruction" that we find the path for self-perfection of the Soul of humanity through obedience and training in the God's Laws and Torah which "recreates" the Soul of mankind into the "fullness and stature" of "the Messiah-Christ"; this again is part of this Second Birth" modeled for the whole of humanity in the Constellation of Pisces which we saw earlier. The "Christ" has come to die "allegorically" in its incarnation into human flesh of mankind to awaken man to these Laws of God and in so doing teach these Laws of God to man's Soul; Laws and Commandments of God that sanctify and perfect the Soul of mankind. Truly the indwelling "Krst/Christ" is the Bishop of our Soul; this same Christ that previously taught through Judaism that man is "not to think" that he has come to destroy the Law of God but to fulfill them in man's life. We find this same thing reiterated in the ancient Egyptian Religion with their 42 Negative Confessions which the indwelling Horus likewise teaches the Souls of his time the importance of following and patterning one's life to the Laws of God. We saw this same parallel teaching as expressed in ancient Egypt "patterned" by the Jewish Christ Mind in Judaism in the first article when "the Christ" warns us to not "think" he has "come" to destroy the Laws of God; but rather "interpret them correctly". A new cosmic Age had just begun in 255 B.C.E.; it was the time for the new awakening of human consciousness to this higher message of the indwelling "Krst/Christ Mind" in mankind and we see this in the fulfillment of the Prophet Isaiah when he said of Israel in Isa. 42:6:

6 I the LORD have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles;

Infinitely more significant than these textual irregularities and inconsistencies is the fact that not only later generations of Christian theologians but the New Testament writers themselves seem much less interested in the Jewish Torah, its ordinances, traditions, message, teachings and sayings of a "Jewish Jesus" than they are in explaining why they regard him as their "literal" and "historical" supernatural Messiah. In so doing the emphasis is slowly beginning to fall away from the "Faith of Christ/Faith of Jesus" and is being repositioned upon the emerging theology of "Faith in Christ/Faith in Jesus". The writers of these later New Testament antisemitic religious documents lead the readers of them to seemingly forget that Israel and the Jews are the hope and light for the nations; even themselves. There is good historical reason for this. At first, these documents are made to look as if the writers, presumably Jewish, were addressing only their own fellow Jews, urging them to accept Jesus as the foretold Jewish messiah. In putting Jesus forth in this manner, it was of little importance to convince other Jews that he was actually one of them; that was taken for granted. What begins as a Jewish movement built upon the teachings of the "Jewish Christ" slowly evolved into a religion created by a "Romanized Paul" which brags of having "my own Gospel" which we will show the reader soon is a completely different message than the one previously taught by the ancient "Krst/Christs" let alone the "Jewish Christ".What begins as a "Judeo-Christian" expression of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom for man's Soul ends up as the "Roman Road to Salvation" which is completely devoid of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom intended for man's Soul. Now we have two theologically opposing messages of salvation in the New Testament" and few ever see it without help. When one get up from the "pew" and begins a critical study of these New Testament documents in order to test them for truth he quickly begins to find that the internal evidences alone in each of the 4 Gospels betrays non-Jewish authorship as we have mentioned because errors and mistakes are so common in them that he then understands when I say that it would be hard for a Jewish child to make such blunders regarding his religion let alone the geography of his own nation which we find expressed throughout them when examined closely. One can only wonder how the Holy Spirit could be behind or sanction such mistakes let alone "conflicting" religious dogmas. I used to wonder why God cannot say the same things correctly twice; now I have my answers but only after serious study. Again, this is something quite disturbing when you see these things and its surely should make you THINK!

The Jewish people were already aware that the message of the "Christs" has been passed down through oral traditions and was basically the same Spiritual message enumerated by the many prophets which had provoked Israel to Godliness: God, Torah, repentance, and Israel. The "Jewish Christ" was, in this new Age of Pisces, bringing the warning that the coming of the Kingdom of God was near along with judgment to those who will not repent and turn to the Laws of God in their lives. In fact the "dawning" of a New Age was upon not only them but the whole world. The Age of Aries was passing away; the Age of Pisces was dawning. It was time for the "new birth" of humanity, it is time for a "new birth" in the Spiritual consciousness of mankind and the realization of the "indwelling Christ Mind" in humanity; a Spiritual Goal that was tragically side-tracked by the efforts of the emerging Roman Church in "limiting" this evolving "Christ" to but one person of their mankind. The teachings of the Jewish Christ reveal that Israel knew what the Christian Church today does not; namely, the Kingdom of Heaven is "conditional"; that it would not come nor Israel's human messiah and human King be revealed unless Israel merited the Kingdom of God as God's Royal Priesthood for the world. The spiritual climate of Israel was such that they would miss their visitation and the long awaited and promised "anointed one" would not be revealed "literally" and "historically" and the true Hebrew Scriptures and prophecies would not be fulfilled which are found in the Jewish Tanakh. In the wake of such a loss for Israel and the world Rome take advantage of this "vacuum" in Judaism and creates a "Faith in Christ-Jesus" that replaces "the Faith of Christ-Jesus". In their place Rome provides for the non-Hebrew speaking world the later further-forged translations of the Hebrew Scriptures in their English translations of both the Old and New Testaments which we find in our Christian Bibles. The "Jewish Christ" taught nothing new to the Jewish people which cannot be found either in the Tanakh or Mystical Judaism. But when we pick up our New Testaments we find a "Jewish expression of the Divine Wisdom" in the "red" of our Bibles being altered into a world "Replacement Religion" in the "black" of our Bibles; we find "the Faith of Jesus" being monstrously altered into "a Faith in Jesus" for the Soul's Salvation. Over 13,000 years of continual Spiritual teachings regarding the Spiritual advancement of man's Soul has been destroyed almost beyond recognition by the "transformation" of "the Krst/Christ" by the pens of Rome. Roman Christology has replaced the indwelling "Christ Mind" as well as the indwelling "Bishop of our Soul" in every person and with it the demise of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom is guaranteed and slowly experienced during the 2nd through the 5th century.

Every Jew over the age of 5 years old knew fully well that the true Messianic Prophecies as found in the Hebrew Scriptures were not fulfilled before, during, or after the time for set for the life time of this New Testament Jesus. This made the selling of Jesus as Israel's "long awaited anointed one" hard if not impossible for the Jew and does so likewise today. This fact escapes the contemporary Christian because his "Christianized Bible" is full of false fulfillments and intentional misrepresentations of them that were created by purposeful mistranslation, purposeful misquotation, and lifting passages out of context, in order to present this Jesus of Rome's making in their New Testament as the Messiah to the Gentile world. This, I hope you know, is presented in such a way that any grace connected to "believing in Jesus" is obtained ONLY through the doors of the Roman Church and its Sacraments. No longer does Judaism exist as a viable option for man's Soul. Jerusalem has been replaced by Rome. Rome is the "new Israel" and asserts this theologically. Christianity calls out individuals from the mortal nations and offers them immortality in a new people. Rome devises a new strategy; to be Christian means to abandon "Judeo-Christianity" and have a new citizenship before God as a new member of another nation, a New Israel. We must remember that the Gentiles of the world never knew what the true Hebrew Scriptures really said since they could not read the Hebrew. That means they were totally ignorant concerning the Jewish messiah and what the Hebrew Scriptures said about him. They only got Rome's side of the story; unfortunately for billions of people they received the corrupted version of it which is the wrong story. These poor people knew no better and nether does 95 % of Christians today since they have never dreamed that their Bibles could be forged and are fraudulent in very important "key" theological places dealing with Jesus. Here before our eyes is the total "transformation" of the Jewish messiah from human to "Superman" and with it the total "radial reinterpretation" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom at the same time.

It was extremely vital to the writers of these New Testament documents to persuade others that this "Romanized" recharacterization of the Jewish messiah as Jesus was indeed a "supernatural Messiah" and "Godman" since they were already familiar with the "gnosis" of the ancient Spiritual Mysteries that man was a "evolving god in an animal body" and they he possessed the "mind of a god which had fallen into "matter". Truly man is the Temple of the Holy Spirit; a "Spiritual work in progress". This Spiritual concept of the indwelling Krst/Christ (the word "messiah" is Hebrew is the same term as "Christ") was applied to the whole of the human race but when "limited" to but one person by Rome when they "literalized" and "historicized" this "Godman" Metaphysical idea instead of allegorically applying this cosmic truth to the whole of humanity then mankind lost his "incarnational purpose". Lost in such Roman "reinterpretation" is the Spiritual concept that man is to evolve himself into the "fullness and stature of the Christ mind" in his incarnational experience. Mankind, aided by the Bishop of his Soul, the "indwelling Christ", was to be his own "savior". Let us not forget that conservative Biblical Judaism taught a human messiah and not a Superman; it will be as stated earlier that only the Essenes and later the Romans who will incorrectly change the Divine Spiritual allegories of man's True Being into "one literalized" person thereby robbing the whole of humanity of its True Being. As stated one must look to the Essenes for this aberrant belief; a form of Judaism that was extinguished and destroyed in the destruction of the Jewish Temple but which would live on in the apocalypticism of the newly emerging Gentile Christianity. This explains why it is that this aspect of Jesus' supposed Divinity, rather than the message of the "Jewish Christ", as expressed through Israel and Judaism for the whole of humanity, unfortunately became the central concern & message of the New Testament authors in their "Faith in Jesus" or at least those who re-edited the prior Gnostic New Testament documents at a later date and chose to "literalize" the ancient "Godman" theology which was always an allegory and was never meant to be interpreted "literally" and was not down through all recorded history until the 2nd century. This Essenic theology from these apostate Egyptian Hellenized Jews became the theology of the later Christocentric Gentile Churches of history. Again, this was very easy to accomplish for Rome for not only were the earliest Gentile Church Fathers taught by the Essenes in Alexandria, Egypt, but they, as basically Sun-worshipers themselves, already had their personified and allegorical dying godmen stories and the transformed the expected Jewish messiah into but "another" to fit the "pattern". The "only" difference is that instead of being a Divine Myth and Spiritual Allegory applying to the whole of humanity it was espoused by the Essenes first and later by Rome that the Sacred Scriptures were to be interpreted "literally" and "historically" and "limited" to but one person; this "Jesus" of the New Testament. This again was never to be understood "literally" or "historically" or "limited to but one person" by the ancients and never could be since there understanding of the Spirit and "matter" was purely Metaphysical to its very core. But when these Hebrew texts were were altered in such ways by the Essenes in 200 B.C.E. then the Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures would now read differently than the prior Hebrew originals and since then the Greek Old Testament is made to be the carrier of this "literalized" godman idea and importantly this Greek translation became the foundation for every Christian Old Testament that would come later (even the Latin of the Catholic Church would be influenced by it). As if that is not bad enough every quote in the New Testament is taken from these Greek forged texts. This means that many of the concepts espoused as "messianic" in our Bibles are in reality the fruit of "literalized" and "historicized" sunworship that has lost the "keys" for its allegorical and symbolic interpretation. These misinterpreted Metaphysical concepts have been applied to the New Testament Jesus which embodies within it the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of the Mysteries which is only hidden beneath the supposed "literal" and "historical" interpretation which we have received. This same "Jesus Story" was always understood under different names and identities in the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and was always approached "allegorically" and "mystically"; few know this has occurred in their Bible and with their "Jesus Story" without sufficient study and comparison of the Hebrew Scriptures with the later Greek Old Testament purposeful mistranslations and their later further adulteration of this ancient Spiritual Wisdom that remains in our New Testaments. If one doubts me then a great book to open your eyes is William Kingsland, The Gnosis or Ancient Wisdom in the Scriptures, Kessenger Publishing Co.

What this great book as well as the many others available that expound the ancient Spiritual Wisdom hidden behind our "Christ" and "Jesus Stories" is that it shows how the ancient Spiritual and Metaphysical Concepts which we find in our New Testament today like "virgin birth, immersion, Eucharist, crucifixion, resurrection, ascension, second coming, etc., are first taught by the ancients both cosmically and Metaphysically and only later mistakenly "literally" and "historically" interpreted, or even worse, "limited" to but one person instead of the whole of humanity. It may be a little premature but the "crucifixion" of "the Christ and Divine Mind" of the Creator had always been taught by the ancient Spiritual Mystery Religions as but a symbol for the "incarnation" of God as Divine Mind into "matter" and "material incarnation" as seen in humanity. This "incarnation" of the Divine into "matter" was termed a "death of God" allegorically by the ancient Spiritual Wisdom. This brings a whole new meaning to "crucifixion" as we saw likewise in the term "born again"; terms again which were later borrowed by emerging Gentile Christianity and "radically reinterpreted" for theological agendas that promoted the Roman Church. This "crucifixion" of Divine Mind as "the Christ" before the foundation of the world was taught in the ancient Wisdom as the passing of Divine Mind in its "fall into matter" as the passing through various planes of cosmic existences; all of which involved the "crossing" or "cross-ing" of planes of "Spiritual" and "material" existences. We must wait for Rome's "radical reinterpretation" of the true Gnostic Paul and his 7 authentic Epistles to find the "literal" and "historical" references to Jesus' human historical existence which is also expressed in the two conflicting genealogies which were later added to the Roman New Testament sometime around 180 A.D. As a basic architect of this new theology or as the later "Romanized Paul" became, this "Romanized Paul", not the Gnostic Paul, has become the real founder of a "literalized" and "historicized" Christianity which so opposes Judaism and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom contained in it yet even to this day!

At the very core of all of this is the decision that the "thinking-believer" and "truth-seeker" must make; choosing to follow and adopt "the Faith of Jesus" or having only "Faith in Jesus".

One must go the the Romanized Pauline literature to find where one is taught to have "Faith in Jesus" for salvation.

Notice we are to pattern our lives around Jesus, and how he lived and modeled the Divine life for mankind, not have a "mental religious belief system" in agreement with some established Romanized Pauline or Gentile Catholic theology concerning Jesus' identity as determined by Roman Orthodoxy during the 2nd through the 5th century which is founded upon anti-Semitism

Let us be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive" (Eph. 4:14). Dear ones, we have been deceived long enough.

Answer for yourself: The big question: "do you really want to be like Jesus", follow the "Faith of Jesus" instead of adopting and assenting to a "Faith in Jesus" created by Rome that refused the "Faith of Jesus" some 1,800 years ago?

WHO ARE YOU GOING TO BELIEVE FOR YOUR ETERNAL LIFE: JESUS OR PAUL? #1

EXAMINING JESUS AND HIS TEACHINGS CONCERNING ETERNAL LIFE

For many of our readers the information in this article will be startling. After reading this article you will see for yourself that if you follow contemporary Christianity and its teachings then you are following Paul, or should I say a later "Romanized Paul" and not the teachings of the Jewish Christ because Jesus' message of redemption is entirely opposite to what this Romanized Paul teaches. I can hear many of you say...."that's not so" or "he is wrong." Let me sincerely tell you that in the beginning, even after my seminary training I did not see it as clearly as I do today. But I beg of you to read this article and THINK...THINK....of what I will show you. For in the end, you are directly responsible before God, and HaShem is sending you and many of His children today appeals to repent and return to the true faith once given to the saints. Time is of the essence, and it will be horrible to die and find out that you followed the wrong faith; a faith that does not save.

One last thing; you might wonder what the end-result should be of such a series of studies. It is our hope at Bet Emet ministries that when you complete these articles the reader will be able to understand that Christianity is best understood and practiced from a Jewish viewpoint which restores the Sabbaths and the Seven Biblical Festivals as well as the teachings of the Torah as a practical road-map for life. Such emphasis is almost totally lacking in the Christian church today. Also, a renewed emphasis in proper tithing and righteous giving hopefully will replace the current perversion of giving as seen in most churches and on televisions today. What you will come to see is that all these above things, and more, embody the true salvation experience. Let us begin…shall we?

JESUS WAS A JEW...AND TAUGHT BIBLICAL JUDAISM

I think few will take issue with my statement that in the New Testament Jesus is pictured as a Jew who believed in Judaism and taught others to be faithful to his religion's precepts and laws forever!

In this article I will quote many verses from the New Testament, and it is important to understand from the outset that although much in the New Testament is unreliable, when we find places in it which agrees with Moses and the Prophets we have found a witness to the Word of God as recorded in the Tanakh (the Jewish Bible and the Hebrew Scriptures). Let us not stagger at the comment that "much in the New Testament is unreliable," because in this article I will show you that many of our New Testament verses oppose Moses and the Prophet, let alone Jesus' teachings, and are irreconcilably contradictory to the Gospel Jesus as the Jewish expression of the Mind of God preached which can be found standing along side of these "replacement religious" verses in the New Testament. These passages confirm that Jesus believed and taught Moses and the Prophets regarding salvation. These as well as verses contradicting what Jesus taught, have remained along side each other on the pages of our New Testaments down through the ages. These verses remain for a purpose today. They remain to show the careful reader and student the truth amidst fiction as written in the New Testament.

Likewise, the purpose could well be to reassure Jews who are in doubt about their Judaism, and are thinking of leaving Judaism for Christianity, that Judaism and Torah has always been and will always be the road to God for the people of God; both Jew and "non-Jew". Those unsure Jews and deceived Christians perhaps can have their belief in God, Torah, and Israel (Judaism) kindled and can be kept on God's pathway by the very same Christian Book through which they have unknowingly deserted their true people and God! Indeed, Jews who already have left their faith as well as Christians who are returning to the Jewish faith once given the saints are daily having their eyes opened to these truths, many of which I will reveal in this article. Prayerfully, many will return as baal teshuvah and through repentance turn to the God of Israel, who surely is waiting with fatherly understanding and forgiveness. Believe Jesus in this matter - Eternal life is obtained through Judaism. In the New Testament we find Paul who teaches otherwise and contradicts Jesus on this matter; little do we know without careful study that there are two different "Pauls" and two different conflicting messages from this one man. Only when ones becomes familiar with Mystical Judaism and the teachings of the Kabbalah do we find the true Gnostic Paul whose true message is buried in Rome's later forgery of not only his person but his message in their later New Testament theological additions to the New Testament texts.

For devout Jews who were once Christians and Christians who have studied to see the errors of their prior faith and have returned to a more correct and Biblical Sinai faith, the revelations in this article will be very comfortable corroboration of their firm faith in the holiness of the religion of Jesus; namely Biblical Judaism. Others who read these verses will bring to them their own heritage and will make of them what they will. In other words they will continue to selectively hear what they choose regardless of the facts presented here.

These pages of reverse proof-texts are intended to strengthen the course God set up for Jews as well as "non-Jews" and to fortify their faith and devotion to His plan of salvation for all of mankind. In effect, here you will discover confirmation of Biblical Judaism's everlasting truth and validity through the words of Jesus and others in the New Testament. Often this confirmation will conflict with what our "Romanized" Paul taught, but more on that later. Now, let's get into it.

WHO WILL YOU BELIEVE.....JESUS OR PAUL? LISTEN……JESUS SPEAKS!

Matthew 5:17-19, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one little shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven."

Try and read the above passage over three or four times. Get the intent of Jesus into your mind and Soul. You can read this over and over and never end your astonishment; especially in light of what you have heard preached in your churches. Remember, these are Jesus' words saying he is here to follow the law of Moses, not end the law. Until the world ends, God's Laws as written will be in effect. Jews and "non-Jews" who obey the law and teach it are greatly loved by God, while those who transgress the law and teach its transgression are not. Notice that although the word "fulfill" could mean "to complete or end," in this case and context it clearly means "to obey and do." We know this because the following sentence continues the idea that the law will not change until the world ends, which still has not occurred two thousand years later. Just look outside your window.

Luke 16:16-17, "The law and the prophets were until John (the Baptist): since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it. And it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one little of the law to fail."

Preaching the kingdom (God's rule and reign over mankind through submission to the King's decrees….laws and commandments) is emphasized since John the Baptist, Jesus said. But the laws of the Torah are still effective and good, to be fulfilled until the world ends. Notice for yourself that in no way does "until John" signify the end of the law, because the very next sentence substantiates the law's validity forever (easier for heaven and Earth to pass….notice again that this condition has not occurred yet).

Luke 16:19-20,22-24,27-31, "There was a certain rich man, . . . And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, . . . the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried; And in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, . . . And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, . . . I pray thee . . . send him (Lazarus) to my father's house: . . . that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment. Abraham saith unto him, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them. And he said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent (Jesus and not Paul). And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead."

Answer for yourself: Is this a New Testament teaching?

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that Jesus in the New Testament is teaching that making it to Abraham's bosom (Heaven) was connected to listening to Moses and the Prophets?

Answer for yourself: What is this parable from Luke really teaching?

Notice first that it is Jesus and not Paul who is doing the teaching in this story. Jesus clearly relates in this story that the laws of Moses and the words of the prophets which teach repentance lead the faithful to Abraham's bosom, instead of what we think would be a hell. Moses and the prophets are the pathway to eternal life in heaven according to Jesus. Jesus taught this and not Paul. If you will be honest with yourself most of you are typical Christians who read our articles, and the vast majority have been told by their Pastors and Churches that they are not under the Law (Moses and the Prophets), but rather, they are under grace (again the "Romanized" Paul). They have been told that the Law (Moses and the Prophets) has passed away for Christians and they are no longer under the Law but under grace (Paul's gospel). In other words you have listened to Paul more than you have to Jesus.

Answer for yourself: But how can the teaching of Paul in this regard be opposite to what Jesus said, and since opposite, who are you to trust for your eternal life?

Matthew 19:16-19 (Mark 10:17,19) (Luke 18:18,20), ". . . Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life? And he said unto him . . . if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments . . . Which? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Honor thy father and thy mother: and, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself "

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that "having eternal life" is connected by Jesus with "keeping the commandments" (all of these except one are categories of the law and commandments called The Ten Commandments and under each of these categories are grouped 613 other laws)? Did you notice that the whole of the laws referenced by Jesus refer to the Laws of the 2nd Tablet of the Law; commandments between man and man? More on this later.

Answer for yourself: Is Jesus just referring to the Ten Commandments or is there something we as Non-Jews unacquainted with Jesus' religion (Judaism) are missing in this teaching?

It may amaze you but upon my study of Biblical Judaism I have discovered that each Tablet of the Law was separated by commandments between man and God and between man and man. In other words, the First Tablet of the Law is dealing with how man relates to God according to God's commandments, and the Second Tablet of the Law is dealing with how man relates with mankind according to God's commandments. But more than that, each of the Ten Commandments is best understood as Ten Categories consisting of many commandments within the 613 Commandments grouped under each of these ten headings. So in effect, when Jesus tells this man "thou salt not steal" he is telling the man to obey all the different facets of the broad commandment, because under such a heading the Bible enumerates the various ways such a commandments can be kept and broken.

Answer for yourself: Is Jesus teaching that eternal life and salvation in Heaven is connected to keeping and observing the Laws of God? The answer to that question is, without a doubt, yes.

There you have it. The way to eternal life for both the Jew and the Non-Jew and salvation in heaven, according to Jesus, is living like a good Jew and submitting to the laws of the commandments of God. These detailed instructions by Jesus are plainly presented.

But there is a lot more. Notice that in the following verses the man goes on to ask what more he needed do. And Jesus replies, to be perfect he should "sell everything he owns and give it to the poor and receive treasure in heaven": "and come and follow me." The man, on hearing this, leaves disturbed because he has great wealth and doesn't want to lose it. There is no indication that the "follow me" means anything else but to accompany Jesus penniless. The message remains intact that observing Torah law gives eternal life. Perfection is another story.

Mark 12: 28-31 (Matthew 22:36-40), ". . . Which is the first (great commandment in the law) commandment of all? And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord: And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these. (On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets)."

So, Jesus selected Deuteronomy 6:4-5 and Leviticus 19:18 as the greatest two laws. This was very Jewish of him, as most rabbis would completely agree, especially Rabbi Hillel. He chose the Shema prayer, the Jew's affirmation of God's oneness and dedication to love of Him together with Judaism's great moral teaching of loving people with the love you have for yourself. What could be more indicative of the essence of Judaism?

Luke 10:25-28, ". . . Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou? And he answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind: and thy neighbor as thyself. And he said unto him. Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live."

Answer for yourself: Did you make the connection between "inherit eternal life" and "thou shalt live" as also referring to eternal life? I hope you did because this is typical of Hebrew parallelism.

Answer for yourself: Have you noticed that in Luke 10:25-28, Matthew 19:16-19, Mark 10:17-19, and Luke 18:18-20 something very important is repeated?

Answer for yourself: What is it?

Namely, that possessing and inheriting eternal life is always connected with doing something……not with believing something! At the very heart of this statement we find "the Faith of Jesus"; not a "Faith in Jesus".

Answer for yourself: Why is this so important? It goes to the very heart of what we have shown our readers in earlier articles; namely, how "the Faith of Jesus" (Judaism , a religion of deeds expressing one's faith) has been changed into a "Faith in Jesus" (a religion based upon right standing with God obtained in belief and adherence to certain theological dogmas surrounding the supposed life and ministry of Jesus).

Answer for yourself: How does Luke 10:25-28 teach us more than we learn from Mark 12:28-31?

The writer of the Gospel of Luke goes one step further than we saw with Mark 12:28-31. Here we have the New Testament teaching us of the indisputable link between the "doing" of the commandments of God and eternal life, which is the reward for obeying them.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Jesus is teaching in the New Testament that eternal life is to be taught from the Law…the same Law that tells us "what to do" and what you most likely have been told has passed away or which you are no longer under?

It is evident that Jesus said, in the New Testament no less, that the law of Moses, as epitomized in Deuteronomy 6:5 and Leviticus 19:18, is the pathway to personal salvation and eternal life. Yes, Jesus said this as found in the New Testament. Let us continue.

Mark 12:32-34, "And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: for there is one God; and there is none other but he: And to love him with all the heart (alone as the one God), and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all burnt offerings and sacrifices. ... Jesus . . . said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God . . ."

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that acknowledging the oneness of God, and not the Trinity or triuneness of God, is connected with the reward of God's kingdom and eternal life?

Answer for yourself: Did you likewise notice that loving God and one's neighbor who is created in the likeness of God is connected with inheriting God's eternal life?

I John 5:3, "For this is the love of [for] God,that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous

Answer for yourself: Since we are told that loving God is connected to eternal life, did you notice the New Testament teaches "how" the love for God is to be manifested?

Answer for yourself: Does the New Testament teach us that loving God is manifested through the keeping of the 613 commandments? It sure does!

This is a straight follow-through of Mark 12:28-31, which connects the acknowledgment of the oneness of God, loving Him, and loving ones neighbor as written in the law, with the reward of God's kingdom. Burnt offerings and sacrifices are secondary to the commandments in Judaism and always have been. With no Temple, there is no doubt about this low degree of importance. This passage demonstrates Jesus' Judaism through and through. Notice likewise that the term "Master" means good teacher, not anything more.

Matthew 7:12 (Luke 6:31), "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets."

If you thought that "do unto others" is not Judaic or that it is different from "love your neighbor as yourself" you see here that it is totally of Jewish origin. Jesus declared that it is the law and the prophets. It is Judaic.

Luke 11:28, ". . . blessed are they that hear the word of God and keep it."

Notice also with me that when the writer of Luke penned this verse, that there was not a New Testament in existence and that the only possible identity we can give to "the word of God" is the Law, the Prophets, and the Writings….the Jewish Bible and the Hebrew Scriptures.

Matthew 7:21, "Not every one . . . shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

Again we find the expressed will of the Father in the Law, Prophets, and Writings…the Jewish Bible.

Matthew 3:15, ". . . it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness . . ."

These powerful statements are tucked in between verses which emphasize other ideas. But they can stand alone. And, standing alone they are Judaism's own. Jesus believed that the will of God is revealed in the word of God, the Hebrew Bible. In the Hebrew Scriptures we learn the law of Moses (Torah) and the teachings of the Prophets. Thereby, we can perform righteousness as God desires by adhering to what they teach. This Jesus believed.

Luke 19:8-9, ". . . half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold. And Jesus said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house forsomuch as he also is a son of Abraham."

What comes next is very important. It appears that Jesus believed that even a partial fulfillment of the commandments of the Torah is sufficient to be accepted by God. In the above verse it is recorded for us that Zaccheus repented by observing 2 commandments. In fact, as taught by Jesus, even by rectifying transgression of the Torah's laws and doing good deeds a person is deserving of salvation. As Jews trust, it is the trying to please God, it is the effort, not the success in total compliance with God's ordinances which is required of us to be righteous and gains us salvation.

Answer for yourself: How confident should we feel about our salvation if we have followed teachings that state that obedience of the law or the striving to observe the laws and commandments of God don't matter any longer because we are saved by "grace" or that this same law that Jesus connects with eternal life has been taught to us as if it has passed away and of little importance in our lives any longer? Could these anti-Law theologies be the product of Rome's alteration of the Gnostic Paul's true message?

Answer for yourself: Are we absolved by God to not try to choose those things to please Him by keeping His commandments? Is this conduct really connected to eternal life as Jesus taught, or is he wrong and our "Romanized" Paul right?

All the more reason to study to learn how to acquire mitzvoth and commandments, thereby taking upon yourself the yoke of the Kingdom of God. Such obedience to commandments is both pleasing to God as well as our demonstration of our love for Him and our fellow man. To do otherwise is not to love God, but rather, show our ambivalence toward Him and our neighbor.

Luke 13:28, "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when "ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out."

Keep your ears open for this as well. Here Jesus said that the fathers of Judaism and the goodly Hebrew prophets are all accepted into the kingdom of God. Evidently, good Jews need nothing more than the Hebrew religion for life eternal in Jesus' own belief.

Now for the hard part.

Notice that Jesus also said that many of his followers (the "ye" in the above verse) will not get into God's kingdom and inherit eternal life and salvation because of their sinfulness.

Answer for yourself: Does this same New Testament teach that "transgression of the law is sin"? Yes.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice what is missing from the above words of Jesus?

- There is no Pauline religious belief system mentioned as a means of salvation for the followers of Jesus!
- There is no Christological "belief" presented here as an antidote for spiritual wickedness for mankind.
- There is no "easy believeism" taught by Jesus or his Apostles as a way to eternal life; on the contrary, every time he and the other Apostles emphasize the same thing; namely, an earnest attempt to live by the commandments and laws of God for eternal life!

If you have paid attention so far in this article I have shown you repeatedly that Jesus repeatedly connects eternal life with keeping and observing the Law and Commandments of God.

Nowhere does Jesus teach that a belief "in him" or a "theology" about "him" brings for its adherents eternal life! In fact he teaches just the opposite!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

John 4:22, "(to Samaritan) Ye worship ye know not what: we (the Jewish people) know what we worship: for salvation is of the Jews."

Jesus "worships" what Jews worship, namely God.

Answer for yourself: Salvation is of whom…the Jews (Jewish theology) or the Christians (Christian theology)?

This passage from John 4:22 is even more startling when one realizes that the Samaritan woman who is partly a "non-Jew" mixed along with also some Jewish heritage and ancestry. In other words, she is a mixture; not only of a blood line but religious teaching as well. She is a perfect example of the Christian today who follows this "Romanized" Paul instead of Jesus. He has part right and part wrong.

Lets look at Paul where he get some things correct.

I Corinthians 6:9-10, (Paul) "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God."

Answer for yourself: In this passage are you aware that Paul is in full agreement with Jesus and his teachings on eternal life?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that there are commandments in the Torah forbidding each of the above conducts?

Answer for yourself: Then how is this possible from the lips of the same man?

Rom 4:5 5 But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness. (KJV)

Both verses cannot be true. God never justifies the "ungodly". The "true" Paul tells us that the "unrighteous" will never inherit the Kingdom of God. But this verse from Romans 4:5 totally misrepresents God, His Torah, and the teaching of not only the Prophets but Jesus as well. Here again for us to clearly see it the creation of a later "Romanized" Paul with a religious ethic that finds no place for God's Torah or His laws.

Although Paul adds some of his own ideas, the listing of "thou shalt nots" is derived from the commandments. He stresses what he considers unrighteousness and Paul says that transgression of the Law prevents people from earning reward of heaven. This is the "true" Paul; not the later "Romanized Paul" of Rome's creation. Paul, here, reveals his faith in the teachings of the Torah and its stance on eternal life. Paul is in agreement with Jesus and the other Apostles and their teachings on inheriting eternal life. So far so good.

But I wish I could end here but I cannot. In the next article we will look intently to where Paul deviates from and teaches against Jesus' teachings concerning eternal life. This exercise will be difficult for many, but as I have tried to show you, such an exercise to recover truth is very necessary because your eternal life is dependent upon whom you believe and follow….Jesus or the "Romanized" Paul. More to follow in the conclusion to this article. Let us now look at Paul's Salvation Message and see if it agrees with what you just read. Then we should ask ourselves if this is the real Paul or a later Roman misrepresenation of the authentic Gnostic Paul since it was he who went to the Gentile world and not the Jews. It was important for Rome to undergird their later reinterpretation of the religion of Jesus let alone the Divine Mysteries with apostolic authority and created a Paul to do it for them. Opps, I just gave away the real truth behind the forgeries in the New Testament. There are two Pauls in the New Tesament, the real one in 7 authentic Epistles and a false one in all the rest. It is up to you to find this out as you learn more.

WHO ARE YOU GOING TO BELIEVE FOR YOUR ETERNAL LIFE: JESUS OR PAUL? #2

EXAMINING WHERE THE "ROMANIZED" PAUL DEPARTS FROM JESUS' TEACHINGS CONCERNING ETERNAL LIFE

Paul, or should I say the later "Romanized Paul" shaped the Gentile Church after 70 C.E. in a manner which stripped away all links to Judaism and cursed it at the same time. The New Testament in places says Judaism is bad and abandoned by God, while Christianity is good and beloved. In other places the New Testament teaches just the opposite as you were shown in the first article in this series. In places the New Testament says the law of Moses is not valid and the Mosaic Covenant is dead for the Jews. Instead of Moses being taught to all mankind, our "Romanized" Paul teaches that the Church's laws and the existing Covenant is dead for the Jews as well as "non-Jews". Instead, the Church's laws and the New Covenant take their place. While Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" advanced separation from Judaism, Jesus announced Judaism's greatness. The same New Testament in which you just saw Jesus promote Judaism, in other places debases Judaism through the "Romanized" Pauline theology. I just showed you that Jesus was a practicing, believing Jew who taught faithfulness to his religion's Torah and the Jewish way of salvation. Jesus affirmed Torah, Moses, and the Prophets as the way to God and eternal life. He and his family all observed the Jewish customs, holidays, and Saturday Sabbath in the synagogue. Jesus said personal salvation is obtained through Judaism and not another way. In fact Jesus would command that such teachings be taken into all the world whereby all "non-Jews" be taught to "observe those things" Jesus had commanded of his followers. Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" and his brand of Christianity, in contradiction to all that had been both believed and taught before by Moses, the Prophets, as well as Jesus, has announced a new way to salvation, through belief in Jesus' vicarious atonement for sins and resurrection, not through faith in God and obedience to Him through His commandments, but through belief in Jesus's death for sins and resurrection from death.

Answer for yourself: Can you find just one time where Jesus teaches the same salvation doctrine as espoused by Paul, or this "Romanized Paul"?

What I ask you to do is keep the teachings of Jesus in focus as you read Paul, or this "Romanized Paul". The New Testament, in places, contradicts itself. That is a fact. You must be sharp enough to see it for yourself when you read. No matter what Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" says he cannot invalidate Jesus's own words in the same book. It is a matter of who you will believe. If you listen to Jesus, as I have laid out for you, you see that he proclaimed continually Judaism's eternal truths. Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" will not. Now let us look at Paul, or this "Romanized Paul".

PAUL CONTRADICTS HIMSELF….DID YOU EVER SEE IT BEFORE?

What is the most perplexing for me when studying Paul, or this "Romanized Paul", is that he is not consistent in what he says. Most of you have never probably seen this but I will in the remaining pages attempt to reveal to you the contradictions that come from the mouth and pen of Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" regarding salvation. When we look at Jesus his message is consistent with what has always been taught by Moses and the Prophets. But with Paul, or this "Romanized Paul", we have another matter because he won't always agree with what he has previously said before. But if you are not sharp in your Bible study you can easily overlook such things. Let us begin out critical examination of the message of Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" on salvation.

Remembering what Jesus just said about eternal life and observance of the commandments let us contrast Paul, or this "Romanized Paul's" view on the matter.

Answer for yourself: Does Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" in Romans 2:13 agree or disagree with what Jesus has said about eternal life and the observance of the commandments of God? Well, lets read it and see.

Romans 2:13 For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified.

So far so good. Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" in this verse agrees with the message of Jesus regarding acceptance and eternal life with God.

But just wait. Now on the back of the same page in my Bible where the above verse was quoted from Paul, , we see Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" writes something totally different and contradictory to the teachings of Jesus in Romans 3:28:

Romans 3:28 Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law.

Answer for yourself: In light of what I just showed you can you justify Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" and his quick turn-around on this doctrinal stance so quickly, let alone a change in the same epistle?

Notice that within the space of 44 verses Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" reverses completely his stance on justification and righteousness through obedience to the law and commandments of God. Just 44 verses!

Answer for yourself: Did Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" teach "obeying the Law" for justification after the cross Romans 2:13? He sure did!

Answer for yourself: Does Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" contradict himself in Romans 3:28? He sure does!

Answer for yourself: So what are we to believe in the face of such contradictions of Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" when contrasted with the teachings of Jesus and the other Apostles which teach otherwise than Paul, or this "Romanized Paul"?

Answer for yourself: Seeing this material for yourself, who are you going to believe for your salvation….Jesus, Moses, and the Prophets and their message of salvation or Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" and his message whatever it is in its final form?

I Corinthians 6:11 And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God.

Remembering what we saw before, that this "Romanized Paul" would have us believe, according to Romans 4:5, that God "justifieth the ungodly" and this "his faith is counted for righteousness", now we find likewise that those who "were" transgressors had been helped by the Christological message of Paul, or this "Romanized Paul". All that was needed was a simple "belief" in the "literal" death and resurrection of Jesus for eternal life.

Answer for yourself: How did that happen?

Let us understand what is really being said by Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" in this verse. Let us remember that Paul, has just previously taught in 1 Corinthians 6:9-10 that the heathen who are guilty of the transgression of the Laws of God are led to death and separation from God, let alone the loss of eternal life.

1 Cor 6:9-10 9 Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, 10 Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Having understood this, then how can we can understand his message intended for "non-Jews" whereby he uses "Jesus" literally as bait to get the "non-Jew" to believe "in Jesus" (adhere to a faith in the theology surrounding Jesus) as a way for their eternal life?

Let us understand that Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" used cunning (become all things to all men in order to win some) in not telling the heathen he has to accept the Torah right off the bat, but rather shrewdly uses this "Pauline Jesus", "easy believeism", and relaxation of the Torah in his effort to win converts from the heathen gradually. This was purely a Roman effort to counteract the impact of Judaism on the world.

We saw earlier in the teachings of Jesus that adherents among the "non-Jews" only by patterning themselves after such a Jewish Rabbi and his ethical teachings, would they gradually develop lives of ethical and moral conduct which would assure that they become more Godly than before. Such is repentance which is the first step in coming to God and bringing the Kingdom of God near to them. Of course, if you give up evil you are closer to God, Here is where we find the "doing" that "brings eternal life" which we saw in the earlier article.

Answer for yourself: But there is one important difference from those who Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" was attempting to teach in the first century and you; the reader of this article. You are not like the heathen, but rather, most likely have been raised in church most of your life. With your religious background and your love for God most of your life what excuse do we have not to obey God fully and choose those things which please Him which are demonstrated is His Law?

Luke 1:46-47,50-55, "And Mary said, My soul Both magnify the Lord, And my spirit hath rejoiced in God, my Savior. And his mercy is on them that fear him from generation to generation. He hath showed strength with his arm; he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts. He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree. He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he hath sent empty away. He hath helped his servant Israel in remembrance of his mercy; As he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever."

Answer for yourself: Did Mary, Jesus' mother, call the God of Judaism, the same God who gave her People the Torah for salvation her Savior or did she, based on her new revelation, call her son Jesus the "new" Savior?

Mary knew what most Christians don't. That's because today's Christians have read and believe Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" more than the Gospels. God alone is the Savior not Jesus. Hence, Jews have salvation by God the Father and need no second or alternate source of salvation. She spoke of God's greatness and His help of His servant, Israel. She spoke of God's message to Abraham's children, that the Covenant is eternal. This was the understanding of Mary after she was allegedly informed that she would have, according to the New Testament, a miraculous virgin birth and that the child would be the long awaited Jewish messiah. As you surely can see, she spoke as a traditional, believing Jewish person, not the holy figure of the later theologically evolving Christianity.

Luke 1:6, (Luke) "And they (Zacharias and Elizabeth) were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless."

Answer for yourself: According to the New Testament does "walking in the commandments and ordinances of the Lord" allow a person to be "blameless" before God? It sure does.

Jews as well as "non-Jews" can be free of sin, blameless, following the law of Moses, as exemplified by these two people. Therefore, we know according to the New Testament witness that the law of God does, when obeyed, provide justification for eternal life.

Again let us see what Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" has to say on the matter.

Romans 4:3, (Paul, or this "Romanized Paul") "For what saith the scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness."

Answer for yourself: You most likely have heard this passage your whole life. But do you know what believing truly consists of as spoken of in this verse?

Believe without response, or as James said it "faith without works is dead" is the meaning of the passage. Basically "faith" without "doing" is a false salvation. Abraham believed God according to the revelation of God and RESPONDED because of that belief. He took his son to Mount Moriah to be offered to God. Abraham had faith and he had a concrete response to that faith. Consequently, righteousness in God's eyes is believing God's instructions and doing as God commands. In Abraham's situation, it was offering his son Isaac as a sacrifice. In our situation, it is obeying and following God's commandments in His Torah and His laws, not just believing they exist or simply believing in some later "theology about Jesus" crafted during the 2nd century and afterwards.

Answer for yourself: Do you find that following God's commandments somewhat difficult or foolish to keep and observe since the vast majority of Christianity today are taught the dogmas of Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" that state that the Christian is no longer under the law but under a grace which allows him to break and not keep these laws at will?

Lets see what Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" has to say about being righteous and walking in the commandments and ordinances of God. Jesus has taught us previously that they are "necessary" to obtain eternal life. Even James, said that certain things were "necessary" of the "non-Jew" to be "saved". In discussing the salvation of the "non-Jew" James and the Jerusalem council makes this decree:

Acts 15:28-29 28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; 29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well. (KJV)

For those who are not aware this is a reference to 4 of the 7 headings of the Laws of Noah; the Torah for the "non-Jew". Notice it "seemed good to the Holy Spirit" and were "necessary". But our later "Romanized Paul" confuses the matter for us.

Rom 3:20-22 Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin. 21 But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets; 22 Even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference:

If there were ever Scripture tampering here is a prime example. One moment we state that "the deeds of the Laws justifies none" before God but at the same time we are told the "righteousness of the Law is both manifested and witnessed by the Law itself along with the Hebrew Prophets". We cannot have it both ways. Somebody is tampering with the message.

Remembering what you previously read in the first article concerning the teachings of Jesus, let us examine closely the above passage from Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" for contradictions to what both Jesus, Moses, and the Prophets taught.

1. Moses (the Law) and Prophets NEVER taught that obedience of God's laws did not justify, in fact it was just the opposite they taught; namely, that obedience to the laws of God does justify.
2. Moses (the Law) and the Prophets NEVER taught that righteousness existed apart from obedience to the laws of God, in fact they taught just the opposite.
3. Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" discounts what Moses, the Prophets, and Jesus all taught and held in common, and substitutes his own theology that replaces 4000 years of Biblical Truth with a "BUT NOW" theology of justification before God through belief in Jesus' death and resurrection.

Answer for yourself: Who are we to believe? What do the other Apostles have to say?

I John 5:2-3, (John) ". . . we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments. For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous."

Here all of a sudden the love of God is believed to be demonstrated by keeping the Commandments. Earlier I stated that we love God by keeping his commandments. Now we see the second phase of the Greatest Commandment: loving His children and our neighbors. Notice also that ironically only by loving our neighbor are we actually loving God! Such loving of God and our neighbor requires fidelity to His laws, which are not hard to bear or perform. So, we read here in the New Testament that the commandments of the Torah are to be kept and can be kept. These laws should be observed to demonstrate our love of God and our fellow man.

Answer for yourself: Can I obey literally all of God's laws?

It may be beyond human ability to perform all our duties to God, always and perfectly. But, God gave the commandments which are not hard to uphold, when you use all your good intentions with all your heart. God's laws require your effort, not perfection.

Again let us look at Paul, or this "Romanized Paul".

Romans 3:24 Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: 25 Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; 26 To declare, I say, at this time his righteousness: that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus.

Again you should notice Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" is teaching a completely different message from what Jesus, Moses, Prophets, and the Apostles taught. Again Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" stands alone in his belief. No where is any of Paul, or this "Romanized Paul's theology can we find references to what Jesus, Moses, the Prophets or other Apostles taught.

Rom 10:9-16

9 That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. 10 For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

Again we see that Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" has a different way of salvation from what was taught by Jesus, Moses, the Prophets, and the Apostles as demonstrated in the first article in this series. Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" stresses "faith only" for righteousness and not what Jesus, Moses, the Prophets, and the other Apostles taught; namely walking in the commandments of God for righteousness.

Answer for yourself: Who are you going to trust for correct teaching for eternal life…Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" or Jesus, Moses, the Prophets, and the Apostles?

If you are honest with yourself up to now I have repeatedly shown you that Jesus's message revolved around keeping the Commandments and ordinances of God. Jesus both taught and knew for certain that love for God and those created in His image could only be accomplished by adhering to a standard of righteousness (God's laws) set by God and not by man. Thus the need and availability of God's laws and commandments, which when earnestly attempted to keep produces acceptance and salvation. Remember God requires our effort and not our perfection.

Again look at Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" and his views on the law.

Romans 7:12,14,16,22, (Paul, or this "Romanized Paul) "Wherefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good. For we know that the law is spiritual: . . . I consent unto the law that it is good. For I delight in the law of God after the inward man:"

I Timothy 1:8, (Paul, or this "Romanized Paul") "But we know that the law is good, if a man use it lawfully;"

Answer for yourself: Does it stand to reason that God would need to replace something that is holy, just, spiritual, and good?

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that Paul, or this "Romanized Paul" even said that he delights in the law of God after the inward spirit?

2 Timothy 3:16-17, (Paul) "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that when Paul wrote this in his letter to Timothy that there was only the Jewish Scriptures (Law, Prophets, Writings) in existence and that the New Testament would not be canonized till 397 A.D. (almost 300 years later)?

Answer for yourself: Are you also aware that Paul is saying that the Law, the Prophets, and the Writings are, at the time of writing of this epistle which is around 30 years after Jesus's death, profitable for DOCTRINE, REPROOF, CORRECTION, AND INSTRUCTION?

Answer for yourself: Don't you find it rather strange that something that is profitable for doctrine, reproof, correction, and instruction for the first church is considered passed away by today's church?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Paul's writings and his theology were not, even by him, considered Scripture?

You should not find these facts surprising since the creation of a New Testament or the creation of an alternate view of salvation and how to attain it was the furthermost thing from anyone's mind at this time….except Paul's.

I Peter 1:25, (Peter) "But the word of the Lord (the Law, Prophets, and Writings) endureth for ever...."

Understanding when Peter wrote this Paul's teachings were very limited in scope and accepted by only a few. In fact scholars today teach us that in no time during Paul's life did he have over 50 adherents to his message. In fact Paul would later say "all in Asia have forsaken me." All in Asia? This again shows you his message had a very limited scope since men from James continually followed him around to "undo" his teachings. Thus you can better understand why Paul was required to appear before James twice in his life. Literally this was to answer charges as seen in Acts 21:21: "And they are informed of thee, that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs."

What I have demonstrated to you in this article is that Jesus continually walked after the customs of Moses and the Prophets. Paul did not. Tragically we have grown up in Churches which did not follow Jesus, the Prophets, or the customs as well. We grew up most likely in Churches that followed Paul and literally oppose the teachings of Jesus, the Prophets, and the Apostles.

Answer for yourself: How are we to reconcile that the Law endures forever but your church teaches that Christ is the end of the Law and that the Law has ceased and that we are no longer under the Law but grace?

Amazingly, the verses presented above from the pen of the Apostle Paul and Peter affirm the validity of the laws and the commandments of the Torah. They are described as sacred and beneficial, effective and everlasting. So you must face the fact that after the cross Paul at one time believed the laws of God to be holy, just, spiritual and good. So did Peter for that matter.

Stop here and ask yourself this:

Answer for yourself: If the Torah is all these things of God, shouldn't the laws be performed and Biblical Judaism, which is the embodiment of such laws, be observed by all Jews and "non-Jews"?

Romans 10:5, (Paul) "For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth those things shall live by them."

Answer for yourself: Did you again notice that the Apostle Paul states in agreement with Moses that "righteousness is of the law" and "that those do those things in the law" shall "live" by them (eternal life)?

But again another conflict of Paul is seen below.

Romans 3: 21 But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets;

Answer for yourself: How are we to understand Paul's comments about a righteousness "without the law" in light of Jesus's teachings that connect all righteousness with observance of the commandments?

Answer for yourself: How do you reconcile that Paul speaks of "righteousness without the law" in Romans 3:21 and "righteousness which is of the law" in Romans 10:5?

Answer for yourself: Are you willing to trust contradictions like this from Paul for your eternal life?

Answer for yourself: Although we are warned by Paul not to believe another "gospel," is it not evident to you that in comparison to Jesus and his message about eternal life that ironically it is Paul who teaches "another gospel"?

Answer for yourself: Which of the two teachings are we to trust for our eternal life as taught by Paul…."the man which doeth those things (law) shall live (eternal life) by them" [Romans 10:5] or [Rom 10:9] "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved"?

The Hebrew Bible teaches that the Torah's laws lead to virtue, which is rewarded by everlasting life. Paul, in this passage from Romans 10:5 admits that this is the message of Moses in the Holy Scriptures, who communicated God's will to the Hebrew people. Then he contradicts again this only 4 verses later!

James 5:16, (James) ". . . The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

I John 3:22, (John) "And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight."

Answer for yourself: Could some of our prayers not being answered and our lack of receiving what we ask of God be because we believe we are under grace and not under the law and commandments of God and don't attempt to know let alone keep as many of them as possible?

These two verses, from two different Apostles, show that keeping commandments and being righteous are connected. Both lead to God's hearing us, being pleased, and helping us. The verse quoted is very Judaic in nature, and that's a fact.

James 2:8, (James) "If ye fulfill the royal law according to the scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, ye do well:"

Answer for yourself: Is James telling us we "do well" if we fulfill and keep the law? Sure is.

A person is good if he obeys the golden rule as given in the law of Moses.

James 1:27, (James) "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

Here is the golden rule made specific and said to be the basis of religious requirements. Also, to be pure from worldly evils in general makes for a religious person. These are Jewish ideas, totally.

Let us look again at Paul.

Galatians 3:21, (Paul) "Is the law then against the promise of God ? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law."

Here is where you have to read close as well as remember what you have already learned from reading Jesus and the other Apostles regarding the law and its connection with eternal life. Strange as it may be to read, Paul is, in the first part of the verse anyway, seemingly lending support to the validity of the law of Moses. Now for a problem which most fail to grasp its significance. Paul is double-minded. Remember I told you that he contradicts not only himself but Jesus and the other Apostles? Here again is another place where Paul deviates from the message of the other Apostles as well as the early church. For Paul says "if" the law could be effective Moses' law would suffice for salvation. Paul is in reality stating that it is his personal feeling that no such law exists which is connected to salvation. For Paul the condition "if such a law existed" indicates that such a law and condition does not exist…at least for Paul!

Answer for yourself: What? Is this a complete reversal by Paul of what he has said previously in some of his other epistles let alone a complete contradiction of the teaching of Jesus and the other Apostles? It sure is.

Answer for yourself: Well, have you with your own eyes earlier in this article already seen that Jesus said that keeping the commandments is the path to salvation and the law is effective to this end? If you read the article you have. This produces quite a dilemma for the Christian.

Answer for yourself: Does Paul agree or disagree with the teachings of Jesus regarding salvation and eternal life? He does not!

Therefore, Paul, if he "believes" Jesus, must conclude that righteousness is obtained by one's effort to follow and pattern one's life after the Scriptural laws. But this is not the message of Paul therefore we must question if Paul really "believed in Jesus."

Notice that Paul actually contradicts Jesus on this essential matter and, in effect, created Christianity's separation from its Hebraic roots in Judaism.

Paul claims that sin is not overcome, but is created, by the law. Ironically, it is Paul's teaching, not Jesus', which invalidated the law for the budding Church. Such destroys the teachings of Jesus and the other Apostles!

WERE WE WARNED ABOUT PEOPLE LIKE PAUL BY YESHUA? AND HAVE WE HEEDED THE WARNING?

Let's read what Jesus said about this kind of opposition. In Matthew 10:24 (Luke 6:40) (John 13:16) Jesus said, "The disciple (Paul) is not above his master (Jesus), nor the servant (Paul) above his lord (Jesus)."

Answer for yourself: So we ask, whose statements take precedence…Jesus's or Paul's?

Answer for yourself: Who is to be believed…Jesus or Paul?

You have to decide that for yourself. We only desire to lay the materials out for you in such a way that you can make an intelligent decision.

Answer for yourself: What will you trust for your salvation…the message of Jesus or Paul?

Answer for yourself: Which is truly linked to eternal life and God's salvation…..Christologics (believing in Jesus) or Judaics (following the faith of Jesus)?

Answer for yourself: What is the real message of salvation of God since the New Testament teaches two ways which are mutually exclusive of each other…..faith in Jesus or adopting the faith of Jesus?

Let me warn and encourage all of our readers that if you should "believe" on Jesus to be saved, believe his teachings about the eternal and effective holy law of God revealed by Moses and begin to do them. Begin a life before God where you tell Him that His laws and commandments are important to you and that you choose to try to do them to the best of your ability because you know they please Him. Begin to live by as many as possible for in them you demonstrate your love of God and those created in His image. And you will be saved as a Jew or a Non-Jew.

Paul also writes as follows:

Romans 14:14, (Paul) "I know. . . that there is nothing unclean of itself: but to him that esteemeth any thing to be unclean, to him it is unclean."

Certainly, this is true. Jews consider things unclean because God announced it in the Torah, not because they are unclean of themselves. The law of kashruth (kosher) is God's law, as detailed by those who seek Him. God's ordinances create uncleanliness, not the thing itself. And Jews and "non-Jews" who want to please God and get close to Him keep the kosher laws. This is what God desires of us.

Romans 3:1-2, (Paul) "What advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision? Much every way: chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God."

Romans 9:4, Romans 10:2, (Paul) "Who are Israelites: to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises: For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God . . ."

Romans 11:29, (Paul) "For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance."

Acts 2:5 (Author) "And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men . . ."

Jews have a fervor for God and are devout, said Paul. In other words, Biblical Judaism promoted enthusiasm for God. Jews were given the Covenant, the law, the prophets, and the promises. Jews minister to God by being His Chosen People. There is benefit, much benefit, in being Jewish. Paul even bolsters the firm foundation of the Torah, God's gift, lasting for eternity, without God changing His mind, without repenting of His Torah. That is what Paul actually said.

Notice that Paul, however, in a complete reversal of what he said elsewhere, is recorded to having believed that all these positive features of being Jewish are canceled, and of no avail, due to the Jew's lack of belief in Jesus the Christ. We will leave Paul's reasoning and reversal to others. Instead, we ask you to keep in mind his positive appreciation of Judaism. And also remember that Jesus said, in effect, that Judaism is of God. Jesus, himself, taught that "Jews for Judaism" is the way even for the Non-Jew. We have shown abundant evidence of this in our present article.

Answer for yourself: Who is the authority you choose, Jesus or Paul?

Ephesians 6:2-3, (Paul) "Honor thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise; That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth."

Matthew 15:4 (Mark 7:10), "For God commanded (Moses said), saying, Honor thy father and mother: and, He that curseth father or mother, let him die the death."

These verses are Paul's and Jesus' utterances, condemning anyone who doesn't bestow honor upon his parents, as taken from the Ten Commandments. This means dutifully regarding them and respecting them, and implicitly honoring your heritage as well. This commandment is considered important enough to be put forward separately. Therefore, shaming your parents and their teaching by turning from them and the God of their heritage is prohibited and deserving of worldly death as well as loss of life in the hereafter. This is also what we read elsewhere in the New Testament.

Luke 5:37-39, "And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles, and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish. But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved. No man also having drunk old wine straightway desireth new: for he saith, The old is better."

Yeshua's saying appears to fit Judaism and its offspring, Christianity. To carry this analogy through, the new wine, Christianity, should not be placed into the old, Judaism. This, of course, is just what happened. In order for it to be good, the new should be nurtured separately. Both are then properly maintained, the old as it should be and the new as it should be. This did not occur. Sadly, the new has caused great harm to the old by claiming to succeed it, while mixing with it. And the new, by so doing, has harmed itself. Isn't that the proper conclusion to be drawn? Taken one step further, Jesus also said that those who know the old, Judaism, prefer it.

Answer for yourself: Shouldn't you, as a Non-Jew and most likely a follower of Jesus, prefer it too?

Answer for yourself: Whose teachings will you trust to lead you to eternal life…Paul's [which are filled with contradictions of Jesus, Moses, the Prophets, the Torah, as well as the other followers and Apostles of Jesus who knew him personally and walked with him 40 days after his resurrection], or Jesus's [which agree totally with Moses and the Prophets and which contains not one contradiction among them]?

I would think having read this article it is rather obvious.

NOW FOR THE BIG QUESTION

Since now you have seen for yourself that Yeshua's and Paul's way of salvation differ, then you should be asking yourself "Why"? What you will come to see if you continue your diligent search for truth is that the New Testament documents which you have relied upon since your childhood as "received from God" are no such thing at all. Upon close scrutiny you will come to find that they are a collection of both truth and error; the problem is discerning one from the other. As you have already seen we cannot have two conflicting paths to salvation. There are many other discrepancies contained within these documents; many of which go unnoticed by those who do not devote a considerable amount of time for study into these areas. We at Bet Emet Ministries have and continue to do so in order to present you, our readers, the absolute best of scholarship in these areas in hopes you will be led to the truth before you die. Your rewards and standing in the World to Come hinges upon it. We realize that the reason for so much confusion today in the Christian community stems for the multiple contradictions within the New Testament which blurs "the faith once given to the saints". It is our hope by revealing to you the hundreds of misquotations of the Jewish Scriptures, the numerous Jewish Scriptures taken out of context by the New Testament writes to serve their own antisemitic agendas, and the gross mistranslations contained within it as well that you might come to see the truth for yourself.....Jesus was not a Christian and does not want you to follow such Gentile Christian doctrines that destroy the Sabbath, the Biblical Festivals, Monotheism, true righteous giving of the Tithe, true spiritual warfare, etc. Today we have a collection of writings that billions of people have accepted as "authoritative" for their faith and practice which are anything but that. If you have the courage to continue your study...you will be shocked, saddened, broken, and ashamed before you finish. You will see for yourself the greatest deception foisted upon mankind by the Roman Religious Establishment....a substitute faith that opposes what the real Jesus believed at almost every turn of his life. You might be saying to yourself now: "those are big charges...can he prove it"? I would only ask that you prayerfully study and use the intellect that God has given you to see if what I say does not add up. You will never be sorry you did, and eternally grateful you continued in this rather difficult study. Shalom and may the LORD'S blessings overtake you.

EXAMINING THE DIFFICULT WORDS "OF/ABOUT" JESUS IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

If you were like I growing up in America we are very "literal" in our education and trained to be so since being little children. What ever we read we first tend to try to understand it in the "literal" and "historical" sense since we are "Greeks" by nature. Methodology in any Bible study is therefore concerned with "the proper path to be taken in order to arrive at Scriptural truth". This sounds easy but is not given that we come to such Bible study already "indoctrinated" by our prior experience to assume that the Bible is to be read through our "Greek-Roman" eyes which are, in our culture today, further established on this "literal" and "historical" manner of interpretation of all that we read. But be not mistaken. There is a "proper way" to read and interpret this Bible we cherish. If there is a "proper way" to interpret the Scriptures it also goes without saying that there is an "improper way" of interpreting these same Scriptures. Even in New Testament times, the apostle Peter warned that there are teachings in the inspired writings of Paul "which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest [distort], as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction" (2 Peter 3:16, insert added).

Answer for yourself: Why is this passage so important? This verse tells us that mishandling the Word of God can be very dangerous. Indeed, mishandling the Word of God is a "path" to destruction.

Contrary to the practices of some false teachers in Corinth, the apostle Paul assured his readers that he faithfully handled the Word of God (2 Corinthians 4:2). Paul admonished young Timothy to follow his example: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Timothy 2:15).

Instead of superimposing a meaning on the biblical text, the objective interpreter seeks to discover the author's intended meaning (the only true meaning). One must recognize that what a passage means is fixed by the author and is not subject to alteration by readers. Meaning is determined by the author; it is discovered by readers. Our goal must be exegesis (drawing the meaning out of the text) and not eisogesis (superimposing a meaning onto the text).

Indeed, our method of interpreting Scripture is valid or invalid to the extent that it really unfolds the meaning a statement had for the author and the first hearers or readers of these Divine texts thousands of years ago. It would be foolish to think that the "Gentile church tradition", fixed some several centuries later, carried these original truths or manner of interpretation of the ancient Scriptural truths down through history unchanged. The evidence betrays that they did not! History shows us that a great deviation and radical reinterpretation occurred in the ancient Spiritual Wisdom; a radical reinterpretation that slowly developed during the 2nd through the 5th centuries of our common era. In other words, how Scripture is interpreted today is NOT the same way it was 2,000 years ago or even earlier by those who were used by God to give these higher Divine thoughts to mankind let alone those who were blessed by hearing them.

Make no mistake about it. The "Mind of God", this "Mind of Christ" was expressed in Biblical Judaism. Jesus, the "Christ" example for us in the New Testament, is depicted as a faithful Jew. He had a completely different language, culture, and religion than the Christian today. He observed different Holy Days and religious dogmas than do Christians today. His culture and values are very different from ours today yet we desire to believe that we are truthful followers of this "Jesus Christ". We undergird such a worthy ambition with the ancient Hebrew Scriptures to which we have not a clue as to how they were understood way back then, some 2,000 or more years ago. Added to that we have inherited Bibles with abundant alterations and corruptions of these Hebrew Scriptures are known to have occurred over several hundreds of years. To think we are followers of this Jesus is absurd given that fact that we don't have the same Bible that he would have used and cherished let alone interpret the existing Hebrew Scriptures in a similar manner as again he would in his day and time. Let us not forget. The idea in any Bible study is to arrive at the same understanding of these Scriptures as had Jesus and his hearers of his message. That will mean that we need a Hebrew-English Tanakh in order to have the same texts as did a Jew like Jesus along with an enlightened understanding as to how the Rabbis and textual scholars interpreted these ancient Hebrew texts way back then. Only when equipped with this understanding and exegesis of the Hebrew Scriptures can we be equipped to then recognize their adulteration and forgery in later Christian Bible versions and the false manner in which these later Christian Scriptures have been interpreted. Without such knowledge no one can hope to come to the truth about Jesus let alone the many other Scriptures in our Bibles today.

Too often we have "forced" trends in past theology on the text of the New Testament to ensure we arrive as what we are conditioned and already led to believe since childhood. However, just the opposite of such indoctrination and mind-control is often the higher truth than the inherited religious traditions we were fed since childhood. We should believe what the text teaches when studied out in both a linguistical, cultural, and contextual manner. We should desire to understand and accept as our beliefs what the "word spoken by Jesus and the Prophets like Moses meant then", some two thousand years ago, and weight such Divine insight against what we have heard taught by the Gentile Catholic Church Councils hundreds of years later which have washed up in our Christian Churches today.

Consequently, many phrases in the New Testament have been given "meanings" that were never intended by God, this Jewish "Christ", or understood by the mainline followers of the teachings of this "Jesus". You may want to keep your fairy tales but I want the truth as understood through putting myself into the audience who listened 2,000 years to this "Mind of Christ" as if I lived back in that same time period. In order to do that you really have to study hard and long to recapture what has been lost and misplaced through Church History.

Seeking the biblical author's intended meaning necessitates interpreting Bible verses in context. Every word in the Bible is part of a verse, and every verse is part of a paragraph, and every paragraph is part of a book, and every book is part of the whole of Scripture. No verse of Scripture can be divorced from the verses around it. In interpreting Scripture, there is both an immediate context and a broader context. The immediate context of a verse is the paragraph (or paragraphs) of the biblical book in question. The immediate context should always be consulted in interpreting Bible verses. The broader context is the whole of Scripture. The entire Holy Scripture is the context and guide for understanding the particular passages of Scripture. We must keep in mind that the interpretation of a specific passage must not contradict the total teaching of Scripture on a point. Individual verses do not exist as isolated fragments, but as parts of a whole. The exposition of these verses, therefore, must involve exhibiting them in right relation both to the whole and to each other. Scripture interprets Scripture. Historical considerations are especially important in properly interpreting the Word of God. Study, however, will show the "truth-seeker" with "hears to hear" than often what we think is history in the Bible is "pseudo-history" that carries a Divine Allegory or message.

A "literal" approach to Scripture recognizes that the Bible contains a variety of literary genres, each of which has certain peculiar characteristics that must be recognized in order to interpret the text properly. Biblical genres include the historical (e.g., Acts), the dramatic epic (e.g., Job), poetry (e.g., Psalms), wise sayings (e.g., Proverbs), allegories (Paul mentions Abraham and his sons as an example) and apocalyptic writings (e.g., Revelation). Obviously, an incorrect genre judgment will lead one far astray in interpreting Scripture. A parable should not be treated as history, nor should poetry or apocalyptic literature (both of which contain many symbols) be treated as straightforward narrative. An allegory should not be treated as if were a "literal" or "historical" event and this I suspect is the most common error of interpretation that a Christian experiences in reading and understanding his Bible. In the teachings attributed to the New Testament Jesus we find that they contain extensive use of parables; the people and incidents that he described may or may not have been fictional. Some other biblical verses must be interpreted figuratively. For example, when Jesus is reported to have said in John 15:1 "I am the vine, ye are the branches..." Jesus is obviously not a vine, and his followers are obviously not branches. The wise interpreter allows his knowledge of genres to control how he approaches each individual biblical text. In this way, he can accurately determine what the biblical author was intending to communicate to the reader.

In the following articles from Bet Emet Ministries I will reveal to you what the "true meanings" of the difficult words of Jesus meant back in their Hebrew setting. If you want to hold to ideas fashioned later by Greeks and non-Jews as they "read backwards" existing and alternate religious concepts into the stories and accounts of Jesus that is up to you. We have heard these alternate religious concepts and teachings our whole lives in church, but that does not make them right! In fact and in being brutally honest, they are a replacement religion. But if you want to understand what these many passages in the New Testament meant originally in their original setting before antisemitism of Orthodox Roman Christianity set in then these articles are for you. I hope you enjoy this presentation and benefit from it for it goes a long way to reveal the current idolatrous teachings about Jesus and his nature which are accepted in the Christian Church Today and are sadly made to undergird the whole of the Christian message of "salvation" preached to the world today.

The Links that follow on this webpage will present the necessary studies explaining these hidden "true" meanings that lay deeply hidden in the "Jesus Story" that escape all but those who have prepared themselves thoroughly in the Jewish Roots of the Christian faith. Shalom. Let us start with "I and the Father are One". What does this mean?

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "I AND THE FATHER ARE ONE"

The New Testament asks a very important question as phrased by the "Christ":

Mark 8:27 27 And Jesus went out, and his disciples, into the towns of Caesarea Philippi: and by the way he asked his disciples, saying unto them, Whom do men say that I am? (KJV)

The answer to that question has numerous answers, the least of them being determined as to how one "interprets" the Scriptures themselves. One thing is for certain given years of serious study of "the Christ" as well as the recurrent "Jesus Story" down through nation after nation, as far back as ancient Egypt, and that is that "the Christ" has been understood by mankind since the beginning of time in 3 basic ways. Needless to say some of these "interpretations" are better than others and closer to the Divine Truth. It will be up to the reader to come to his own conclusions based upon the evidence presented in these studies. Before we tackle the difficult passage "I and the Father are One" a small introduction of the purpose of such studies is needed.

The Websites and our spiritual pilgrimage follow but I must say that what I uncovered when getting to the bottom of the origin of the "Jesus Story" is that the "New Testament Jesus" can be understood in many different ways and in so doing yet communicate Divine Truth to the reader. I have discovered through my 20 years of study that we basically have 3 different ways to understand "the Christ" and the "Jesus Story" as I and others see it. Let it be understood up front that our "Jesus Story" is not "new"; it exits from the beginning of recorded time as found in a host of other nations and other "religions" where this personified central character, often termed "the Krst" or "the Christ", is found to be identified by a host of other names in these different religious expressions. This fact alone should make us aware that something lies behind our "Jesus Story" other than a supposed "literal" and "historical" person. We at Bet Emet Ministries have covered all 3 different understandings and presentations of this "Krst" or "Christ" which is termed "Jesus Christ" in our Christianity and the presentation of our research is distributed throughout the totality of our websites. Taken in order our Websites take the student through these 3 different understanding of "the Christ" in systematic order where we progress from our supposed inherited "literal-historical" approach to the understanding of "the Christ" to the ancient "Mystical", "Mythological" and finally the "Metaphysical" understanding of "the Christ" as taught by the ancients down through recorded history until the 2nd century and the rise of Roman Orthodoxy. Here is what we find when we do the exhaustive studies into this area:

- Historically...(Divine Spiritual allegory and myth taught through the medium of a personified and presumed historical person; although not accurate to the existence of a historical person yet very important in that it serves as an example to be emulated and followed by all mankind).
- Mythically...(personification of the Sun (the Sun being only the visible representation of the Cosmic Divine Conscious & Intelligent Energy and Divine Mind of the Creator) and its path through the Zodiac and the 4 seasons of the year; the equinoxes and solstices which again personify the growth and Spiritual maturation of the Soul and Divine Mind in "matter" and humanity)

- Mystically...(expressing a hidden teaching, a secret doctrine, given under strict and exacting conditions to approved candidates by the Masters of Wisdom regarding the descent of the Logos and Divine Mind of God into matter, ie., again mankind). Paul speaks of this:

Col 1:27 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Are all three methods of presenting "the Krst", "the Christ", or as we know of it as "Jesus Christ" equally accurate to truth? No they are not and our Websites will provide the evidence you need as a "truth-seeker" to not only see this for yourself beyond any doubt but make adjustments in your religious belief system when needed based upon the facts and evidence our Websites provide. Our focus needs to be on correctly interpreting "the Krst" and "the Christ"; both the Mystical and Mythical Christ and then being equipped with this understanding we can then and only then adequately deal with and understand what lies behind the erroneously interpreted "Historicity of the Christ" as seen in our inherited "Jesus Story" which is portrayed and interpreted to us as a supposed person of historical being, the Christ with flesh which is limited to but one person.

It goes without saying that we all begin to read and study the Bible from a "literal" perspective assuming that it is the vehicle for "literal truth" about Jesus Christ, never realizing that these ancient stories were written and were intended to be understood by the writers of this ancient Spiritual Mysteries only as Spiritual Allegories by the original writers and never to be understood as if a "literal" story. That is why we find upon study our "Jesus Story" repeated in identical form from beginning to end all the way back to pre-dynastic Egypt over 13,000 years ago. This "Christ Story" was never intended to be understood as if "limited" to but one person but to the whole of the human race. God had descended into "matte" and humanity had become the Temple of the Holy Spirit and Divine Mind of the whole Cosmos. It is this hidden mystery, that the Divine Mind incarnated into all "matter" and finds Self-expression in all manifestations of "matter", especially humanity, that is lost in our current understanding of "the Jesus Story" we have inherited today.

Bet Emet Ministries began several years ago to present websites dealing with Christianity which at first adopted this "Literal Interpretation" of Jesus in the "Jesus Story" since the "literal" approach toward Jesus in the New Testament is taught today by almost all of Christianity as they assume that Jesus Christ was a historical person. We all grow up in the Western Hemisphere assuming that the "Jesus Story" is a historical reality; that is until we do serious study of our faith which is required to get to the bottom of this "Jesus Story" and the religious synthesis within it. Only when my studies into the truth behind our New Testament progress to where I uncovered the First Gnostic New Testament which was later corrupted by Rome with its Second New Testament did I see when studying Gnostic Christianity that "the Krst" and "the Christ" (the Divine Mind of the Creator in all "matter") did I come to clearly see the Mystical Christ and Mythological Christ for what it truly represented. Many of our websites, especially the early ones from years ago, begin by approaching the "Jesus Story" from this inherited historical -grammatical method of interpretation because this is how we grow up and first get acquainted with the "Jesus Story". Only by submitting this "historical Christ" under the microscope of intense scrutiny as well as his "sayings" can we be certain that the inherent problems in this interpretation of "the Christ" and the "Jesus Story" is a falsehood and then look elsewhere for its true meaning and find the "Mystical", "Mythological" and "Metaphysical" truths behind all the "Christ Stories" which remained intact for thousands of years until the 2nd century where we find Rome "radically reinterpreting" the whole of the "Christ Stories" and "limiting" this Christ to but one person whose access was limited to the doors of the Roman Church. Oh, how convenient for world domination and the manipulation of humanity through fear and ignorance. These "truths" I felt were necessary to get to the readers, students, and "truth-seekers" in order to reveal the greater Spiritual Truths that lay within Biblical and Mystical Judaism that are not taught by mainline Gentile Christianity today. As a pastor I realized that it takes time for a "seed to grow" and if I strike out and were to say "everything you believe about Jesus is wrong" I would lose any hope of reaching people with the fruits of my studies. We must understand our Jesus correctly; that is what all incarnational life is meant to accomplish whereby one "awakens" to his True Self; that he is the expression of Divinity and Divine Mind as a human being. We sing "in him we live, move and have our being"; more correctly it is in "us" that God moves, lives, and has His being and it is this agency of the indwelling Christ, not limited to but one, but in all that needs to be restored to humanity so that man can become ONE again with God and all world religions turn their swords into plowshares because we are all ONE. So we begin with the study of the Jewish Roots of Christianity by following the the Rabbinical Methods of teaching and I applied them to Bet Emet's presentation of the "Jesus Story" which we find evolves over the totality of our Websites. There are 4 levels of Rabbinical teaching. Let us learn them now as we return "to the Faith once given the Saints".

Now for our study:

Answer for yourself: Jesus said: "I and the Father are one" (Jn.10:30), therefore, is not Jesus the same, or, "co-equal" in status with his Father?

Now the passage in the Greek:

30 I <1473> and <2532> [my] Father <3962> are <2070> (5748) one <1520>.

The Strong's Concordance states:

1520 heis (hice); (including the neuter [etc.] hen); a primary numeral; one: KJV-- a (-n, -ny, certain), + abundantly, man, one (another), only, other, some.

Answer for yourself: What does this "neuter" really mean?

In John 10:30 Jesus says "I and my father are one." Yet, according to Matt 27:46 Jesus cried out on the cross, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" That hardly sounds like they are one! It sounds far more like they have a definite difference of opinion as to what should occur.

Neuter gender refers to words that do not refer to males or females. Jesus is depicted as a "male" in the New Testament and the use of the "neuter" in this most important sayings casts extreme doubt as to his historical existence and identity. One would expect to find the use of "masculine" nouns but finds none. This is more than surprising and outright problematic and goes to the very nature of "the Christ".

Answer for yourself: Why is this so important?

It is here in the use of the neuter gender that we find our first clues as to the true identity of Jesus as the "Christ", thus further enabling us to correctly answer the most intriguing question of the Gospels: "Whom do men say I am" in Mark 8:27. Not speaking as masculine, and surely not feminine, then the use of the neuter noun brings into severe question the historicity of this supposed male and would be Messiah. John 10:30 in the Greek text Jesus says that he and the Father are "hen", neuter nominative for "one". The use of the neuter "hen" for "one" says that Jesus and the Father are one thing, one ontological unity. In realizing that through the Mind of Christ, put in the mouth of this Jesus, we find the use of the neuter for the noun "one", and not the masculine noun, the assertion is without question. Jesus is not saying that he and the Father are one person as does Christian theology today, but one "thing" or share the "same purpose". You and I can and should share the same purposes with God but that does not me us "God" and neither did it a man who supposedly lived in the first century of the common era. The identity of the two persons is not being asserted, but essential unity (unity of essence) is. It is here we speak of the oneness in attributes, power, or purpose that lies within mankind awaiting quickening, and not a oneness of personality which would have required the masculine form (James E. Talmage, Jesus The Christ, p. 464).

In the use of this "neuter" we find the universal application to all of humanity that they have within themselves the indwelling Christ awaiting "resurrection" from the deadness of "matter" and the animal nature whereby now, at this time of "rebirth" and being "born again", they can walk on the water of "matter/flesh" and rule this animal nature thus liberating the Divine Mind and Divinity within themselves to evolve into the "fullness and stature" of Christ in this present Earthly existence. This is the "hidden key" to the above simple verse of John 10:30. This passage was never intended to be limited to but one "literal person, even the supposed historical Jesus Christ of Galilee. It refers to mankind's True Divine Self, asleep in the manger of the animal nature, waiting to cry out for a "second birth" into a Spiritual Reality that goes hidden under the veil of flesh. Only then like the Sun which has sunk to its allegorical death at the Winter Solstice, so must the latent Divine Life in man be "raised from the dead" while he yet lives and be quickened Spiritually to rise to the zenith of his expected Spiritual Maturity at his personal Vernal Equinox and even later at the Summer Solstice of his Soul's evolution.

The answer to this question where we see the unusual use of the "neuter" instead of a "masculine" noun shouts out to us the truth about this Jesus Christ but we don't hear it from our pulpits with the emphasis upon "preaching" instead of "teaching". It has been said by some that such statements, such as "I and the Father are one" [Jn. 10:30] make perfect sense interpreted as "...are united in purpose," while they are lethal and most problematic to the language in a trinitarian interpretation as "...are separate persons of a single God." Such a "literal" trinitarian doctrine of separate persons falls to the ground in light of such textual evidence but man must have his own "theology" in spite of what the texts say.

If you are looking for the "key" to the true identity of "Jesus Christ" as depicted in the New Testament then consider this closely.

Again the Jews picked up stones to stone him, but Jesus said to them, "I have shown you many great miracles from the Father. For which of these do you stone me?" "We are not stoning you for any of these," replied the Jews, "but for blasphemy, because you, a mere man, claim to be God."

Answer for yourself: What does Jesus Christ know that we might not know today, or even those depicted as gathering around God's messenger?

AgaintheJewspickedupstonestostonehim,butJesussaidtothem,"Ihaveshownyoumanygreatmiracles from the Father. For which of these do you stone me?" "We are not stoning you for any of these," replied the Jews, "but for blasphemy, because you, a mere man, claim to be God."

We see from the above passage that the audience in this case was quite intent upon the "separate persons of a single God" interpretation! We have heard that before. Now if He had been misunderstood, we would expect Jesus to then say, "Wait, guys! I didn't mean to say I was God; I was saying that God and I were united in purpose. He would have gone on to say something like "Hey guys, put that rock down will ya?" But no, we don't hear this from Jesus. In fact he goes on to say more about the unity of man with God!

Jesus answered them, "Is it not written in your Law, 'I have said you are gods?' If he called them 'gods' to whom the word of God came (to mankind as incarnated Souls from Heaven) - and the Scripture cannot be broken - what about the one whom the Father set apart as his very own and sent into the world? Why then do you accuse me of blasphemy because I said, 'I am God's Son'? Do not believe me unless I do what my Father does. But if I do it, even if you do not believe me, believe the miracles, that you may know and understand that the Father is in me, and I in the Father.

He basically says that mankind and God are "one". He says, and set down for this, than mankind are "gods" incarnated as Divine Souls in the body of an animal. Plato and the philosophers will say the same down through history. Plato taught that the nous, spirit, or rational soul of man, being "generated by the Divine Father," possessed a nature kindred, or even homogeneous, with the Divinity, and was capable of beholding the eternal realities. This faculty of contemplating reality in a direct and immediate manner belongs to God alone; the aspiration for this knowledge constitutes what is really meant by philosophy -- the love of wisdom. The love of truth is inherently the love of good; and so predominating over every desire of the soul, purifying it and assimilating it to the divine, thus governing every act of the individual, it raises man to a participation and communion with Divinity, and restores him to the likeness of God. "This flight," says Plato in the Theaetetus, "consists in becoming like God, and this assimilation is the becoming just and holy with wisdom." It is here than man is "one" with God, no longer operating solely through an animal body unruled by the laws of the Cosmos and God's Laws of Ma'at (Torah).

Answers to the other questions in future articles will reveal that Jesus is not God, was never intended to be confused with God, and always directed worship away from himself as "the Christ" to His Father to whom only it is deserved. The use of the neuter for the noun in the above passage is anti-Christological and contradicts completely the later ruling of Constantine and the Nicean Council where Jesus is later made God by a vote of hands. The Nicean Council's decision completely contradicts its own Scriptures when rightly interpreted as we mentioned earlier when stressing the importance of hermeneutics and interpretation as necessary tools to not only rightly dividing the Word of God but getting to the truth behind the "Jesus Story" . Let us continue to investigate if Jesus and the Father are truly the same as we have heard from childhood.

So again we see that in this little Greek word translated "one" in John 10:30 is gold-mind of Divine theology hidden in the neuter form of a 3 letter Greek word. When all is said and done this means that Jesus was asserting full unity of nature and action with God for the whole of humanity, but not that one person is one and the same person as the Almighty God.

Answer for yourself: When and where did this teaching that Jesus is God originate?

Answer for yourself: Was it from John 10:30, or was it from a Gentile misinterpretation of this verse by a Greek philosopher named Tertullian in the 3-4th century which knew absolutely nothing about Hebrew?

In Greek, "heis" means "one" numerically and is "masculine," and "hen" means "one" in "unity or essence" and is "neuter." The marginal notes in New American Standard Bible (NASB) reads; "one - (Lit. neuter) a unity, or, one essence."

For those who are not capable of reading the Greek New Testament let me make it as simple as possible for you. If you will look for yourself in the Interlinear Greek-English New Testament published by Zondervan on page 276 in verse 30 your will find both an English and Greek translation with the English words written below the Greek New Testament words. In this particular verse the word for "one" is ["ev] in Greek. Now we have to go elsewhere to find whether it is used in the masculine or neuter for the determination in this regard will tell us if Jesus intended us to know that he is God or that he and God are in total unity about the message and plan of God he preaches and teaches to the whole of mankind. Looking now at The Greek New Testament Analyzed by Pierre Guillemette, published by Herald Press in 1986 (a text I used extensively in Seminary which lists all the words of the New Testament in Greek in an alphabetical descending order), we find on page 139 the listing in order of "ev, 'ev, "ev, "eva, etc." Since we must deal with "ev it a simple matter to locate "ev on the page and read to the right of the word these statements: nomnative-neuter-singular. Nomnative means the word is used as a "direct object of the verb in the sentence" such as when Jesus said "I and the Father are _____? Here, in John 10:30 it says they are "one." One is the direct object of the verb "are."

Answer for yourself: What have we just seen here?

Since we now have come to understand that the word for "one" is neuter then we have no other possible meaning than to understand that Jesus is not saying he and God are the same, thus making him God, but rather, he is saying he (the incarnated Christ indwelling within mankind) and the Father are "one" in purpose, beliefs, and actions. This is the goal of all incarnation; that man might become and evolve "this treasure in Earthen vessels" by which God can, having incarnated in "matter" as the "Logos/Christ" live, move, and have His being both in and through His created vessels. Thus, when you see Jesus in the records of the New Testament it is as if you are looking at the Father since Jesus demonstrates over and over again that he is in complete oneness and unity with the Father in a degree that mere mortals fail to comprehend. This is our "pattern" for our lives. This Jesus, when completely sold out to God and His will, is in complete unity with God and His purposes. He is "one" with god. Only then is he, or any person filled with the Spirit of god and when equally submitted to the Father's will for his life, the expressed living image of what the Father both believes and does. Thus looking at Jesus and patterning our lives after his beliefs and actions (the Mind of Christ expressed through Biblical Judaism and not Roman Catholicism with its opposing and corrupted religious dogmas) will we also be pleasing to the Father. Often, as seen in the life of Jesus, such surrender to God and His purposes in one's life whereby he is "one" with God may go against established religious practices of the day or one's present church. But let me reiterate that Jesus, depicted as a historical person in the Gospels, is not saying he is God for that would amount to idolatry, it is we who have listened to false teachers unacquainted with the Greek and Hebrew who read the English only and lean on their own understanding and inherited religious and church tradition that leads them astray into idolatry. This one verse makes the whole of the Nicean Church Council turn over in its grave and reveals the whole of their Christology to be blasphemous theology. Thus, my friends, as I have written to you for over the years much of what sounds unfamiliar to you Sunday after Sunday is devoid of truth to those who study the texts for themselves. Study is the higher form of worship of God in Biblical Judaism, not worship, prayer, or even giving. Through study one comes to "know God". Biblical scholarship, done for no other purpose than to know the truth, has led me and many others to come to grips with many traditions of man that has made the Word of God of little effect in the lives of most.

Let me say again that in this verse the word for "one" is "neuter," not masculine or feminine. Here the word used by John is "hen" [unity or essence and not singularity of identity] and not "heis". Jesus is not saying that he "is the Father and both he and the Father share the same identity!" Being in unity with another is all together different than being the same or identical in identity with another. The prophet Amos tells us that "two" cannot walk together unless they agree (are in unity).

If one wishes to argue that the word "hen" supports their claim for Jesus being "co-equal" in status with his Father, please invite your attention to this last verse and example we offer::

Jesus said: "And the glory which Thou hast given me, I have given to them (disciples); that they may be one, just as we are one." (John 17:22).

22 And <2532> the glory <1391> which <3739> thou gavest <1325> (5758) me <3427> I <1473> have given <1325> (5758) them <846>; that <2443> they may be <5600> (5753) one <1520>, even as <2531> we <2249> are <2070> (5748) one <1520>:

Here we have the same word for "one" as we did in John 10:30. Here in John 17:22, if you were to consider/regard/believe the Father and Jesus to be "one" meaning "co-equal" in status or of the same Christological nature with God (the same person) on the basis of John 10:30, then you should also be prepared to consider/regard/believe that the disciples of Jesus are meant also to be "co-equal" and of the "same person" in status with the Father and Jesus ("just as we are one") in John 17:22. That would mean, given the same word and meaning as found in John 10:30 and John 17:22 that the Disciples were Almighty God, not just a vessel for the incarnating "god" in "matter". Notice that the same word is used in both instances and in both verses. I have yet to find a person that would be prepared to make the disciples (students) "co-equal" in status with the Father or Jesus. If one accepted this belief then Nicea should have made the disciples equal with God as they did Jesus because the texts make no distinction here; in fact, they say the same things.

The unity and accord that they shared was the acceptance and belief of the authorized divine message that originated from the Father, received by Jesus and finally passed on to the disciples. Jesus admitted having accomplished the work which the Father had given him to do. (Jn.17:4)

Jesus said: "I go to the Father; for the Father is greater than I." (Jn.14:28). This verse, where Jesus, even as a presumed historical person, states that the Father is greater than he, unequivocally refutes the claim by any one for Jesus being "co-equal" in status with his Father.

Had Constantine not deceived the world at the point of a sword when creating the first fifty Bibles to which he determined "theology" then we would have the truth today; a Divine Truth about our True Selves and our evolving Divinity hidden behind this veil of flesh and we would know that we are "gods" like Jesus spoke and in such realization of Divine Truth we would be "doing greater things" as Jesus stated which we are not since not knowing the truth about "the Christ", the "Jesus Story", as well as our "True Selves" as evolving Divinities. Our true natures have been stolen from us 2,000 years ago by Rome and along with it our powers to become "the fullness and stature" of the Christ which is our incarnational purpose. For many of you this might have been your first introduction into the problems surrounding a "literal" and "historical" Jesus Christ. Let us assure you that there are hundreds after this one that lie just below the texts, in recorded history itself, in manuscript evidences, in comparative religious study, in astro-theology, and the Divine Mysteries and their "parallels" to the "Jesus Story". Dear ones it is all about "the texts" and who has the "best texts". Once you do the textual studies like this one, over time the puzzle-pieces come together and you see clearly what really lies behind the "Jesus Story" as we have inherited it in a post-Nicean world. In seeing these truths you come to understand what the true Paul once said: Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead (while you yet life in this animal body with its animal nature), and Christ shall give thee light (as to your True Self and Nature) 15 See then (after awakinging to the truth about the evolving Divine Mind in yourself) that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

Answer for yourself: How did Paul view "the Christ"? Was Paul's Christ a "historical and literal person" as we are taught today or did the Gnostic Paul, the true Paul and not the Romanized Paul, only teach that the Christ was only "the presence of God in the world . . . a force or a presence within the believer" as we see from A. N. Wilson's BookPaul and the Mind of the Apostle, p. 166). Why would Wilson say that "the figure of the historical Jesus," is not only unjustified by what Paul actually says in his 7 authentic epistles but is unnecessary? What do scholars know today about "the Christ" that the Church is afraid to address and teach to its congregation? Has inherited Church tradition regarding the interpretation of these sacred texts and the "Jesus Story" been exposed as less than trustworthy? Isn't it time we find out?

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "HE WHO BELIEVES IN THE SON HAS ETERNAL LIFE..."

Jesus said: "He who believes in the son has eternal life; but he who does not obey the son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abides on him" (John 3:36).

Answer for yourself: Are you under the wrath of God for not being a Christian and follower of "the Christ"? But, which Christ? There are many "Christs" especially with over two thousand different Christian denominations in the world today. Who has the right "belief" and the "right faith"? Are we under the wrath of God for not believing in traditional Catholic or Protestant beliefs about Jesus? Isn't this a major problem of its own sort since Catholic and Protestant dogmas are not the same? Who has the higher truth, Catholicism or Protestantism? What about Biblical Judaism and its Scriptures that read completely different than the later Greek and English translations of the Hebrew Scriptures which have been altered in later translations into Greek and English to accommodate various "sects" and their various beliefs concerning "the Christ" down through history? What are we to believe?

Jude 1:3 3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Where is "the" Faith once given the saints spoken about in Jude 1:3? Who has it today? Does it exist? Is it taught in your church and how do you know for certain if you cannot define it or compare it to what was taught in the beginning before "religious men" got their hands upon it, corrupting in almost beyond recognition today? Do you even know that this has happened to "the faith once delivered unto the saints"?

Answer for yourself: What about the earliest Gnostic Christians and their First New Testament which long existed before the rise of Rome with its "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom? Was the earliest Christian Gnostics and their First New Testament to be understood and interpreted "metaphysically" and "allegorically" through out? Were Divine Truths incorporated in a pseudo-history at best? Had it always been this way since ancient Egypt as seen from nation to nation and from age to age until the rise of Rome in the 2nd century where a "radical reinterpretation" of all spiritual revelation was to ensue?

Answer for yourself: Did Rome's Second New Testament with its "literal" and "historical" interpretation of "the Christ" change the ancient understanding of "the Christ"? Who, then today, has the most reliable and trustworthy Scriptures? Do the Catholics, the Protestants, or Biblical Judaism? What about Mystical Judaism and the Kabbalah? Why don't the Jews and their Rabbis believe in the "Jesus Story" the way Christians are taught to do? What do they know that we don't concerning the Scriptures?

Answer for yourself: In other words is there salvation outside of believing the "Jesus Story" as it has come down to us today through Catholicism and Protestantism?

Answer for yourself: What about the earlier "Krst/Christ" stories that were the "patterns" for the later "Jesus Story"? Were the "sungod stories" the "pattern" for all later "Christ Stories" including our "Jesus Story"? What does that say about a strict "literal" and "historical" understanding of our "Jesus Story"? How were these earlier "Krst/Christ Stories" understood by the ancients which gave them to mankind in the first place? How were these earlier "Krst/Christ" stories to be understood? Were there two different levels of understanding of these "sungod stories" and the "Christ Stories"? Were these ancient stories believed to be "literal" and "historical" stories concerning "the Christ" or were they always taught to be "allegories", "metaphors", and "metaphysical interpretations" of the Spiritual realm and the Descent of the Soul which interconnected with "material existence" and "matter"? What and how are we to believe concerning "the Christ Story" that we have inherited today and who really has "eternal life"?

Eph 4:13 13 Till we all come in the unity of the faith ("the", definite article "the" indicating one and only faith), and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ: (KJV)

I have posed some very interesting questions to say the least. Answers would be wonderful and the good news is that we have them. But first, more questions.

Answer for yourself: Do the vast majority of Christians truthfully believe "in" Jesus? What does "believing in Jesus" really mean? Are we to believe in religious dogmas and doctrines created by the Roman Christian Religion and their Christological Church Councils concerning the nature of Jesus as "the Christ" which are today contained in the many "creeds" of the church down through history or does "believing in Jesus" mean that we become more like this Jesus as modeled for us on the pages of the New Testament? Are we to have "faith in Jesus" or are we to live according to "the faith of Jesus" expressed through Biblical Judaism? Is the "Jesus Story" in all actuality the personification of the Metaphysical evolution of man's Soul? Are we to believe "in the theology" created around Jesus as it evolved from Church Council to Church Council in order to inherit eternal life or should are to live according to what we see that Jesus taught in the New Testament even though many of the teachings of Jesus defy what our Christian Churches teach us to do today? Are we to obey our Pastors and our Churches more than the Commandments of God in the Hebrew Scriptures, the Scriptures that a Jew like Jesus observed? If we fail to obey Jesus' example then does the wrath of God abide on us even though we accept and believe a lot of Christian theology created about Jesus by Rome? If we fail to obey what the New Testament Jesus taught and obey our Church traditions and theology instead then what implication does this hold to the warning that we might fail to "see life" (but he who does not obey the son shall not see life)? How do we obey the Son when he was depicted to us as a Jew who obeyed the Laws of God his whole life and as Christians we revel in "not being under the Law but under grace" according to traditional Christian teaching?

The answer to these questions are so scary for the Christian that I won't even begin to address it for the shock waves it will create upon learning we have not obeyed this Jesus nor his example, but rather, obeyed men who have come in his name which have replaced the commandments of God with their personal dreams, personal visions, personal desires, heretical dogmas and antisemitic traditions of Gentiles. In other words, the traditions of men have been substituted for the commandments of God.

Jesus uses "believe" in negative parallel with "obey" in John 3:36 where he says, "He who believes in the Son has eternal life; but he who does not obey the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abides on him." We are to learn from this that belief and obedience are two sides of the same coin. You simply could not have one without the other. Faith and obedience are one and the same concept. The faith that we are saved by is living faith, not dead faith. Living faith will motivate us to accomplish the rest of the conditions that God has given, all of which proceed from faith. True and living faith will motivate us to do what God commands (Heb. 11; James 2:26). Faith in God and His word is essential, but it does not exist unless it provides this motivation (James 2:14; Heb. 11:6). This brings up another point. If we are to believe in the Word of God we have to have it and not purposeful mistranslations, purposeful misquotations, and purposeful lifting out of context Hebrew Scriptures and giving them another meaning not intended by the Holy men of old that received them originally by Divine Revelation along with their intended interpretation.

As a Christian my whole life I heard that we as Christians are saved by faith only . . . but James said (James 2:24): "You see that a man is justified by works, and not by faith alone." God has defined by man what these "accepted works" are by giving man the Laws and Commandments which lay them out for man that no one might misunderstand but miss them. But we have due to Rome and their antisemitism and their corruptions of the Hebrew Scriptures in their falsified translations of the Hebrew Scriptures, both in the Christian Old Testament along with its subsequent quotes in the New Testament as well. James tells is like it is: Justification comes by works plus faith. Works in no way diminishes the role of faith in our salvation. Just the opposite: James defines exactly what true and living faith is, and this is exemplified throughout the Bible (see Hebrews 11). Never was a person saved by faith without that faith exhibiting itself is some action (works/fruits/obedience) that is accepted by God and delineated in His Laws and Commandments. It is faith alone that saves, but the faith that saves is not alone. He who believes is he who obeys and he who obeys is he who believes. Of course the Torah lies at the very center of this conundrum and difficult theological tension that exists between Christianity and Judaism.

James starts out by asking (James 2:14): "What use is it, my brethren, if a man says he has faith, but he has no works? Can that faith save him?" This question admits that such is impossible, and James goes on to state that demons have such faith (19). Raw belief in various theologies, right or wrong, is not enough; it must motivate acceptable action defined as pleasing to God. The love of God for man is seen in God giving man the "blueprint", the Torah, whereby man is without excuse in regard to "what is" and "is not" acceptable to God. In began as far back as ancient Egypt with the 42 Negative Confessions and the children of Egypt, the Jews, under Moses/Akhenaten, continued to live by the Laws of God that defined acceptable conduct and "works" by man in the sight of God. So, James defines the two types of faith that can exist in verse 26: "For just as the body without the spirit is dead, so also faith without works is dead."

We at Bet Emet Ministries believe that most of the followers who claim to be Christians do not even understand the implications of calling Jesus "Lord" or "Christ". It is more, a lot more than "mental accent" to a dogma concerning the evolving nature of "the Christ" that was ultimately sanctioned by Rome and written on paper.

Having dealt again with what "believing in Jesus" truly means, now we can answer the rest of the question. The above verse has two parts: "Belief" and "Obedience".

On the subject of Belief in Christ, Jesus asked his disciples; "But who do you say that I am? And Peter answered and said, "The Christ of God." (Luke 9:20). Peter did not say God or a god. The expression "The Christ of God" literally means; "The one that was anointed by God himself". What we have to determine by our study is if this Jesus was a "literal" and "historical" person who actually lived in the first century or if he, like all the prior sungods before him, is but the personification of the Living Cosmic Spirit and Energy which has fallen into "matter" and "material existence"; in particular in the flesh of an animal called "man". As stated earlier at the beginning of this article we are all familiar with the "Historical Jesus Story" since childhood. But accepting it at face value we are never taught that what appears as a "literal" and "historical" story is in reality a Divine Spiritual allegory and myth taught through the medium of a personified and presumed historical person as were all the sungod stories before it; stories that are almost identical from nation to nation and from age to age that mimic almost exactly our inherited "Jesus Story". Mind you, the simple story of these sungods as well as the "Jesus Story" are examples of the Lesser Mysteries; not accurate to the actual existence of a historical person yet very important in that it serves as an example to be emulated and followed by all mankind. Most of my life I accepted this "Jesus Story" in this exact same way and only through my years of study did the hidden truth behind these Lesser Mysteries, the Greater Mysteries, open itself to me as it has to others who persistently knock on Heaven's Door. If you are diligent to study in-depth the "Jesus Story" you will find not only the importance of the Torah for God's intended path for your Soul's Spiritual evolution while in his Earthly existence, but you will discover the "secret" in the Bible; your own inherent Divinity hidden beneath the flesh of an animal. This is the reason for all sungod stories as well as our "Jesus Story"; to slowly "awaken from the dead" the indwelling "Christ within" each child of God whereby "Christ is raised" from the deadness of "matter" to rightfully ascend to the throne within your heart as you realize your true Divine Self as the "evolving Christ" which has fallen to its "death" in the "flesh of an animals" as it descended down the ladder of Heaven, or the planes of existence. Each crossing from a higher plane to a lower plane of cosmic existence as termed a "crossification" or a "crucifixion" by the ancients. Thus, God "allegorically" falls into "matter" that He might experience the Life He has created in you and me as the "evolving Divine Mind" of the Universe which is often called "the Krst/Christ" in the Sacred Books of the world. So if we desire the higher truth of the Greater Mysteries then we must look at the "Jesus Story" on a higher level of interpretation than just the "literal" and "historical". Mythically and Mystically, the "Jesus Story" is the personification of the Sun (Cosmic Living Energy/Spirit) which, as the Sun, is the visible representation of the Cosmic Divine Conscious & Intelligent Energy and Divine Mind of the Creator and its progressive growth and evolution along the its path through the Zodiac and the 4 seasons of the year; the equinoxes and solstices. On a deeper level, this path of the Sun (sungods/Jesus) personify the growth and Spiritual maturation of the Soul and Divine Mind after it has "fallen" and "incarnated" into "matter" and humanity. It is an "ordered" path, thus the need for a "teacher" like the Torah which is the collection of the Laws and Commandments of God. It is here we learn the "works" to accompany our "faith", thereby assuring our acceptance and approval by God.

Please go back in time and think. God performed the ceremony of anointing (physically or spiritually) and for that reason, in the "Jesus Story" we find that Jesus became "The Christ of God". We actually are transformed and become more Christ-like through "spiritual practices." These "spiritual practices" are defined as the Torah, Laws, and Commadments of God, all of which were created by God to develop, train, and transform the Soul into "the fullness and stature of Christ? This process seen in Scripture is called "adoptionism" and sadly is rejected by mainline Christian orthodoxy today because the early Greek Church Fathers rejected since it was "too Jewish" and centered on living the Torah. It is a central dogma of "the Christ" that "He is in a constant state of becoming"; we can call it continual growth and development or even evolution. It is my hope that my years of study help you in becoming hungry for personal transformation and illuminates you toward the kind of life God desires to live through you. In us God lives, and moves, and has His Being now! So, one more question.

Answer for yourself: Who is greater and exalted; the one who anointed, or, the one who got anointed?

Since God anointed Jesus, God is the greater and exalted between the two, which we who study Scripture do truly believe. But surprisingly, the followers who say Jesus is "Christ" have confused Jesus with God because of the false teaching to which they have submitted..

"...Thy holy Servant Jesus, whom Thou didst anoint,..." (Acts 4:27 - New American Standard Bible).

This leaves no room for doubt that Jesus, "the Christ of God", was a "Servant of God" like all men and women who are born in hope of resurrecting and awakening the "indwelling Christ" within themselves.

Col 1:27 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

2 Cor 13:5 5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in "the" faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates? (KJV)

Let us not be reprobates but obedient children of the Most High God understanding what is "the faith" once given to the Saints had as its very center the Torah, the Law and Commandments of God, that trained to Soul unto Godliness and allow it to evolve into the "fullness and stature of Christ".

Now let us go to the second part of the above quoted verse (but he who does not obey the son shall not see life). Here emphasized for us is the admonition of "obeying the, Christ". Please read the following verse and ask yourself a question; have I obeyed?

"Truly, truly, I say to you, he who hears my word, and believes Him (YHVH) who sent me (Jesus/the Christ of God), has eternal life, and does not come into judgement, but has passed out of death into life." John 5:24

Answer for yourself: Have you believed and placed your trust basically, fundamentally and predominately in Him (YHVH) and His Word which is the Torah, Laws, and Commdments in the Hebrew Scriptures or in the Christological dogmas and teachings in the New Testament concerning the nature of Jesus? Are you aware that many of these religious dogmas that have attached themselves to Jesus over the centuries can be shown to be opposed by what Jesus taught elsewhere in the New Testament?

Jesus said; "But I do not seek my glory; there is One who seeks and judges" (YHVH) John 8:51.

Answer for yourself: Who is this "One", who is not Jesus? Is Jesus referring to God and not himself? Even though "the Christ" has incarnated in every person are we still to focus upon God and not His Christ? Yes, we are!

Answer for yourself: Have you basically, essentially and fundamentally glorified the "One" or Jesus due to false Christian theological dogmas that contract the Hebrew Scriptures?

Please remember, the "One" will be the Judge on the Day of Judgement and not this supposed historical Jesus. If you disbelieve or disobey the above word of Jesus, the Christ of God, the Divine Mind of God made real to mankind, please read the verse quoted by you and then think about the "wrath of God".

MORE TO THE POINT

Answer for yourself: How can we believe YHVH? What has YHVH said and when did He say it? Where should I go to see YHVH speaking?

Believe it or not we begin in ancient Egypt where we find the 42 Negative Confessions. These Negative Confessions come from Chapter CXXV of The Book of the Coming Forth by Light (commonly known as The Book of the Dead). One reason why the ancient Egyptian civilization lasted so incredibly long is that the religious culture promoted the peoples' everyday respect of each other, of themselves, of their Gods, and of all life. The Egyptians believed that if they adhered to social standards of behavior that they would go on to a place called the Celestial Fields in the afterlife. This belief is very much like modern religious structures of heaven and life after death. These 42 Negative Confession not only were taught by Moses to the children of Egyptians and Hebrews that intermarried and had a "mixed multitude" as the Bible speaks, but there were elaborate upon and enlarged under Moses. Thus, we continue at Sinai, for at Sinai God spoke to the whole of mankind his Torah and Law, which when obeyed, brings blessing and not curses. Beginning with Moses, then the prophets, we find the oracles of God handed down without corruption to God's people. Lastly, Jesus brings the full and final message for mankind. There is no new teaching or doctrines after Sinai and no one has the right to change them, even Jesus (of course he never did). So, today if a religious figure teaches you something which you can be shown to be contradicted by the Torah, the Writings, and the Prophets, run from this false teacher. To follow his doctrines and not God's will assures you of disobeying what Jesus, as the Christ of God revealed through Biblical Judaism, truly believed and taught. For Jesus, as the Christ of God, always did what pleased the Father, only saying what the Father said. Thus to accepted or participate in a belief system that is contrary to what Jesus both taught and modeled is sin and the wrath of God resides on those who do.

Answer for yourself: Can we find references to Jesus Christ in ancient Egypt thousands and thousands of years before the time given for the supposed "literal" and "historical" Jesus Christ? If so, then how could we possibly believe that the ancient Egyptians were looking forward to the coming of a Jewish Rabbi when the Jewish people would not exist for thousands of years? This stretches the limits of gullibility. Are we expected to believe that these references to Jesus Christ in ancient Egypt alluded to a later "literal" and "historical" person? I dare say "no"! That being certain, then what did these references to Jesus Christ refer and have we inherited these same teachings in our churches today regarding "the Christ"? How can you know that what is being taught to you in your church and through media today is the truth and not error? Do you even want the truth, especially when it appears so often to contradict the neat little traditions we inherited since childhood?

Well my friend, you cannot discern truth from falsehood unless you begin to study for yourself, for if the Holy Spirit was guiding all people into "all truth" and we were allowing ourselves to follow God's Spirit, then I dare say we would not have 80% of all Christians in the Catholic Church today practicing extreme idolatry nor would we have over 2,000 different and competing denominations of the Christian Church where unity is impossible and the existence of conflicting dogmas surrounding "the Christ".

Answer for yourself: Where is the leading of the Holy Spirit in the Catholic and Protestant churches which have long ago replaced the revelation of Sinai and the Old Testament with the dogmas of Rome in their New Testament which continually contradicts the Hebrew Scriptures, Scriptures a historical Jew of the first century would have used and cherished? Moses sure did!

Next, let us come to the correct understanding of "I Am The Way, The Truth, And The Life... No Man Commeth To The Father But By Me".

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "I AM THE WAY, THE TRUTH, AND THE LIFE...NO MAN COMETH TO THE FATHER BUT BY ME"

Jesus said: "I am the way, the truth, and the life:...no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." (Jn.14:6),

Answer for yourself: Is Salvation through Jesus, alone? Jesus states that he is "the way". What does this mean?

Most of us grew up in churches where we have been taught that "the way" refers to the "way to salvation" which we are told is easy. All one must do is believe in Jesus, his New Testament identity, and his resurrection from the dead for one's Eternal Life. You have heard all your life the expression, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and you shall be saved." Probably, you have heard very similar statements.

Some Preachers will tell you that you must realize that you have been a sinner.

Answer for yourself: But how does one realize one is a sinner if one does not know what sin is? Where do we find God's definition of sin? Do we ever confuse man's definition of sin with God's definition of sin? Are we guilty of following man's definition of sin instead of God's definition of sin?

No two people believe the same thing about what sin is or is not, in God's sight, unless they know God's own definition in His Word. God defined sin in the Torah, the Law and Commandments of Moses. How convenient for many Christians is the teaching that the Law has passed away and we are no longer under the Law of God, that we are under grace instead. For others, one person may after church light up a cigarette before he even gets to his car for the trip home, thinking little if anything about it . Another may believe smoking is a sin, and may be fighting the habit daily wanting to quit but unable to overcome the addiction. One person may enjoy a cocktail or a glass of wine with dinner, while another may look upon taking a single drop of any alcoholic beverage as a terrible sin. One person may enjoy dancing, while another may condemn any form of dancing as satanic but yet the Bible tells us that there is a time to dance: Eccl 3:4 4 A time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance; (KJV)

One person may enjoy a plate of shrimp and lobster, while people at the next table may look at the same dish with distaste, and would never eat shellfish or shrimp because they believe it would be a sin. One person may make out a shopping list, or gather up vegetables and produce and go to the farmer's market on Saturday, enjoying the busiest shopping day of the week while others would never think of doing so, because they know it is the Sabbath day, hallowed of God at creation, and holy time in which they are not to conduct their own business. Many millions of people believe "sin" is "something which is displeasing to God." On the list can be drinking, dancing, smoking, going to movies, reading the wrong kind of books, cussing, or being lazy, rude, thoughtless, and abusive toward your wife and children. Millions know it is a sin to steal, to be abusive toward their parents, or to murder. Others have no conscience whatsoever if they lie or cheat. But how many know the Bible definition of sin?

Some preachers will go on to say that you must receive Christ as your Savior, believe that he died for your sins, and that you must ask Him to forgive you of your sins and publicly acknowledge Him as your Savior. That, for most Christians, is all it takes to obtain eternal life and go to Heaven. I always thought to myself that it sure is "easy" to be saved! How attractive it all seemed! But, at times I would also wonder about this "easy believeism".

Answer for yourself: Is this easy salvation true? Is it really all that easy to be saved? What did Jesus Christ say? What did the first apostles say? What does your Bible say about how to be saved? Is such a profound thing as transitioning from human life to the Kingdom of God as "simple" as a thirty second theological prayer?

Answer for yourself: Is this really the "way" that Jesus desired we understand? No, not really. We find that the Greek words under our English translations tell us a completely different story regarding obtaining salvation. Let us break this verse down into individual Greek words and see what we find.

6 Jesus <2424> saith <3004> (5719) unto him <846>, I <1473> am <1510> (5748) the way <3598>, <2532> the truth <225>, and <2532> the life <2222>: no man <3762> cometh <2064> (5736) unto <4314> the Father <3962>, but <1508> by <1223> me <1700>.

If you want to know what the verses in your Bible truly say and how they impact you then it is imperative that you look up the English words in Greek or Hebrew Lexicons. Of greater importance are the "verbs" which often tell us what is required of man by God that he "must do" as well as the "nouns" which function both as subjects and direct objects of the verses in question.

3598 hodos {hod-os'} apparently a root word; TDNT - 5:42,666; n f AV - way 83, way side 8, journey 6, highway 3, misc 2; 102

- 1) properly
 - 1a) a way
 - 1a1) a traveled way, road
 - 1b) a travelers way, journey, traveling
- 2) metaph.
 - 2a) a course of conduct
 - 2b) a way (i.e. manner) of thinking, feeling, deciding

If we are wise students then the above definition of the word "the way" is of paramount importance for discerning the desired conduct of a child of God in this life. The Christ assures us that "He is the way" that man is to live once incarnated into material existence. We are told that the Soul's return to the Father God and His House is dependent upon how man travels through this life which has been imparted to him. Instead of a "mental ascent" to a creed or belief associated with theologies attached to the New Testament Jesus down through the centuries of the Catholic Church Councils, the important thing for a child of God in this life is "his conduct" in this life he has been given, the "manner of his thinking" along with how he "feels" about what he has come to learn in this life. Our feelings literally steer us in one direction after another and if we have learned truth then our lives and thinking steer us in ways that are counterproductive to our Spiritual growth and maturation. Therefore, how we "live" our lives, our conduct and behavior, day in and day out, are of great importance for our Soul's growth and evolution. If we have misunderstood the path for Spiritual growth and maturity then our conduct will be wayward and often we are not aware since being reassured by those we esteem Spiritual authorities in our lives that what we are doing and the decisions we are making are based upon God's will for our lives. Often, meaning well, we yet miss the mark of righteousness due to error taught as truth to us who fail to discern otherwise. Basically, living "like Jesus" and his example in the New Testament is more important than all the theologies created around his misunderstood nature by the Christian Church over the last 2,000 years. Rejecting Biblical Judaism and the Laws and Commandments of God, Roman Christianity has strayed from this Divine "course of conduct", substituting in place of "deeds" a laundry list of creeds and theologies which we have been falsely assured pleases God and guarantees our salvation if we adhere to them, believe them, and confess them. Lost in all of this aberrant theology associated with the nature of Jesus as "the Christ" is the importance and role of a person's conduct that makes him acceptable to God.

Notice that Jesus is not saying that belief "in him" or the theologies created about him is the way, but a course of behavior and conduct, a manner of thinking, feeling, and making decisions based upon Scripture which is the way that leads to eternal life. Again please take time to understand that a belief in Jesus's identity is a far cry from behaving like him or conducting yourself like him. The harsh reality soon hits home. Thinking and being told that we as traditional Christians are "followers of Jesus" the truth is that we are not followers of Jesus and the "Jewish Christ". Instead, we are followers of Church Tradition and Rome's corrupted texts in their Bible, texts that have falsely assured us that Church "creeds" have taken a greater priority with God than the conduct laid out for man and his Soul for his Earthly existence; all of which are laid out distinctly in the Laws and Commandments of God.

Answer for yourself: Since the greatest amount of theology surrounding Jesus refers to his identity and nature, then how can man "do" an identity, be it right or wrong? Can man's conduct in this life be dependent upon the identity of another, in this case the identity of Jesus as God as Rome him? Could it be that man's personal responsibility for his own Spiritual growth and maturity has been laid upon another, in this case Jesus who supposedly "does everything for mankind"?

Jesus states that he is the "truth." Let us investigate by studying this word "truth" and gather the implications that will help us better understand what is required of man. Let us remember as we do what God has already said regarding this matter in the Hebrew Scriptures:

Micah 6:8 8 He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee,

- but to do justly, and
- to love mercy, and
- to walk humbly with thy God? (KJV)

Notice if you these are 3 "verbs" requiring man to do certain things commanded of him by his Creator, none of which are optional.

Now, looking at John 14:6, we find in the Greek Lexicon that the English word for "truth" is the Strong's number 225.

225 aletheia {al-ay'-thi-a} from 227; TDNT - 1:232,37; n f AV - truth 107, truly + 1909 1, true 1, verity 1; 110

- 1) objectively
 - 1a) what is true in any matter under consideration
 - 1a1) truly, in truth, according to truth
 - 1a2) of a truth, in reality, in fact, certainly
 - 1b) what is true in things appertaining to God and the duties of man, moral and religious truth
 - 1b1) in the greatest latitude
 - 1b2) the true notions of God which are open to human reason without his supernatural intervention
 - 1c) the truth as taught in the Torah, respecting God and the execution of his purposes through Christ, and respecting the duties of man, opposing alike to the superstitions of the

Gentiles, and the corrupt opinions and precepts of false teachers even among Christians

- 2) subjectively
- 2a) truth as a personal excellence
- 2a1) that candor of mind which is free from affection, pretense, simulation, falsehood, deceit

The course of conduct as exhibited by Jesus during his life as depicted in the New Testament along with his teachings and message contain the "truths" referred to in this verse. The message and teachings of Jesus pertaining to God, the duties of man, and moral and religious truths within that message that constitute the "truth of God" that leads everyone to Eternal Life. Absent from all of this is emphasis upon the Cosmic quest of correctly understanding his identity. "Belief in Jesus" means not arriving at the correct understanding of who he is or was, whether or not he is the expected Jewish Messiah, whether or not he fulfilled the true Messianic prophecies, whether or not his death had any connection with atonement as Rome will avow but as Judaism denies, but instead, "believing in Jesus" is all about believing in message to mankind and choosing to pattern your life after his teachings. Notice also that this is something open to reason without the need for supernatural intervention and revelation. Needless to say, if revelation was intended to solve the problem of who Jesus was, or if the Holy Spirit was to lead us into all truth, then something is surely lacking today in light of the 2,000 different denominations that exist, where most teach and preach a variety of different interpretations of "Jesus". This is problematic for the "thinking believer" since we are told that there is "one faith", "the" faith, the one and only true faith given by God to man. The use of the definite article "the" indicates the unique "faith" that stands apart from all others and all counterfeits. Our job is find it and adhere to it in our life

The "truths" one is to follow, as lived out and modeled to us through the life and teaching of Jesus as depicted in the New Testament, is the truth which can be found in the Laws and Commandments of the Hebrew Torah, respecting God and the execution of His purposes. These Divine purposes are realized only in proportion to their fulfillment as the duties of man and his obedience to God and His Commadments. Notice also, that these "truths" are not superstitions of the Gentiles and teachings of the Jews outside the "mainstream and conservative" vein of their faith. In order words, it is not the "fringe" movements of Judaism to which we are to concern ourselves, movements like apocalyptic Messianism as seen with the Essenes, but rather traditional conservative Biblical Judaism. Also, we are not to concern ourselves with the corrupt opinions and precepts of false teachers, many of which find home among the Christian faith at well. The bottom line concerning these "truths" is the truths of Torah, and not "pseudo-truths" invented by Gentiles and syncretism of their traditions (blending of Torah and profane traditions).

Jesus also informs us that only through a course of behavior, conduct, and a manner of thinking, feeling, and making decisions based upon these "truth" is man to concern himself with what is true in things appertaining to God and how they affect the duties of man; both moral and religious truths, when found and adhered to as a course of conduct that leads through one's life, is the way in which we can expect to find "life."

We have been told that the example of Jesus, as depicted in the New Testament, is the example for all mankind of God's way for his life to be lived as well as God's truth for all mankind. Also, such a depiction of Jesus is the depiction of God's life that can be obtained for all mankind in this Earthly existence as well.

2222 zoe {dzo-ay'} from 2198; TDNT - 2:832,290; n f AV - life 133, lifetime 1; 134

1) life

1a) the state of one who is possessed of vitality or is animate

- 1b) every living soul

2) life

- 2a) of the absolute fullness of life, both essential and ethical, which belongs to God, and through him both to the hypostatic "logos" and to Christ in whom the "logos" put on human nature
- 2b) life real and genuine, a life active and vigorous, devoted to God, blessed, in the portion even in this world of those who put their trust in Christ, but after the resurrection to be consummated by new accessions (among them a more perfect body), and to last for ever.

"Real life" is that life lived in and through God in devotion to Him and His Word. Only through obedience to what God has said and faith in God to honor His word to mankind can we rest in the sure expectation of blessings from God in this life and rewards in the world to come [Eternal Life].

But this is not all.

Before Jesus spoke these words, he said something that is very important as well. It is recorded that he said: "In my Father's house are many mansions (dwelling places); if it were not so, I would have told you; for I go to prepare a mansion (a dwelling place) for you." (John 14:2).

The above explicit statement confirms that Jesus was going to prepare "a" mansion but not "all" the mansions in "his Father's house". Obviously, the prophets that came before him and the ones to come after, were to prepare the other mansions for their respective followers. God has many teachers, ministers, and ambassadors.

Answer for yourself: Who is your teacher? We should also realize that as those anointed of God teach us His Word and His commandments, they also, like Jesus' example, prepare a "potential" mansion and reward for us. The only thing lacking is our acceptance of their message along with faith and obedience to what we have been instructed.

The prophets that came after Jesus had evidently shown the current "way" to other mansions in the kingdom of heaven to their hearers as well. Heeding the message is of utmost importance.

Besides; the verse clearly states; Jesus was the "WAY" to a mansion [Eternal Life]. Understanding that such a "way" (as previously instructed) means a course of behavior and conduct, a manner of thinking, feeling, and making decisions concerning what is true in things appertaining to God and the duties of man, moral and religious truths...can we expect to find "life." It is a folly to believe that Jesus (or any prophet or teacher) was the "DESTINATION".

The "way" is not to Jesus, but through following his example and the "way" he modeled for all mankind, will we find our "way" to our mansion and Eternal Life in God!

Jesus said; "I am the door" to find the pasture. (Jn.10:9). A sheep that walks through the "door" will find the pasture. A sheep that circles around the "door" will never find the pasture. One who crosses over and follows the "way" will reach the mansion. Anyone that stops on the "way" and believes the one who shows the "way" is the end of his/her journey, will be out in the open without any shelter and a roof.

Jesus said; "Not every one that says to me; `Lord, Lord,' will enter the kingdom of heaven; but he who does the will of my Father, who is in heaven" (Mt.7:21). Notice if you will the emphasis upon "doing" and not just "believing". Again, James is vindicated since saying "faith without works (works defined by God in His Torah, Law, and Commandments), is dead. A "dead" faith cannot save.

Answer for yourself: Is following and doing "the will of the Father" the same as agreement with religious creeds created about the identity and nature of Jesus as "the Christ" as Rome saw it over the early centuries of the Gentile Church or is it accepting God's religious belief system and living life as God laid it out for the whole of mankind in the 42 Negative Confessions of ancient Egypt which Moses elaborate upon and enlarged in the Laws of Moses (contained within these Laws were the 7 Laws of Noah, the Torah for the non-Jew as well). That is what you must decide.

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "IF YOU CONFESS JESUS AS LORD...YOU SHALL BE SAVED"

In the Epistle of Paul to Romans, it reads; "that if you confess with your mouth Jesus as Lord, and believe in your heart that God raised him from the dead, you shall be saved; for with the heart man believes, resulting in righteousness, and with the mouth he confesses, resulting in salvation." (Roman 10:9-10, NASB).

Before we address this important passage form Roman 10:9-10 a lot of background information is needed before we can deal with this most important "theological" passage which is the cornerstone of the Christian "salvation message".

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that according to Brooke Westcott, published in 1855 the very first edition of his book dealing with the history of the New Testament Canon? Westcott's book is yet today a classic and was frequently revised and expanded. It became the standard English work on the subject, and stated within it that Marcion's Canon of the New Testament is "the first of which there is any record" (A General Survey of the History of the Canon of the New Testament (London: Macmillan, 1896), p. 318). Westcott goes on to relate that this earlier canon of Marcion which is the first New Testament existed 30 years before Irenaeus will later come out with his rebuttal which can be termed the Second New Testament; a revised work created in response to Marcion's Gnostic New Testament? You can locate such information in many books today if you know to study, but the Christian Churches of today are focused upon "preaching" and not "study" and such information rarely sees the light of day in our current age. We fail to remember that according to Paul the gift of the "teacher" is Gift of the Holy Spirit and not the preacher. If the teacher does his work then the hearers, the congregation, become the preachers.

Everybody likes a "first edition" book and stand around the block quite often to get one. Well, Walter Bauer found in Marcion himself, "the first systematic collector of Paul's literary remains" (Walter Bauer, in Appendix II of John Knox, Marcion and the New Testament (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1942), p. 172. It is these "second" collections of Pauline Epistles which will be altered and forged in many places. Sadly, it is these we have been given today and without a good deal of scholarship on your part one cannot separate the "true Paul and his beliefs of the Christ" from the "Romanized Paul" and his "aberrant theologies" which are so common today. John Knox has also written that the Books of Luke and Acts were written in the late second century to replace or counteract Marcion's theologies expressed in the earlier Gnostic Christianity regarding "the Christ" as found in his Luke (Knox, Marcion, p. 114-139).

Relatively little is known about Marcion (d. c. 160) because his "supposed heresy" in the views of the Roman Church was put down and his works were destroyed, or lost, or both. What is known of his life, writings and theology are found, or founded upon, the works of his enemies and opposition: Justin Martyr (110-165), Irenaeus (120-202), Epiphanius (ca. 315-403) and especially Tertullian (145-220) who encountered Marcion half a century after his death (Against Marcion and On Prescriptions Against Heretics).

Justin Martyr made the earliest known contemporary reference to Marcion in his Apology. Justin wrote, "And there is Marcion a man of Pontus, who is even at this day alive, and teaching his disciples to believe in some other god greater than the Creator. And he, by the aid of the devils, has caused many of every nation to speak blasphemies, and to deny that God is the maker of this universe, and to assert that some other being, greater than He, has done greater works". Justin goes on to state "All who take their opinions from these men, are, as we before said, called Christians" (Justin Martyr, First Apology, 26, in Apostolic Fathers, vol. 1, edited by Cleveland A. Coxe (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1981), p. 171). Notice that men with variant interpretations of "the Christ", although they disagreed with the later Roman view of "the Christ", were yet called "Christians" by the opposition. These earlier Christian Gnostics like Marcion and Paul understood cosmology in ways that Rome would never accept. By that, I mean a Godhead made up of many "gods" all of which Comprise the Absolute God. In other words, as we have many "cells" in our bodies making up the total person, so God as well is a Unity of Diversity, all of which comprise the Whole of God. That is why Genesis speaks of the Elohim, as "God" in the plural. Let us not forget the important passage "Let US" which states categorically that God is a Diversity of Living Spirits/Energies all of which make up the Unity we call God.

Without getting to technical, Gnosticism teaches emanationism which is a teaching involving the plurality of the Godhead. Here, Marcion, struggling with the existence of evil but yet a supposed perfect and loving God, justified the existence of evil by not laying its origin at the feet of the ultimate God, rather instead laying it a the feet of lesser gods which were, somewhat removed from the Absolute and associated with "matter" were the culprits but yet even so were obedient to the Absolute God of all. There was no "war" going on between God and "Matter"; yet there were opposing "cosmic forces, principalities, and powers" in a balance or tension at best. Needless to say, what will later become Roman Christianity will not accept emanationism of the ancient Wisdom Religions or Gnosticism. In so doing they dismiss Marcion's understanding of Cosmology but at the same time yet recognized that although his views of creation differed from theirs, he was yet a "Christian" as were they.

Marcion's Canon demonstrated a two-fold division: The Gospel and The Apostle. The Gospel was an short version of what will be recognized later as the familiar Gospel of Luke to most but of a smaller size and The Apostle which was composed of ten Pauline Epistles. Marcion's arrangement of the letters in The Apostle were as follows: Galatians, 1 and 2 Corinthians combined, Romans, 1 and 2 Thessalonians combined, Laodiceans (Ephesians), Colossians, Philippians, and Philemon.

The lone written work of Marcion was Antitheses. This non-extant work was cited by Tertullian in Against Marcion. Marcion's Antitheses sought to demonstrate the contradictions between the Hebrew Bible and Christian writings and the conflict between their two different Gods (the tension between these two opposing but yet balanced Cosmic Energies). Marcion implies that there are in balance in the cosmos two opposing powers and calls them the God of wrath (death/destruction) and the God of love (birth/life). Marcion saw the God of wrath taught by the Old Testament but the God of love taught by "the Christ" symbolized by the New Testament Jesus. Tertullian wrote, "These are Marcion's Antitheses, or contradictory propositions, which aim at committing the gospel to a variance with the law, in order that from the diversity of the two documents which contain them, they may contend for a diversity of gods also" (Tertullian, Against Marcion 1.19, Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. 3, 285.12). What was allegorical for Marcion and metaphysical to the core was interpreted as if "literal" by Rome and now, failing to understand Marcion's true stance, he is sadly credited in believing in "two different gods" which is not true.

Opinion is divided today due to the fact that the earlier Marcion's canon of the New Testament is lacking much when compared to the later version by the hands of Irenaeus in 180 C.E. Some scholars suggested that Marcion's base text was lacking, others do not. Some suggested that Marcion purposefully omitted parts of the texts because of his theology. And some scholars provided for both. Contrary to some scholars today, Westcott did not believe Marcion altered the Pauline Epistles. He wrote, "Marcion preserved without alteration the text which he found in his Manuscript" (Westcott, History of the Canon, p. 320).

In Marcion's Canon, eight of Paul's ten epistles were basically the same as modern texts. Galatians and Romans, however were very different. Marcion's Galatians lacked Paul's interaction with Peter and James in Jerusalem (1:18-24), the account of Abraham's faithfulness (3:6-9), and other passages: 2:6-9a; 3:1-12,14a,15-25; 4:27-30.

Answer for yourself: Are you listening attentively to what is being said? Well, you better now! Please pay attention as the following has terrific theological implications for our current study. The earliest collection of Pauline Epistles by Marcion that were in existence in 150 C.E. did not contain many of the verses that are in our Book of Romans today. Absent from the earliest version of Romans collected by Marcion are the verses 1:17b, 1:19-21, 3:31-4:25, 8:19-22, 9:1-33,. But it is staggering, almost unbelievable, to know that the verses comprising Romans chapter ten, beginning at verse 5 through chapter 11, verse 32, were not in the original collection of the Book of Romans. 10:5-11:32. Lacking as well were all of chapters 15 and 16.26.

Answer for yourself: What does this mean? It means that one of the most important supposed theological teachings in the New Testament, Romans 10:9-10, was not included in the earliest versions of the New Testament. Let me say it again, all the "theology" that is expressed in Romans from chapter 10:5 through chapter 11:32 is suspect to say the least. There was no Romans 10:5-11:32 that Paul wrote or Marcion, who believed that Paul was the only true expression of the teachings of "the Christ" would have collected them and included them in his First New Testament. There are simply not there!

One more time. The often quoted passage from Rom 10:9-10 9 that states "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. 10 For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation" was not in the original Pauline writings.

To a "thinking-believer" that awesome piece of knowledge means that the very important passage of Romans 10:9-10, did not exist in the first and earliest collection of the Pauline writings gathered by Marcion in 150 C.E. The passage stating that all that a person has to do to be "saved" is to confess with his mouth that Jesus is "Lord" and "believe" a settled theological creed about Jesus thereby giving mental assent to a belief connected with the resurrection of this Jesus from the dead was not in the earliest collection of the Book of Romans in 150 C.E. But miraculously is shows up some 30 years later at the hands of Irenaeus when he published his retort to Marcion's First New Testament, which was Gnostic to the very core. "Easy believeism" has now been created by Rome to replace, as we have seen, the adherence of a conduct pleasing to God based upon one's adherence and obedience to the Laws and Commandments of God in order to secure for oneself "salvation".

To "confess", is the Greek word "homologeo (homo=same; logeo=from a verb which means to say, to speak") and thus it means "to say the same thing as another, to agree with another person." In reality we are to confess about the New Testament Jesus what the New Testament texts are made to say. The believer is to confess Christ before men (Matt. 10:32) which means that he is to vocally and publicly agree with what God has said concerning His Son (1 John 5:9-12). At the heart of such confession of these religious dogmas lie the reliability of the texts which we have inherited. Of course to find what God has said about "His Son" is to be found today basically in the Roman New Testament which is beginning, the more and more we study it, to be suspect as a forgery, not only misquoting, misapplying, and mistranslating and inventing the Hebrew Scriptures, but the "theology" surrounding "the Christ" is of suspect as well as it came down the corridors of the Church Councils. We have been taught that God has said, "This is My beloved Son" (Matt. 17:5) and the believer who confesses Christ is in understood to be agreement with that statement (1 John 4:15). We are told that God the Son came into the world and took upon Himself human flesh (John 1:14) so that He could die for sinful men (1 Tim. 1:15), and the believer who confesses Christ is in agreement with this fact (1 John 4:2-3). We have been told in our current New Testament that "the Christ" was limited to but one person, a Jewish Rabbi of the first century. However, had one read Marcion's New Testament, he would have understood that the "Jesus Story" is a Divine Allegory paralleling the prior sungods that expressed the metaphysical belief that "the Christ" had allegorically died when "falling into material manifestation and flesh" and the whole of the "Jesus Story" was concerned with the Descent of the Soul/Christ into humanity and its final ascent back to its Father's House at the death of this physical body which provided the vehicle for the Soul's evolution. For Roman Christianity to confess that Jesus is the Christ means that a person agrees that a "literal", "physical" and "historical" Jesus is indeed the Messiah (John 1:41; 4:25-26,42). But as shown on many other of Bet Emet Websites the forgery of the Hebrew Scriptures as used in the New Testament makes such a confession impossible if one possesses adequate knowledge concerning the true Hebrew Scriptures and the ancient Wisdom Religions that all but vanished at the hands of Rome during the 2nd through the 5th centuries.

The absence of this passage, Romans 10: 9-10, from the existing Book of Romans in 150 C.E. is rather strange since Marcion was a Pauline advocate and this most important passage would have been a "key" passage to use in his attacks upon the Jews had it existed at that time. But copies of Marcion's New Testament as delineated by many Orthodox Church Fathers and the collection of the Pauline epistles from that time reveal that almost all of Romans 9-11 is completely "absent" from the earliest collection of the Book of Romans in 150 C.E. But for the sake of argument and for teaching purposes, we will treat this most important passage today as if it were really written by Paul much earlier.

Answer for yourself: We are indoctrinated growing up in the Christian Church that salvation is assured to us as "Christians" because we confess with our mouth and heart certain "religious beliefs" about Jesus, but does this actually obtain God's salvation for us when the Hebrew Scriptures teach otherwise? What did Moses and the Prophets have to say about obtaining God's salvation? Why are there two different and conflicting "salvation messages" that oppose one another when looking at Judaism and Rome with their version of Christianity? What did Jesus have to say about salvation and did his teachings support those of Christianity or Judaism?

Answer for yourself: What do non-Christians do for their salvation?

Needless to say, Romans 10:9-10, due to its easy accomplishment via "mental ascent" to a dogma or dogmas, is a preferred verse with the evangelical missionaries for obvious reason. Faith "in dogmas" saves; there is no need for "works" or "acceptable works" as defined by the Torah. "Faith alone" is one of the basics of the Christianity supposedly propagated by Paul and needs to be addressed in detail and from various perspectives.

First of all, Marcion did not collect Romans 10: 9-10 because it did not exist in his day and time but would some 30 years later when Roman Orthodoxy, Irenaeus in particular who gave us the Second New Testament, got on board with their rejection of ancient cosmology expressed through the earliest Christian Gnostics and created their "Second New Testament" to contradict Marcion's first collection of the Pauline writings.

While reading a passage from an Epistle one has to bear in mind that these letters when written by the author, were a sort of discourse containing religious instructions and admonitions to a certain group of people or persons, and, were not intended to form a part and parcel of any Canonical Scripture. Rome turned these into Scripture to counter the Torah of the Hebrews. This being so, that explains what that "this" particular verse was not in the original writings of Paul which is today called "Romans" or when the first canon was collected by Marcion in 150 C.E., only to surface in 180 C.E. since being added to Romans by others as they created, step by step, their Replacement Religion to replace Judaism.

To substantiate the above claim, please read 1 Corin 7:25-26 and 7:40. Here Paul writes; "I give an opinion"; "in my opinion" and "I think" (twice). Whereas, "the Christ", as seen in the "Jesus Story", states: "...and I do nothing on my own initiative, but I speak these things as the Father taught me." (John 8:28). One has to differentiate "my opinion" and "my thought" from the "inspired" or the divinely "tutored" document.

Now let us go past Roman 10:9-10, the verses quoted in the above question. Please continue reading the succeeding verses, which say;

"For the Scripture says, `Whoever believes in Him will not be disappointed.' For there is no distinction between Jew and Greek; for the same Lord is Lord of all, abounding in riches for all who call upon Him; for `Whoever will call upon the name of the Lord will be saved." (Roman 10:11-13).

Please note that the editors of the New Testament have created confusion by translating the Greek word "Theos" (meaning, God) as "Lord". In the Hebrew Scriptures we find the admonition to call upon the name of the LORD (God/Yahweh) and now in the New Testament we are to call upon the name of the Lord (small L) which is intended to make the reader think "Jesus". Using the same verses structure as a quote "Yehovah" (LORD) has been changed to "Kurios" (Lord). The Greek word "Kurios" means master, owner, or head of a house which is a far cry from Yehovah! Again, creative theology is before easily recognized by those who know the Hebrew Scriptures. We are to call upon the name of God/Yehovah, not "Jesus". For those who consider Jesus to be God, in a post-Nicean world where Jesus was made "God", it may not make any difference, but for the rest of us who knows better it sure does!

To resolve the dilemma as to who is this "the same Lord" who is the Lord of Jews, of Greeks and of all; let us go to verses 3:29-30 in the same Epistle. It reads;

"Or is God the God of Jews only? Is He not the God of Gentiles also? Yes, of Gentiles also-if indeed God is one- and He will justify the circumcised by faith and the uncircumcised through faith."

Jews never accepted Jesus as their Prophet or Messiah, let alone accepting him as their Lord (Master) or as their Lord (God). So, "Lord Jesus" is out of the picture, leaving "Lord the God" to be the "one God" of all.

To answer this specific question, the verse above reads;

"Whoever will call upon the name of the Lord (Lord of all) will be saved."

We at Bet Emet call upon the name of that Almighty God, the God of all, who pronounced His Commands to Adam, Noah, Abraham, Ishmael, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, David, Solomon, Jesus, and many others.

The verses that we have originally quoted has one very portentous underlying theme which you probably might have over looked. It says; "and (if you) believe in your heart that God raised him from the dead, you shall be saved." This sentence conveys there were two separate entities at work here:

- One called Jesus, who was dead and lying motionless in a tomb.
- One called God, who was Eternally living and alive and able to perform acts.

The entity (a) raised the entity (b) that was in an agony. "And God raised him up again, putting an end to the agony of death..." Acts 2:24.

I hope you will henceforth recognize "the dead" and "the alive" to be two distinct entities and "un-equal", whenever you think of the "Risen Jesus".

Answer for yourself: Would it not be an unfair practice on part of the Almighty God to have sent His son as a "Saviour to all" thousands of years after Adam and not provides this "easy believeism" to the Old Testament Saints?

Answer for yourself: Did not that deprive those born before the Christian Era of "the easy way out" for their Salvation? God cannot be unfair. He is a Righteous God. Is this whole and entire concept expressed in Romans 10:9-10 a Roman theological creation and innovation? It sure is.

Tom Harpur, a former professor of New Testament and an Anglican Minister writes;

"Perhaps I am lacking in piety or some basic instinct, but I know I am not alone in finding the idea of Jesus's death as atonement for the sins of all humanity on one level bewildering and on the other morally repugnant. Jesus never to my knowledge said anything to indicate that forgiveness from God could only be granted "after" or "because of' the cross." (For Christ's Sake, p.75).

"And there is no other God besides Me, A righteous God and a Saviour; There is none except Me. `Turn to Me, and be saved, all the ends of the earth; For I am God, and there is no other." Isaiah 45:21-22. (please also read Hosea 13:4). When God said; "all the ends of the earth" He righteously meant it to be so. The era of "cross" should make no difference.

Let us continue as we consider "And They Worshipped Him" (Jesus).

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "AND THEY WORSHIPPED HIM (JESUS)"

Answer for yourself: Who is man to worship? Who in the New Testament worshipped Jesus? Are we to worship Jesus as the many texts in English leads us to believe? What does "worship" mean in these New Testament passages? Are we to worship Jesus as we worship God? Who is this Jesus in the New Testament? Is he a historical Jewish Rabbi who was believed by many to be the Jewish Messiah as our Church tradition attests? Or was this Jesus the personification of the Descent of the Soul into "material existence" as were the other nation's stories of Divine Saviors that line the books of comparative religions which are so misunderstood by mainline Christianity today? Who do men say this Jesus is and can we ever know for sure?

Because the worship of God is a weighty thing, and there have been (and still are) so many errors about it, and the errors therein are of such dangerous consequence, both in relation to men's eternal estate hereafter, and to their right constitution, peace, and welfare in this world therefore is it on my heart, to answer some questions concerning the worship of God which are in great need of a correct answer. Inherited church tradition is one thing but it is never to be a substitute for "truth". The only religion that God ever gave mankind is "truth". The Gospel of John 4:23 states: "the Father seeketh such to worship him,". Evidently there is a capacity to be found in man to make him a worshipper of God. It appears from such a passage that God requires this of man. The problem we deal with is this article deals with the apparent worship of Jesus in the New Testament and if this "worship of Jesus" is to likened to the worship of God.

Seminary long ago showed me the history of the church much of which involved the debate over issues of worship. Factions and sects within Christianity had often quite different ideas on the subject and were unable to persuade one another. Unable to find unity one faction would say to the others, "Well, you worship God in your way, and I will worship him in his." We may smile at that comment, but we need to remember how varied are the forms of worship that churches have practiced and how vehement debate over worship sometimes has been. The debate over the use of icons in the eighth and ninth centuries led to violence in the Eastern church. Differences over worship in the sixteenth century were part of what divided Protestant from Roman Catholic Christianity, a division that continues to our day. Among contemporary Protestants we find significant differences in worship. Some forms of worship are filled with formal ceremony and ritual, while others are very casual and informal. Some are noisy and boisterous, while others are quiet and contemplative. Some take place in beautiful cathedrals, while others occur in warehouses or fields. In the midst of such diversity Christians sometimes ask if worship is simply a matter of taste.

Answer for yourself: Are all forms of worship equally pleasing to God as long as the worshipers are sincere? Or is there an intended "pattern" of worship in the Bible for all mankind that most Christians never notice? Are some ways of worship acceptable by God and others not? The question of what pleases God in worship comes with special urgency in our time since in the last few decades American Protestants have seen more changes in worship forms than in any similar period since the sixteenth century. The result is that some congregations and denominations have experienced serious conflicts over worship. Churches have split and individuals have moved from congregation to congregation, all over different views of worship. It has been said by many Christians that " to worship Christ in any form cannot be wrong." But is this correct when the Hebrew Scriptures teach only the worship of God is acceptable? Accepting Nicean theology man have assumed and maintained that since they "believe" that the Lord Jesus while on earth was really worshiped" as the New Testament says and that the worship of Jesus as God is proper and acceptable. They reason such since being taught that Jesus was God as some New Testament texts state.

Well, the answers to the opening questions concerning worship are not always easy to ascertain and certainly cannot be addressed in sufficient manner by just one article and teaching. But let us focus on the smaller questions involving the worship of Jesus which is often depicted in the New Testament. If we examine the New Testament we find references, for example, of angels in Hebrews 1:6 who worshipped Jesus and to disciples who worshipped Jesus in Matthew 14:33, 28:9, 28:17. We find similar examples of people who worshipped Jesus in Luke 24:52. We find wise men who worshipped Jesus in Matthew 2:2 and 2:11. We find a leper a leper in Matthew 8:2 who worshipped Jesus, a ruler who worshipped Jesus in Matthew 9:18, and a woman of Canaan who worshipped Jesus in Matthew 15:25. We even find the Mother of Zebedee's children who worshipped Jesus in Matthew 20:20 and a blind man who worshipped Jesus in John 9:38.

It is significant and very enlightening that when Paul and Barnabas were in Lystra and miraculously healed a man by God's mighty power, those in the crowd shouted, "The gods have come down to us in human form" (Acts 14:11). When Paul and Barnabas perceived that the people were preparing to worship them, "they tore their clothes and rushed out into the crowd, shouting: 'Men, why are you doing this? We too are only men, human like you'" (v. 15).

By contrast, Jesus never sought to correct His followers, or "set them straight," when they bowed down and worshiped Him. Indeed, Jesus considered such worship as perfectly appropriate. Of course, we wouldn't expect Jesus to try to correct people in worshiping Him if He truly was God in the flesh. Revelation 4:10, speaks of worshiping the Father, and Revelation 5:11-14, speaks of worshiping the Lamb of God, Jesus Christ. You might then ask what Revelation 5:11-14 has to say about Jesus' true identity since he is seen receiving the "same worship" that is given to the Father? But since this is apocalyptic and mystical language does carry the same authority as do other types of Scripture? Well, the Jewish people and Rabbis sure didn't give authority to apocalyptic Scriptures? What did they know that separated apocalyptic Scriptures like the Book of Daniel from other texts, so much so that the Book of Daniel was not included with the Prophets but the Writings in the Hebrew Scriptures. Are Christians to give ultimate authority to such apocalyptic writings in the New Testament?

Answer for yourself: If we were to take all these examples it would appear, at first glance, that it is permissible if not necessary that we worship Jesus. But are we really? Are we missing something here? Have we failed to understand these English words for "worship" when taken back to the Greek and Hebrew of our Bibles? What are we do to when the Hebrew Scriptures make it very clear, at least in the English versions of the Bible, that man is to worship only God and in certain prescribed ways?

Answer for yourself: What are the origins of Christology in the first century and its relation to Jewish monotheism? What role did the cultural background in which early Christianity grappled with the meaning of the life, death, and resurrection of the "gods" (also Jesus) play in the interpretation of the worship of "the gods" (also Jesus)? What influence did Divine Mediator Figures and their traditions in the Biblical World, divine, divinized, and exalted figures who served as mediators between God and human beings, such as Michael, Enoch, Solomon, and the Sibyl play in the biblical and parabiblical literature of approximately the Second Temple period in engendering their worship by man? Did these stories of resurrected gods lead to the likewise later veneration and assumed worship of Jesus and to New Testament Christology?

Answer for yourself: How are we to reconcile the worship of Jesus when we also read:

Exod 34:14 14 For thou shalt worship no other god: for the LORD, whose name is Jealous, is a

jealous God: (KJV)

Matt 4:10 10 Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: But, what about Jesus? Does Jesus rank as One who is worthy to receive our worship? After all, Christians for thousands of years have worshiped Him. Are they in gross error? Are they to blame of a serious sin? Are we? The best way to find out is to approach the bible and see what it says about this topic.

First of all let us start with the Torah. The Hebrew Scriptures teach us that God has commanded us to worship only Him (Deuteronomy 6:13).

6:13 Thou shalt fear the LORD thy God, and serve him, and shalt swear by his name. 6:14 Ye shall not go after other gods, of the gods of the people which [are] round about you;

Answer for yourself: Even Jesus knew this, since he quoted this to Satan from the Hebrew Tanakh when he was tempted (Matthew 4:10). Of course this is allegorical but the truth remains; we are to worship only God.

Yet, if Jesus is God, as Christian theology maintains since the Council of Nicea, are we to worship him?

Answer for yourself: Why didn't Jesus ever admonish or correct anyone when they worshipped Him if he believed that we are to worship only God?

Answer for yourself: Since worshipping any one other than God is a fundamental grave sin and renders one guilty of idolatry and blasphemy of the Name of God according to the Torah, why didn't Jesus stop these people from worshipping him, unless he was God himself? Or, at least that is what it appears according to the New Testament texts. But, is Jesus God? What do these contradicting texts really say? Is "the Christ" God or only part of God?

Matt 2:2 2 Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him. (KJV)

Matt 2:11 11 And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh. (KJV)

Matt 14:33 33 Then they that were in the ship came and worshipped him, saying, Of a truth thou art the Son of God. (KJV)

Matt 28:9 9 And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him. (KJV)

Matt 28:17 17 And when they saw him, they worshipped him: but some doubted. (KJV)

John 9:38 38 And he said, Lord, I believe. And he worshipped him. (KJV)

Heb 1:6 6 And again, when he bringeth in the firstbegotten into the world, he saith, And let all the angels of God worship him. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What is so unique about the Greek words above for "worship" or "worshipped" in relationship with Jesus?

The Greek word for worship that is used in all the above verses is proskuneo (worshipped, Strong's No. 4352.

We need to look closely as to what "proskuneo" actually meant especially since it is translated as the general term "worship" in relation to Jesus in the New Testament.

4352 proskuneo {pros-koo-neh'-o} from 4314 and a probable derivative of 2965 (meaning to kiss, like a dog licking his master's hand); TDNT - 6:758,948; v AV - worship 60; 60

- 1) to kiss the hand to (towards) one, in token of reverence
- 2) among the Orientals, esp. the Persians, to fall upon the knees and touch the ground with the forehead as an expression of profound reverence
- 3) in the NT by kneeling or prostration to do homage (to one) or make obeisance, whether in order to express respect or to make supplication
 - 3a) used of homage shown to men and beings of superior rank
 - 3a1) to the Jewish high priests
 - 3a2) to God

Obviously, the KJV translators chose to translate this word and its multiple cultural meanings as "worship" and in so doing have blurred the distinction between Jesus and God in relationship to "worship". The New World Translation , however, chose to translate this word as obeisance (honor, respect) in all the above verses listed above thereby discerning the difference between man and God. What becomes interesting about the New World Translation of the New Testament is that whenever the same Greek word, "proskuneo", is used in relation to the Father, the translators translated it as "worship", but yet rendered it differently in relation to Jesus.

Answer for yourself: Is this a double standard? Is the New World Translation justified in translating this word 2 different ways; as obeisance to Jesus and as worship to the Father? Should we know this difference and apply it in only those verses dealing with Jesus? I believe we must!

It would appear that behind the Greek word for "worshipped", Strong's number 4352, is a "gold mine" of information that might settle this enigma concerning the worship of Jesus. For your information, and I will let the "cat out of the bag" early, none of those above who supposedly "worshipped Jesus" in these New Testament references above actually "worshipped" Jesus in the spiritual sense of the word! And neither should we! But you would never know that from the English word "worship" and its traditional religious meaning in our culture and typical religious use in Christianity today. One would have to look the English word for "worship" up in a Greek Lexicon like Strong's Concordance or Thayer's Greek Lexicon before he would discover the core ideas expressed in the Greek word for "worship" especially when applied to Jesus. But few do. Only when leaning on our own understanding of the English words of our Bibles instead of the original words in the Hebrew and Greek, English words conditioned by years of incorrect and erroneous preaching and sermons, are we led astray and deceived into worshipping Jesus instead of channeling all our worship to God the Father instead. I know that this will be hard for many of you to accept, but the inspired words of our Bible, when correctly understood and interpreted, don't lie and tell a very different story than our inherited Christian tradition does.

According to the lexical aids to the Bible, the proper Greek word for "worship" is "sebomai" (4576) from the root "seb". That word "sebomai" is used by apostle Matthew in 15:9 where Jesus said; "But in vain do they worship me,..." In this verse he refers not to the worship of himself, but God, Yahweh! As you see the Biblical context as well as the original words of the ancients writers of these Scriptures are so very, very important in discerning truth from error. Let us continue this very important study since it goes to the very heart of our relationship with God; one based upon obedience or idolatry depending on how we have understood and responded to the New Testament word "worship" as both used in the New Testament and applied to Jesus.

TO WHOM WAS JESUS REFERRING WHEN HE REFERENCED ISA. 29:13?

From the Hebrew Scriptures and Isaiah 29:13 we read:

Wherefore the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men:

First of all we need to know how rabbis taught. One method of instruction was to use "rhemez" which is a reference back to something previously known by those to whom on is speaking. This is what Jesus is doing in the following verse as taken from the New Testament. He is referring to God and not himself.

Matthew 15:9 9 But <1161> in vain <3155> they do worship <4576> (5736) me (Jehovah-YHWH) <3165>, teaching <1321> (5723) [for] doctrines <1319> the commandments <1778> of men <444>

In this reference taken from Matt. 15:9 we find one of the 4 methods of interpreting the Hebrew Scriptures as taught by the Rabbis. Here we find the use of "rhemez" which points back to a previous teaching in the Hebrew Scriptures. It is where, in the Hebrew behind the Greek, that we see that Jesus refers back to a very common Hebrew Scripture known by all Jews when he states that the people of God, the Jews, "in vain worship God". It is here that Isaiah was speaking of His people failing to worship God (Yehovah) correctly and is not used in relation to the worship of a man or Messiah.

This is a classical rhemez in Jewish thinking and teaching. Matt. 15:9 is not what we would call an exact "quote" but a reference to a well known passage in the minds of the Jewish people which would trigger in the minds of Jesus's hearers the particular verse in the Hebrew Scriptures to which he was making reference without exactly quoting it. We need first of all to understand the word "worship" as taken from the verse to which Jesus referred.

The Greek word for "worship" used in the New Testament as in "worshipping God", as taken from the theological concept previously expressed by Isaiah, 29:13 is as follows:

4576 sebomai {seb'-om-ahee} middle voice of an apparently primary verb; TDNT - 7:169,1010; v AV - worship 6, devout 3, religious 1; 10

- 1) to revere, to worship (general sense)

Jesus only referred back to Isaiah 29:13 in the verse Matthew 15:9 and was not referring to himself. I cannot tell you have many Christians I have spoken with these many years who read this passage incorrectly and believe that Jesus is referring to himself in this verse since it includes the word "me". Nothing could be further from the truth. Jesus is referring to the worship of God only in Matthew 15:9

There is little question that the "me" of Isaiah 29:13 would have referred to only God and not to Jesus. We must never forget that in that the Matthew 15:9 passage that the "me" does NOT refer to Jesus, but rather refers to YHWH since it is an Old Testament verse which is alluded to by Jesus "as a general quote" to teach those that of his day that what they were doing was not being accepted by God the Father as worship in Spirit and in Truth. Let us never forget that Jesus is quoting the prophet Isaiah in chapter 29:13 and the reference is to worshipping God and not a person:

13 Wherefore the Lord <136> said <559> (8799), Forasmuch <3282> as this people <5971> draw near <5066> (8738) [me] with their mouth <6310>, and with their lips <8193> do honour <3513> (8765) me, but have removed <7368> <0> their heart <3820> far <7368> (8765) from me, and their fear <3374> toward me is taught <3925> (8794) by the precept <4687> of men <582>:

The Hebrew for "draw near" is important.

The Hebrew word for "draw near" is as follows:

Lexicon Hebrew Strong's number is 5066 05066 nagash {naw-gash'} a primitive root; TWOT - 1297; v

AV - (come, draw, etc)..near 55, come 14, (come, draw, etc)..nigh 12, bring 13, ... hither 7, offer 7, approach 5, forth 3, misc 9; 125

- 1) to draw near, approach
 - 1a) (Qal) to draw or come near
 - 1a1) of humans
 - 1a1a) of sexual intercourse
 - 1a2) of inanimate subject
 - 1a2a) to approach one another
 - 1b) (Niphal) to draw near
 - 1c) (Hiphil) to cause to approach, bring near, bring
 - 1d) (Hophal) to be brought near
 - 1e) (Hithpael) to draw near

We find in this Hebrew word the illusion to the intimacy of the worship of God by man where it is likened in the Hebrew to the most intimate relationship that a man and woman can achieve, a union of both "selves" in which both parties become "one". This is true unity with God.

The Hebrew word for "do honour" is as follows:

Lexicon Hebrew 3513 03513 kabad {kaw-bad'} or kabed {kaw-bade'} a primitive root; TWOT - 943; v

The Hebrew word for "and their fear" is as follows:

 - 1a) fear, terror
 - 1b) awesome or terrifying thing (object causing fear)
 - 1c) fear (of God), respect, reverence, piety
 - 1d) revered

It is these three concepts quoted above that constitute "true worship" of God by the prophet Isaiah.

So far we have looked only at the Greek word "sebomai", Strong's number #4576, when looking at the word "worship" when used in the New Testament in conjunction with others who "worshipped" God and not Jesus.

We saw that this word have a very, very "general" interpretation concerning worship without much description. But there are other Greek words that are used in the New Testament for "worship" in reference to others who "worshipped" Jesus other than "sebomai" and the comparison of the meanings of these two different words for "worship" is very insightful.

If we consider "all" the New Testament accounts where the English word for "worship" comes from other Greek words than "sebomai" we find the Greek word "prosekunesan" used for "worship" were "sebomai" is not used. What is confusing for the student is that both of these Greek words, having different and descriptive meanings in the Greek when examined, are both translated by the word "worship" which is nebulous at best and leads often to false assumptions by "believers".

"Prosekunesan" (the Greek word for all accounts of people "worshipping Jesus") other than "semonai" (worship of God) comes from "proskuneo" (4352), which literally means bow, crouch, crawl, kneel or prostrate. If the apostle Matthew wanted to convey that "Jesus was worshipped" as God then he would have used the word "sebomai" instead of "prosekunesan" but he does not!.

All the Scriptures in Matthew that refer to "worshipping Jesus" come from the following Greek word. Please note the varied meanings.

4352 proskuneo {pros-koo-neh'-o} from 4314 and a probable derivative of 2965 (meaning to kiss, like a dog licking his master's hand); TDNT - 6:758,948; v AV - worship 60; 60

- 1) to kiss the hand to (towards) one, in token of reverence
- 2) among the Orientals, esp. the Persians, to fall upon the knees and touch the ground with the forehead as an expression of profound reverence

- 3) in the NT by kneeling or prostration to do homage (to one) or make obeisance, whether in order to express respect or to make supplication
 - 3a) used of homage shown to men and beings of superior rank
 - 3a1) to the Jewish high priests
 - 3a2) to God

If you will be truthful to the definition and the meaning intended by the writers, then you will have to admit that "worshipping Jesus" meant basically no more than kneeling or prostration to do homage to another in order to express respect or make supplication (humility before asking requests of another). This is a common cultural expression in Eastern nations. Also, such "worship" meant no more than showing homage to men and others of a superior rank. Notice also that such "worship" was shown also to the Jewish high priest who is a man and not a God. Of course, such expressions can also refer to God, but we need not stress the point to such extremes and exclusion of all other meanings especially in light of the culture from which these Scriptures come in order to validate our learned experiences from inherited Christian theology because we have been taught in error. We must let the Scriptures speak to us once knowing the true meanings of the words of the "texts" and not the often inconclusive or misleading English translations which we have inherited; often devised to mislead by the translators wishing to point the reader into another direction than which the original texts often lead. Without a doubt the "unbiased" student of Scripture will let Scripture dictate what we are to believe, he will exegete (draw out of the text) and not eisogete (read into the texts a previous held and cherished religious belief that is wrong to preserve his religious tradition and belief) the texts. In so doing here, to stress the point that that all references to "worshipping Jesus" refer to God leads to the false assumption that Jesus is God which the texts do not convey. They never do when looked at in the original languages. We so often negate and pay no attention to those meanings that make more sense in order to justify our pre-existing inherited Christian beliefs and in doing so we are not truthful to ourselves, Scripture, or to God. No where in the earliest of Church documents do we find that the earliest Christians/Chrestians every believed that Jesus was God. Only much later after the third century will we encounter Gentile Christians who begin to change the "faith of Jesus" into "a faith about Jesus" and develop theological creeds about Jesus and his "affixed and voted-on identity" by later Roman Catholicism. That "affixed identity" to Jesus nature is the cause for making "Jesus God" officially at the Council of Nicea in 325 C.E.

To prove the point further, in New English Bible the translations of the quoted verses read; "bowed to the ground" in (2:11); "fell at his feet" in (14:33); "falling prostrate before him" in (28:9), and "fell prostrate before him" in (28:17). This is a far cry from "worship-sebomai" which means the "worship of God."

The question of Jesus stopping them for worshipping him, therefore does not arise, because they simply bowed or prostrated to him out of respect and in hopes that being a miracle worker, that their requests would be honored through their show of respect.

Apostle Mark records in 10:17-18; "And as he (Jesus) was setting out on a journey, a man ran up to him and knelt before him and began asking him, "Good Teacher, what shall I do to inherit the eternal life?" And Jesus said to him, "Why do you call me good? No one is good except God alone." It sounds inharmonious and inconsistent that a person who even refuses to be called "good" could have allowed any one to worship him.

Answer for yourself: Since, no one is good except "God alone", should not Christians be worshipping directly to that solitary God to whom Jesus himself prayed more than a dozen times, according to the Gospels?

Matt 4:9-10 9 And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me. 10 Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve. (KJV)

4352 proskuneo (pros-koo-neh'-o); from 4314 and a probable derivative of 2965 (meaning to kiss, like a dog licking his master's hand); to fawn or crouch to, i.e. (literally or figuratively) prostrate oneself in homage (do reverence to, adore): KJV-- worship.

Thayer's Greek Lexicon: again we see the use of 4352 proskuneo-

- 1) to kiss the hand to (toward) one, in token of reverence
- 2) among the Orientals, especially the Persians, to fall upon the knees and touch the ground with the forehead as an expression of profound reverence
- 3) in the New Testament by kneeling or prostration to do homage (to one) or make obeisance, whether in order to express respect or to make supplication; used of homage shown to men and beings of superior rank
 - a) to the Jewish high priests
 - b) to Christ
 - c) to God
 - d) to heavenly beings
 - e) to demons

Answer for yourself: If Jesus was God Almighty Himself as Trinitarians falsely claim, then wouldn't his answer to Satan would be completely different!

Answer for yourself: When Jesus used rhemez in Matt. 15:9 was he prophetically speaking of what we call today the "Trinitarian Christians" since they follow the their particular incorporation of the nature of the Christ religion in the wrong way by following man-made religion, or the religion (rules) made by men?

John 4:23 23 But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What time is it for you?

Again, here we clearly see how Jesus defined the true worship. It is the Worship of God Almighty alone! It is time to jettison Constantinian idolatry and incorrect Christology which teeters on Idolatry and Blasphemy of the Name of God.

Let us now consider "Baptized in the Name Of The Father, Son, and Holy Spirit".

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "BAPTIZING IN THE NAME OF THE FATHER, SON, AND HOLY SPIRIT"

Answer for yourself: Jesus is recorded in the KJV version of the Bible to have said; "Go therefore and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit," (Matthew 28:19); does this verse prove that the "Doctrine of Trinity" and its present day formula was communicated and promulgated by Jesus himself?

Trinitarian baptism has its origin in the doctrine of the trinity. The Catholic Church has over the centuries altered not only the Word of God but also the words of ancient alleged men who they claim were "Catholic Fathers." Not one of these alleged "Fathers" however was an Apostle. Not one of them practiced the ancient water baptism of the Apostles in the book of Acts. Therefore, trinitarian water baptism from its origin is false. Honest scholars will inform the "thinking-believer" that the trinity doctrine of the Godhead as developed at the Council of Nicaea in 325 C.E. and back-written into the New Testament texts in the 50 Bibles that Constantine ordered subsequently.

What is amazing is that Trinitarians cannot unify themselves on the mode of baptism. The Catholic Church uses sprinkling as well as pouring. Many Trinitarians follow Rome and the papacy in this mode. There are several Protestant groups however who do believe proper trinitarian baptism is by immersion only. It is interesting note of history that when the King James Translators were performing their work on the New Testament a problem developed over the word "baptism." The original Greek word "baptiso" meant to immerse. This is the manner of baptism in ancient Jewish convert mikveh baptisms. We are sure that immersion was the mode of Christian baptisms from the beginning. The Catholic Church adopted sprinkling and pouring modes from examples taken from the ancient Wisdom Religions throughout the world and their rituals delineated in their Sacred Books, all of which symbolized a "second birth" of the incarnated Soul. When the translators came to the word "baptiso" they did not know what to do. The Church of England sprinkled for baptism and if they translated baptism as immersed, the whole Church would be in confusion and many members were thought to go out straightway to other Protestant Groups that immersed and be rebaptized. It is said they took the question to King James. It is reported that King James ordered that the Greek work "baptiso" not be translated as immersed. Rome could not have this. That the Greek word be modified into English syntax as baptism, baptized, baptizing, etc., and this would allow all forms or modes of baptism and condemn none! So, it was the King James translators did not translate "baptizo" as immerse and thus the Catholic Church and the Church of England, together with all who sprinkled, held in captivity and religious slavery, hundreds of thousands of people. All held by a lie put into the Word of God. And with it came the lost of the Divine Ancient Wisdom regarding the incarnated Soul and its intended Spiritual evolution in mankind. Right from the beginning of one's new Spiritual Awakening, the method of immersion was a eternal reminder of the "believer" that he had been "born a second time" and no manner of symbolism of such a metaphysical event in the life of the Soul could picture for this "new creature" such a cosmic Spiritual Birth but total immersion. In was here in total immersion the "new creature" can to experience, in an allegorical and symbolical manner, reimmersion into the womb of death and emerge "reborn" in a Higher Spiritual Consciousness than before. Now, all of life was to involve not longer submission to the "animal instinct" and "animal nature" in mankind; now his life embarked upon obtaining the fullness and stature of "the Krst/Christ" Mind since having experienced an awakening to a higher understanding of his True Self.

I could never reconcile why the Apostles ignored Matthew 28:19 at it now exists in our KJV Bible and instead baptized in the name of Jesus Christ only. No one could deny that that there is one baptism when reference is make to the New Testament mikveh. It was known by the Catholic Church that the Jews had preserved a copy of the original Gospel of Matthew in the Hebrew language. In 1995 Dr. George Howard translated a copy of Shem Tov's Matthew Hebrew Gospel. The text of Matthew 28:19 and its Trinitarian Baptismal Formula is completely absent from this ancient Hebrew Gospel text. Verse 19 contains no Trinitarian Baptism formula.

Shem Tov's Matthew chapter 28: 18-20

18. Jesus drew near to them and said to them: To me has been given all power in heaven and earth.

19: Go

20: and (teach) them to carry out all the things which I have commanded you forever.

By the way the only "verb" in the whole of the Great Commission is the word "teach"; the word "go" is a passive participle indicating making no great fuss or plans for fulfilling this Great Commission, only letting your "light" shine as you live your life as a testimony to God's truth. That requires an article in itself to understand just how far we have erred from this great truth when billions of dollars are spent on "converting" people when the command is to let your "example", as you live your life, bring others to the God of love.

The Shem Tov translation of the Book of Matthew is a mediaeval manuscript containing a version of the Gospel of Matthew, written in the Hebrew language. The version is preserved within a work named Eben Bohen, which was written by a Jewish physician living in Aragon, Spain, named Shem Tov ben Isaac ben Shaprut (Ibn Shaprut), and after whom the manuscript is named. The text of Eben Bohen is preserved in a number of manuscripts, although the manuscript of Matthew that it quotes is lost, if it ever existed independently. The Shem Tov Matthew is marked by its Jewish thought, and is interspaced with the comments of Shem Tov himself. As a consequence several scholars feel it is difficult to determine which parts are Shem Tov's commentary, and which parts are the actual text of the manuscript he was copying. Many scholars view the text as a mediaeval translation from the Greek text of the Gospel of Matthew, as well as being the likely source of all later Hebrew versions of Matthew prior to the 20th century. Be that as it may, interestingly the Baptism formula so common to Matthew 28:19 is absent signifying that the earlier pre-Nicean beliefs of the Christians did not incorporate such a belief or that later translations of the Greek Matthew which incorporate this Trinitarian Baptismal formula is the fruit of Nicean theology and exposes the text as the work of men and not God.

Before we look at what the scholars have to say about the Baptismal formula, let us examine what they have to say about the dogma of the Trinity.

- The Illustrated Bible Dictionary records: "The word Trinity is not found in the Bible. . . It did not find a place formally in the theology of the church till the 4th century."
- The New Catholic Encyclopedia admits that the Trinity "is not. . . directly and immediately the word of God." It further states: "The doctrine of the Holy Trinity is not taught in the Old Testament." The New Catholic Encyclopedia vol. 10, page 335 admits: "From the middle of the 4th century onward, however, Christian thought was strongly influenced by Neo-platonic philosophy and mysticism."
- The Encyclopedia of Religion And Ethics records: At first the Christian Faith was not Trinitarian. . . It was not so in the apostolic and sub-apostolic ages, as reflected in the New Testament and other early Christian writings."
- L. L. Paine, professor of Ecclesiastical History acknowledged: "The Old Testament is strictly monotheistic. God is a single personal being. The idea that a trinity is to be found there . . . is utterly without foundation."

- The Encyclopedia of Religion admits: "Theologians today are in agreement that the Hebrew Bible does not contain a doctrine of the Trinity."
- Jesuit Edmund Fortman wrote in his book, The Triune God: ". . . There is no evidence that any sacred writer even suspected the existence of a Trinity within the Godhead. . . Even to see in the Old Testament suggestions or foreshadowings or 'veiled signs' of the trinity of persons, is to go beyond the words and intent of the sacred writers." He goes on to say: "The New Testament writers. . . give us no formal or formulated doctrine of the Trinity, no explicit teaching that in one God there are three co-equal divine persons. . . Nowhere do we find any trinitarian doctrine of three distinct subjects of divine life and activity in the same Godhead." It further attests: "The formulation 'one god in three Persons' was not solidly established, certainly not fully assimilated into Christian life and its profession of faith, prior to the end of the 4th century. . . Among the Apostolic Fathers, there had been nothing even remotely approaching such a mentality or perspective."
- The New Encyclopedia Britannica reports: "Neither the word Trinity nor the explicit doctrine appears in the New Testament."
- The New International Dictionary of New Testament Theology confirms: "The New Testament does not contain the developed doctrine of the Trinity."
- Yale University professor E. Washburn Hopkins affirms in the Origin and Evolution of Religion: "To Jesus and Paul the doctrine of the trinity was apparently unknown; . . .they say nothing about it." It further states: "Primitive Christianity did not have an explicit doctrine of the Trinity such as was subsequently elaborated in the creeds."
- Historian Arthur Weigall records in The Paganism in Our Christianity: "Jesus Christ never mentioned such a phenomenon, and nowhere in the New Testament does the word 'Trinity' appear. The idea was only adopted by the Church three hundred years after the death of our Lord."
- The Encyclopedia Americana plainly reports: "Fourth Century Trinitarianism did not reflect accurately early Christian teaching regarding the nature of God; it was, on the contrary, a deviation from this teaching."
- The Ethnic Trinities by L. L. Paine, page 219, states that the development of the trinity was an evolutionary process. "The Christian dogma did not start from a polytheistic or pantheistic ground, but from Jewish monotheism; but the development from one God to a trinity was just as completely a historical evolution as any other." He further states: ". . . among the more highly civilized Chaldaeans, Babylonians, Assyrians, and Egyptians, triads of gods were a common and notable feature of their theogonies."
- The New Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge plainly documents the historical influence that Greek Philosophy had on the development of the Trinity: "The doctrine of the Logos and the Trinity received their shape from Greek Fathers, who. . . were much influenced, directly or indirectly, by the Platonic philosophy . . . That errors and corruptions crept into the Church from this source can not be denied."
- The book entitled, The Church of the First Three Centuries acknowledges: "The doctrine of the Trinity was of gradual and comparatively late formation: . . . it had its origin in a source entirely foreign from that of the Jewish and Christian Scriptures; . . . it grew up, and was engrafted on Christianity, through the hands of the Platonizing Fathers." It further states: "The Platonizing Fathers were the Greek Philosophers that became Christian but continued to follow the teachings of Plato. These Philosophers mixed Christians Ideas with Greek Philosophy to formulate the concept of a three person Godhead."
- Church Historian Adolf Harnack in Outlines of the History of Dogma states that the Church Fathers which developed the Nicene Creed were Platonists who appealed to Plato in support of the Trinity. Volume 4. Page 88: "Science concluded on alliance with the Nicene Creed; that was a condition of the triumph of orthodoxy. . . These men took their stand on the general theory of the universe which was accepted by the science of the time; they were Platonists, and they once more naively appealed to Plato in support even of their doctrine of the Trinity." He further attests: "Church doctrine became firmly rooted in the soil of Hellenism [pagan Greek thought]. Thereby it became a mystery to the great majority of Christians."
- Church Historian Jaroslav Pelikan states in his book - The Emergence of the Catholic Tradition - that Greek Platonic elements were unmistakably present in the Trinitarian definition of One God in "three persons." He further states: "The doctrine of the Trinity. . .must be interpreted in a manner that would be consistent with this a priori definition of the deity of God (One essence, three persons). Neoplatonic elements were unmistakably present in this definition. . ."

- Andrew Norton declares in the book A Statement of Reasons that the Trinity originated not from the Bible, but from Platonic Philosophy: "We can trace the history of this doctrine, and discover its source, not in the Christian revelation, but in the Platonic philosophy . . . The Trinity is not a doctrine of Christ and his Apostles, but a fiction of the school of the later Platonists."
- A Dictionary of Religious Knowledge records that many historians believe that the Trinity "is a corruption borrowed from the heathen religions, and engrafted on the Christian faith."
- Edward Gibbons's History of Christianity notes: "If Paganism was conquered by Christianity, it is equally true that Christianity was corrupted by Paganism. The pure Deism of the first Christians . . . was changed, by the Church of Rome, into the incomprehensible dogma of the trinity. Many of the pagan tenets, invented by the Egyptians and idealized by Plato, were retained as being worthy of belief."
- Historian Will Durant observed: "Christianity did not destroy paganism; it adopted it. . . From Egypt came the ideas of a divine trinity."
- Siegfried Morenz, in the book Egyptian Religion notes: "The trinity was a major preoccupation of Egyptian theologians . . . These gods are combined and treated as a single being, addressed in the singular. In this way the spiritual force of Egyptian religion shows a direct link with Christian theology."
- James Hastings wrote in the Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics: "In Indian religion, e.g., we meet with the trinitarian group of Brahma, Siva, and Visnu; and in Egyptian religion with the trinitarian group of Osiris, Isis, and Horus. . . Nor is it only in historical religions that we find God viewed as a Trinity. One recalls in particular the Neo-Platonic views of the Supreme or Ultimate Reality. which is triadically represented."
- The French New Universal Dictionary reveals both Plato's Greek Philosophical Influence upon Christianity and that of ancient pagan religions: "The Platonic Trinity, itself merely a rearrangement of older trinities dating back to earlier peoples, appears to be the rational philosophic trinity attributes that gave birth to the three hypostases or divine persons taught by the Christian Churches. . . Thus Greek philosophers conception of the divine trinity . . . can be found in all the ancient pagan religions."
- H. P. Blavatsky in Isis Unveiled (pages 45,46), reveals that the Trinity Dogma originated from Babylon: "We find it northeast of the Indus; and tracing it to Asia Minor and Europe, recognize it among every people who had anything like an established religion. It was taught in the oldest Chaldaean, Egyptian, and Mithraitic schools. The Chaldaean Sun-god, Mithra, was called 'Triple,' and the trinitarian idea of the Chaldaeans was a doctrine of the Akkadians, who themselves belonged to a race which was the first to conceive a metaphysical trinity. According to Rawlinson, the Chaldaeans are a tribe of the Akkadians, who lived in Babylonia from the earliest of times."
- Peake's Commentary on the Bible, published since 1919, is universally welcomed and considered to be the standard reference book for the students of the Bible. Commenting on the above verse it records; "This mission is described in the language of the church and most commentators doubt that the Trinitarian formula was original at this point in Mt.'s Gospel, since the New Testament elsewhere does not know of such a formula and describes baptism as being performed in the name of the Lord Jesus (e.g. Ac. 2:38, 8:16, etc.)."
- Tom Harpur, author of several bestsellers and a former professor of New Testament, writes in his book For Christ's Sake; "All but the most conservative of scholars agree that at least the latter part of this command was inserted later. The formula occurs nowhere else in the New Testament, and we know from the only evidence available (the rest of the New Testament) that the earliest Church did not baptize people using these words - baptism was "into" or "in" the name of Jesus alone." Harpur further attests: "The above command (authentic or otherwise) does not indicate that the three names mentioned in the formula are or were, "co-equal" in their status, as well as, were "co-eternal" in the time frame, to conform with the acknowledged "Doctrine of Trinity". He goes on to say that "If the Father and His Son were both in "existence" from the Day One, and no one was, a micro second before or after, and, no one was 'greater or lesser' in status, than why is one called the Father and the other His begotten Son? Did the act of 'Begetting' take place? If 'yes', where was the 'Begotten Son' before the act? If not why call him the

'Begotten Son'?"

What the uninitiated reader is not to grasp when reading the above comments is the real nature of the Triune Godhead as taught by the ancients in their cosmologies. Study into these areas will enlighten one as to how a Unity expesses itself in material creation through a duality. But to limit these cosmic concepts in the manner of Roman theology as expressed in the New Testament is a travesty beyond limits. Suffice to say that the way the Trinity is taught in relationship to a supposed historical person who is yet Divine but yet flesh defies forgiveness.

If the dogma of the Christian Trinity is highly suspect so also is its Baptismal formula which was later added to the writings called the Book of Matthew today. As concerning the Baptism formula:

- The Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics: As to Matthew 28:19, it says: It is the central piece of evidence for the traditional (Trinitarian) view. If it were undisputed, this would, of course, be decisive, but its trustworthiness is impugned on grounds of textual criticism, literary criticism and historical criticism. The same Encyclopedia further states that: "The obvious explanation of the silence of the New Testament on the triune name, and the use of another (JESUS NAME) formula in Acts and Paul, is that this other formula was the earlier, and the triune formula is a later addition."
- Edmund Schlink, The Doctrine of Baptism, page 28: "The baptismal command in its Matthew 28:19 form can not be the historical origin of Christian baptism. At the very least, it must be assumed that the text has been transmitted in a form expanded by the [Catholic] church."
- The Tyndale New Testament Commentaries, I, 275: "It is often affirmed that the words in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost are not the ipsissima verba [exact words] of Jesus, but...a later liturgical addition."
- Wilhelm Bousset, Kyrios Christianity, page 295: "The testimony for the wide distribution of the simple baptismal formula [in the Name of Jesus] down into the second century is so overwhelming that even in Matthew 28:19, the Trinitarian formula was later inserted."
- The Catholic Encyclopedia, II, page 263: "The baptismal formula was changed from the name of Jesus Christ to the words Father, Son, and Holy Spirit by the Catholic Church in the second century."
- Hastings Dictionary of the Bible 1963, page 1015: "The Trinity.-...is not demonstrable by logic or by Scriptural proofs,...The term Trias was first used by Theophilus of Antioch (c AD 180),...(The term Trinity) not found in Scripture..." "The chief Trinitarian text in the NT is the baptismal formula in Mt 28:19...This late post-resurrection saying, not found in any other Gospel or anywhere else in the NT, has been viewed by some scholars as an interpolation into Matthew. It has also been pointed out that the idea of making disciples is continued in teaching them, so that the intervening reference to baptism with its Trinitarian formula was perhaps a later insertion into the saying. Finally, Eusebius's form of the (ancient) text ("in my name" rather than in the name of the Trinity) has had certain advocates. (Although the Trinitarian formula is now found in the modern-day book of Matthew), this does not guarantee its source in the historical teaching of Jesus. It is doubtless better to view the (Trinitarian) formula as derived from early (Catholic) Christian, perhaps Syrian or Palestinian, baptismal usage (cf Didache 7:1-4), and as a brief summary of the (Catholic) Church's teaching about God, Christ, and the Spirit:..."
- The Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge: "Jesus, however, cannot have given His disciples this Trinitarian order of baptism after His resurrection; for the New Testament knows only one baptism in the name of Jesus (Acts 2:38; 8:16; 10:43; 19:5; Gal. 3:27; Rom. 6:3; 1 Cor. 1:13-15), which still occurs even in the second and third centuries, while the Trinitarian formula occurs only in Matt. 28:19, and then only again (in the) Didache 7:1 and Justin, Apol. 1:61...Finally, the distinctly liturgical character of the formula...is strange; it was not the way of Jesus to make such formulas... the formal authenticity of Matt. 28:19 must be disputed..." page 435.
- The Jerusalem Bible, a scholarly Catholic work, states: "It may be that this formula, (Triune Matthew 28:19) so far as the fullness of its expression is concerned, is a reflection of the (Man-made) liturgical usage established later in the primitive (Catholic) community. It will be remembered that Acts speaks of baptizing "in the name of Jesus,"..."
- The International Standard Bible Encyclopedia, Vol. 4, page 2637, Under "Baptism," says: "Matthew 28:19 in particular only canonizes a later ecclesiastical situation, that its universalism is contrary to the facts of early Christian history, and its Trinitarian formula (is) foreign to the mouth of Jesus."

- New Revised Standard Version says this about Matthew 28:19: "Modern critics claim this formula is falsely ascribed to Jesus and that it represents later (Catholic) church tradition, for nowhere in the book of Acts (or any other book of the Bible) is baptism performed with the name of the Trinity..."
- James Moffett's New Testament Translation: In a footnote on page 64 about Matthew 28:19 he makes this statement: "It may be that this (Trinitarian) formula, so far as the fullness of its expression is concerned, is a reflection of the (Catholic) liturgical usage established later in the primitive (Catholic) community, It will be remembered that Acts speaks of baptizing "in the name of Jesus, cf. Acts 1:5."
- Tom Harpur, former Religion Editor of the Toronto Star in his For Christ's Sake, page 103 informs us of these facts: "All but the most conservative scholars agree that at least the latter part of this command [Triune part of Matthew 28:19] was inserted later. The [Trinitarian] formula occurs nowhere else in the New Testament, and we know from the only evidence available [the rest of the New Testament] that the earliest Church did not baptize people using these words ("in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost") baptism was "into" or "in" the name of Jesus alone. Thus it is argued that the verse originally read "baptizing them in My Name" and then was expanded [changed] to work in the [later Catholic Trinitarian] dogma. In fact, the first view put forward by German critical scholars as well as the Unitarians in the nineteenth century, was stated as the accepted position of mainline scholarship as long ago as 1919, when Peake's commentary was first published: "The Church of the first days (AD 33) did not observe this world-wide (Trinitarian) commandment, even if they knew it. The command to baptize into the threefold [Trinity] name is a late doctrinal expansion."
- Peake's Bible Commentary 1919 page 723: Dr. Peake makes it clear that: "The command to baptize into the threefold name is a late doctrinal expansion. Instead of the words baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost we should probably read simply-"into My Name."
- Theology of the New Testament: By R. Bultmann, 1951, page 133 under Kerygma of the Hellenistic Church and the Sacraments. The historical fact that the verse Matthew 28:19 was altered is openly confesses to very plainly. "As to the rite of baptism, it was normally consummated as a bath in which the one receiving baptism completely submerged, and if possible in flowing water as the allusions of Acts 8:36, Heb. 10:22, Barn. 11:11 permit us to gather, and as Did. 7:1-3 specifically says. According to the last passage, [the apocryphal Catholic Didache] suffices in case of the need if water is three times poured [false Catholic sprinkling doctrine] on the head. The one baptizing names over the one being baptized the name of the Lord Jesus Christ," later expanded [changed] to the name of the Father, Son, and the Holy Spirit."
- Doctrine and Practice in the Early Church: By Dr. Stuart G. Hall 1992, pages 20 and 21. Professor Stuart G. Hall was the former Chair of Ecclesiastical History at King's College, London England. Dr. Hall makes the factual statement that Catholic Trinitarian Baptism was not the original form of Christian Baptism, rather the original was Jesus name baptism. "In the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit," although those words were not used, as they later are, as a formula. Not all baptisms fitted this rule." Dr Hall further, states: "More common and perhaps more ancient was the simple, "In the name of the Lord Jesus or, Jesus Christ." This practice was known among Marcionites and Orthodox; it is certainly the subject of controversy in Rome and Africa about 254, as the anonymous tract De rebaptismate ("On rebaptism") shows."
- The Beginnings of Christianity: The Acts of the Apostles Volume 1, Prolegomena 1: The Jewish Gentile, and Christian Backgrounds by F. J. Foakes Jackson and Kirsopp Lake 1979 version pages 335-337. "There is little doubt as to the sacramental nature of baptism by the middle of the first century in the circles represented by the Pauline Epistles, and it is indisputable in the second century. The problem is whether it can in this (Trinitarian) form be traced back to Jesus, and if not what light is thrown upon its history by the analysis of the synoptic Gospels and Acts. According to Catholic teaching, (traditional Trinitarian) baptism was instituted by Jesus. It is easy to see how necessary this was for the belief in sacramental regeneration. Mysteries, or sacraments, were always the institution of the Lord of the cult; by them, and by them only, were its supernatural benefits obtained by the faithful. Nevertheless, if evidence counts for anything, few points in the problem of the Gospels are so clear as the improbability of this teaching. The reason for this assertion is the absence of any mention of Christian baptism in Mark, Q, or the third Gospel, and the suspicious nature of the account of its institution in Matthew 28:19: "Go ye into all the world, and make disciples of all Gentiles (nations), baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit." It is not even certain whether this verse ought to be regarded as part of the genuine text of Matthew. No other text, indeed, is found in any extant manuscripts, in any language, but it is arguable that Justin Martyr, though he used the trine formula, did not find it in his text of the Gospels; Hermas seems to be unacquainted with it; the evidence of the Didache is ambiguous, and Eusebius habitually, though not invariably, quotes it in another form, "Go ye into all the world and make disciples of all the Gentiles in My Name." No one acquainted with the facts of textual history and patristic evidence can doubt the tendency would have been to replace the Eusebian text (In My Name) by the ecclesiastical (Catholic Trinitarian) formula of baptism, so that transcriptional evidence" is certainly on the side of the text omitting baptism. But it is unnecessary to discuss this point at length, because even if the ordinary (modern Trinity) text of Matthew 28:19 be sound it can not represent historical fact. Would they have baptized, as Acts says that they did, and Paul seem to confirm the statement, in the name of the Lord Jesus if the Lord himself had commanded them to use the (Catholic Trinitarian) formula of the Church? On every point the evidence of Acts is convincing proof that the (Catholic) tradition embodied in Matthew 28:19 is a late (non-Scriptural Creed) and unhistorical. Neither in the third gospel nor in Acts is there any reference to the (Catholic Trinitarian) Matthaean tradition, nor any mention of the institution of (Catholic Trinitarian) Christian baptism. Nevertheless, a little later in the narrative we find several references to baptism in water in the name of the Lord Jesus as part of recognized (Early) Christian practice. Thus we are faced by the problem of a Christian rite, not directly ascribed to Jesus, but assumed to be a universal (and original) practice. That it was so is confirmed by the Epistles, but the facts of importance are all contained in Acts." Also in the same book on page 336 in the footnote number one, Professor Lake makes an astonishing discovery in the so-called Teaching or Didache. The Didache has an astonishing contradiction that is found in it. One passage refers to the necessity of baptism in the name of the Lord, which is Jesus the other famous passage teaches a Trinitarian Baptism. Lake raises the probability that the apocryphal Didache or the early Catholic Church Manual may have also been edited or changed to promote the later Trinitarian doctrine. It is a historical fact that the Catholic Church at one time baptized its converts in the name of Jesus but later changed to Trinity baptism. "1. In the actual description of baptism in the Didache the trine (Trinity) formula is used; in the instructions for the Eucharist (communion) the condition for admission is baptism in the name of the Lord. It is obvious that in the case of an eleventh-century manuscript *the trine formula was almost certain to be inserted in the description of baptism, while the less usual formula had a chance of escaping notice when it was only used incidentally."

- The Catholic University of America in Washington, D. C. 1923, New Testament Studies Number 5: The Lord's Command To Baptize An Historical Critical Investigation. By Bernard Henry Cuneo page 27. "The passages in Acts and the Letters of St. Paul. These passages seem to point to the earliest form as baptism in the name of the Lord." Also we find. "Is it possible to reconcile these facts with the belief that Christ commanded his disciples to baptize in the trine form? Had Christ given such a command, it is urged, the Apostolic Church would have followed him, and we should have some trace of this obedience in the New Testament. No such trace can be found. The only explanation of this silence, according to the anti-traditional view, is this the short Christological (Jesus Name) formula was (the) original, and the longer trine formula was a later development."
- A History of The Christian Church: 1953 by Williston Walker former Professor of Ecclesiastical History at Yale University. On page 95 we see the historical facts again declared. "With the early disciples generally baptism was "in the name of Jesus Christ." There is no mention of baptism in the name of the Trinity in the New Testament, except in the command attributed to Christ in Matthew 28:19. That text is early, (but not the original) however. It underlies the Apostles' Creed, and the practice recorded (*or interpolated) in the Teaching, (or the Didache) and by Justin. The Christian leaders of the third century retained the recognition of the earlier form, and, in Rome at least, baptism in the name of Christ was deemed valid, if irregular, certainly from the time of Bishop Stephen (254-257)." On page 61 Professor and Church historian Walker, reviles the true origin and purpose of Matthew 28:19. This Text is the first man-made Roman Catholic Creed that was the prototype for the later Apocryphal Apostles' Creed. Matthew 28:19 was invented along with the Apocryphal Apostles' Creed to counter so-called heretics and Gnostics that baptized in the name of Jesus Christ! Marcion although somewhat mixed up in some of his doctrine still baptized his converts the Biblical way in the name of Jesus Christ. Matthew 28:19 is the first non-Biblical Roman Catholic Creed! The spurious Catholic text of Matthew 28:19 was invented to support the newer triune, Trinity doctrine. Therefore, Matthew 28:19 is not the "Great Commission of Jesus Christ." Matthew 28:19 is the great Catholic hoax! Acts 2:38, Luke 24:47, and 1 Corinthians 6:11 give us the ancient original words and teaching of Yeshua/Jesus! Is it not also strange that Matthew 28:19 is missing from the old manuscripts of Sinaiticus, Curetonianus and Bobiensis? "While the power of the episcopate and the significance of churches of apostolical (Catholic) foundation was thus greatly enhanced, the Gnostic crisis saw a corresponding development of (man-made non-inspired spurious) creed, at least in the West. Some form of instruction before baptism was common by the middle of the second century. At Rome this developed, apparently, between 150 and 175, and probably in opposition to Marcionite Gnosticism, into an explication of the baptismal formula of Matthew 28:19 the earliest known form of the so-called Apostles Creed."

- Catholic Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger: He makes this confession as to the origin of the chief Trinity text of Matthew 28:19. "The basic form of our (Matthew 28:19 Trinitarian) profession of faith took shape during the course of the second and third centuries in connection with the ceremony of baptism. So far as its place of origin is concerned, the text (Matthew 28:19) came from the city of Rome." The Trinity baptism and text of Matthew 28:19 therefore did not originate from the original Church that started in Jerusalem around AD 33. It was rather as the evidence proves a later invention of Roman Catholicism completely fabricated. Very few know about these historical facts. "
- The Demonstratio Evangelica," by Eusebius: Eusebius was the Church historian and Bishop of Caesarea. On page 152 Eusebius quotes the early book of Matthew that he had in his library in Caesarea. According to this eyewitness of an unaltered Book of Matthew that could have been the original book or the first copy of the original of Matthew. Eusebius informs us of Jesus' actual words to his disciples in the original text of Matthew 28:19: "With one word and voice He said to His disciples: "Go, and make disciples of all nations in My Name, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." That "Name" is Jesus.

The evidence exposing the Baptismal formula found in Matthew 28 as a later addition and forgery is overwhelming.

"And Peter said to them, "Repent, and let each of you be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins;..'" (Acts 2:38). It is most unlikely that apostle Peter would have disobeyed the specific command of Jesus for baptizing in the three names and baptized others in the name of Jesus as Christ, alone.

Thus, upon the best evidence upon the earliest testimonies, this 3-part formula was developed later by Greeks and Gentiles who desired to separate as much as possible with any and all Jewish institutions, traditions, and religious doctrines and dogmas regarding the Godhead that trace their origins back to ancient Egypt. Many Christians quote Matthew 28:19 to show that Jesus taught that God is a Trinity. Yet this Trinitarian Baptismal formula cannot be found in any manuscript of the Gospel of Matthew until the fourth century. It needs to be stated that we simply do not have any extant manuscript (MS) which contains all of Matthew dating prior to the fourth century. Nor do we find any MS, or manuscripts, prior to this time that contains Matthew 28 in which we find this Baptismal formula.

The history of water baptism for Judeo-Christianity is found in the Jewish Mikvah in Judaism, yet it goes back to ancient times. Baptism was an ancient Egyptian rite. Baptism was one of the Egyptian rites in their Mysteries. The baptism of Egypt is known in the hieroglyphic terms of "water of purification". In Egypt, the water so used in immersion was believed to cleanse the Soul, and the person was believed to have been "regenerated". This is the term we so commonly known today as being "born again". The water itself was "holy" and the place was known as the "holy bath". Depicted in this "immersion" into "a vehicle of death" (water being symbolic of both the "womb" and "grave") is the idea of a "rebirth" of the Soul in such a manner that he "awakened" into a new Divine Consciousness of his True Being, that no longer was he an "animal" with "animalistic instincts"; rather now he was the "risen Osiris/Hours", a "new creature" with an opened and aware Divine Mind that would allow him to conquer the darkness of his animal body which so often defies the Spiritual entity which he truly is at the core of his True Being. This is the war between Set and Horus, or as we more commonly know it today, the battle between Satan and Jesus.

Likewise, converts to Judaism had to go through the baptismal waters of mikvah. These waters were NEVER sprinkling! All converts were immersed in the waters of separation as an act of faith in giving up Gentilism to become a Jew by choice. Let us not forget that the Jews of the first century were the black-skinned children of the Egyptians. Truly, they were a "mixed multitude" of half-breeds; half-Hebrew and half-Egyptian. Important for us to realize that in the mikvah in Judaism at the time of immersion the sacred name of God was invoked over the candidate. Tragic for us today is the warning of Mark 16:16, that states: He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (KJV). Assumed in this passage it that such baptism will be in the Trinitarian formula which was not the way it was done before the rise of what would become later Gentile Roman Christianity. But fear of damnation along with ignorance is a great motivator to ensure the conduct of individuals, and in this case, their connection to the Roman Church which enthrones itself as the only vehicle for the salvation of mankind since there is "no salvation" outside the Bishop according to Catholic theology. Some claim baptisms should be done saying Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. But this is false. Jesus is said to have said "go and baptize in the NAME of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost". The words Father, Son, and Holy Ghost ARE NOT NAMES BUT TITLES. Father is not a name, Son is not a name, and Holy Ghost is not a name. These are titles. Study the book of Acts and you will see there are no baptisms in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. They were all done in the name of Jesus Christ which is the name of the Lord (see Acts 2:38; 8:12,16; 10:48; 19:5).

Answer for yourself: What is the name of the Father? What is the name of the Son? What is the name of the Holy Ghost? Why did the Apostles NEVER say Father, Son, and Holy Ghost when they baptized? The real reason is that a historical Jesus never said these words and they are missing in the Hebrew Matthew we now have discovered and are the later creation of Roman Catholic theology.

Answer for yourself: Don't you find it rather impossible that if the teaching of "the Mind of Christ" as expressed in Biblical Judaism mandated immersion, a symbol of the 2nd Spiritual birth of the Soul, to be accomplished in the name of "Jesus Christ", that the followers of "the Christ" would go out and do it wrong throughout the whole of the Book of Acts, the Book of the emerging Church? Why do the Jews reject the "Jesus Christ" today when early testimony of "Jews" show they did not in the earliest part of the first century? It is possible that the understanding of "Jesus Christ" has changed since the earliest part of the first century that makes such "belief" in "the Christ" impossible for them? What about us? What do the Jewish people and their Rabbis know about "Jesus Christ" that Christians don't today? Why don't we know?

Answer for yourself: Doesn't this evidence presented throughout this article therefore prove that this Baptism formula and verse was later inserted into the text of Matthew in order to establish a biblical basis for the doctrine of the Trinity as well as for the decisions arrived at by the bishops at the Council of Nicaea which was later "back-written" into history and included into the 50 Bibles that Constantine will order written after the Nicean Council? You will have to judge for yourself.

There is but one major question left to answer.

Answer for yourself: Who is this "Jesus Christ"? Who do men say " that I am"? Should it mater that we find the name "Jesus Christ" carved in stone in ancient Egyptian temples some 10,000 years B.C.E.? How is this possible? How should Christian baptism today be accomplished and in "what name" and how does the correct understanding of this immersion refer to the Soul's second "birth" as ancient Egypt and Judaism have always taught? If the name of "Jesus Christ" is an Egyptian Spiritual Concept and not possibly not a "historical person" when what are the implications for being baptized in the name of "Jesus Christ" and not "titles"? Is this "Jesus Christ" really a Jewish Rabbi as we have been taught to believe most of our lives in the Protestant or Catholic Church, or is it possible that "Jesus Christ" is one of the ancient names of God that goes all the way back to ancient Egypt? Is "Jesus Christ" the "name" of God, His Christ, Divine Mind of God, who has come to tabernacle in "matter" and "flesh" and in you and me? Is "Jesus Christ" the personification of the Descent of God's Soul into "matter" and a Cosmic Theological Concept, to which the "key" to its correct understanding is lost today due to Rome? Dear ones, recovering the truth gets no easier since unbelievable efforts have been expended by Rome during the 2nd through the 5th century to hide and distort the Divine Mysteries of the ancient Wisdom Religions of the world who all had "Krst/Christ" at its center.

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "...BELIEVE IN HIM SHOULD NOT PERISH BUT HAVE ETERNAL LIFE"

Answer for yourself: The New Testament states; "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten son, that whoever believes in him should not perish, but have eternal life" (John 3:16).
Should you believe in Jesus and the various theologies surrounding the "Jesus Story" in order to have eternal life?

Please obtain a copy of the "Gideon Bible" from a Hotel or Motel near you. It is distributed free since 1899, all over the world, by The Gideon Society. In the beginning of this famous Bible, John 3:16 is translated in 26 popular world languages. You may be amazed to discover that in the English translation, the editors have used the traditionally accepted term "His only begotten son." Whereas, in several other languages the editors have used the term "His unique son" or "His one of a kind son."

John 3:16 and John 1:18 each have the word `monogenes' in Greek.

John 3:16 16 For <1063> God <2316> so <3779> loved <25> (5656) the world <2889>, that <5620> he gave <1325> (5656) his <848>only begotten <3439> Son <5207>, that <2443> whosoever <3956> believeth <4100> (5723) in <1519> him <846> should <622> <0> not <3361> perish <622> (5643), but <235> have <2192> (5725) everlasting <166> life <2222>.

John 1:18 18 No man <3762> hath seen <3708> (5758) God <2316> at any time <4455>; the only begotten <3439> Son <5207>, which <3588> is <5607> (5752) in <1519> the bosom <2859> of the Father <3962>, he <1565> hath declared <1834> (5662) [him].

Answer for yourself: What does this word "begotten" (monogenes) mean in the original language in which it was written?

3439 monogenes {mon-og-en-ace'} from 3441 and 1096; TDNT - 4:737,606; adj AV - only begotten 6, only 2, only child 1; 9

- 1) single of its kind, only
- 1a) used of only sons or daughters (viewed in relation to their parents)

This word ordinarily means "of a single kind". As a result, "unique" is a good translation. The reason you sometimes find a translation that renders the word as "only begotten" has to do with an ancient heresy within the church. In response to the Arian claim that Jesus was "made but not begotten," Jerome (4th century) translated the Greek term "monogenes" into Latin as "unigenitus" ("only begotten"). [Anchor Bible, volume 29, page 13-14. The Greek term for "begotten" is `gennao' as found in Mt.1:2, which John did not use. Thus the error. God gave all men and in every nation a "unique messenger" as the last in a series of messengers to bring warning of God's certain judgment along with an invitation to repent and be forgiven. Another term for these "Divine" messengers are "avatars." Many nations had them. Being the "messenger" of God does not make him God, or in instance, Jesus, the "messenger" of God is not to misunderstood as God. To read into this verse that Jesus is God is to again fall into the trap of eisogesis (subjectivism due to reading into text something that isn't there at all). Often such an activity renders such a "believer" as an idolator.

Jesus said to Mary; "...go to my brethren, and say to them, I ascend to my Father and your Father..." (John 20:17).

This verse demonstrates that the usage of term "Father" was purely metaphorical. Mary had a human father and no intention was to make Mary "God" in the verse. As for Jesus being a "unique son", he, unlike us (according to the virgin birth teaching), was created without a physical Father. Thus his uniqueness as "messiah" or an "anointed" of God.

Again, we must examine what "believing" in this unique son truly means as to its relationship to Eternal Life.

Answer for yourself: Do we need to believe in Jesus for Eternal Life? What should we believe about "the Christ" that is so necessary for salvation and eternal life? Are the "theologies" connected to "Jesus as the Christ" today the same that were believed about "the Christ" in the first century or have they changed a lot at the hands of Rome over the last 1,800 years? Are we believing "in Jesus" like the earliest Christians and if not, why not? How can we know for sure?

Jesus said; "He who believes in me....does not believe in me....but in Him (God) who sent me." (John 12:44)

Answer for yourself: From the "Christ" himself, he states "believing" in him is the same as believing in God. What does believing "in God" entail? Is it the same as "believing" in the theologies of the New Testament when they often contradict the "theologies" given about God in the Hebrew Scriptures? Or is "believing in God" the belief of the revelation of God through the Hebrew Scriptures before they were later corrupted by Rome? Should we look for the "inner" meaning behind the superficial words of our Scriptures? That, dear one, is a very big question with awesome implications for one's eternal life.

DO YOU BELIEVE IN JESUS? WHAT DOES THAT MEAN?

When I say "believing in Jesus" I don't mean that you attribute to him that he is the Messiah, or that he is God in the flesh, or that he was resurrected from the dead on the 3rd day or is supposedly coming to the Earth a second time, or other teachings ABOUT him you may have received from this or that religious institution. It is truly sad that when we were taught to "believe in Jesus" we were not taught that we were not taught to believe in the message of the One who sent Jesus and put His words in his mouth. We are conditioned to "believe" in the evolved "theologies" about Jesus, that he is the only-begotten Son of God, that he is one substance with the Father, that he was "the Christ" made man and confined to one person, that he came down from heaven, that he was the human Messiah, that he is the atonement for man's sin, that he was virgin born, that he suffered and was buried, and the third day he was raised the dead according to the Scriptures (although there are no Hebrew Scriptures in existence which ever taught this), that he ascended, and was crucified, buried, and raised the 3 day, that he setteth on the right hand of God, and he is God. We are taught to believe that he shall come again with glory to judge both the quick and the dead, whose kingdom shall have no end. We also are taught to "worship" this Jesus. This is "believing in Jesus" as defined by the Nicean Creed of Christianity. The Nicene Creed, Niceno-Constantinopolitan Creed or Icon/Symbol of the Faith, is an ecumenical Christian statement of faith accepted in the Catholic Church, the Eastern Orthodox Church, Oriental Orthodoxy, the Assyrian, the Anglican Communion, Lutheranism, the Reformed churches, Methodism, and many other forms of Protestantism. All good Christians are taught to "believe" in the Nicean Creed as the very foundation of the Christian religious belief and in total comprise what actually "believing in Jesus" is all about. Or so we are told.

But out of Jesus' own mouth he states otherwise and denies the ideas that will later become the Nicean Creed of Christianity:

John 12:44-45 44 Jesus cried and said, He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him (God) that sent me. 45 And he that seeth me seeth him that sent me. (John 12:44-45, KJV)

It seems very evident that in the first century, when all of these "religious dogmas" that are "about Jesus" which we see mentioned above were not yet created by Roman Christianity for several more centuries, that "belief in Jesus" was more about believing in Yahweh and what He has instructed mankind through the Torah and His Christ than believing in the later created attributes and theologies ABOUT Jesus. It appears to a "thinking-believer" that we have it almost totally wrong today. "Believing in Jesus" is not about "believing in Jesus" and Christology, rather, it is entirely about believing in the One who sent him. It would also appear to a "thinking-believer" that any New Testament "dogma" later created by Rome that contradicts the Hebrew Scriptures as the Word of God is not "to be believed" no matter if it eventually ends up in a black leather binding on a "supposed divine book" no matter what we call it.

Answer for yourself: Who sent Jesus? YAHWEH, the God revealed through Biblical Judaism and not 3rd century Roman Christianity.

Rather than listen to the message of Sinai when God spoke to the whole world which consisted of 613 commandments, of which only Israel responded in the affirmative and said "we will do all that you say," we have been brain-washed to accept a message that equates "believing in Jesus" with accepting and adhering to created and evolved beliefs supposedly about him and his identity. There is just one major problem. There are 2,000 different denominations and non-denominations in the world and each has a different or slightly different interpretation ABOUT this Jesus. Don't you think it strange, however, that there is little or no confusion about the message from YAHWEH concerning His commandments, for they are straightforward and easy to understand.

Thus, referring to the teachings of a previous article in this series, "believing in Jesus" means accepting as a way of life his religious belief system as he taught it and not Rome. "Believing in Jesus" means becoming a follower of Jesus and his message given him by his Father in heaven. "Believing in Jesus" is accepting in the message of Jesus one's course of behavior, conduct, and a manner of thinking, feeling, and making decisions in life that concerns what is true in things appertaining to God and the duties of man, moral and religious truths in which can we expect to find "life" if we obey them. In other words, obeying his message and his teachings, the Mind of Christ as revealed through Biblical Judaism, is primary, and not adhering to a denominational interpretation of his later evolving Christological identity, much of which was decided by either a "vote of hands" or by imperial whims of Emperor Constantine.. "Believing in Jesus" means patterning our life after the one who reveals to man how to live above sin through living the Torah as the blue-print for life thereby living above the animal nature within oneself and thereby living in the way that the Father God desires for all mankind. This is accomplished by obeying and fulfilling all the commandments. This is a far cry from accepting and placing one's belief in religious doctrines built around the man from Galilee which can be shown upon serious study to find their origins in creative Roman Church Councils and their theological debates over the earliest centuries of the emerging Gentile Christian Church.

Just like the Pharisees who refused to be baptized by John (the symbol of being "born again"), many Christians, since they accept a "religious belief system" about this Jesus which they are told "saves them", they do not consider that they also need the repentance that Jesus and John the Baptist demanded. Trusting one's "belief in religious beliefs 'about Jesus'" they mistakenly think that they are good enough and pleasing to God because they "have faith" and "believe" the religious dogmas of their particular brand of Christianity concerning this Jesus. With over 2,000 different Christian denominations today, who has the "right" Jesus? In so doing they refuse to deny their short-comings. "Believing in Jesus" they are still subject to the appetites and passions of mortality, and will continue to be until they are "born anew."

Trusting their "religious beliefs about Jesus" the new birth is an uncertainty to these intellectual Christians. Because of this, there has gradually evolved a popular belief that it is only after death that the Souls of those who have accepted the church creed about Jesus and have been counted Christians will undergo a change. But in Jesus' instructions to Nicodemus Jesus makes no mention of a resurrection after death as having any part in the new birth. He cites the ever present though unseen wind as an illustration of those who are born of Spirit. The new birth is a change that comes here and now. It is likened by Paul to being a "resurrection from the dead" while we yet live. Many Christians harbor a feeling of conern that fear to utter out loud; namely, there there is more to salvation than simply mouthing the words, " I believe in Jesus". They have a sneaking suspicion that a deep and fundmental change must take place at the very root of their human psyche. They intuitively believe that there must be a great civil war fought on the battlefield of their own mind and they fear such a battle having been previously conditioned by verses which say "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" according to Mark 16:16 and other verses in the New Testament that find their origin in fear and ignorance. Deep inside them they know, in spite of "required theology to be saved", that salvation must happen here and now as they labor to bring each moment into the fullness of God's infinite love. It is not "believing in Jesus" that changes a man, it is "living like Jesus", obeying his message of obedience to God's Laws and Commandments, which is the highest love that man can emulate, that changes the animal nature in man and brings its submissiveness to the Christ within. This new birth goes way beyond believing in religious dogmas "about Jesus"; it has to do with the present man, that he may be conscious of the "Son of man," who is the real I AM in each individual.

This chapter of John contains some of the vital truths taught in Christianity: the evolution of man from a natural consciousness of an "animal body" to spiritual consciousness, and the incarnation of Jesus Christ not in a solitary man of Galilee in the first century, but the incarnation of Jesus Christ into every child of God who has drawn a breath as the divine pattern for all men who are seeking the way of life. This is God's Divine Mind in you and me. The natural man must evolve into the spiritual. "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up" in you and me.

We are told here that "the light is come into the world, and men loved the darkness rather than the light." World chaos results from the lack of spiritual light within the children of God the world over; not the lack of religious dogmas. We may plan peace and achieve it, but if this peace is not based on divine law, God's Torah as the practical expression of evolving love, and that law incorporated into the pact of peace as well as into the minds of those who sign that pact, we shall have no permanent peace. And Christ be not risen!

Let us now look into "Unless You Are Born Again You Cannot See The Kingdom Of God".

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "UNLESS YOU ARE BORN AGAIN YOU CANNOT SEE THE KINGDOM OF GOD"

Answer for yourself: Jesus said: "Truly, truly, I say to you, unless one is born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." (John 3:3); what does "born again" mean to Jesus and has the Gentile Church completely misunderstood this spiritual concept and given it a meaning totally foreign to what a Rabbi like Jesus both knew and believed in the first century?

Answer for yourself: What did it mean to Jesus the Jew when he said it, and should not that meaning also be the same today for us, and if not, what gives us the right to make-up a "new" meaning for being "born again" other than what it historically meant in Biblical Judaism and the earliest Christian movement of the first century?

First of all, the truth of the matter is apostle John did not use the phrase "born again". The Greek text reveals, the phrase used by John is "born from above". The Greek word used by John is "anothen" (`ano' + `then'). "Ano" means "above" and the suffix "then" denotes "from". We have heard "born again", and although this refers to a "second birth" which would be "again" the real meaning is "from above"; thus indicating Heaven (which was understood by the ancient mystical believers as the "sky" or "cosmos").

Hence, what Jesus said was "unless one is born from above, he cannot see the kingdom of God." And, that sounds logical. The concept of being "born again" to see the kingdom of heaven is an innovation to instill the concept of immersion/mikveh/baptism. In Hebrew the term used by Jesus is called "mikveh."

The same word in question in John 3 is "anothen" and it appears in the same Gospel and in the same chapter in verse 31. Here the editors have translated the word as "from above" and not "again" and have not been consistent in their translation in the same book no less. This arbitrary interpretation of the Greek text is a problem. This further supports the logic of Jesus having said; "born from above".

This will come as news to most Christians but to enter the Kingdom of Heaven one has to be "born again" and this historically means accepting the Yoke of the Torah-Instruction from God and keeping the Commandments of God that refer to him/her in the Torah!!!

Answer for yourself: What should being "born again" truly mean to a Christian today? Is this saying a prayer, signing a card, and being a new member of the church? What about ethics and morality? What is a "new creature" have to do with it? What is the role of repentance in such a "new birth" and why is not stressed in most Christian Churches outside of new member classes? Where is the heart broken over sin and tears in our Churches for failing to live the "Christ-like life"? Just look at our cities, our nation, where can you and I make a difference? It begins with ourselves but unless we are taught the truth then progressive Spiritual evolution and perfection our Divine Self is postponed while we are taught to have more "faith" in dogmas and creeds that we are taught assure our salvation. Dear ones, we need not to have "faith in Jesus" near as much as we need to "have the faith of Jesus" whereby we "live like Jesus"; not confess more creeds about his created identity and man-made Christology over the early 300 years of emerging Christian Church Councils. Think on this with all your heart!

To fully understand, it will require a fairly lengthy commentary, so please excuse the length of this one article, but cherish its contents.

BEING BORN AGAIN...AS THE RABBIS AND JESUS UNDERSTOOD IT

The Noahide Commandments are the Commandments given by the Torah to the Gentiles (first given to Adam orally by God and later given to Noah as handed-down oral tradition from Adam), which according to rabbinic tradition and the First Church Council in Acts 15:17-19 and Acts 15:28-29 (which was headed up by James, the head of the Jerusalem church) were given by God to Gentiles like Adam and Noah, that if obeyed, will be rewarded with eternal life! These Laws and Commandments can be found existing even before ancient Egypt as far back as ancient Sumer. God has always given man the way to "salvation" and a blue-print as to how he is to live the life he is given and it has always been a combination of "faith" and "deeds". According to rabbinic teaching & Acts 15 (which a Jew like this Jesus would have believed and taught himself), those Gentiles who observe these religious precepts contained in the Laws and Commandments of Moses are assured their share in the World to Come, regardless of what fanciful interpretations were later invented by both the Catholic & Protestant churches and most probably heard in your modern churches of today. Jesus as the Mind of Christ as expressed through Israel and the Jewish culture is depicted for us in the New Testament as being expressed through "Jewish eyes" and never "Roman eyes and swords"! This Jesus, as depicted in the New Testament, NEVER would have ascribed to Baptist, Methodist, Catholic, Assembly of God, Church of Christ, or Mormon church doctrines let alone Christology. His example always shows us that as the Mind of Christ he believed and taught the truth as received from his Father in Heaven; truths that were taught from Jerusalem and not Rome. The Christian must come to an understanding that the religion of Jesus (Biblical Judaism) has always recognized two different religious codes:

- The 613 Laws (in 10 Categories) and precepts given to the Jews following their liberation from Egypt, and
- The earlier Noahide system of legislation for all mankind (66 Laws in 7 categories).

DID GOD INTEND TO REPLACE OR ABOLISH BIBLICAL JUDAISM AND CHANGE THE CONCEPT OF "BEING BORN AGAIN"?

The eighteenth century Talmudist Rabbi Jacob Emden wrote a letter that has been discovered which states: "Jesus never intended to abolish Judaism, but only to establish a new religion for the Gentiles based upon the ancient Noahide Commandments transmitted by Moses on Mount Sinai." Let me say that Emden more correctly should have said "RE-ESTABLISH" for the Gentiles the religious foundations that had previously been given by God to the non-Jews since the Garden of Eden and Sinai. Emden stressed in his letter that Jesus brought about a "double blessing" to the world, by strengthening the Torah of Moses and at the same time removing idolatry from the midst of the Gentiles. Unfortunately, Emden's thesis in the letter never gained a substantial following by fellow Jews. The most obvious reason would seem to be the frequent harsh statements made by Jesus against the rabbis and Jews of his time (Matt. 23). This chapter has seldom been correctly interpreted by the Christian Church because the church, for the most part, lacks the facts & information concerning the historical, religious, and political background surrounding these statements which are necessary to correctly understand such a chastisement of a particular "sect" within the Pharisees, and not the Pharisees as a whole! Jesus was not condemning the Pharisee movement, for he was proud to be the spokesman for one of them, especially a Pharisee belonging to the School of Hillel. Jesus, as depicted in the New Testament, was not replacing Judaism with Christianity no matter what Rome would like the reader to believe.

Emden helps us understand the original intentions of Jesus and Paul as he analyzes the beginnings of Christianity. According to the Jewish rabbi, Jesus and his Apostles, which were later sent by Jesus to the Gentiles acted entirely within the Halakhah (correct and accepted Jewish law) in re-creating and re-establishing the religion God had previously given to the Gentiles which was based on the Noahide Commandments (the basic seven Noahide Laws consist of prohibitions against idolatry, blasphemy, killing, stealing, sexual sins, eating the limb of a living animal (cruelty to animals), and the imperative to establish courts of justice). According to the Jewish Talmud and Tosefta, those Gentiles who observe these statutes are considered to be of the Hasidim (pious ones) of the Nations and merit a share in the World to Come. Even within the Alenu prayer which is prayed by Jews and "God-Fearers" every Sabbath, it states... "May all inhabitants of the earth recognize and know....". This phase, "all inhabitants of the earth" includes the Gentiles. This prayer for Gentiles is another proof that the will of God is for Gentiles not to perish but have everlasting life. In the Mishnah (the Oral Law), in Pirke Avot 4.1 it states: "Every assembly that is for the sake of Heaven will in the end be established." Christian assemblies are for the sake of Heaven, yet I must sadly inform you that they have accepted "IN PART" the Noahide Commandments, but not totally! God had given them all to the Gentiles!

THE FIRST GREAT COMMISSION...NO IT IS NOT WHAT YOU THINK

Jews like this Jesus and Paul in the first century would have been acquainted with the Essene authors and their Scrolls. Many passages in the New Testament bear striking similarity to the Scrolls. A comprehensive overview of the writings and materials available to us today reveal the Essenes to have been extremely pious Jews who, for the most part, scrupulously followed the Torah (the instruction and teaching of God, more commonly called the "Law"), whereas Jesus and Paul are by many portrayed as having forsaken their Jewish origins and replaced the Torah with a new religion-Christianity. This never happened; well at least not for one of them (see http://paulproblem.faithweb.com)! At lease this is the general picture one is presented with; and one will not be able to see through it without diligent study. But this premise goes against Emden's letter. A Christian should know that the Talmud records for us that Moses commanded the Jews to spread the knowledge of the Noahide commandments to all mankind!

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that? God commanded Moses to spread the knowledge of the Covenant with Noah (including the 66 Laws of Noah) and its requirements to all Gentiles in the world. Judaism acknowledges this "Gentile Covenant for Salvation" as from God since the time of Mount at Sinai. The questions we have to ask ourselves is this:

- 1). Does history record for us such an ambitious attempt to bring the Noahide Laws to Gentiles, and if so, who was behind it and when did it occur?"
- 2). Were the pious Essenes the ones who attempted such a mission to the Gentiles in the generation preceding Jesus' birth?
- 3). Did Jesus and Paul, through their ministries, follow in the Essene's footsteps and try to bring to fruition what the Essenes began in the generation before their birth?

- 4). Where do the Gentiles correctly fit into the teachings of Jesus and Paul?

As Christians, we must constantly search for the correct interpretations of such an event if we are to correctly understand the Bible and it's message to the Gentile and his salvation.

WE NEED TO LEARN FROM HISTORY

A passage in the Jerusalem Talmud records for us: "Menahem the Essene and 160 Essene disciples left the Jewish community" (remember not all Essenes lived in & around the Dead Sea) "about 20 B.C. on a mission to the Gentiles to take the "world" the Noahide Covenant, thus assuring obedient and observant Gentiles a place in the World to Come."

Answer for yourself: Was this really the "first" fulfillment of what we later call the "Great Commission"?

This Menahem served as a vice-president of the Sanhedrin under the sage Hillel who was the Nassi (President of the Sanhedrin) some thirty years before the time give for the birth of this Jesus. The Mishnah makes quite clear that Menahem subjected himself totally to Hillel's authority (who loved the Gentiles), thus establishing a link between the Essenes and Hillel (who was a conservative Pharisee). Also of importance is the link between the two camps (Essenes & Pharisees) in that they were both known as "Hasidim." Menahem the Essene left Hillel's Sanhedrin for his mission to the world and was then replaced by the sage Shammai (who did not like the Gentiles, in fact he hated them). Shammai succeeded him as vice-president, probably about 20 B.C., and the influences of Hillel began to be replaced with those of Shammai and this included a "hatred for the non-Jew" by Shammai and those he influenced.

This event, the organized religious-political hatred for the non-Jew by the majority of Israel, under the influence of Shammai, will be the critical turning point that will assure the destruction of the Tempe and the scattering of the Jews. Israel was to be a "light to the nations" and that meant to love their brothers, not hate them. Shammai will be the key figure in the failure of the Messianic promises to be fulfilled in the nation of Israel!

QUESTIONS THAT NEED ANSWERING

- Was Menahem forced out by Shammai and his followers?
- Did Hillel's disciples join Menahem in his mission to the Gentiles?
- Did later rabbis approve of Menahem's mission to the Gentiles?
- Did Shammai lend his support to the Gentile mission or did he discourage the Jews from being a light to Gentiles?
- In the time of Jesus did the teachings of Hillel or Shammai have influence over the people of Israel and direct the course of the nation eventually to God's wrath and destruction of the Temple and judgment upon the Royal Priesthood because of their hatred for non-Jews?
- Did this hatred for the non-Jew by Shammai and others cause the failure of the Messianic Promised to not be fulfilled?
- Which of these two Pharisee schools supported Jesus and which did Jesus rebuke in Matt. 23?
- Was Jesus against all the Pharisees and were all the Pharisees against Jesus?

THE STORMY RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN HILLEL AND SHAMMAI

The first disputes regarding the Oral law (that was passed down for some 1700 years from Moses at Sinai) took place at this time between the sages and students of Hillel and Shammai (beginning about 20 years prior to Jesus' birth). Their respective schools (Bet Hillel and Bet Shammai) were to clash over 350 times on issues of the Oral Law during the next hundred years. Nor were these always minor disputes for even once the Zealots connected with Shammai massacred and killed many of the Pharisees. The issues between Bet Hillel and Bet Shammai went to the very core of what Judaism stood for (and what Jesus stood for). One of the major areas of contention was Judaism's attitude toward salvation of the Gentiles.

Answer for yourself: What side would Jesus agree with?

The Schools of Shammai and Hillel both accepted all of the commandments contained in the five "written" books of the Torah (Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy). But the written law of Moses is too brief to be applied to practical issues of everyday life, and it was accepted that God also gave an oral and more detailed tradition was originally given to Adam, then to Noah, and finally handed down to Moses at Sinai. The debates of Bet Hillel and Bet Shammai centered on this oral tradition.

This oral tradition was passed down by Moses and it was forbidden to be set to writing. It was this Oral Law that later caused controversy among the rabbis; especially Bet Shammai and Bet Hillel. Finally, out of fear it would be forgotten due to all the persecution of Judaism and the deaths of its leaders at the hands of Gentiles, the sages permitted it to be committed to writing. The first major works were the Mishnah (200 A.D.) and the Tosefta (4th century), followed by two Talmuds; the Babylonian Talmud and the Jerusalem Talmud (5th century). The Babylonian version is more popular than the Jerusalem Talmud. Also at this time, books of homilies known as Midrash began to appear. The two major commentaries to the Babylonian Talmud are those of Rashi and the Tosefta.

Answer for yourself: Why did I mention these works? The Mishnah, Talmud and Tosefta are the works of primary interest and authority when researching the Jewish law and tradition that surrounded Jesus and his teachings in the first century.

GOD CHOOSE HILLEL'S INTERPRETATION FOR ALL TIME THROUGH A VOICE FROM HEAVEN

The School of Shammai came upon the Jewish scene 20 years before Jesus' birth, and flourished for around 100 years. After the destruction of the Temple in 70 A.D., the seat of the Sanhedrin was relocated to Yavneh, where the Halakhah (accepted interpretation of Jewish Law) of the School of Bet Hillel became once again the established Halakhah (accepted interpretation for all issues of Jewish law). Also at this time, God spoke from Heaven and a Heavenly Voice was heard declaring the Law was to be from that time forward decided in favor of the interpretations of the School of Bet Hillel. Since that time all Jewry has accepted the teachings of Bet Hillel.

HOW COULD Jesus REPLACE WHAT HIS FATHER APPROVED?

Now listen closely. Jesus' debates with the Pharisees recorded in the New Testament were actually disputes with the Pharisees representing the School of Shammai and NOT the School of Hillel. The Jesus of the New Testament adopts the views of Hillel on "all" matters of Halakhah (interpretation) except on the matter of divorce, where he sides with the School of Shammai (more strict interpretations). At the time of Jesus the interpretations and teachings Bet Shammai were influencing Jewish life and institutions more than Hillel's, and it was this way for almost 100 years. Through Shammai's teachings Israel was "losing her way." Hillel had died when Jesus was 13-14 years old, and Hillel's influence in Israel was rapidly being replaced with the contemporary teachings of Shammai. Jesus (who accepted and agreed with Hillel) and Shammai (and Shammai's many students) were to clash continually! The Shammai Pharisees (and not the Hillel Pharisees) were responsible for handing over Jesus to the Chief Priest, and Sadducees and Romans for crucifixion, and this was a violation of Jewish Law. Couple this with the relationship the Shammaites had with the Sadducean Zealots in the priesthood, little wonder that the Chief Priests (Sadducees) capture Jesus and hand him over to the Romans to be crucified. Notice that the Hillel Pharisees (whom the majority of the people supported and followed) had nothing to do with Jesus' crucifixion (it was they who warned Jesus to flee for his life in Luke 13:31). When you read Matt. 23 you cannot help but see Jesus chastising the Pharisees; but what we fail to notice is that there were many sects within Phariseeism and Jesus says "Pharisees who"....indicating that many were not to be included in his rebuke of the insincere Pharisees. Jesus took odds with the Shammaite Pharisees, not the Hillel Pharisees! The Christian Church's failure to understand this has led them to erroneously believe that Jesus was rejecting his own religion rather than calling for repentance within it!

UNDERSTANDING THE TIMES

The Jewish people knew from ancient prophecy that their Temple in Jerusalem would be destroyed by the Gentiles (Dan. 9). Bet Hillel believed that reaching out to the Gentiles (since historically Israel had failed to be "a light unto the Gentiles") was the correct approach to possibly avoiding the coming destruction. Hillel and his students maintained that righteous Gentiles merit salvation just as Jews do (Hillel, like Jesus, accepted the teachings connected with the Laws of Noah), and it was their hope that a mission to the Gentiles could avert the destruction of their land and win God's approval, thus influencing God to repent of the destruction prophesied. Bet Shammai however looked down upon the Gentile world, holding that NOT even the most righteous Gentile could merit a share in the World to Come. Shammai believed the Gentiles deserved "hell" and no attempts should be made to alter their destiny. The Jewish people and their teachers have since declared Bet Shammai's views to be null and void, as did the Heavenly Voice toward the close of the first century (just the way God spoke at Jesus' immersion). Shammai and the Bet Shammai were indeed the Pharisees and priests that Jesus of Nazareth and Paul of Tarsus had to contend with within the pages of our Bibles, and not the Hillel Pharisees. Paul the Apostle's insistence that Gentiles be admitted into the early Messianic Jewish Church was based on Bet Hillel's position that righteous Gentiles merit salvation. Let us not forget that Paul had studied under Rabban Gamaliel the Elder, a grandson of Hillel where he received such instruction! Now you can better understand that the anti-Jewish passages contained in the New Testament were directed against the Shammaites, and not the Judaism which followed Bet Hillel, or even today which follows the instruction and interpretations of Hillel.

UNDERSTANDING JESUS AND PAUL

Jesus and his disciples, especially Paul, warned all men everywhere not to "destroy" the Torah of Israel. A Jew is not permitted to leave his Torah, for Paul wrote in his letter to the Galatians Chapter 5 (remember Galatians was written to Gentiles):

"I, Paul, say to you that if you (writing to Gentiles) receive circumcision (along with immersion that makes you a Jew), the Messiah will do you no good at all;." I will deal with the meaning of that last phrase in a future newsletter. Paul goes on to say "You can take it from me that every man (Gentile) who receives circumcision (whether a Jew by birth or as part of conversion to Judaism as a Gentile) is under obligation to keep the 'entire' Torah" (613). Paul is teaching us that a Gentile (like you and me) who is immersed into Jesus and who is circumcised is obligated to keep the entire Torah!

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that?

Answer for yourself: What about Paul and his teaching that the Law is passed away? It must now be obvious that Paul never intended for that "teaching" to be your understanding; he never said that in Galatians! Our problem is that we misinterpret the teachings of Paul not having a proper background necessary to understand correctly what he is saying. Let us begin with what happens when we are "Born-Again".

WHAT DID "BEING BORN AGAIN" MEAN TO JESUS? SHOULD IT MEAN THE SAME TO YOU? OR IS ROME'S LATER "REINTERPRETATION" OF IT FOR US TODAY?

Before going on we must address a very important question:

Answer for yourself: What happens when I am Born-Again?

In answering this we must deal with a very important issue that is often overlooked. When a Gentile turns from idols, repents, and accepts the faith of the One God of the Universe, he identifies with God. As Gentiles we identify with God through the one He sent to reveal Himself ; namely Jesus. The Gentile (in the act of repentance and faith) literally stands at his own Sinai, as did his Gentile forefathers (the Egyptians are a type and shadow of Ephraim, the other house of Israel) and says, like the Jews of old did, "All that the Lord has spoken we will do" (Ex. 19:8). Notice that the Bible say "all" the people said it at Sinai (this included the mixed-multitude of Gentiles and Jews together)! Included in that group were a mixed multitude of Gentiles along with Jews that teaches us a very important lesson for our lives. At Sinai both Gentiles and Jews confessed adherence to the Covenant offered by God. God had previously instructed that they "wash their clothes", which is an idiom for immersion in water of their bodies (this was their Born-Again experience with the God of Israel). This might be startling to you but the concept in the Gospel of John, chapter three, concerning being "Born-Again" is not the invention of Jesus. Being "Born-Again" is a Jewish concept that has existed since the Garden of Eden and Adam. Now hear this...it is to be repeated throughout one's life. Examples in scripture that the children of Israel were "Born-Again" repeatedly (immersed and attained a new-heightened status before they met with God) are before each Sabbath, each Feast and Festival, following repentance of sin, and for a lady, after her menses on a monthly basis before she could return to her husband's bed. Jesus, like all righteous Jews, would have been immersed repeatedly in his life, yet the only one recorded for us is the one immersion the day before he observed the Yom Kippur Festival (Day of Atonement). Being "Born-Again" is not a concept originated by the Gentile church. It is a Jewish concept! Amazing! As the repentant person entered into the immersion bath (this "watery womb" and "watery tomb") he would then emerge as if "Born-Again" from a watery grave and a watery womb (with a re-newed status before God). He is then considered a new creation (2 Cor. 5:17)! If you were Jewish you would have been instructed correctly concerning the mechanics of Biblical Immersion (being Born-Again) since you were a child, and would not have to be like many Christian Gentiles who have not had the truth concerning such an important doctrine, not to mention is resultant responsibilities of obedience to Torah. It is startling that such a Jewish concept is considered the backbone of the Christian faith and the Christian fails to have the correct understanding regarding immersion and being Born-Again as Jesus understood it. As believers we should have understood it correctly from the beginning, which we have not. A Gentile entered into the watery tomb and watery womb and emerged, no longer considered a Gentile, the old things have passed away (his condition of being a Gentile), behold God made all things new (he now is a part of Israel)! A Gentile who wished to come to God entered the water as a non-Jew and emerged as part of the Israel of God. This process was called "being born from above [again]". He was now considered a citizen of the Israel of God! The non-Jew entered the water of "change" and emerged in Covenant with God as a child of God obligated now to observe certain Covenant Stipulations called "Laws" which framed his special Covenant with God. His condition before God had changed. This immersion is called a mikveh and a "hukkim" Commandment in itself which to the natural man makes no sense; yet God commanded it. Upon emerging from the water [symbolic of a watery tomb/watery womb] the initiate was as if "Born-Again;" he now had the status of a "spiritual" Jew. He became Israel! He was considered as if he had always been Israel, for it was as if he had no past and it was forbidden to bring up his past for it was as if he had always been Israel. Such a "miracle" was called "being born again/being born from above."

Such a process where a person becomes a "spiritual Jew" and part of "the Israel of God" whereby he became aware of his personal obligation to obey certain Commandments of God as part of his Covenant with the Creator is what Jesus meant by "being born from above."

Now, please read this next portion of the article slowly and carefully. The Christian mystic Anna Kingsford (1846-1888) has made a most pertinent comment on the historicity of Christ: "Religion can never depend for its facts and its hopes on historical data. These, in the very nature of things, are always questionable, and become more and more difficult to verify as the transit of centuries removes us from the epoch to which they alone are related. The real events of religion are not of this world; its kingdom is interior; its acts are all spiritual and essential. We 'must be born again' into another sphere, upon another plane, converted from the material to the immaterial, before we can apprehend heavenly things"The Perfect Way, or the Finding of Christ by Anna (Bonus) Kingsford and Edward Maitland, 4th ed. 1909, p.345)

Answer for yourself: Understanding the above then how did such a concept become so degraded that it came to mean accepting and believing a set of religious beliefs and theologies "about Jesus" that can be shown to have originated from Roman Church Councils of the 2nd through the 5th century while at the same time accepting the negation of all Law which was fundamental in the original concept as understood and taught by Jesus in the first place? Who changed the religion of Jesus into a religion about his identity?

This is what Bet Emet Ministries is all about; informing the Christian about the changing of "the faith once given to the saints."

ARE YOU GRAFTED INTO THE ISRAEL OF GOD OR NOT?

The Gentile, after turning from idols and repentance (as a sign of his faith in the One God of Israel), and after following immersion in the Mikveh (baptism), was grafted into Israel as Paul would later tell us. The repentant Gentile believer chose God and His Torah. He chose to become "chosen". Since he is Israel, then these commandments given to "Israel" now apply to the Gentile Christian who accepts Jesus, his teachings, and His God.

Answer for yourself: Is that your understanding? It was Jesus's understanding and still is his today. The tragedy of the matter is that the Contemporary Christian Church has not studied to know who they are. They are included in the House of Ephraim; they are Israel. The Commandments of God as seen in the Torah are for them, not just the Jew born in the land!

LET'S MAKE SURE WE UNDERSTAND THIS CORRECTLY

A "Gentile" is a term signifying a non-Jew, who is NOT a "son of the covenant" and is only subject to the seven Noachide Laws. Once a Gentile came to the understanding of the one true God, he would turn from idols and worship the God of Israel. These were the "God fearers", who accepted certain basic Jewish obligations along with the Noachide precepts. According to this, idolatry, shedding of blood, and grave sexual sins were forbidden to Gentile believers. These were originally the Noachide precepts accepted also by the Synagogue on which the Gentiles were obliged. Let me remind you that we see in Acts 15 (at least 25 years after the death of Jesus) the admonition for the Gentiles to adhere to Noachide Laws to be accepted in the believing community of Israel (it was James as leader of the Jerusalem church who referred back to the Noahide Laws in addressing the question of Gentile salvation). It is logical that the Apostolic Church of Jerusalem should accept the view of the Synagogue on the conditions which Gentiles needed to fulfill in order to be saved and accepted in the "family of Israel". It can be easily shown that the fulfillment of other commandments of Judaism were not prohibited to Gentiles. On the contrary, the Noachide precepts were only seen as the minimal condition for Gentiles to be recognized as "God-fearers". These were so understood by the uncircumcised "God-fearers" themselves, who were attracted to the Jewish way of life and accepted many Jewish commandments without becoming full proselytes (Sabbath, festivals, Tallith, etc.). This was also the attitude of Gentile Christian "God-fearers", as may be seen from the Epistle to the Galatians; many of them wished to observe as many Jewish precepts as they could. It is evident that, while the leadership of the mother Church in Jerusalem decided to lay no burden upon the Gentile believers beyond the Noachide precepts, it did not object to their voluntarily observing more (Col. 2:16-17).

Among the figures of the early Church who instructed Gentile Christians to observe more precepts than these essential "Noahide" ones was Peter, as we know from Paul's criticism of him for demanding that Gentiles live like Jews (Gal. 2:14). Rather than interpreting the apostolic decree of Gentiles adhering to the Laws of Noah as a minimum, Jesus and James saw in the Noachide precepts the maximum obligations of Gentile Christians. Rather than Peter being incorrect, a more comprehensive understanding of the Bible reveals Paul to be incorrect.

GET IT CORRECT PAUL OR DON'T TEACH IT AT ALL

Paul remarks in a letter to the Corinthians (1 Cor. 7) that the circumcised (Jews or converted Gentiles) should not remove the marks of circumcision, nor should the uncircumcised (Gentiles become Jews) circumcise themselves. Wait a minute. Paul contradicts himself (like a lot of preachers today). In Galatians 5 he says "if you Gentiles get circumcised" and then he says "don't do it", can't he make up his mind?

In Acts 16 Paul circumcised his disciple Timothy.

Answer for yourself: Timothy was not a Jew was he? If he was a Gentile why bother, right? This contradiction of Paul is very puzzling. Sadly many have incorrectly interpreted Paul as teaching that circumcision was abandoned with the coming of Jesus the Messiah, but was it? Acts 16 is over 20 years after Jesus and Paul is still circumcising!

Answer for yourself: We have failed to understand properly, so what is the clear truth of the matter? Jesus and his Apostles did not wish to destroy the Torah (Law) from Israel, God forbid; for it is written so in Matthew 5:17, Jesus having said,

"Do not suppose that I have come to abolish the Torah. I did not come to abolish, but to fulfill. I tell you this: So long as heaven and earth endure (do they yet exist today?), not a letter, not a stroke, will disappear from the Torah (the Law) until it is achieved. If any man therefore sets aside even the least of the Torah's demands, and teaches others to do the same (the majority of Pastors who preach the contemporary Christian message), he will have the lowest place in the Kingdom of Heaven, whereas anyone who keeps the Torah, and teaches others so, will stand high in the Kingdom of Heaven."

Bet Emet Ministries teaches Gentile and Jewish commitment and observance to the Torah, not because we desire to be "high" in the Kingdom of God, but because we love God and His Word, and would never think of destroying it by misinterpreting it or failing to study to arrive at the correct meaning of these truths for the people of God today.

It is therefore exceedingly clear that Jesus never dreamed of destroying the Torah as have the majority of churches today that carry his name and substitute "another Gospel" for the true Gospel of Christ.

WHAT TO DO WITH TIMOTHY?

Paul does not contradict himself because of his circumcision of Timothy, for the latter was the son of a Jewish mother, and a Gentile father (Acts 16), and Paul knew that the child of a Jewish mother is considered a "full Jew", even if the father should be a Gentile. Thus Timothy was "considered a Jew" and needed to be circumcised; it was not an option with him. Paul thus acted entirely in accordance with the Halakhah (interpretation of Jewish Law) by circumcising Timothy. This would be in line with his position, following the Jerusalem Council of Acts 15 in 50 A.D., that no longer will Gentile believers be required to "become fully converted Jews" to be accepted into Israel; that the Gentile believers could now remain as "God-Fearers" and be accepted fully by the Jews (1 Cor 7, Acts 15). Gentiles no longer had to "convert" to Judaism and become "fully Jewish" (which included circumcision) for inclusion with equal standing within the Israel of God. The Gentiles as "God-Fearers" were to also be accepted as grafted into Israel (as demonstrated by Cornelius in Acts 10 who was a "God-Fearer" and who had not yet been circumcised). It is important to note that as a "God-Fearer", Cornelius yet observed the Noahide Laws, honored the Sabbath, and ate kosher (proper killing, dressing and preparation of animals intended for food as well as the removal of all blood). The baptism of Cornelius into the Holy Spirit as had been the Jews earlier in Acts 2 during the Festival of Pentecost was the evidence needed to convince the Jerusalem church that the middle-wall of partition was being removed between Jews and "unclean Gentiles". From this we learn that obedience to the Noahide Laws, without circumcision (to remain only as a "God-Fearer" and not fully convert to Judaism), was no longer to be a barrier between the "unclean Gentiles" and the Jews. For example, table fellowship at the Sabbath (Sabbath observance) and the Festivals could now be shared together! This was understood from Peter's vision in Acts 10 concerning "unclean foods" which the Lord cleansed (symbolic of cleansing of men, and not the animals designated as unclean in Leviticus). Shammai's "Eighteen Measures" (one of which commanded Jews not to eat or enter into the homes of Gentiles-remember Shammai hated Gentiles) was overturned by God with the revelation at Cornelius' home. God corrects Shammai and those that followed his teaching. Peter's vision of the unclean foods represented the "unclean Gentiles" which God had cleansed; the vision was not meant to tell Peter that God had cleansed the "unclean foods". Let us not confuse this issue.

HOW DOES GOD VIEW YOU TODAY IN LIGHT OF THIS INFORMATION?

Timothy had to be circumcised since he was Jewish (because his mother was Jewish) and, therefore, was required to observe all the commandments of the Torah (613). Gentiles who observe the Noahide Laws are forbidden to observe "ALL" the Torah like a Jew is required, unless they desire to be circumcised and identify totally with the Jew and his Torah (full-conversion); if so then they are no longer "God-Fearers" but have become full-fledged Jews and undertake all the 613 Commandments. Following Immersion into Israel the Gentile is no longer considered a "Gentile", he is now Jewish (either partly or completely depending upon circumcision). In Israel, and at that time. all non-Jews who become circumcised following immersion are bound by all the commandments (613) and were considered "full Jews" and thus all of the 613 Commandments were parts of his Covenant before God.

Understanding the immersion process is crucial for the Christian; once you are immersed you emerged from that watery womb and tomb as a Born-Again "God-Fearer" who is grafted into Israel. Before your first immersion you were a non-Jew; after it you were "Israel." You became "Israel" and are a Spiritual Jew (regardless if you were aware of it or not). You are not considered a "partial-Jew" unless you are uncircumcised. If you are circumcised you are then considered a "Full-Jew"!

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that? But I was circumcised as a child in the hospital and had no choice; what am I to do? This is a difficult issue but since your circumcision has no "spiritual connotations" connected to it by modern day medicine it stands that to right that God will not consider it as part of your "full conversion." Later in life, once coming to the truth, then you have the choice to be "pricked" by a Rabbi to make "conversion" which is than a decision of your conscious will. We must remember that in Israel a child on the 7th day experience circumcision as a part of the Covenant; in America, for instance, circumcision has no connection to Covenant as practiced in modern day hospitals for non-Jews.

The majority of you set in your churches thinking you are "Christians" and God's Word says you are "Jewish" (children of Abraham) and are the Israel of God. You have not replaced Israel, you became a part of Israel. You are obligated to observe the Torah (that part of the Law that refers to you and those special Commandments that make up your Covenant stipulations before God specific to your Covenant) and, because of your lack of study, you have let your unlearned pastors and teachers tell you repeatedly that you are "under grace" and "not under Law." They are literally telling you that you are not "under Covenant" and that you are not under the "Laws and Stipulations that frame your Covenant with God." This is ludicrous. You are under both whether you know it or like it; when we die we find out that such a message is wrong as taught by a Law-rejecting Gentile Christianity. I just showed you that a proper understanding of immersion and the teachings of Jesus teaches other than the popular message of Pauline Christianity today. Now, let me ask you as a Christian an important question.

Answer for yourself: Who are you going to believe; your pastor or Jesus?

Answer for yourself: With such an obligation to the "Christian" who now becomes aware that he is either "part-Jewish" or "fully-Jewish" (Judaism is not a race but a religion; the religion of Jesus) what are you to do concerning the Commandments which are addressed to you requiring your obedience to the Shabbath (Sabbath), Pesach (Festival of the Passover), Hag HaMatzah (Festival of Unleavended Bread), HaBikkurim (First Fruits), Shavuot (Festival of Pentecost), Rosh HaShannah (Jewish New Year), Yom Teruah (Festival of Trumpets), Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), and Sukkot (Festival of Tabernacles), the Tithe as well as all the others which frame your Covenant?

Surely you should want to begin to observe and keep them according to Scripture. Failure to do so is sin!

PLEASE TELL ME IT IS BEGINNING TO MAKE SENSE TO YOU

Christian scholars have assumed from certain passages in the Gospels that Jesus wished to give a new Torah to take the place of the Torah of Moses. He could not unless he sinned.

Answer for yourself: How could Jesus have then said explicitly that he came only to fulfill it? Jesus NEVER came to abolish Judaism, but came to re-establish Biblical faith and the religion of Israel for both the Jews and the Gentiles from that time onward. Within is is contained the faith that God had given from the beginning of time-Noahidism! Nor was this religion new, but actually ancient; it being the observance of the Seven Commandments of Noah, which were forgotten purposefully by Shammai and his students. Such were influencing the people of Israel in Jesus' day; thus Jesus came not for those who are well but those who need a physician and who are sick; sick with hatred for the Gentiles whom God loved and to whom He had called Israel to be a light unto to show them the Torah (the Noahide Laws). God had intended for the Gentiles to be redeemed all along. Jesus came for the "lost sheep of the house of Israel"; who had lost their way and purpose for the truths that they had been entrusted with. These truths were not only for them, but the Gentiles as well. It is important to understand that as there were "people who were lost" in Israel, there were others like the Essene Menahem and the Hillel Pharisees who had not "lost their way" and needed little if any correction by Jesus! This is something the Christian Gentile Church need to listen to!

WHAT REALLY HAPPENED IN THE GREAT COMMISSION?

Jesus' Apostles, in fulfillment of the Great Commission of their master, established these Seven Commandments anew (Acts 15, Acts 21). However, those born as Jews (with Jewish mothers), or those Gentiles where were immersed and circumcised as "full-converts" to Judaism (Ex. 12:49; one law shall be to him that is home-born, and unto the stranger) are obligated to observe all 613 of the commandments of the Torah without exception.

Answer for yourself: Are you a circumcised Gentile Christian who has been immersed into Jesus and "Born-Again" into Israel? Then that means you! At the minimum you are obligated to observe the Laws of Noah as your Covenant before God and then grow beyond that as you learn to accept and observe other Commandments of God as you grow spiritually. This is the next step in your spiritual development as taught by Isa. 56 where you "choose those things that please God" and "take hold of His Covenants and Sabbaths." This means going beyond the minimum!

For the uncircumcised Gentile God reserved the Seven Commandments which they have always been obligated to fulfill. It is for that reason that they were forbidden pollution of idols, fornication, blood, and things strangled (Acts 15). Jesus' Apostles also forbade them circumcision (to do so would mean full conversion) and the Sabbath observance (exactly like the Jews observed it). The mandatory observance by "God-Fearers" was similar, but not exactly alike the Jewish observance.

This may sound so different from what your traditional Christian message has been, but your Christian message is incorrect if it does not agree or line up with the Apostle's Doctrine. All of what I have shared with you is in accord with the law and custom of the Torah, as expounded by the Jewish sages, the true transmitters from Moses at Sinai, and understood by Jesus of Nazareth and the Jerusalem Church in the first century (they sit in Moses' seat...listen to what they say). Our understanding today is incorrect if it violates the truths as Jesus understood them. We do not know more about salvation than Jesus or the Jerusalem Church. It was to the Hillel Pharisees Jesus referred to in Matt. 23 who set in Moses' seat and to whom we are to listen for correct doctrine. We are not to follow the examples of any leaders if they do not line up with the Apostle's Doctrine of Acts 2:42. This teaching on immersion and conversion is Apostolic Doctrine as Jesus taught his disciples, and any other interpretation other than his is NOT correct. We are not to follow any Pharisee's examples unless they live what they preach (that means the Pharisee Preachers of today who fail to teach and live the truth of Apostolic Doctrine)! Jesus tells us not to follow them unless they agree with him! Good advice. This same admonition is given in Deut. 17:8 ff., where the authority to teach and lead the people were given to the religious leaders God put over the people of "Israel". These occupy Moses' seat.

LETS BE HONEST

Answer for yourself: Do the Baptists, Methodist, Catholics, Assemblies of God, or any other denomination or non-denomination occupy Moses' seat? No. The Catholic and Protestant denominations are far from being Jewish. Salvation is of the Jews according to Jesus.

Answer for yourself: Do you dare tell Jesus that he made a mistake?

It was certain Sages and Pharisees of a particular school [Shammai] who said that it is forbidden to circumcise a Gentile who does not accept upon himself the yoke of "ALL" the Commandments. The school of Shammai, however, did not speak for all of Judaism. In America male babies are circumcised apart from the truths of God's Word (we are commanded to circumcise on the 8th day and not within the first 2-3 days of a newborn's life) and thus their circumcision would not apply. That means circumcision that does violate Scripture does not automatically make you a "full-fledged" Jew. You are still a "God-Fearer". Identification with Israel is by faith and free will. You must choose to stand at your personal Sinai and say to God "I will do all that you say".

Answer for yourself: Do you want to obey God? Do you want to honor His Name with your life? Going to churches that teach error does not accomplish anything. Have you ever been to your personal Sinai? Will you ever go?

The Sages likewise said that the Gentile is commanded NOT to "fully" observe the Sabbath as does the Jew (yet he is to remember and sanctify it in his own way). This is very important. Acts 20:6 recounts for us the Gentile believers and how they were taught by Paul to remember and keep the Sabbath. It is here we find the Gentile Church keeping Jewish ordinances well over thirty years after the time of Jesus' supposed death that we are told "changed everything"! But historically it DID NOT!

Answer for yourself: What would later change this pattern of worship entrusted to Israel for the world?

As far as the Gentiles ("God-Fearers") were concerned, they were not commanded to observe all the Torah (the 613 mitzvot). The Gentile "God-Fearers" did not have to accept all the 613 mitzvot and are not enjoined to observe all of the 613 commandments. However, it is completely different as far as Jews are concerned, for they became obligated to fulfill the Torah because God called them to be the people of His possession. Therefore they and their children became subject to it forever and so are those Gentiles who make full-conversions to Judaism.

CONCLUSION

It should be easy to see that Jesus and his Apostles never meant to abolish the Torah of Moses from one who is born a Jew. Likewise, did Paul write in his letter to the Corinthians (1 Cor 7) that each should adhere to the faith in which each was called. They therefore acted in accordance with the Torah by forbidding circumcision to Gentiles, according to Halakhah, as it is forbidden to one who does not accept the yoke of the commandments (all 613 Laws and Commandments). You don't want to be circumcised unless you plan on being obligated to fulfill all the 613 Commandments because after circumcision, immersion, and a sacrifice these 613 are no longer optional to the non-Jew. They knew that is would be too difficult for the Gentiles to observe all the Torah of Moses; yet not impossible, but not probable. Let us not forget that the Gentiles never had the Revelation of the Torah at Sinai, the Ark of the Covenant, the Tabernacle, the Two Tablets, the prophets, or the Temple & Tabernacle services as were given to Israel. The Gentile's only experience was that they were strangers from the Covenant promises of Israel, aliens for the commonwealth of God's people, without hope and without God in the world.

The rabbis thus took the Gentiles the revelation of God and instructed them not to be circumcised unless they wished to be fully converted to Judaism (this had no bearing upon immersion since it was required for "partial" as well as "full" conversion). It would suffice that the Gentiles [after immersion as non-circumcised believers] observe the Seven Noahide Commandments (in reality 66 categories containing 66 Commandments), as commanded upon them through the Halakhah from Moses at Sinai. This was the minimum requirements for the Gentile to be included in the Israel of God!

JESUS' DOUBLE BLESSING FOR THE WORLD

Rabbi Emden was correct; Jesus brought a double kindness into the world. One the one hand, he strengthened the Torah of Moses majestically (Acts 24:20 states that many thousands of Jews became zealous for the Torah (Law); this was over 30 years after the time for Jesus' death). The ministry of Jesus helped return the "children of Israel back to their Fathers; the Patriarchs and their faith" and thus fulfill Malachi's prophecy.

On the other hand, according to Emden, this Jesus did much good for the Gentiles (provided they do not turn about his intent as they please, as some foolish ones have done because they did not fully understand the intent of the authors of the Gospels and epistles. Jesus obligated his Apostles to fulfill the Great Commission by taking the Gentiles (as a minimum) the Seven Commandments of Noah so that they should not be as the beasts of the field and continue to live their lives as pagans and animals. He also bestowed upon them ethical ways, and in this respect he was much more stringent with them than the Torah of Moses ("you have heard it said, but I say unto to"...). In is not necessary to impose upon Jews such extreme ethical practices, since they have been obligated to the yoke of Torah since Sinai. Israel took the oath at Sinai and are already trained in proper practice and nature of the Second Tablet of the Law (ethical monotheism and the horizontal relationships man-to-man). It would be for Paul to constantly correct, reprove, teach Apostolic Doctrine, and instruct the Gentiles in his travels since it was to his audience he would write "you are strangers from the Covenant promises, aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, without hope and without God in the world".

If Christians would study they would understand what I have detailed in this teaching. No longer would the Church erroneously teach to abolish the Torah of Moses and Jesus. Such sin and foolishness would and should cease and the world would be a better place and our prisons in America would not be stuffed to bursting with "Christian" who lived their lives opposed to the teachings of this Jesus. I have said it before and will always, we need not to have "faith in Jesus" but to live "the faith of Jesus".

Because of these errant scholars, hatred has increased toward the Jews who are blameless of any guilt concerning Jesus' death and proceed innocently to observe their Torah with all their heart (intellect), soul (dedication and commitment to action) and might (resources and property). The leaders of the Churches of Jesus should study to learn correctly for themselves before they lead their people into sin and astray from the will of God for their lives. Every pastor who stands behind the pulpit should begin his ministry with an intense study of "Jesus Roots"; studies that if undertaken for the search for Divine Truth, will ultimately lead one to ancient Egypt, Comparative Religious studies, Gnosticism, Hermeticism, and the ancient Wisdom which is the truth behind not only "the Jesus Story" but all the stories of the "incarnated gods" in "matter" (flesh of mankind). This is where we find the hidden truth about our "Jesus Story"; as truth that Rome hoped the world would never discover and who took drastic measures to cover it up. They have succeeded beyond their wildest ambitions.

The Jew is the brother of the Christian. Ephraim (the grafted-in Gentile) and Judah make up Israel. As members of the Christian faith, how good and pleasant it might be if you would observe what was commanded to you by your first teachers, sent directly to you by Israel, and not the message that anti-Semitism has created these last 2000 years.

Jesus said; "Whoever then annuls (discards) one of the least of these commandments, and so teaches others, shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven; but whoever keeps and teaches them, he shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 5:19).

It should be getting very clear by now that "being born again" has nothing to do with accepting the identity of Jesus as God, Messiah, or a resurrected being who is coming again. Rather, it should by now become very clear that "being born from above" means accepting the faith of Jesus as exhibited though obedience to the commandments and the Laws of God...in particular those Commandments which form the Covenant Stipulations specific to your special relationship with God.

Answer for yourself: How many of the 613 commandments are you knowledgeable of? How many of the 66 Laws of Noah do you follow? Have you ever given thought to "choosing those things that please God" and choosing to observe voluntarily some of the 613 Laws as well? To the degree you are obedient to them can be equated the "level" to which you are "born from above."

Let us now look at "My Lord and My God".

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "MY LORD AND MY GOD"

Christology is a field of study within Christian theology which is concerned with the nature of "the Christ" in relationship to mankind; in particular to one person, the Jesus of the New Testament. At the core of Christology is how the divine and human are related in this one person who is the central focus of the New Testament. Christology is generally less concerned with the details of Jesus' life than with how the human and divine co-exist in one person. The early Christians first defined exactly how Jesus is related to God the Father in the fourth century. However, this definition had taken a long time to formulate. Many of the Christological controversies of the first four centuries of the common era had direct implications for later thinking about how the human and divine are related within the person of Jesus. The Christological positions known as Arianism, Adoptionism, and Ebionitism - groups that in one manner or another denied the divinity of Christ - and other groups, in particular those that adhered to Docetism and Gnosticism, which denied the humanity of Christ - led the fourth and fifth-century Christians to affirm that Jesus was both fully divine and fully human. The Christological controversies came to a head at the First Council of Nicaea (325), at which the church defined the persons of the Godhead and their relationship with one another. The decisions made at Nicaea were ratified at the First Council of Constantinople (381), after several decades of ongoing controversy during which the work of Athanasius and the Cappadocian Fathers were influential. The language used was that the one God exists in three persons (Father, Son, and Holy Spirit); in particular it was affirmed that the Son was homoousios (of one substance) with the Father. The Creed of the Nicene Council made statements about the full divinity and full humanity of Jesus, thus preparing the way for discussion about how exactly the divine and human come together in the person of Christ (Christology). The Council of Nicaea defined that Jesus was fully divine and also human. What it did not do was make clear how one person could be both divine and human, and how the divine and human were related within that one person. This led to the Christological controversies of the fourth and fifth centuries of the Christian era.

Since Jesus Christ is the central figure of human history, it makes sense that the question of who He is as depicted in both oral traditions as well as the New Testament. It became critical in the fourth century, when a Libyan priest named Arius who was living and ministering in Egypt ignited the controversy that bears his name. He asserted that Jesus was not God and that there was a time when He didn't exist but was the creation of the Father God. Some disagreed but not all; the end result was that there was no unity over the issue. Standard church histories tell us that the question was settled by the Council of Nicea, but in reality it took most of the fourth century to get the Nicene formula – that Jesus was God and "of one substance" as the Father – accepted as normative Christianity. But, again, not all agreed and still don't today. To make matters worse Rome will publish 50 Bibles with difficult verses that only cloud the issue even more. One can only approach this subject knowing that one is entering a serious theological minefield. However, the whole subject of the deity of Christ and of the nature of the Godhead is too important to ignore. At the heart of this division we are dealing with the deepest questions about the universe itself that there are.

In the Gospel of John, we find that eight days after his resurrection, Jesus stood before his disciples and asked the unbelieving Thomas to feel his hands and side, to verify the nail marks and spear scar. After seeing the hands and the side, Thomas said to Jesus; "My Lord and my God."

Answer for yourself: If Jesus was not God, he would have certainly reprimanded Thomas, but he did no such thing, does this not prove, "Jesus was God'?

Please allow me quote from the "New American Standard Bible" the entire text as it appears in 20:27-28 from John's Gospel: "Then he (Jesus) said to Thomas, "Reach here your finger, and see my hands, and reach here your hand, and put it into my side; and be not unbelieving, but believing." Thomas answered and said to him, "My Lord and my God!"

- Please observe the mark of exclamation (!) at the end of the phrase. (Note: K.J.V. has removed the exclamation mark).
- Please observe there was no question asked in the entire narration. Hence, the text which reads "Thomas answered" is inaccurate.
- The last phrase "My Lord and my God!" was not an "answer" but an outburst of "exclamation" by Thomas, having seen something inexplicable and baffling. Often, we too cry out; "O' my God!" when we see something totally bizarre or grotesque.
- To prove that the above explanation is not my concocted theory, below are the texts from two reputed versions of the Bible that support this theory.
 - In the "New English Bible" it reads: Thomas said, "My Lord and my God!"
 - In the "Phillips Modern English Bible" it reads: "My Lord and my God!" cried Thomas.

Notice the exclamation points that dramatize his response to what he had just seen occur before him as the laws of nature were manipulated and bent by this resurrected man who now lives in a higher dimension than mere mortals.

Apostle John writes, immediately after the discourse between Jesus and Thomas; "Many other signs therefore Jesus also performed in the presence of the disciples, which are not written in this book; but these have been written that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ..." If John had recognized the answer by Thomas to be a testimony for the "Deity of Jesus" and the observed silence by Jesus to be his remark thus showing acceptance on Jesus' part to such a testimony, then John would have written "Jesus is the God" and not "Jesus is the Christ..."

Let us now look at: "Today I Have Begotten You".

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "TODAY I HAVE BEGOTTEN YOU"

"Thou art My Son, Today I have begotten Thee" (Heb. 1:5)

While declaring Christ's superiority to the Angels, in the Epistle to the Hebrews, God said to Christ:

- Thou art My Son, Today I have begotten Thee. 1:5
- Let all the Angels worship you. 1:6
- Sit on My right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool. 1:13

Answer for yourself: How anyone deny these "Words of God"?

Answer for yourself: Before I answer your question, please tell me who was the author of this letter (Epistle) to the Hebrews from which you have submitted the above "Words of God"? Before one places his/her confidence in the quoted texts and builds up the faith, it is equitable and fair to first identify the authorship of the letter.

Answer for yourself: Have you noticed that the name of the author, which is invariably mentioned in the title (heading) of every Epistle, is conspicuously missing in the Book of Hebrews. To know the reason why, please read the followings:

The King James Version is supposed to be the most conservative biblical version. The editors of K.J.V. (New Revised and Updated 6th, the Hebrew/Greek Key Study, Red Letter Edition), in their introduction to the Epistle to the Hebrews, write:

"The author of the Book of Hebrews is unknown..."

The editors of the KJV go on to say: "Martin Luther suggested that Apollos was the author...Tertullian said that Hebrews was a letter of Barnabas...Adolf Harnack and J. Rendel Harris speculated that it was written by Priscilla (or Prisca). William Ramsey suggested that it was done by Philip. However, the traditional position is that the Apostle Paul wrote Hebrews...Eusebius believed that Paul wrote it, but Origen was not positive of Pauline authorship."

The traditional position that "Apostle Paul wrote Hebrews" is seriously undermined by the fact that the Epistle to Hebrews does not begin with his personal name. For your information, each and every other Epistle of Paul begins with his personal name.

The Book of Hebrews begin with God's name. Further, Paul had specified that his letters will bear his signature.

Notice if you will that:

The Epistle to the Hebrews is not listed in the 6th century list of the manuscripts called Codex Claromon. This leads to the suspicion that it could have been written at a later date than the 6th century!

The critics who have studied the text of Hebrews suggest, it is not likely the work of Paul.

The book of Hebrews can be shown to be written much later than supposed ...to prove the superiority of God's Son (Christ) over God's Prophets (Abraham and others). In other words, the document was created after the sixth century by a pseudo author to prove the superiority of Christianity over Judaism.

Answer for yourself: You only need to ask yourself this: Was this the view of the Jerusalem church and James which continued to practice Judaism well after the cross, and in fulfillment of the Great Commission made sure to teach the Gentiles in all the world "those things commanded by Christ?" Why do they continue to bring blood sacrifices and atonement offerings in Acts 21 if they believed, as we do, that Jesus' death and blood was the final atonement of sin? Did they miss something? Did the Holy Spirit let them down and forget to tell them that this Jesus has canceled Judaism in order to create a new replacement religion called Christianity; a religion that would not have its dogmas and doctrines hammered out for over 400 years to come? Don't look now but Messianic Judaism was the faith once given to the saints and which was also sent into all the world in missionary endeavors as we see in Acts 15 and Acts 16 and existed well into the fourth century until Constantine squashed it through Imperial fiat and the Church Councils that dogmatically altered the "faith of Jesus" into a religion built upon "faith in Jesus".

All the three quoted passages from the book of Hebrews are in fact the direct quotes from Psalms. (Psalms 2:7; 97:7; 110:1).

- Thou art My Son, Today I have begotten Thee. 1:5
- Let all the Angels worship you. 1:6
- Sit on My right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool. 1:13

To say that the Psalmist had written these Songs "about Jesus Christ" and not "about characters from their history" needs hard evidence, which is not to be found in the Psalms. Lack of such evidences have lead the bible critics to question:

Answer for yourself: Were the prophecies of the Old Testament fulfilled in history, or, the history was written to fulfill the prophecies? (May I add, specially when the authorship is questioned, not by the outsiders, but the insiders! KJV).

There is only ONE who is:

- The Eternal
- Worthy of Prayers
- The Supreme.
 - Thou art My Son, Today I have begotten Thee (Hebrews 1:5)
 - Yesterday, the Son did not exist. "The God" alone is "The Eternal One"
 - Arianism is most commonly used to refer to the theological positions made famous by the theologian

> Arius (c. AD 250-336), who lived and taught in Alexandria, Egypt, in the early 4th century. The most controversial of the teachings of Arius dealt with the relationship between God the Father and the person of Jesus and conflicted with trinitarian Christological positions which came to dominate the Roman Church (and hence the modern Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox Churches and most other denominations). The term Arianism is also used to refer to other nontrinitarian theological systems of the fourth century, which regarded the Son of God, the Logos, as a created being (as in Arianism proper and Anomoeanism) or as neither uncreated nor created in the sense other beings are created (as in "Semi-Arianism").

A small summary of Church history is in order. Arius taught that God the Father and the Son did not exist together eternally. This idea goes back to the very beginning of the ancient Egyptian Religion that taught from the Sole God and Creator all other gods (Elohim, plural for gods and godhead emanated). Further, Arius taught that the pre-incarnate Jesus, the manifested Christ in Judaism, was a divine being created by (and possibly inferior to) the Father at some point, before which the Son did not exist. In English-language works, it is sometimes said that Arians believe that Jesus is or was a "creature"; in this context, the word is being used in its original sense of "created being". Of all the various disagreements within the Christian Church, the Arian controversy has held the greatest force and power of theological and political conflict, with the possible exception of the Protestant Reformation. The conflict between Arianism and Trinitarian beliefs was the first major doctrinal confrontation in the Church after the legalization of Christianity by the Roman Emperor Constantine I. The controversy over Arianism began to rise in the late third century and extended over the greater part of the fourth century and involved most church members, simple believers, priests and monks as well as bishops, emperors and members of Rome's imperial family. Yet, such a deep controversy within the Church could not have materialized in the third and fourth centuries without some significant historical influences providing the basis for the Arian doctrines. Most orthodox or mainstream Christian historians define and minimize the Arian conflict as the exclusive construct of Arius and a handful of rogue bishops engaging in "heresy". Of the roughly three hundred bishops in attendance at the Council of Nicea, only three bishops did not sign the Nicene Creed. However, there is evidence that very widely differing views of the nature of Christ were held by Christian believers in the Early Church. Only after the dispute over Arius politicized the debate and a "catholic" or general solution to the debate was sought, with a great majority holding to the trinitarian position, was the Arian position declared to be heterodox. There is some irony in that the Roman Catholic Church canonized Lucian of Antioch as a brilliant and talented early Christian leader and martyr, although Lucian taught a very similar form of what would later be called Arianism. Arius was a student of Lucian's private academy in Antioch. The Ebionites, among other early Christian groups, also may have maintained similar doctrines that can be associated with formal Lucian and Arian Christology. While Arianism continued to dominate for several decades even within the family of the Emperor, the Imperial nobility and higher-ranking clergy, in the end it was Trinitarianism which prevailed theologically and politically in the Roman Empire at the end of the fourth century. Arianism, which had been taught by the Arian missionary Ulfilas to the Germanic tribes, was dominant for some centuries among several Germanic tribes in western Europe, especially Goths and Lombards, but ceased to be the mainstream belief by the 8th Century AD. Trinitarianism remained the dominant doctrine in all major branches of the Eastern and Western Church and within Protestantism, although there have been several anti-trinitarian movements, some of which acknowledge various similarities to classical Arianism.

In 321, Arius was denounced by a synod at Alexandria for teaching a heterodox view of the relationship of Jesus to God the Father. Because Arius and his followers had great influence in the schools of Alexandria - counterparts to modern universities or seminaries — their theological views spread, especially in the eastern Mediterranean. By 325, the controversy had become significant enough that Emperor Constantine called an assembly of bishops, the First Council of Nicaea, which condemned Arius' doctrine and formulated the Original Nicene Creed, forms of which are still recited in Catholic, Orthodox, Anglican, and some Protestant services. The Nicene Creed's central term, used to describe the relationship between the Father and the Son, is Homoousios, or Consubstantiality, meaning "of the same substance" or "of one being". (The Athanasian Creed is less often used but is a more overtly anti-Arian statement on the Trinity.) Constantine exiled those who refused to accept the Nicean creed — Arius himself, the deacon Euzoios, and the Libyan bishops Theonas of Marmarica and Secundus of Ptolemais — and also the bishops who signed the creed but refused to join in condemnation of Arius, Eusebius of Nicomedia and Theognis of Nicaea. The Emperor also ordered all copies of the Thalia, the book in which Arius had expressed his teachings, to be burned. Though he was committed to maintaining what the church had defined at Nicea, Constantine was also bent on pacifying the situation and eventually became more lenient toward those condemned and exiled at the council. First he allowed Eusebius of Nicomedia, who was a protégé of his sister, and Theognis to return once they had signed an ambiguous statement of faith. The two, and other friends of Arius, worked for Arius' rehabilitation. At the First Synod of Tyre in AD 335, they brought accusations against Athanasius, bishop of Alexandria, the primary opponent of Arius; after this, Constantine had Athanasius banished, since he considered him an impediment to reconciliation. In the same year, the Synod of Jerusalem under Constantine's direction readmitted Arius to communion in AD 336. Arius, however, died on the way to this event in Constantinople. Several scholarly studies suggest that Arius was poisoned by his opponents. Eusebius and Theognis remained in the Emperor's favor, and when Constantine, who had been a catechumen much of his adult life, accepted baptism on his deathbed, it was from Eusebius of Nicomedia.

The Council of Nicea had not ended the controversy, as many bishops of the Eastern provinces disputed the homoousios, the central term of the Nicene creed, as it had been used by Paul of Samosata, who had advocated a monarchianist Christology. Both the man and his teaching, including the term homoousios, had been condemned by the Synods of Antioch in 269. Hence, after Constantine's death in 337, open dispute resumed again. Constantine's son Constantius II, who had become Emperor of the eastern part of the Empire, actually encouraged the Arians and set out to reverse the Nicene creed. His advisor in these affairs was Eusebius of Nicomedia, who had already at the Council of Nicea been the head of the Arian party, who also was made bishop of Constantinople. Constantius used his power to exile bishops adhering to the Nicene creed, especially Athanasius of Alexandria, who fled to Rome. In 355 Constantius became the sole Emperor and extended his pro-Arian policy toward the western provinces, frequently using force to push through his creed, even exiling Pope Liberius and installing Antipope Felix II. As debates raged in an attempt to come up with a new formula, three camps evolved among the opponents of the Nicene creed. The first group mainly opposed the Nicene terminology and preferred the term homoiousios (alike in substance) to the Nicene homoousios, while they rejected Arius and his teaching and accepted the equality and coeternality of the persons of the Trinity. Because of this centrist position, and despite their rejection of Arius, they were called "semi-Arians" by their opponents. The second group also avoided invoking the name of Arius, but in large part followed Arius' teachings and, in another attempted compromise wording, described the Son as being like (homoios) the Father. A third group explicitly called upon Arius and described the Son as unlike (anhomoios) the Father. Constantius wavered in his support between the first and the second party, while harshly persecuting the third. The debates between these groups resulted in numerous synods, among them the Council of Sardica in 343, the Council of Sirmium in 358 and the double Council of Rimini and Seleucia in 359, and no less than fourteen further creed formulas between 340 and 360, leading the pagan observer Ammianus Marcellinus to comment sarcastically: "The highways were covered with galloping bishops." None of these attempts were acceptable to the defenders of Nicene orthodoxy: writing about the latter councils, Saint Jerome remarked that the world "awoke with a groan to find itself Arian." After Constantius' death in 361, his successor Julian, a devotee of Rome's pagan gods, declared that he would no longer attempt to favor one church faction over another, and allowed all exiled bishops to return; this had the objective of further increasing dissension among Christians. The Emperor Valens, however, revived Constantius' policy and supported the "Homoian" party, exiling bishops and often using force. During this persecution many bishops were exiled to the other ends of the Empire, (e.g., Hilarius of Poitiers to the Eastern provinces). These contacts and the common plight subsequently led to a rapprochement between the Western supporters of the Nicene creed and the homoousios and the Eastern semi-Arian.

Many Christian scholars teach that the Book of Hebrews was written amidst a growing number of Jewish Christians forsaking their new found truth and reverting back to the bondage of Judaism. The writer, intending to stop the Jewish repentance from Christianity whereby they return back to Judaismm, tries to shows how Jesus, as the Christ, and the New covenant is far superior to Judaism and the ceremonial Law (filled with sacrifices and rituals). The arguments presented are clear and aggressive. Several times the writer warns of the dire consequences of turning back to the old covenant and returning to Biblical Judaism. He shows that once someone has accepted the blood of Christ as the only thing that can cleanse away their sin, if they then continue in sin, then in actual fact they trample on the blood of Christ. The worship of God only in Biblical Judaism is likened in the New Testament to be equivalent to the worship of God, Jehovah. In fact the writer of Hebrews takes great lengths to try to show that Christ, as Jesus, is superior to the angels because of the work he has accomplished on the cross. No where does the writer or writes of the Book of Hebrew make any illusion to the historical fact that the Jerusalem Church continued to bring under, the commands of James, and Paul's example, blood sacrifices and atonement offerings up until the time of the destruction of the Temple in 70 C.E. as if the supposed prior death of Jesus on the cross and his shed blood had no effect upon Biblical Judaism at all!

The writer of the Book of Hebrews tried to prove Christ's superiority by citing seven Hebrew Scriptures where now Jesus Christ is made the subject of the passages and not God as was originally intended. The writer of Hebrews If you believe, since Angels are said to have worshipped Christ, let me refer you back to our article on "worship" and what the word actually meant in the Greek and not the English which is defined more by our experience than the text. Too many people read only the English of our New Testament and mistakenly come to believe that since Angels worshipped Christ, that Christ is worthy of Worship instead of God only. Notice if you will that in the Garden of Gethsemane, Christ "fell on his face and prayed, saying, `My Father, if it is possible, let this cup pass from me.'" (Matthew 26:39). Hence, the Heavenly Father - "The God" is "Worthy of Prayers" from Jesus Christ's example, the Angels, and every one.

- Sit on My right hand*,....Does not the above phrase clearly demonstrate (manifest) that "The God" who articulated or commanded the above, was sitting on the "Supreme Throne" and Christ was standing and waiting to be told to sit down, next to him? "The God" is "THE SUPREME", not "the Christ" as great as He is!

So we see the custom in the Bible that all the prophets, including Christ used to "fall on their faces" while praying to God showing such reverence to the One God of all. (Abraham, Genesis 17:3; Job, Job 1:20; Moses and Aaron, Numbers 16:22; Christ, Mt.26:39).

Now, I hope that by taking these few newsletters to heart and by dealing with these difficult questions from the Bible in a courageous and straight-forward manner, you can honestly see that much of what we have been taught since childhood in the vast majority of Christian churches regarding Whom we are to worship has not only been in error, but following and giving ourselves to such teachings has brought millions into idolatry, for God is not to share His glory with anyone, even Messiah and even His Christ.

If you desire more accurate instruction about the "faith once given to the saints" and desire to return to the Hebrew Roots of the original church, as well as recover the ancient Divine Wisdom that unified the world for thousands of years before the rise of the Roman Church, then we at Bet Emet Ministries welcome your search for truth with us and stand confidently ready to assist your endeavors to better worship the Father in Spirit and in Truth.

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "FOR THERE ARE 3 THAT BEAR RECORD IN HEAVEN..."

Answer for yourself: Apostle John in his first Epistle, chapter 5 and verse 7 wrote: "For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one."; is this not a fair testimony to acknowledge the `Doctrine of Trinity'?

- The text quoted does appear in the Kings James Version but has been omitted by most of the editors of the recent versions e.g. Revised Standard Version, New American Standard Bible, New English Bible, Phillips Modern English Bible, because the quoted text does not appear in the older Greek manuscripts.
- Renowned historian Edward Gibbon calls the addition a "Pious Fraud" in his famous history book Decline and Fall of Roman Empire.
- Peakes' Commentary on the subject reads; "The famous interpolation after "three witnesses" is not printed even in RSV, and rightly. It cites the heavenly testimony of the Father, the logos, and the Holy Spirit, but is never used in the early trinitarian controversies. No respectable Greek manuscript contains it.

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that? The statement is not there in the oldest and best manuscript discovered! Yet it is the King James Bible. How can it be in a Bible yet lacking any previous record from older manuscripts from which it was supposed to come?

Simply said; someone is writting "their beliefs" into a text passed off as "God's Word."

This "passage, appearing first in a late 4th-cent. Latin text, entered the Vulgate and finally the NT of Erasmus." Thus, many find this addition to be spurious and only intended to artificially validate the man-made concept of the Trinity. Thus, by writing it into the Holy Revelations existing at that time, one gives validity and credence to the concept, which 50 years earlier never existed and was completely unknown since the days of the Apostles.

Notwithstanding the above rejections, the verse that follows the quoted text reads in KJV;

"And there are three that bear witness in earth, the spirit, and the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one." (1 John 5:8).

Answer for yourself: Are these three witnesses "co-equal"? Can blood be substituted with water? Can water be regarded as the same in any respect with the Spirit? Just as the spirit, the blood and the water are three separate entities, so are the first three witnesses, namely; the Father, the Son (Word, Logos) and the Holy Spirit (Ghost). Clear reasoning will lead one to reject the concept of co-quality as represented in the Trinity, not accept it.

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "ALL THINGS CAME INTO BEING THROUGH HIM"

Answer for yourself: Did "All things came into being through him" [meaning Jesus] (Jn. 1:2)?

The opening word of John 1:2 in the Greek text is "houtos" (3778), which translates "the same". In the King James Version, it reads;

"The same was in the beginning with God", which supports the above clarification.

Based upon the LITERAL translation of the word "Logos" as explained in a prior article in this series, the verse should read;

"The same (i.e. the spoken divine word, command) was in the beginning with the God."

This LITERAL translation coincides with the opening of the Old Testament. (Genesis 1:3,6,11,14,20 & 24).

In John 1:3, the Greek word used for "him" is "autos" (846), which means; her, it (-self); (self-) the same; (him-, my-, thy-,) self; etc. If one was to continue the LITERAL translation from the beginning, the verse should read:

All things came into being through it (the spoken word or commandment); and apart from it (the spoken word or commandment) nothing came into being that has come into being. (John 1:3)

Here "it" stands for "the spoken divine word, command."

Let us examine the whole of John 1:1-3 in context understanding that the "Word" refers to the "spoken word and commandments" as shown above and does not refer to the masculine "him."

John 1:1 In <1722> the beginning <746> was <2258> (5713) the Word <3056>, and <2532> the Word <3056> was <2258> (5713) with <4314> God <2316>, and <2532> the Word <3056> was <2258> (5713) God <2316>. 2 The same <3778> was <2258> (5713) in <1722> the beginning <746> with <4314> God <2316>. 3 All things <3956> were made <1096> (5633) by <1223> him <846>; and <2532> without <5565> him <846> was <1096>

<0> not <3761> any thing <1520> made <1096> (5633) that was made <1096> (5754).

Notice, if you will, not one of the definitions presented refers to a man names Yeshua. They all refers to "words" or "spoken thoughts" that emanated for YHVH Himself.

In the beginning was the "spoken word, command", and the "spoken word, command" was with God, and the "spoken word, command" was Divine. This same "spoken word or command" was in the beginning with God, and all things were made by it (the spoken word or commandment); and without it (the spoken word or commandment) was not anything made that was made.

Answer for yourself: Now, doesn't this make a whole lot better sense than trying to push Yeshua into a verse where he never belonged?

BUT I WISH IT WERE THIS SIMPLE..BUT WE HAVE A PROBLEM

WITH PAUL AND HIS BELIEFS

I wish it were just that simply, but it is not, because for some reason, Colossians 1:16 reads as follows:

"For in Him all things were created, both in the heaven and on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions or rulers or authorities - all things have been created through Him and for Him."

For Paul, "Him" refers to "Yeshua. Let us investigate why Paul thought that. Please read the following.

In The Oxford Companion to the Bible, edited by Bruce M. Metzger and Michael D. Coogan, published by the Oxford University Press, on page 127, it reads; "The Pauline authorship of Colossians has often been challenged over the last 160 years. The grounds for this questioning concern the language and style of the letter; more recently it has been argued that there are major differences between Colossians and the theology of the main Pauline letters, particularly in relation to the person and cosmic work of Christ, the Church as the body of Christ, and early Christian tradition."

If all things, including men and women were created through Yeshua, then the righteous Yeshua would not have told the Pharisees that from the beginning "God" created man and woman. (Matt. 19:4). Somebody is wrong, either the author of Colossians or Moses.

However, if the person is unwilling to write-off the so called canonical letter by Paul on the basis of the above two observations, please read the quoted scripture below which unequivocally tells us that "God" created man, made the earth and stretched out the heavens with HIS OWN HANDS.

"It is I who made the earth, and created man uponit. I stretched out the heavens with My hands, And I ordained all their host." (Isaiah 45:12).

Please also read Psalms 147-148, where the Psalmist bids Zion to "Praise your (their) God", who has done multitude of things and created; the heavens, the heights, His angels, His hosts, Sun, Moon, Stars and the waters that are above the heavens, by His own Command."

DIFFICULT PASSAGES TO UNDERSTAND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT: "AND THE WORD BECAME FLESH AND DWELT AMONG US"

Answer for yourself: "And the Word became flesh, and dwelt among us" (Jn. 1:14). What does this mean?

To comprehend what apostle John wrote, one has to read what John wrote ten verses earlier, i.e. in John 1:4. According to what you have been shown previously and choosing the LITERAL translation, in that verse, John wrote;

"In it (the spoken word or commandment) was life; and the life was the light of men."

As demonstrated earlier the word "it" stands for "Logos" (the divine command that was in the beginning with the God). Consequently, "In it (in the God's command was life); and that life was the light (the guidance, enlightenment) for men."

I have rendered "light" as the guidance and enlightenment, because in 1:9 John wrote; "There was the true light which, coming into the world, enlightens every man".

Unfortunately, "And the light shines in the darkness; and the darkness did not comprehend it (him)." (John 1:5).

Note: In either case; the word "it" which stands for God's command, nor "him" which supposedly stands for Yeshua, makes sense.

"And the Word became flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, glory as of the only begotten from the Father, full of grace and truth." (John 1:14).

What the apostle LITERALLY meant was;

"And the Logos (the God's command, which was from the beginning with God, wherein was the life) became flesh, and dwelt among us,..."

Briefly, the embodiment in flesh was of "Logos" - the spoken word and commandments from God, and NOT God Himself! When one, like Yeshua, empties himself of all fleshly lusts and desires, and lives in total submission and consecration to God on such a high level, then both his thoughts and actions are of such a nature that they are the expressed image of God's thought and actions. When such a condition exists, the LITERALLY the Word of God is alive in such a dimension that you can rightly say that the Word of God has become flesh and lives totally both in and though an individual. Such is Yeshua.

Thus you can now begin to see that Yeshua was neither God nor the physical incarnation of God.

The entire text which reads; "and we be held his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father" is written within parentheses in the Kings James Version. Hence, it is considered as the editor's enhanced notes or addendum. He is adding "his" beliefs to the text instead of letting the whole of the Scriptures speak to him.

As for the true meaning of the original term used by John in his Gospel, for the mistranslated phrase "the only begotten", please my earlier article.

To those who cannot accept this teaching and prefer to continue in their prior understanding:

- (a) "and the Word (Yeshua) was with God" (John 1:1).
- (b) "He (Yeshua) was in the beginning with God" (John 1:2).
- (c) "And the Word (Yeshua) became flesh" (John 1:14)

We have no recourse but to admit that it was either at the beginning or after the act of becoming happened, "Yeshua" who was "with" God or "became" flesh, had to be either an additional, other, different, distinct, or dissimilar entity than "the God." Now, having no way to retreat, please read the following: "No one can serve two masters;..." Matthew 6:24

If you wish choose the ONE and the only Master, please read;

"Now to the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only God, be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen." 1 Timothy 1:17

Answer for yourself: Can any one deny; "Yeshua" who dwelt among us, was "visible"!

WHAT IS TO BE "THE" AUTHORITY FOR YOUR RELIGIOUS BELIEFS?

The majority of Christians have an "unprovable" belief and faith in many things they have been taught and have come to believe "about Yeshua." They have been assured that the doctrines their church teaches about Yeshua are rooted and grounded in the Old Testament Scriptures. They have been told by many of their "trusted" leaders that the Old Testament teaches "certain" doctrines about Yeshua that were confirmed by the Early believers of the New Testament Church. They have been misled by the New Testament by its copious use of mistranslation and misapplication of the Jewish Scriptures. There is one major problem which we must confront.

Answer for yourself: What is the date in which we believe the "Early" church taught such doctrines concerning Yeshua; such as the Virgin Birth, Incarnation, Trinity, and that Yeshua is God?

Answer for yourself: What would it do to your religious belief system if you came to find out that Yeshua' disciples and apostles never taught such doctrines which the Christian Church for the most part teaches today nor did their Gentile converts teach such things to those they witnessed to?

Answer for yourself: What would you think about your cherished Christian religious beliefs if you were to find out that they originated well after 160 A.D. and even up to 700 A.D. and instead of agreeing with what Yeshua and the Apostles originally believed really contradicts them?

Let us never forget that the Bible teaches that the Early Church was built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets (they were Jewish...remember?). If that is the case, then we should be able to find explicit evidence to the many teachings and doctrines connected with Yeshua originating in the Old Testament.

LET US ASK SOME QUESTIONS BEFORE WE BEGIN:

Answer for yourself: Do the doctrines concerning the Virgin Birth, the Trinity, and the Divinity of Yeshua as well as the Christian doctrine concerning the Messiah occur in the Old Testament?

Answer for yourself: Has Gentile misinterpretation of the Hebrew Bible led to the erroneous creation of such doctrines such as the Virgin Birth, Trinity and the Deity of Yeshua?

Answer for yourself: Are we today reading "backward" our current beliefs gathered from Christian preaching "into" Old Testament Scriptures which cannot and were never intended to support such doctrines?

Answer for yourself: Are we making Scriptures say things to support our faith instead of letting them dictate what we should believe?

Answer for yourself: Could these selected texts in the Old Testament be used to "prove" the accepted ideas and beliefs that the Christian church teaches about Yeshua if you had not already come to confess and believe these doctrines prior to your study and examination of the Bible to determine if such teachings are really in the language of the Bible?

Answer for yourself: Are many New Testament Scriptures claimed to teach "something" about Yeshua as was prophesied in the Old Testament but upon examination cannot be validated by the Old Testament?

Answer for yourself: If these Old Testament Scriptures were never intended to teach what often we have made them say, then what are the correct teachings concerning these Scriptures?

Answer for yourself: If God wanted to teach "such ideas" clearly in the Hebrew Bible, such ideas as propagated by the Christian Church which contradicts Biblical Judaism, then why not make them clear as they are recorded in the New Testament?

Upon examination of the Bible in the original languages in which it was written (Hebrew and Greek), you will find, as I did, that the men who knew Yeshua best of all, his brothers like James and Jude, his disciples like Matthew and Mark, never taught such doctrines, and to do so would have been considered Idolatry!

Answer for yourself: Would you like to know the truth concerning what the Bible teaches in the original Hebrew and Greek language concerning the Trinity, the Virgin Birth, and the concept of Yeshua being God?

THE FALSIFICATION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT DOCUMENTS

Following the first century and well before the canonization of the New Testament in 380 A.D., the Hebrew Scriptures were subjected to the most intense scrutiny by second and third century Gentiles to "make them yield" references to beliefs that no one had found previously. They were scrutinized in hopes of bringing an understanding to bear concerning the supposed death of Yeshua and the failure of the Kingdom of Heaven to appear as supposedly predicted by Yeshua. In doing so, many "fanciful" teachings were attributed to the Messiah and applied to Yeshua even when not applicable. Upon examination of Scripture in the original languages, we should be able to prove many of the teachings we have heard concerning Messiah and Yeshua to be either "correct" or "false". Let us begin at intense study in the next article.

LOOKING AT THE CREDIBILITY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT...ESPECIALLY SINCE IT MAKES JESUS "GOD"

Ever since I was a child growing up in the Baptist church I was told that the Bible is "inerrant and infallible." That became a matter of faith for me. Then one day in my mid-30's God called me to intense study of the Bible. I quickly found out in my personal studies and research into the Bible that the New Testament, for example, was far from inerrant and definitely not infallible! I take no joy in saying that to you but you are entitled to know the truth before we die and leave this plan of existence and give an account for the way we have lived and the decisions we have made as Soul; many of which are made because of the religious belief system we have inherited that comes from this New Testament of which I speak. Examine Mark's Gospel chapter 12:28-34 and we can easily see how the manuscripts have been altered, added to, and deleted when compared to other examples of the text as it examines the same event. In Mark 12, we find both this Pharisee lawyer and Jesus on best of terms and being quite courteous, respectful, and encouraging to each other. When compared with Luke 10:25-28 we are led to believe that the lawyer had come "to test Jesus." When compared with Matt. 22:15, 34-40, we quickly see that again the lawyer had come "to entangle him" with his words. In these last two accounts anything but encouragement is encountered, in fact open hostility is seen in the last two accounts. We can quickly see that Mark, being the earliest and first Gospel, gives us an account that is quite different from the latter accounts from Matthew and Luke, where confrontation, disrespect, and hostility is the order of the day. But more than that, Mark tells us that Jesus answers the question concerning the Greatest Commandment with the great statement of faith of Judaism; namely, the Sh'ma where God is One. Jesus tells us that belief in Monotheism is the greatest commandment, and since there is only one God, we are then to love Him with "all" our heart and Soul, thereby not sharing our love or devotion with another. Failure to do so is spiritual adultery! This becomes problematic for New Testament theology which depicts Jesus as the "literal" and "historical" Christ worthy of devotion and worship! THINK!

But manuscripts change and theology evolves parallel to the Roman Church Councils. The "latter" Gospels often conflict and contradict the earlier Gospel accounts which is found in Mark. In other words, the "fish" story gets longer as Roman theology evolves during the centuries. Notice the same account expressed in the later Gospels of Matthew and Luke completely removes Jesus's answer that the Sh'ma is the Greatest Commandment, and makes our response to "love God" the Greatest Commandment. This is not what the earliest Gospel has said. In fact the Jewish Sh'ma is completely removed from the latter Gospel accounts to this same question. Monotheism and the belief in only one God is the greatest commandment given man by God Himself because there is only One God! The Greatest Commandment, when read from the earliest Gospel (Mark) says Monotheism is the Greatest Commandment; not loving God or His manifestations like "the Christ" or other deities which comprise the Godhead. Loving God with all that is within us is truly our proper response to the Oneness of God. Selah!

There has been an insidious attempt, that unfortunately has succeeded greatly, to re-edit the original intent of the New Testament manuscripts in hundreds of places and the ancient Wisdom which they once contained and to remove the Jewishness of them and replace them with a Gentile authority. This Jewishness, mind you, is built upon the earlier Egyptian Religion and cosmology which holds the highest Divine truths ever given mankind. The Jews never changed their inherited ideas about God and His Oneness as taught them in ancient Egypt. We must look to the the Gentile early Catholic Church who desired to replace the authority of Jerusalem with the authority of Rome and in so doing blurs terribly the Divine idea of Unity in Diversity which so characterizes the God of the Cosmos.

Answer for yourself: So why did I even mention this event in this article about false teachings concerning Jesus? You must be aware that much of the New Testament which you have in your Bible has been adulterated, changed, corrupted, altered, and has come down to us not the way in which it was originally given by God to mankind. The ancient Spiritual Wisdom concerning "the Christ" and God in the New Testament has been doctored and altered to convey a viewpoint often 180 degrees opposite of God's intent and the Old Testament teachings of God and His "Christ/Messiah". In light of this one example, not mentioning hundreds of others, the Old Testament, the Hebrew Bible and not the Christian supposed faithful translation of the Hebrew Scriptures, should become our authority for faith and practice of the "faith of Jesus"! Keeping that in mind, we can now go on to further study for we shall see many other places where the texts have been changed and therefore contradicts the Old Testament (the Bible that Jews like this Jesus would have used), and upon whom which it (the New Testament) was supposed to be built when shared with the Gentiles.

CREATED IN THE IMAGE OF GOD

The study of "Jesus" is possibly the most difficult study that man can undertake for within it lies the hidden Spiritual Wisdom of the ancients expressed as far back as ancient Egypt. Lost to most Christians is the fact that personification of Divine concepts has mistakenly been represented and interpreted by the Roman Church solely in a "literal" and "historical" manner. In so doing the hidden Divine concepts that lie at the very hear of man's True Self and Soul is lost almost beyond recognition today unless he undertakes exhaustive study to find the truth that lies behind "the Jesus Story"; a story that can be found repeated in almost ever nation that has existed since time began. Sure, in their religions we find the same character that is so familiar to us today as "our Jesus" but unlike us never was their "Krst/Christ" ever to be understood solely in a "literal" or "historical" manner or limited to but one person other than themselves! We have lost so much; in fact we have lost the true Divinity of Mankind in the inherited hermeneutic and interpretation of the "Jesus" of the New Testament. To properly understand the relationship of Jesus and his God (the Christ to God), we must first try to understand the Jewish view of God and His relationship to man since the religion of the Jews originated from ancient Egypt under the hands of Moses known today to many as the Pharaoh Akhenaten of the 18th Dynasty. But as long as we read a Roman altered New Testament that has denigrated Judaism in almost every way possible then few if any can come away from reading the antisemitic New Testament and desire to inquire into Judaism for any Spiritual Truth. The mischaracterization of the historical Pharisees which we saw above was done on purpose in order to insure that all non-Jews who look to the Jewish Messiah/Christ for Spiritual direction in Judeo-Christianity look to Rome and not Jerusalem and Judaism who is made at Roman hands and pens to reject her own Messiah in the Roman texts we call the New Testament.

From the beginning of the Hebrew Bible (Old Testament) Scripture distinguishes sharply between God and man as a fleshly creature. But most misunderstand this "difference" never looking to the fact that the Kingdom of Heaven lies with mankind as well. Here we have the "secret science" of the ancients that God lies within the very heart of mankind as He does in all of creation.

Fleshly man is not God but God and Divine Mind is the very essence of man. God is the creator of Heaven and earth, for whom nothing is impossible. Man is a fleshly creature of his God and the vehicle for God's evolution, growth, and experience. Man is, without a doubt, God's highest creation and most noble creature, created after all other creatures had been brought into existence and man is given dominion over all creatures (Gen. 1:28). The most amazing and theologically significant statement is the declaration that man was created in the image and likeness of God (Gen. 1:26-27). But again the Jews cannot take credit for this fact since inheriting it from ancient Egypt long before. If the differences between God and man were anything other than absolute, the statement that man was created in the image of God would hardly have the significance it does. This is one of the most striking statements in the Bible because of our prior understanding of the difference between God and fleshly man. Understanding the magnitude of that difference between man and God in a visible way, we are overwhelmed by God's love for man to the extent that a similarity is put forth to connect man with God. Hidden with man is God as "the Christ Mind"; incarnated at the birth of every child while yet imprisoned in this fleshly body of death. No wonder all the ancient saviors and "Krsts" were born in and around animals and caves like our "Jesus Story" or as Jesus "wrapped" in burial, swaddling clothes, or imaged as mummies. The Spirit of God had fallen to its allegorical death in "matter". This makes me think of Phil 2:5-8: 5 Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: 6 Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: 7 But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: 8 And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. (KJV) Few Christians ever read this metaphysical passage and understand it correctly in their Bible being conditioned to read every passage in a "literal" and "historical" manner. In truth had you ever read the great philosophers of Greece who studied at the feet of the greatest Egyptians you would have found that God "fell" not into sin in mankind as Roman theology would have you understand, but into "matter" where He voluntarily submitted Himself to limitation, sickness, pain, and even the allegorical death imposed upon Spirit by Mother Matter. Here in the descent of God into mankind and into the "likeness of man" where God is "fashioned into the likeness of man" so humbling Himself through such Self-surrender to Self-imposed limitations of "matter" that the ancient likened it to a "death" and called it the "sacrifice" of God that we, as mankind, might live, experience, and evolve that part of God which is ourselves. Given the historical fact that Rome never crucified with a "cross" or a stake with a "crossbeam" as depicted in most everyone's thoughts today of a typical cross, we find that God "falling from Heaven" down the steps of Jacob's Ladder (think of the Kabbalah as the ladder from Heaven to Earth and "matter") "dies" as Spirit descends from and through every plane of higher Spiritual existences. This "crossing" and descent from plane to plane of Divine Spirit/Energy was termed by the ancients the "crossification" of God and likened to God being crucified in the flesh of mankind. From this original ancient understanding of the sacrifice of God that there might be Divine life in mankind we end up today with the sole crucifixion of a supposed "literal" and "historical" Christ when this "crucifixion" of "the Christ Mind of God" has occurred in every person who ever took breath. Never has such injustice been done to a Spiritual Concept as has been done to the incarnation of God and "Christ" into every child of God. The exact meaning of the likeness that exists between man and God is not easy to define in just one article. Nevertheless it is clear that creation in the image of God bestows upon man the unique dignity that only God possesses.

IN THE IMAGE BUT NOT IDENTICAL

Yet, in spite of this unique dignity of being created in the image of God, it would be a grave error, from the point of view of the Bible, to overlook the absolute difference between God and man. It is easy for man to forget the difference. When the serpent tempts Eve (Gen. 3:5), he tells her that if she will eat of the forbidden fruit, "your eyes will be opened and you will be like gods..." A similar theme can be felt in the Tower of Babel incident (Gen. 11:1-9), in which men decide to "build ourselves a city and tower with its top in the heavens, and make a name for ourselves." The two allegorical stories (tower and eating the forbidden fruit) reveal man aspiring to attain some form of divinity apart from God, and invariably this is met by God with the greatest disapproval. Ezekiel 28:2 condemns the prince of Tyre for claiming to be God:

"In your arrogance you say, 'I am god; I sit throned like a god on the high seas.' Yet you are a man and not God, though you consider your thoughts the thoughts of God."

In the Hebrew Bible it is essential for man to accept his creaturely status and not to confuse himself with God; yet God is within him. Whenever man yields to the temptation to confuse himself as the sole God, he incurs God's anger and is severely punished. But just as wrong is the fact that man knows not of his hidden Divinity within himself asleep awaiting man's "resurrection from the dead".

2 Cor 13:5 5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates? (KJV)

SEARCHING FOR GOD WITHIN YOU..."WITHIN YOU"...MAKE NO MISTAKE ABOUT IT

But this dear reader is only the beginning of your awakening to the great Spiritual truth that Christianity down through the centuries has so mischaracterized. Parallel with man's temptation to confuse himself as the only God or to replace God with himself, is the horror of the Hebrew Bible at idolatry. Idolatry is the worship of false gods and sadly dear brother and sister this applies certainly to the "Jesus" of the New Testament which is mistakenly depicted as a "literal" and "historical" God in Christian theology. The Council of Nicea made this "Jesus" God by a vote of hands and the manuscripts were continued altered to reflect such theology. In the Hebrew Bible only the God of Israel and the Universe is God. To worship man-made God or mistaken theology even with the best intentions is the worst possible transgression against the Creator of the world. The Ten Commandments makes this very clear (Ex. 20:2-6). After stating

"I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of Egypt, out of the land of slavery," the text continues:

You shall have no other gods to set against me. You shall not make a carved image for yourself nor the likeness of anything in the heavens above, or on the earth below, or in the waters under the earth. You shall not bow down to them or worship them; for I, the Lord your God, am a jealous God. I punish the children for the sins of the fathers to the third and fourth generations of those who hate me. But I keep faith with thousands, with those who love me and keep my commandments.

From this passage it is very clear the revulsion and dislike God has for all material representations of the Divine. Any worship directed at a material being, whether created by human artistry or a natural object or living thing (such as an animal or a man), is idolatry. There is a huge difference between personification of "the Christ" as God and the "literal" and "historical" depiction of "God as the Christ" and the worship of the same! This applies to a Jesus of Rome's imagination and his false depiction in the New Testament as the sole incarnation of God among mankind! Study is so necessary given the sad state of the corrupted manuscripts which comprise our New Testament today. The true God, who created the world and chose the people of Israel to be His ambassadors, is an invisible God who cannot be contained by anything material (a man). Truly God is within man, but man is not all that God is by any stretch of the imagination.

In Deut. 4:15-21 we read:

Take ye therefore good heed unto yourselves; for on the day when the Lord spoke to you out of the fire on Horeb, you saw no figure of any kind (A MAN); so take good care not to fall into the degrading practice of making figures carved in the similitude or form of a man or a woman, or of any animal on earth or bird that flies in the air, or of any reptile on the ground or fish in the waters under the earth. Nor must you raise your eyes to the heavens and look up to the sun, the moon, and the stars, all the host of the haven, and be led on to bow down to them and worship them; the Lord your God assigned these to the various peoples under heaven. But you are the people whom the Lord brought our of Egypt, from the smelting furnace, and took for His own possession, as you are to this day.

Notice the finality of God's prohibition against worshipping anything material.

It could not be said more clearly, whether the object worshipped is a statue or a living animal or a human being.

Answer for yourself: Is God the same yesterday, today, and tomorrow? Can God change the Old Testament and contradict something as important as His commandments concerning idolatry? No. What a message that all Christians need to hear and understand correction concerning the depiction of the Christian "Christ".

CAN CHRISTIANITY CONTRADICT GOD AND GET AWAY WITH IT?

It is in light of this passage, and many more, that the Christian claim that Jesus was "God" and identical with the Father must be evaluated for proper understanding. Let us not misunderstand this basic infallible premise: Every Christian believes that the Old Testament is true for it brings the very basis for Christianity. Yet it is possible for the Old Testament to be true and the New Testament false, but it is impossible for Christianity for the New Testament to be true and the Old Testament false. Shalom.

WHO REALLY WAS JESUS..."Lord" OR "LORD"...A MAN OR A GOD?

Christianity claims that Jesus is God.

Answer for yourself: Does God believe the same thing that the Christian Church teaches about this subject?

Answer for yourself: Just because Paul calls Jesus "Lord" (master, ruler, preeminent one, first among many) does that mean the same thing as "LORD" (YHVH, Jehovah) in the Old Testament? Selah!

"Lord" does not mean the same thing as "LORD [all capital letters]." Let us not forget that the translators of your Bible are the ones who determine if "lord" is written in capital letters (meaning Father God) or in small letters (meaning master, ruler, or preeminent one), and this was done in the Bibles we carry based upon the translator's own personal theology, which may or may not be correct!

DID JESUS BECOME "Lord" OR "LORD"?

"Lord" is a New Testament key-word. We find it used quite often in the Gospels and Acts, as well of the epistles as: "the lord", "the lord Jesus Christ" and "our lord Jesus Christ." Jesus is often referred to as "lord", yet in the Synoptic Gospels he never accepts such a dignity or attributes to himself a "lordly" function. Accurate scholarship will discover that only a minority of scholars believe that the term "the lord" was even a term for address in Jesus lifetime. It is generally assumed that it was an invention of the "post-Easter" period and has nothing to do with Jesus himself. We do find out, however, that the use of "the lord" often was used as a mode of address from disciples to their teacher. This form of address was little more than an expression of courtesy. It is in the Pauline writings that "Jesus" becomes preeminently "Lord." It is Paul who applies the phrase indiscriminately to the historical Jesus as well as to the "exalted", "coming", triumphant and ruling Christ. The title was not coined by him but was inherited from the primitive community of worshippers. The resurrection is singled out as the most important factor in the development of the "lord" concept. In regard to the relationship of the Christological title "lord" and the Septuagint divine name, "Kyrious"=the Lord, it is unlikely to have been used in connection with Jesus because of its employment as a designation of God the Father. On the other hand, it is because Jesus is called "lord" (meaning master, sir, preeminent one) with a little "l" that, without understanding, many Old Testament passages are incorrectly applied to Jesus. When a Christian makes this mistake of connecting passages in the Old Testament mentioning "LORD" (a designation for God the Father-YHVH) with those in the New Testament mentioning the "Lord" (small case letters; referring to Jesus), he subsequently has made a "Christian" interpretation and reading of the Bible and mistakenly connected "lord" (respect) with "LORD" (God-YHVH) and therefore incorrectly has called Jesus=God (that Jesus is God). Without care you can read that Jesus "is God" into all the texts in the New Testament. This is a grave error that can only be found outside Israel where Pauline devotees connected the idea of the Messiah with their pagan myths concerning their dying and rising Gods. Thus Jesus became "God". In other words, although originally the title conveyed no identification of Jesus as God (in Jerusalem, in Israel, among his disciples and Apostles), Jesus would be identified as God later among pagans who became believers. Jesus (as interpreted as God) would be "read-into" the pagan myths of their gods. It is only in this Hellenistic (Greek) world with its many lords and deities that such erroneous connections are made between Jesus and "LORD" instead of understanding Jesus as "lord" (authority) since he is the Messiah. Unfortunately the term came to be mean "divinity" among Gentiles. The Jews knew better. Notice that Paul did not make such a mistake. He understood in I Cor. 8:6 that "Yet for us there is only one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we for Him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and through whom we live." Paul says there is only One God the Father (LORD) and one "Lord"; notice he does not say one "LORD Jesus Christ". He knows better than to make Jesus a God!

Jesus never called himself "the lord", nor was he so designated by his disciples or any Palestinian Hebrew-speaking believer. The title "kyrious (lord) was borrowed from pagan Hellenistic terminology and applied to Jesus by Gentile Christians on Greco-Roman soil only. They modeled their proclamation, "Jesus is lord," on the worship of the "Lord" Osiris (or Sarapis, or Hermes, or the "Lady" Isis, Artemis, or Cybele) in the mystery religions, and on the Roman emperors (Kyrios/Dominus et Deus noster), especially from the time of Gaius Caligula (A.D. 37-41) onward. Now hear this: this is well BEFORE THE WRITING OF THE NEW TESTAMENT! Thus you can easily see that when men began to call on the name of "the lord Jesus Christ," it was Gentile pagans, who had converted, yet brought their pagan ideas and vocabulary with them that was responsible for the connection of the idea that Jesus (the human Messiah of God) was the same as God. All they did was change the names of their pagan gods to Biblical names. Thus, Jesus was erroneously connected with their previous pagan gods whom they called "LORD". Thus Jesus became "LORD" instead of "lord".

The term "lord" can be used in a variety of ways. It was as a title a mode of address in the most general sense; secondarily, as an acknowledgment of Yeshua's authority. In neither case is it invested with any "Christological" significance, and even less with a reference, however faint, to divine "lordship." The "divine lordship" first emerges in Matt. 8:2, where a leper invoked Jesus as "lord" also "worshipped" him. The Greek word used in Matthew renders in the Septuagint (Greek translation of the Hebrew Bible) the Hebrew verb, "to prostrate oneself". It is important to know that this verb "to prostrate oneself" is employed in the Bible in relation to men as well as to God. And who would be prepared to assert or claim that the Matthean parable makes Jesus "God" just because a servant is said to have knelt down and worshipped him? It was common practice to kneel or prostrate oneself before one of preeminence (like a king). This does not mean the man being worshipped or revered is God. In light of this evidence we must admit that Jesus was occasionally addressed as "lord"; but mainly because of his teaching ministry. To Jesus he had no self-awareness that he is "LORD-God". This understanding is the work of the Gentile church.

The second stage of doctrinal evolution of "lord" took place in Palestinian Judeo-Christianity and centered on the expectation of Yeshua's return. In addition to the eschatological overtones of the invocation, "lord, lord!" in the Gospels and the parable of the Ten Virgins, the Hebrew-speaking worshipper's Maranatha appeal in I Cor. 16:22 testifies to the metamorphosis of "lord" (meaning teacher) into "Our lord" (Universal Judge). It is here the term takes on a Christological concept which includes both an earthly and ultimate activity of Jesus (at the Second Coming).

The third stage, in the development of the term "lord" saw the notion come into being of the "exalted lord", "sitting on the right hand of God", a title explained as coming from a "Messianic enthronement". Whereas "the lord" (teacher) and the "glorified Messiah" (ascended and coming again) were two separate concepts, Gentile Hellenistic "Judeo-Christianity" brought them together by interpreting Psalm 110:1: "The Lord (God) said to my lord (the Messiah), "Sit at my right hand..."

The combination of "lord" and the "glorified Messiah" came about because of the "act of inauguration"; such action conferred "lordship" on Jesus. Such "lordship" is still a far cry from "divine dignity". Eventually, the distinction is blurred between the two.

The last of the evolutionary stages is that which witnessed the transformation of the "exalted lord" into a Divine Being, a process which took place in the realm of Gentile Christianity and not Jewish Christianity. The ultimate Hellenistic-Jewish contribution to this is Phil. 2:9-11. Understand what I am now going to say. Isaiah 45:22-25 says that we are to look unto YHVH and be saved! YHVH calls to all the earth to look to Him, for "I am God, and there is no other" who can save men. YHVH has sworn to Himself that unto HIM (not Messiah or Jesus) that every knee will bow and every tongue will confess that "surely in the LORD (YHVH) is righteousness and strength; that in YHVH alone will all the descendants of Israel be justified." Notice again that God said that in Himself alone will this be done, not by another. There is only one "LORD" and His name is YHVH, Jehovah, God Almighty!

It was under the influence of the Gentile pagan mystery religions, and as a result of a confrontation with the emperor cult of Rome, that belief in the divine lordship of Jesus came into being; a faith so powerful that the Gentile-Christian martyr refused, even at the price of his life, to profane it by recognizing Caesar as LORD (http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com).

DID PAUL REALLY TEACH THAT JESUS WAS GOD?

I COR. 8:6 TEACHES US THAT YESHUA IS NOT GOD

Paul, the author of I Cor. 8:6 states "yet for us there is only one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we for Him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and through whom we live." Notice Paul makes a distinction in identity between the "only one God, the Father" and the "one Lord Jesus Christ." He separates the two identities and calls the Father "God" and Jesus "master, ruler, preeminent one or sir." The word "lord" only means master or ruler and not "God" but the capitalization of the word "lord" implies otherwise. The Greek text never did this.

We need to take a second and pay special notice of this fact; the word "Lord" in this passage is capitalized but it need not be, owing to the fact that in the Greek manuscripts such designations were not present. The passage says the same thing if it were "lord Jesus Christ" or "Lord Jesus Christ". The capitalization is the work of the Biblical interpreters who are passing along their collective "theologies" and not the work of the writer some 2000 years ago.

Answer for yourself: Why is the word "lord" capitalized then?

The commentator makes his theological statement by capitalizing "lord" but this makes an unconscious connection of identity with the Father God that Paul definitely did not intend to make in this passage. Jesus as "the Christ" is the anointed servant of God, not God the father as stated very clearly in this passage.

EPHESIANS 4:6 TEACHES US JESUS IS NOT GOD

Again, in Ephesians 4:6, the apostle Paul states

"one God and Father of all (YHVH is the God of all and this includes him being the God of Jesus as well), who is above all (includes Jesus), and through all, and in you all.

Again Paul makes a clear distinction between only "one God and Father" and not two Fathers. The reason Paul says this is the understanding and foundation he had (as well as understood by the early church made up of Jewish apostles and prophets) that the Old Testament taught strict Monotheism.

Look with me at Malachi 2:10 where we find the prophet speaking:

"have we not all one Father? Has not one God created us?"

That is a good question. I understand that to include Jesus, the man who was the anointed of God. What was understood so clearly in pre-Christian Judaism, and later reinforced by Paul in the early years of the Jewish Messianic movement, has become today a religion that has lost sight of Monotheism and borders on polytheism with the teaching of the Trinity (3 persons of God). Besides that, God considers such a belief that makes Jesus "God" no less offensive than belief in Molech as "God". Such religious belief in Jesus as God is out and out idolatry. Shalom.

IS ETERNAL LIFE DEPENDENT UPON BELIEVING YESHUA IS GOD?

It is often said that to be a "Christian" one must accept Yeshua as one's personal savior, as God, as the Messiah, and as the Son of God for eternal life and salvation.

Answer for yourself: Did Yeshua say that? If so, where did he say it or did the church of the third and fourth century begin to say it?

Take a minute and look at what he did say about eternal life.

YESHUA'S BELIEF ABOUT ETERNAL LIFE

Yeshua teaches us the value of performing the mitzvoth (commandments/laws) for eternal life. Matt. 19:16-19 should be consulted; it is there Yeshua will be asked what one must "do" (not believe) to have eternal life.

First of all, Yeshua does not correct or clarify the question. He endeavors to answer it to the fullest when he says

"if you want to enter into life (eternal life was the question), keep the commandments."

Wait a minute, that can't be right! I have always heard that we are to believe and go to Heaven, but Yeshua (Jesus) tells this man to obey the commandments and go to Heaven.

Answer for yourself: Does not Yeshua (Jesus) know better?

Answer for yourself: What if I recite and proclaim my faith in the Apostle's Creed; isn't that enough?

Answer for yourself: How about one quick altar prayer; is that enough?

No, for as Yeshua is concerned, faith that disobeys or fails to obey the commandments is dead! It is a quick trip to Hell! But I thought I could go to Heaven if I asked Yeshua into my heart and went to church three times a year. "After all I believe in him, isn't that enough?" Evidently not if you believe the words of Yeshua (Jesus). The bottom line is this: faith that obeys and "works" in the Kingdom" saves.

PAUL LITERALLY CONTRADICTS THE TORAH AS WELL AS

YESHUA

Paul said that

"a man is not justified by the works of Torah, but by faith in Messiah Yeshua...for by the works of the Law no flesh shall be justified" (Gal. 2:16).

Answer for yourself: What works of the Law was Paul referring to?

Answer for yourself: Was he saying that God does not want us to be concerned with "works" such as "Thou shall not kill, Thou shall not commit adultery, Thou shall not steal, Thou shall not covet, etc.?"

Maybe he was referring to Lev. 20:26 where God commanded his people to "not eat anything with the blood still in it nor practice divination or soothsaying".

Answer for yourself: Did God decide that it was permissible to do this since were are no longer under the "law" but under "grace"? Surely not!

You see, we cannot take one Scripture out of the Bible and make a doctrine upon it. When we do we violate many other Scriptures which, when considered, gives us the "Big Picture".

Answer for yourself: But can we be justified when we practice soothsaying, consult mediums, or dip into horoscopes yet believe in Yeshua? I think not!

PAUL TEACHES "ANOTHER GOSPEL" WHEN IT COMES TO THE LAW

Paul in his teachings in the New Testament often deviates from what the Torah teaches as well as what Yeshua teaches. Most when they hear such a thing think it is impossible. Just because you have never seen such diametrically opposite teachings of Paul in the light of this understanding does not make it not so. I am confident that faith in God with concurrent obedience to the teachings of the "Yeshua" brings acceptance with God. When Paul disagrees then we must reject such opposite teaching on several grounds; especially in light of his constant rejection by the Jerusalem church as well as the "doctoring" of the New Testament text by the monks of Rome for over 1000 years.

God looks to our works to see our faith, not the reverse. One without the other is deficient and profits nothing. True Biblical faith always responds in obedience. To do otherwise is the opposite of faith; unbelief.

Notice how Paul completely has a different gospel from that taught by Yeshua. In Gal. 2:16 Paul states, "If righteousness comes through the Law (only), then Messiah died in vain."

Answer for yourself: What would serve the purpose of Yeshua's death in a sacrificial sense if my obedience alone was enough?

To answer that we must look to what Yeshua has to say about the issue.

When the rich young man asked Yeshua,

"What good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life?" Yeshua answered, "If you wish to enter into life (eternal life), keep the mitzvoth (commandments)."

When asked, "Which ones?", Yeshua replied by quoting from the second Tablet of the Law (Ten Commandments). Yeshua was referring to "man's responsibilities to man" and not to "man's responsibilities to God", for in obeying the second Tablet of the Law we fulfill the social responsibilities we have man-to-man. Left unfulfilled is man's spiritual responsibilities to worship God properly and come before Him according to obedience to the First Tablet of the Law (restoring the Hebrew Roots to Christianity). (See Mat. 19:17-19 and Mark 10:17-19).

Matt 19:17-19 17 And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. 18 He saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, 19 Honour thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What do all the above mentioned "commandments" have in common? They are from the second tablet of the Law and if you remember from our studies on atonement ONLY the unintentional sins of the First Tablet of the Law were covered under "blood sacrifices" and not any of the Second Tablet of the law. If you have not studies our two series on "atonement" you must do that right away if you intend to understand Jesus and the New Testament correctly.

Mark 10:17-19 17 And when he was gone forth into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to him, and asked him, Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life? 18 And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God. 19 Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honour thy father (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What do all the above mentioned "commandments" have in common?

As we saw above they all refer to Commandments from the Second Tablet of the Law where "repentance, confession, prayer, alms giving, etc." were the sole methods God gave for atonement of the sins of the Second Tablet of the Law (one's LIFE is give as atonement..when we do these above things...Lev. 17:10-11).

Don't get mad at me, I didn't say it; Yeshua did!

Answer for yourself: Which message will you choose....Paul's or Yeshua's...especially since they are diametrically opposite to each other?

Answer for yourself: Is it possible that obtaining everlasting life, justification, and righteousness are all different things, and that these all may be obtained or imputed by "doing" the commandments of God as Yeshua said it was.

Answer for yourself: I will ask you again: Are all the Jews who looked for the coming of their Messiah "damned" because they don't accept the Christian Church's pagan concepts of their Messiah even though they "do" the commandments often better than Christians? No way!

Remember what Yeshua just said in Matt. 19: 17-19. According to Yeshua, if you can believe him, Torah observant Jews are not "lost" and going to hell. Think about it hard!

JESUS...IS HE THE SON OF GOD...AND DOES THAT MAKE HIM GOD?

Answer for yourself: What would happen to the majority of the Christian church's teachings about Yeshua if the average Christian knew for himself that the believing Jews in the times following Yeshua never held many of the beliefs of him we do, and believed that Yeshua (whom they believed was the Messiah was not God but a human being? Would this make him any less of a Messiah for you and me? For me, it does not!

Answer for yourself: What if the average Christian in the churches of America were to study in-depth and learn that the teachings concerning the Messiah in their Bible (when correctly interpreted) always taught that he was to be only the human seed of David and not God the Divine?

We fail to realize such truths because we are often confused by other terminology applied in the Scriptures to the Messiah. For example, many mistakenly believe that by using the term "Son of God" we declare Yeshua to be God! That is not what the term means.

Answer for yourself: Does calling Yeshua the "son of God" make him God?

The term "Son of God" is often used in the New Testament in connection with Yeshua, but this is not an assertion that Yeshua was God.

The term "Son of God" is used frequently in the Hebrew Bible to refer to the people of Israel.

- Deut 14:1 "You are the children of the Lord your God..."
- Isa. 1:2 "Hear O heavens, and give ear O earth: for the Lord hath spoken, I have nourished and brought up children..."

The term "Son of God" also refers to David (a man)....the anointed king of Israel:

- 2 Sam 7:14 "I will be his father, and he shall be my son. If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men."
- Psm 2:7 "I will declare the decree: The LORD hath said to me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee."
- Psm 89:27 "Also I will make him my firstborn, higher than the kings of the earth."

In the many instances where "Son of God" occurs in the Hebrew Bible, of which I have given only a small sample, the term clearly means "elected or chosen by God." The New Testament contains several references to believing saints being called "sons of God": John 1:12, Rom. 8:14, Rom. 8:19, Phil. 2:15, and 1 John 3:1-2.

The meaning in all instances are "men or women" who are chosen and set aside by God for some task or purpose (both Jews and Christians). By no means does this mean that the people of Israel or the king of Israel is God in any sense!

David, for instance, although called "son of God" is not God. Yet, we cannot escape the fact that Christianity believes and teaches that Yeshua was God. You and I have been taught that since we were children.

Answer for yourself: Did you every investigate the claim for yourself?

Several years ago I became concerned, because of other related things I had learned, that quite possibly I might be involved in idolatry when I worship God and was not aware of it. This troubled my spirit immensely, so I began to research the topic for myself over the last several years. Unfortunately, so many of our leaders in our churches stand before us and preach and teach us what they have been told and not what they found for themselves. Thus, we spread error and cause multitudes to become idolators and die in that condition before God.

One last thought on this matter, it is this claim (that Yeshua is God) that makes it so serious for a Jew to embrace Christianity. The bottom line is that in calling Yeshua the "son of God" does not make him God any more than you or me. We must pay attention to how the word is used in the Scriptures and to force a meaning upon it, just because of our erroneous Christian teachings, does great harm. Shalom.

THE ABSENCE OF "TO BE VERBS IN HEBREW" & CALLING THINGS BY THE NAME OF GOD

In Matt. 6:26, 30, & 31-32, we find only a few of the twenty-four references in the New Testament where we find the New Testament Jesus speaking of "your" Father in heaven. Notice please that the New Testament Jesus makes a distinction between the location of God and himself in these verses. He directed the people's attention to Heaven where God the Father is in residence. In the Gospel of John, chapter sixteen, the New Testament Jesus continually speaks of "the Father," thereby again separating himself from the Father in heaven. Also the New Testament Jesus speaks of "my Father" sixty-five times in the New Testament.

Answer for yourself: What are we to learn from this?

Evidently the New Testament Jesus considered YHWH his Father God in Heaven Whom was someone other than himself in a place other than where he was at present.

Lastly, the New Testament Jesus is quoted three times in the New Testament of speaking of "my God;" again indicating the New Testament Jesus's belief in his own personal God. Not only that, but we never find the New Testament Jesus praying to himself, nor do we find the New Testament Jesus receiving offerings from the people when he has just instructed them to "render unto Caesar what is Caesar's, and unto God what is God's." The people gave to God through the Temple offerings, and no one would ever understand such a comment to refer to the fact that someone was to give unto Jesus or any other human being what belongs to God. Lastly, when called "good master," the New Testament Jesus quickly alerts and reminds the speaker that as far as he was concerned, there was only one good, and that is the Father in heaven. Again, the New Testament Jesus makes a distinction between God (YHWH) and himself. So should we!

HOW DID GENTILE CHRISTIANITY COME TO THE CONCLUSION THAT JESUS IN THE NEW TESTAMENT IS EQUAL TO GOD? LET US FIRST LOOK AT THE GRAMMAR OF THE OLD TESTAMENT

As we are not Hebrew scholars, it is not expected that you are to acquaint yourself with the laws of grammar of the Hebrew language. To do so would be very prosperous to your understanding of the Bible however. We begin with grammar, because a detailed study of several passages will bring completely different understandings of the texts from what the traditional Christians have been taught. Lacking skills in Hebrew, many have continued to teach what they know not.

First of all, there are no "to be" verbs in Hebrew! This is very important. Exodus 17:15 records for us that Moses built an altar and called it "Jehovah Nissi" (which means in Hebrew "the Lord our banner"). Now, understand that the term "Jehovah Nissi" is the name for God! Now, these rocks that made up the altar are only called by God's name; that does not make them the same as or equal with God. The rocks did not actually become God the Father!

Let us look at another example. Judges 6:24 records for us that Gideon built an altar and called is "Jehovah Shalom." Again, calling these rocks "God" does not make them God!

With this understanding we must begin to look at Jer. 23:5-6: "Behold, the days are coming, says the LORD (YHWH), that I will raise to David a Branch (term for messiah) of righteousness; a King shall reign and prosper, and execute judgment and righteousness in the earth. In His days Judah will be saved, and Israel will dwell safely; now this is His name by which He will be called: The Lord our Righteousness".

This is a very problematic verse, and proper understanding how to translate this verse will open-up the rest of the Bible for you. First of all, let us not forget we are dealing with a Hebrew document and there are no "to be" verbs in the language of Hebrew. Recalling what we just learned about Hebrew not containing "to be verbs" and that things are often called by the name of God, yet never being God themselves, then calling the human "branch" (descendent of David) by the name of God does not make him God! Thus it is NOT proper to understand that because something is called "something or given a name representing something or someone else" that it is actually the "substance" by whose name it is called. Here we find David's seed is referred to as the "branch of David." But notice again, that the words Branch, King, and His are all capitalized.

Answer for yourself: Why capital letters here since the original manuscripts did not contain them?

Again, this is the interpreter's opinion and his personal theological stance that allows him to decide for you and me that these words need to be capitalized and we then are let to unconsciously identified this human descendent "as God." This is a grave error!

Answer for yourself: Again, let me ask you, in the days of the New Testament Jesus was Judah saved? Did Israel dwell safely? Certainly not! If anything, they were continually persecuted and martyred, as many as 500 per day were being crucified. Rome had occupied the nation and had no plans of leaving. Thus, this prophecy could not refer to the first-coming of the New Testament Jesus. But also notice, that since there are no "to be" verbs, that the passage is certainly not calling the New Testament Jesus "God."

What the passage is saying, however, is that when the Messiah will be raised up that he will be like God in righteousness. The Messiah will do what God the Father will do. He will judge righteously like his God and Father judges.

LOOKING AT ISA. 9:6

The same principle applies here.

Isa 9:6 6 For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. (KJV)

Since you now understand how the Hebrew works please try to understand that calling this "child" which was born of a young woman (Hezekiah is the historical child referenced in Isa. 7) by the names of God does not make him God. And any connection of these appellations to great righteous leaders or teachers, even to Jesus, if one wants to make such an analogy, does in no way make such an individual "LITERALLY" God.

LOOKING AT JESUS

Yes, the New Testament Jesus is made to have many Divine attributes, but he is not God the Father. Calling the Messiah or even the New Testament Jesus by a "name for God" no more makes him God than calling a pile of stones, making up an altar, God! To say that the messiah IS the "LORD God our Righteousness" or that the New Testament Jesus is "the" LORD God our Righteousness does serious damage to the text and is a horrible mistranslation of the text. You may understand that now, since you have read this teaching, but the early Gentiles who interpreted the Bible following the destruction of Israel by the Romans made many such errors in interpretation of the text (they did not know the Hebrew language and could not interpret or translate the Hebrew text properly) and we have their erroneous doctrines today as testimony of their mistakes. Please understand this principle, because it is of considerable importance as we continue on in our study. Jeremiah is not calling the Messiah "God" or "Jehovah" or "YHWH." It is only a symbolic representation that makes a general statement that the Jewish messiah will be Godly, not God! The New Testament Jesus is a Godly example for all Souls, but is not God!

ISAIAH 9:6 AS JESUS WOULD HAVE UNDERSTOOD IT...SHOULDN'T WE INTERPRET IT THE SAME AS JESUS?

Remembering what you have just learned from the previous article concerning the absence of "to be verbs" in Hebrew, then let us now proceed with Isaiah 9:6 and understand correctly what is being said.

The text says:

"For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given; and the government will be upon His shoulder, and his name will be called Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace."

I suppose this is the best proof-text that Christianity can use to prove to themselves that Yeshua is God. When those in Christianity finally begin to understand Hebrew they will have to repent and ask forgiveness for practicing error and idolatry. I had too. Let us recall that there are no "to be" verbs in Hebrew [see previous article] Remember that Isaiah was written in Hebrew.

Answer for yourself: Why is the word "child" in Capitals in your Bible when the original manuscripts did not contain them?

Again the word "child" has been capitalized in your Bibles to make sure you agree with the Gentile translator who represents the orthodox position of the pagan Gentile church for centuries. The word "child" was not capitalized in the Hebrew manuscripts!

There are three ways to properly understand this verse.

First of all, terms of God were often associated in the Oriental culture with great men and kings. When a human king was called "mighty god" is was understood the power of this king was like a god; invincible. When he was called "god" it was understood that the king was the all-powerful one. When is was said that he is an "everlasting Father" the meaning was quite similar to today's "God save the king." It was a term of address implying a desire for long life be given to the king. 1 Kings 1:31 states: "Let the lord King David live forever." The same is seen in Neh. 2:3. These terms, used in this way, was not to understood that a human ruler or king was truly God!

A second interpretation is the lack of the "to be" verbs (mentioned above), which when translated into English, tend to make the uninitiated and uninformed reader believe the child IS one and the same "being" by whose names he is called. These names are only intended to described him and manifestations about him and his character. To say it another way, adjectives in a sentence describe the subject of the sentence, they are never the same as the subject of the sentence. Just because the "child" (human child) is called "Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace" does not mean that he must be one and the same with the titles given him. It is mistakenly understood that since those "titles" are titles for God the Father, then the child IS all those titles and is himself God! This is incorrect according to the rules of grammar of Hebrew. The child's is ONLY to be called by these titles (again we see the 'to be' verb). The child of Isa. 9:6 is to do and be like the one whom he is called. He is not to be confused with the identity of the one he imitates! Selah! (means pause and think about it).

It is easy to understand Yeshua as a Wonderful Counselor (he has Godly wisdom), as like a Might God (he truly was very powerful and his ministry was full of anointed miracles), as like an Everlasting Father (referring to the pre-existence of the "anointed of God" before Genesis 1:1), and as like a Prince of Peace (his ministry brought repentance and reconciliation with the Father, thereby ending the enmity between man and God; thus bringing peace). These terms for "God" are not meant to mean that the child is "God," only that he will exhibit many Godly traits and characteristics in his life and ministry. Now, if the correct interpretation of the text in the original language does not teach that the child is God, then how do we have the right to teach that Yeshua is God if the Bible never said he was? Please tell your Pastor what you just learned and help him to teach his congregation correctly.

Thirdly, and even more interesting, is that in Hebrew it is quite common to use phrases or terms for God to complete sentences (The LORD our righteousness, the LORD our banner, the LORD our peace, etc.). This was spoken of above. A good example for us that has misled the church so much is Isa. 7:14:

"Therefore the Lord Himself will give you s sign: Behold, the virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and shall call His name Immanuel."

There are so many errors in this verse as transcribed into the English I don't know where to begin. The sentence in question states that God will give a "sign" and that sign is related to the conception of a child. Remember, that the verse in Hebrew does not say the child is "Immanuel" for there are no "to be" verbs in Hebrew. Thus, the "child" is not to be Immanuel!

Next the sentence ends with praise to God ("Immanuel") because in the Hebrew language it is not uncommon to give praise to God in a sentence describing God's accomplishments or some great work He has done and to conclude the descriptive sentence with such praises to God. It is quite proper in Hebrew to make a statement about God (that "God is with us") in finishing a sentence. It is similar to our custom of praising God in conversation by saying "bless God" or "Praise the LORD." We do it all the time, and so did the Hebrews!

Next, we find that in the context of the verse, the Hebrew word translated "virgin" in English is incorrect. This is not the meaning of the term at all! In Hebrew, "almah" means a young woman, of which she may or may not have had prior sexual experience. It does not mandate she be a virgin. Anytime the Bible wants to make a distinction between a "virgin" and "non-virgin" for legal reasons (in a court of law and in matters of divorce), God uses the term "betulah" and never "almah." Christianity claims that Yeshua was born of a virgin, and bases such belief off a verse in the New Testament as well as Isa. 7:14. However, there is no linguistic reason to translate "almah" as virgin. Proverbs 30:19 tells of four paths or four ways: a way of an eagle in air, a serpent on a rock, a ship in the sea, and a man with an "almah." All four of these examples have in common that there is absolutely no way to demonstrate where an eagle has flown, where a ship has sailed, where a serpent has crawled on a hard rock, or a sexual experience after a woman has had other prior sexual experiences. Since a virgin has demonstrable differences in her physical body both before and following her first sexual encounter, the term used to make such distinctions would not be "almah" but "betulah." Likewise, Isaiah tells us that a young woman (with prior sexual experience since he used "almah") shall conceive and bear a child, and before that child (verse 16) shall know to refuse the evil and choose the good, the land that you dread (Assyrian invaders) will be forsaken by both her kings (a child learns right from wrong usually by the age of 2-3 years). If you keep reading the passage you will find that within about 2-3 years (before the child learns good from bad) God will bring His Presence (Immanuel) upon Israel and destroy the attacking Assyrian army. Isaiah speaks to King Ahaz of Israel who was being attacked by two Assyrian kings. Isaiah brings assurance to him to not worry, that God was bringing a "sign" to Israel that before a small child (who would be born not of a virgin) learns to choose right from wrong, the battle will be won for Israel. The young woman's pregnancy was a "good sign" that something good was going to happen to Israel...real soon! The child was a sign of the soon coming delivering Presence of God as He liberates His people from Assyrian aggression. God's Presence (Immanuel-God with Israel) would come and destroy Israel's enemy (not Yeshua). The child was not to destroy them either. God was to destroy them. Thus we see that to adhere to a virgin birth in front of such solid evidence is foolishness and to believe that this child is Yeshua is utterly ridiculous, because Yeshua would not be born for seven hundred more years!

Back to Isaiah 9:6 for a moment. These names in verse six (Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace) have already been seen as symbolic names that are often used to complete Hebrew sentences. In and of themselves, they make complete sentences about God, and not about the child (again similar to our responses to the goodness of God when we say "Bless God" or "Praise God"). The most proper understanding of the passage would be that the Eternal Father God, the Mighty God, is planning a wondrous deed (the birth of the Messiah will come in the future some 700 years later). However, the wondrous deed that coincided with the coming of "Immanuel" at the time of the writing of the text by Isaiah was the destruction of Sennacherib's army (Assyria) and the salvation and deliverance of the people of Israel. Immanuel! God's Presence came to deliver them. Isn't God wonderful. Oh what a Mighty God we have that chose to deliver Israel against so many overwhelming odds. Oh what a Prince of Peace as He brings peace to His people by His mighty deliverance and Presence. Oh what an Everlasting Father that Israel has who never slumbers or sleeps, and is ever-watching to protect and deliver His people. As you can easily see that in Hebrew these words and phrases about God completed sentences in order to render "praise" to God for His greatness and love for His people. These phrases never meant that the child to be born later would be God. But let me say again, let us never forget that these "praises" were in no way intended to mean that the child was God, only to give glory and praise to God for what He had done or will do (God is faithful to bring His people their Messiah! Yeshua came seven hundred years following this prophecy.

WELL IF JESUS IS NOT GOD...THEN IS THE MESSIAH GOD?

Deuteronomy 17:8-13 tells us that God said the priests and Levites are to judge and bring interpretation concerning spiritual matters between God's people. As God's people we are warned not to judge by what we feel or think, but by the absolute truths God has shared with his Levites (the teachers of Israel). Jesus puts his stamp of approval on this in Matt. 23:2 when he says "the Scribes and the Pharisees set in Moses seat. Therefore whatever they tell you to observe, that observe and do." It would be to the disciples and these Pharisee leaders that the future of the religion of Moses would be entrusted, and because of their faithfulness to teach the truth, the faith of Jesus exists today as Messianic Judaism, not as Gentile Christianity or even Messianic Christianity because both of the latter are idolatrous in their worship.

Coming to the ultimate conclusion, that these Rabbis and Pharisees are given authority by God to teach Torah and the faith of Israel, they record for us that seven things were created prior to Gen. 1:1 in the Bible: Torah, Repentance, Garden of Eden, Gehenna (Hell), God's Throne of Glory, Temple, and messiah. This messiah is a spirit from God, not a flesh and bone man at this time. Another way to describe it is as a spirit that is a part of God, but not all of which God is composed. The concept of the messiah is mentioned much earlier in Jewish literature than the others concepts listed above. We encounter the pre-existence of messiah in the First Book of Enoch written in Hebrew in and around 150 B.C.E. In it we are told the messiah was "created, and hidden to await his time." But understand that this is not referring to a human being but one could call this a "part" or "emanation" from HaShem. Many today call this "anointing". This concept is a standard feature in Jewish Messianic Eschatology. It is said by the Rabbis that "God prepares the remedy before the wound." I Enoch 48:4-6 states that the messiah "has been chosen, and hidden before Him (God the Father), even before the creation of the world and for evermore." I Enoch 62:7-9 states that "from the beginning the Son of Man (messiah) was hidden and the Most High has preserved him." The Rabbis tell us that the spirit of God that hovered over the face of the water (Gen. 1:2) is spirit of the messiah (Gen. Rab. 2:4). It is said that "at the beginning of the creation of the world, king messiah was born and he emerged in the thought of God even before the world was created" (Pes. Rab, p 152b). Thus it is recorded for us that before time began, the messiah was created or "born." But again we must not be confused at what is being said. This is not a reference to "Jesus" because "Jesus" is the name of a flesh and blood man who would be born over four thousand years later. The spirit of messiah was created from God the Father, and in that total identification with the Father the messiah has origins in God. In this I see the messiah as "part of God," but definitely not all the God there is. Proverbs 8:22-31 accounts for us how the Lord God possessed "me at the beginning of His way." The "me" is the messiah as spirit, and not Jesus the man. It records for us that the messiah was established from everlasting, from the beginning, before there was ever an earth (v.23). It states that before the heavens were prepared the messiah of God existed (vv. 27-31). Thus we see the vital link between the messiah and God the Father before creation. I personally see the messiah as that part of God called the "Living Word" which was the "Word become flesh" as John's Gospel informs us. But be not mistaken, God is a spirit (John 4:4) and part of that Spirit was sent to dwell among us as man. Everyone who is a child of God has a "measure" of this Spirit or anointing. Some more than others. But I believe that one in history had this "Spirit" beyond measure as most men. His name (once he becomes flesh and bone) shall be called "Jesus." It will be this same "Jesus" to whom Paul would refer in Philippians 2:5-9 as one who laid aside his "deity" (that "part" of God that originally had come from God) and lived and ministered among us as "a man" and not as God. It would be this same "man" who would ask his Father to restore to him the glory he once had with the Father before the world was created (John 17:5). It would be this same man who would remind us that his Father had loved him (the messiah part of Jesus) before the foundation of the world (John 17:24). By now you are better able to understand the role of the messiah in creation as well as "becoming flesh" as the anointing and dwelling with men. The messiah is not a man, but a spirit (messiah means anointing) that came upon a child in the womb (remember the word "virgin" is not in the text) and set him apart for a sanctified work for the Father. Lather Jesus would receive another anointing at his immersion (baptism). This is the only recorded immersion that Jesus undertook, yet we know that Jesus was immersed many times yearly; for example, before partaking of the Sabbath and the Seven Festivals of the LORD. I believe that is was this "Jesus" of history which was used by God the Father to take the offer of salvation to the world through his following following his death and resurrection. But this does not make such a man anointed and called of God the same as the God who anointed. This is where Christianity gets so far off due to many errors of teaching that became part of the faith centuries ago.

HOW DID WE GET SO FAR OFF?

Answer for yourself: If men are not gods, then when and how did such a teaching become infused with the teachings of Judaism in the pre-Christian Messianic Movement within Judaism of the first century or the early church?

The answer is that it didn't! The teaching that Jesus was God was not taught by Jesus to his disciples and the disciples of Jesus did not teach such a concept to the Gentiles in the early part of the first century in fulfillment of the Great Commission. (read the last sentence again!).

It would be for Gentiles who later accepted a "Gentile-brand of Judaism", who were unacquainted with the Old Testament, the Prophets, Moses, Sinai, or the Messianic prophecies, and the Hebrew language, who would much later take and misinterpret the teachings of Paul. Not only that but Rome would alter the oral traditions and adulterate early writings handed down by believers in order to "write-in" their prior pagan ideas about their gods. We call this the New Testament today. Such teachings, modified for a Gentile audience, would become a "New Gospel" much later and its hearers would fashion these teachings into concepts that mimicked the concepts they as pagans had held previously concerning pagan gods who became men. Such a perversion of the truth and facts surrounding the Old Testament and the life of Jesus were formally embraced at the Council of Nicaea in 325 A.D., which declared that the Son was "begotten, not made" and "of one essence (homoousios) with the Father." In other words, Constantine decided for you and me that Jesus is God. Remember Constantine was a pagan. This determination was a response to and rejection of the view of Arius, who taught that the Son (meaning the messiah) was a created being who was not of the substance of God and was not eternal (in other words the "anointing" upon Jesus had a "beginning," unlike the Father, but no ending like the Father). Arius' view happens to line up almost completely with Jewish teachings concerning the messiah as held by the earliest believes in Jesus...the Ebionites; that the messiah was created by God before the beginning of creation and would later come to earth as manifested in a man. Notice, the messiah was to be man, not God the Father. The messiah is just a small part of the wholeness of God. The messiah represents the redemptive aspect of God, but by no means is all of what exists of the Father. While even for Arius Jesus had certain divine qualities, he wasby no means an equal of God but possibly a lower divinity. Let me also say that the vast majority of Gentile bishops who attended the Council of Nicea brought with them the theology about the messiah (Jesus) which had been taught them by their ancestors who were personally taught by the Apostles of Jesus.

The vast majority did not believe Jesus was God, but a human messiah as taught by the apostles (and this was three hundred years after Jesus). I dare say that the majority were correct in adhering to a Jewish understanding of the messiah and were totally shocked and amazed at the decision of Constantine to change it based upon his personal desires! It is here the heresy of the Trinity began to teach a "horizontal" equality between the working in the world of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, instead of a more Jewish understanding of the "vertical relationship" between the Father, Messiah-Son, and Holy Spirit. Each is in successive submission to the other. The Father God sent the messiah as manifested in Jesus, then upon the death and ascension of Jesus, the Ruach HaKodesh (the Holy Spirit) came to continue the Messiah's personal ministry. It is this view (of a vertical relationship in which Jesus was not the Father), which was held by the majority of bishops, representing the majority of "Christianity (both Jew & Gentile) that existed at 325 A.D." It would be at Nicaean Council where Constantine, who headed up the council since he was the pagan Emperor or Rome, sought to incorporate his prior pagan beliefs and intermingle them with the "Jewish beliefs" which were widespread throughout Christendom. Sadly he was successful. It was this view of Jesus (horizontal; that Jesus and the Father are "one" and the same essence (identical), not just in purpose, plan, beliefs, goals, and conduct as it should be understood, but in "essence") that Constantine forced upon the majority of the bishops although they rejected such notions. By speaking of Jesus as homoousios (of one essence) with the Father, Constantine and only a few Bishops took the fateful step of refusing to subordinate Jesus in any sense to his Father, to whom Jesus prayed in his last agony of the cross. The council decided for all time that regardless of the previous positions held by the disciples and the apostles concerning Jesus and the Holy Spirit, all believers were now to be understand a "new" teaching; Constantine's teaching: that the messiah is not the creation of the invisible God of the Hebrew Bible, not created before time began, and not only a part of God that emanated from God. No longer was it to be understood that the messiah, who became manifested in flesh, is not all the God that God is. In rejecting the Jewish understanding of the messiah, Constantine held, with only a few bishops, that although the messiah would later be sent to become man, he would be totally an equal person with God the Father and having no subjection to the Father. Jesus was to be the Father as Constantine held this belief and imposed it for all time on faithful followers of the faith of Jesus. In fact, the messiah Jesus was considered to be identical with the Father God in human flesh.

This lack of submission to the Father contradicts the Scriptures of the New Testament. The Gospel of John records for us in chapter 5, verse 19 that: "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise." Notice the translators capitalized the Son to lead you again to believe he is God. John 5:30 says "I can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge, and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me." John 6:38 states "I came down from heaven (as messiah), not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." John 8:28 states " ...I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hat taught me, I speak these things." John 12:49 states "For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak." Lastly, look at John 14:10: "Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me (that part of the Father which was the redemptive messiah of God)? The words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself; but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works." Upon examination of these few passages, I believe you get a clearer picture that the Son (messiah) was totally submissive to God his Father, not identical to him. Also, Jesus said the Father dwelt in him, again making a distinction between the Spirit of God (Father) and "me" (the humanity of Jesus).

Now for my summary position. Although I write a lot about the corruption of the New Testament and its hundreds of misapplied Jewish Scriptures, its mistranslations, and misquotations trying to make Jesus the messiah, I do so because to wrestle the Jewish Scriptures out of their intended meaning and context does great damage to the message God intended we receive. That is offensive to me and to God. Although Jesus never demonstrated he was the messiah during his life and died without fulfilling the necessary prophecies which would attest to him being Israel's messiah, thus the Jewish refusal to accept him as their messiah, to say dogmatically that he is the messiah is not prudent. History and the facts of the Jewish Scriptures prevent such a conclusion at present. However, one cannot deny nor overlook how God has used this man and his legacy to reach the non-Jewish world with monotheism. This I believe is not a coincidence. In other words, we all have our beliefs and faiths. Many facts can support our beliefs and faith, and at times faith is just that; it is a faith which cannot be supported by facts. Blessings.

DID THE COUNCIL OF NICAEA ABANDON MONOTHEISM?

At first glance, this doctrine that teaches Yeshua is God sounds like an abandonment of monotheism (the teaching that God is one) and a reversion to polytheism (the teaching that there are many gods). The church has traditionally rejected this interpretation (monotheism) and insisted that in spite the doctrine of monotheism they wished to hold to the threefold nature of God (Father, Son, and Holy Spirit). According to Christianity, each person of the Godhead was to be understood as fully equal to the others, yet there is also a oneness in God which makes the Christian triune God continuous with the one God of the Hebrew Bible. While the Christian insistence on the oneness of God, in spite of the three co-equal persons in God, is a source of satisfaction to Jews because it barely keeps Christianity within a monotheistic framework, it must also be said that Judaism finds a "three that are one" doctrine virtually impossible to understand, especially in the light of the teaching that only one of these persons became man. It would be equally hard for Yeshua to understand as well.

YESHUA DENIES DIVINITY....WHY COULD NOT NICAEA SEE THIS?

Almost all Jewish scholars and many Christian scholars believe that the doctrine of the Full Divinity of Yeshua is not to be found in the New Testament and would have been abhorrent to the Jew Yeshua. There are a number of instances in the New Testament in which we find Yeshua himself making almost explicit denials of his divinity.

Luke 18:18-19

In this passage in the Gospel of Luke we read: "A man of the ruling class put this question to him: 'Good Master, what must I do to win eternal life?' Yeshua said to him, 'Why do you call me good? No one is good except God alone." The reply of Yeshua makes clear the distinction he draws between himself and God. Yeshua definitely makes a distinction between himself and the Father. We have Yeshua's own words recorded for us that, as far as he knew and understood, only God the Father, alone, is "good" in a way that no other could be. This "exclusion" of all others (including himself), and the singling out of the Father alone in a category by Himself, is a very strong example of Biblical testimony that asserts that to Yeshua God is One, and there are no other besides Him.

Matthew 12:32

In is here that Yeshua says "Any man who speaks a word against the Son of Man will be forgiven; but if anyone speaks against the Holy Spirit, for him there will be no forgiveness, either in this age or the age to come" thereby distinguishing between himself and the Holy Spirit. Again in Yeshua's own words we have his testimony that he does not ascribe the doctrine of the "horizontal trinity" which would be accepted and taught as Biblical doctrine concerning God, Yeshua, and the Holy Spirit 300 years later. Yeshua draws a distinction between himself and the Holy Spirit, indicating differences and not equality.

Mark 13:32

In speaking of the end of days Yeshua says "But about that day or about that hour no one knows, not even the angels in heaven, not even the Son; only the Father." One cannot resist asking how the Son and the Father can be equal person of God where there is knowledge available to the Father that is not available to the Son. It is for these reasons, among others, that it is highly unlikely that Yeshua would have found the teaching of his divinity acceptable.

Matt. 6:26, 30, 31-32

We find Yeshua making a distinction between himself and the heavenly Father by bringing attention to the differences in location where they reside. He speaks of "your heavenly Father," thereby drawing a distinction between the Father God in heaven. In the New Testament Yeshua makes such a distinction twenty-four times!

John 16:10

In this passage we find Yeshua again making a distinction between himself by addressing God as "My Father," thus drawing attention to the intimate relationship he had with God in heaven, and not with himself as if he were God. Yeshua makes such distinctions sixty-five times in the New Testament!

Matt. 27:46

The New Testament records for us three instances where Yeshua calls out to his personal God as "My God." Even to the uninformed, it is clear to see that Yeshua made a distinction between himself and his God in heaven. Not only that but Yeshua does not pray to himself, but to his Father.

HOW DID WE GET SO FAR OFF THE TRACK?

Many elements in the New Testament made the Nicene development possible. While the Nicene definition almost certainly goes much beyond the New Testament interpretation of the status of Yeshua, there are some features of the New Testament view that lay the groundwork for it. Essentially, this has to do with the New Testament view of the person of Yeshua. Who was he and how is he related to the figures of the Hebrew Bible?

We must never forget that the New Testament was put together following Constantine's decision concerning Yeshua's "deity" at the Council of Nicaea. Pause and think about that for a while as your read how things written in the New Testament, much of the writings of Paul and the apostles, have been altered as we have them! It was almost 400 years of discussions that emanated in a variety of beliefs about Yeshua that surfaced in the writing of the New Testament. The Pauline epistles were written first and his theology concerning Yeshua could not but help influence later writers who wrote the Gospels. Scholarship will teach you that the Gospels were written at the earliest around 100 A.D., much later than the lives of the original apostles. Few of Yeshua's original apostles wrote the Gospels if any, although they carry their names in order to artificially create an importance beyond that normally acquired if written by average people. More to follow in the final article in this series. Shalom.

SO WHO IS JESUS...AND WHERE DO WE STAND IN RELATION TO IDOLATRY?

In order to arrive at the truth that has been hidden and changed for 2000 years we must have a "Kodak Moment" as we take a snapshot of the original teachings and understand what surrounded this man in the century he lived.

Answer for yourself: Do you pretend to know more than those who lived and ate with him for his whole life?

Answer for yourself: Do you believe that the Catholic Church had supreme revelation when they decided to turn Jesus into "God" in their church doctrines?

Answer for yourself: What about their changing of the Sabbath to Sunday instead of Saturday?

Answer for yourself: Where is the infallibility of the Holy Spirit's workings in that decision as well as others concerning purgatory, Mary as co-mediator between man and God, prayers for the dead, infant baptism for salvation, offerings for the dead, etc?

You must face the facts that the truth as originally given to Moses, the Prophets, and Jesus was changed in the early centuries following the "grafting-in" of the Gentiles into the Messianic Movement within Judaism. This Catholic invention, beginning with Constantine, is to blame for the loss of spiritual truth in our generation. Sadly, the "Jewish/Gentile" Messianic movement would evolve into a Frankenstein which would also destroy its creator....namely; Second Temple Messianic Judaism!

It is difficult to determine whether the claim that "Jesus was God" is fully a post-New Testament development or whether it has a firm foundation in the New Testament itself. As I stated before, most Jewish and some Christian scholars believe that the teaching of the divinity of Jesus came into Christianity from Gentile sources and was unknown to the original community of the followers of Jesus. This is critical to our understanding of Jesus.

LET ME ASK YOU SOME IMPORTANT QUESTIONS

Answer for yourself: If Yeshua's followers (James, Jude, Matthew, Mark, Bartholomew, Nathaniel, Peter, etc.) did not believe or understand that Jesus is God then why should we?

Answer for yourself: If they did not teach that Jesus was God to the Gentiles in the fulfillment of the Great Commission then how have we come to believe in it today?

Answer for yourself: If there was information that the Father withheld from Jesus on earth (that he was totally God in flesh), do you dare believe that He would have withheld something so critical from Yeshua's Apostles

(the Jews are a light to the world..remember?) and give it later to pagans who thought to associate themselves with the God of Israel?

Answer for yourself: How could it that Jesus would fail to teach his followers such an important concept if it were true?

Answer for yourself: How could it be that Jesus would be content to send us upon a two-millennial "hide-and-seek" trek for such truth that he is God if it were of major importance and concerned our salvation?

This last question is alarming, because this is one of the major holes the church has fallen into. Gnosticism is a heresy which taught that flesh was evil, and that only pure spirit was good. The flesh was not "saveable," but only the spirit. Gnosticism, taught that in the hierarchy of spirits, that demons were more spiritual than YHVH, because YHVH spawned a fleshly son, and since all flesh was "evil," then YHVH must of Himself be evil. Outstanding and preposterous as these teachings are, the one that takes the cake is that they connected salvation to the obtaining of secret knowledge. Upon gaining the "mysteries of knowledge," one becomes saved.

Answer for yourself: Does this not sound a lot like what we do in the majority of our churches today?

Answer for yourself: Has not your church taught that salvation for mankind is obtained in understanding, accepting, and confessing the doctrines and teachings (knowledge) concerning Jesus which your church accepts as authentic?

Answer for yourself: What are we to think considering the lack of unity in Christianity concerning the identity of Jesus? Who is saved and lost?

Answer for yourself: If you do not hold the "accepted" doctrines or teachings of a particular church concerning Jesus, are you still welcome in that church?

Answer for yourself: In other words, can a Catholic practice Catholicism in a Baptist church and be accepted?

It seems that salvation has become a hunt for the identity of Jesus, and once coming to the understanding of his identity (Gnosticism), you have received such knowledge that you can be received by God. All that is lacking is confession of who you believe Jesus is, and asking for salvation.

Answer for yourself: Can one be saved if he believes differently in Jesus than another Christian in another church?

Answer for yourself: What role, if at all, does obedience and faith in God the Father play in salvation? How can one become Biblically saved?

Answer for yourself: Are you Biblically saved, or are you "Ecclesiastically Saved." Is your salvation based upon God and His Word, or upon what your church told you?

I firmly believe and have a very hard time, knowing what I know, that God would have concealed this "truth" (that Jesus is God) from Jesus as well as his disciples. Such a teaching, even if were true, has no bearing upon whether we go to heaven when we die.

MORE QUESTIONS

Answer for yourself: If the doctrine of the Trinity is not from God but given by Gentiles who, full of anti-Semitism and anti-Judaism rejected the faith of Jesus for a "paganized practice of Gentile Christianity" and along the way adopted the teaching that Jesus was God like the Ceasars were believed to be God, then are you comfortable to continue to worship God but have a mistaken identity to who He is?

Answer for yourself: What does God think of your our feeble efforts to worship Him (the majority of your worship is most likely directed to Jesus, yet Jesus tells us that "true worshipers shall worship the Father (not the Son) in spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship him" (John 4: 23)?

Answer for yourself: Are you now confident as before that you are "true worshipper" of God and have always worshipped Him in spirit and truth?

Answer for yourself: How can you know for sure?

Answer for yourself: Have you had "faith in your faith" that has been passed on to you by your Protestant or Catholic experiences, but now are beginning to see that God wants you to have faith and obedience in His Word (Scriptures)?

Answer for yourself: Can you or dare you trust your experiences for truth?

You may say "I can't discount what God did in my life through Jesus". I never told you to. God uses Jesus to reach men and bring them to Himself. That does not change the fact that God does not wish you to confuse Him with Jesus, or give worship owing to the Father to Jesus or vice versa. The majority of churches today are guilty of the lack of study; both the clergy and the people. Most Christians have never exerted any energies to study and determine for themselves the truth about the religious belief system of a Jew like Jesus; a religious belief system that existed in 100-300 A.D. before is was changed by pagans.

MORE QUESTIONS

Answer for yourself: How do you know you are right in what you believe, and in what you have been taught?

Answer for yourself: Can you prove to yourself what you have come to believe about Jesus and God is the truth as taught by Gentile Christianity?

Answer for yourself: Where can you go in the Bible to substantiate what you believe concerning the Trinity, Virgin Birth, Salvation and does your "Christian Bible" read like the "Jewish Bible" or is it different and been changed and you don't know it?

Answer for yourself: Can you prove what I have said in this newsletter is incorrect?

Answer for yourself: Upon your personal study do you dare confirm what I have discovered?

I have done the homework for you over the last twelve years. Little has escaped my scrutiny. Rest assured I did not set out to discover what I did, but the Holy Spirit led me into all truth and blessed me to show me how to worship the Father in truth for the first time in my life.

Answer for yourself: Is it not about time you start?

Remember your experiences and emotions are not validators of truth, yet they can be. Peter has a "religious experience" on the mountain when he saw the transfiguration of Jesus, and he completely misjudged the situation. His experience with God led him to erroneous conclusions.

Answer for yourself: Could that be you?

What is most important, is that Peter would later say that "we have a more sure word of prophecy." Peter learned, as I hope you do, that when given an option between interpreting your experience to arrive at truth ("my preacher told me or preached it to me"), it is better to have a "sure word" (from the Bible...rightly divided and understood) and let it tell you the truths you are to believe. We at Bet Emet Ministries do exactly that. We let the Bible, correctly interpreted in the original languages, then set inside the culture, history, and religious climate of the time in which it was written bring us to the correct understanding of the passage that God intended. Our current experience my not line up with the Bible, but when we obey the Scriptures, correctly interpreted, then and only then can your experience be a validator of truth. Only then can our experiences line up with the Bible and your lives reflect God's truth. My faith in my past experience only led me astray in many areas. God requires that I line up with His truth and His Scripture, not that I twist or reason truth away to make my experience be "the truth. " My experience is "the truth" only when it agrees with Scripture. This lesson you should follow. The errors in your worship, life and relationship with God will disappear when you begin to practice this principle.

ARE ALL TRADITIONAL CHRISTIANS IDOLATORS...AND NOT KNOW IT...UNTIL THEY DIE?

Be that as it may, the fact remains that mainline Christianity, since the time of the Council of Nicaea (over 1700 years), has adhered to the belief of Constantine that Jesus is the same "essence" as our God and Father. Constantine did not take wise council from the majority of bishops who knew and were teaching the truth to their congregants concerning the identity of Jesus and messiah (that messiah is God's messiah made flesh, the Living Torah (Word) that came and dwelt among us). Remember, these Gentile believers who disagreed with Constantine had been taught from other Gentiles who had been taught by Jews who could interpret their own Scriptures correctly! From both the Biblical point of view as seen in the Torah as well as the Jewish point of view, the belief of Constantine is clearly idolatrous.

THIS IS SO SERIOUS.....

The prohibition against idolatry, as I mentioned earlier, is one of the most severe in the Bible. According to the Bible, there are only three transgressions of Laws which are so severe that when faced with a choice of transgression of these three Laws (idolatry, sexual immorality, murder), one should choose to die before breaking these laws of God. The child of God is commanded to sacrifice his own life rather than transgress these Laws! One of these is idolatry. It is therefore important to know that to believe that Jesus was "God the Father" (in the sense asserted by the Nicene Creed) causes one to commit idolatry as defined by the Bible, and, as said before, God states that He would rather have you die before you do such a thing!

SO WHERE DO YOU STAND IN RELATION TO IDOLATRY?

Answer for yourself: Now, does a Gentile Christian who believes in the divinity of Jesus (that Jesus is God in accordance with the Nicene Creed) commit idolatry?

Gentiles are not obligated to obey all the commandments which are obligatory for Jews, yet one of the commandments which is binding on Gentiles is the prohibition against idolatry as it is recorded for all Gentiles in the Noah Covenant and Noah Laws, as well as reiterated at Sinai for them as well. Knowing this, the good news for Gentile Christians is that they are not considered idolaters according to the dominant Jewish view. In Jewish literature, the term that came to be used for the Trinitarian concept of God was "shittuf" (partnership). The accepted Jewish view is that belief in "shittuf" does not constitute idolatry for Gentiles but does so for Jews. The reason for this is that the definition of what constitutes idolatry is different for Jews and Gentiles. Belief in "shittuf," the belief that God shares His being in equal partnership with Jesus and the Holy Spirit, is not idolatry by the standard of idolatry demanded of Gentiles. This gracious stance by Judaism is only acceptable because God sent that part of Himself as messiah to earth as a man, yet it was "a part of Himself." That "part of God" that was created from God before Gen. 1:1 would much later become a human messiah. But the very same belief held by a Jew constitutes idolatry by the standard applicable to Jews. It is for this reason that Judaism does not condemn Christian Trinitarianism as idolatry unless those holding the belief are Jews who are bound by the covenant of Sinai. The message to a Christian is that when sharing the "good news" with a Jew, do so by revealing Jesus as a human messiah, and not God.

But you should understand that it is such a view, that Jesus is God, as held by the church, that is one of the major causes the Jew does not entertain any ideas concerning Jesus as messiah, for to do so would mean he would receive a messiah who is also God the Father, and there can be only ONE! Such is gross idolatry to the Jew. What divides the Jew from the Gentile believer in Jesus today is not the concept of Jesus being a "human messiah" who will yet return to fulfill the mission of his Father in heaven, but the "God-like messiah" which has been invented by the Early Constantine controlled Church who hated the Jewish people and their religion, thus they actively enforced anti-Semitic doctrines in the church. We walk and unknowingly teach them today in the majority of our churches.

This issue deserves your further study. Let me encourage you to read about the pre-existence of the messiah before he became flesh in such works as the First Book of Enoch, the Psalms of Solomon, 4th Esdras, Proverbs, etc. If you will take the time to examine the issue, as I have, you will find what the Early "Jewish-Gentile" churches originally believed about Jesus.

Answer for yourself: Don't you think it is about time for you to return to the true faith of Jesus and the faith that was once given to the Saints?

May God bless your endeavors.

THE REAL TRUTH ABOUT THE "JESUS STORY"...CAN WE EVER HOPE TO FIND THE TRUTH?

"His (the Messianic Priest's) wisdom will be great. He will make atonement for all the children of His generation...His Word shall be as the Word of Heaven ("Heaven" is a circumlocution for "God") and His teaching shall be according to the will of God. His eternal sun shall burn brilliantly." - DSS 4QAaron (from the Dead Sea Scrolls)

During the time of the biblical Jesus, there was widespread expectation amongst the Jews that a Kingly Messiah, descended from the house of King David, would arise and establish God's kingdom on earth. To Christians today, Jesus is the living fulfillment of the Old Testament prophesies. To others, however, he was merely one of a number of false claimants to the throne, a figure whose testament is heavily colored by myth and church dogma.

Answer for yourself: Is it possible, through historical research, to travel back two thousand years and get a glimpse of Jesus the man?

Answer for yourself: Or, like Paul's vision on the road to Damascus, can the real Jesus be only known through faith?

Somewhere between the messianic expectations of the Jews and the high Christology of the later Gentile Christian Church, was a person who lived in history - who breathed, ate, and had friends and family like the rest of us, then died an abrupt and ignoble death. Yet, aside from the New Testament, contemporary history is almost silent about Jesus.

With the help of recent archaeological findings and current bible scholarship, however, there is a great deal we can discern about the events surrounding this "Jesus of the New Testament" and thus gain new insights into the man himself.

To find the Real Jesus necessitates one undertake a critical examination into the life and times of Jesus. I have tried to take a balanced approach in presenting information, some of which is quite controversial. Rather than dismiss some of the more contentious speculations outright, I have presented arguments and counter arguments and allowed logic to dictate which position is correct. For the most part, however, I have relied on conventional biblical scholarship, multiple attestation of sources, and old fashioned common sense to select the material that have filled my articles.

For those who feel that this material directly challenges fundamental tenets of their Christian belief, I can only say that the uniqueness of Jesus and his message emerges with startling clarity if you study for yourselves and are courageous to face the facts you encounter. His teachings of selflessness and fellowship are as relevant today as they were two thousand years ago and I can only hope that Christians will find a renewed sense of meaning and strength in Jesus' words and actions, even when they find that often they are different from what they have heard "said" of him in their churches which is little more than "legends" handed down by non-Jews which are passed off to the non-suspecting Gentiles as Divine Truth when just a little study outside the New Testament proves otherwise!

Answer for yourself: Do you want to find the truth about "the Jesus" of the New Testament and separate legend and lore from the absolute truth? Well such a quest is not easy and you will be challenged to your very core when you read and find out what you have been not taught about the Jesus of the New Testament. If you find the courage to read and then check us out as to the sources for our information then you like most of those who rely upon Bet Emet Ministries to reveal the long hidden and distorted truths connected to the "Jesus Story" will wonder why you were not told these things earlier in your spiritual life by your Pastors and your church. THE COURAGE TO FIND THE REAL JESUS...DO YOU HAVE IT?

"His (the Messianic Priest's) wisdom will be great. Answer for yourself: Or, like Paul's vision on the road to Damascus, can the real Jesus be only known through faith? Who was this "Christ" represented as Jesus?

THE TRUTH LIES IN BETWEEN BOTH OPTIONS

Somewhere between the messianic expectations of the Jews and the high Christology of the later Christian Church, was a person who lived in history - who breathed, ate, and had friends and family like the rest of us, then died an abrupt and ignoble death. Yet, aside from the New Testament, contemporary history is almost silent about Jesus. In fact that exists no unforged historical evidence for his existence, yet "his" story is told down through ancient history as far back as ancient Egypt.

With the help of recent archaeological findings and current bible scholarship, however, there is a great deal we can discern about the events surrounding Jesus and thus gain new insights into the man himself and what he represented to the hearts of "believers" in the time given for the "Jesus Story."

To find the Real Jesus necessitates one undertake a critical examination into the life and times of Jesus as depicted in the New Testament

I have tried to take a balanced approach in presenting information, some of which is quite controversial. Rather than dismiss some of the more contentious speculations outright, I have presented arguments and counter arguments and allowed logic to dictate which position is correct. For the most part, however, I have relied on conventional biblical scholarship, multiple attestation of sources, and old fashioned common sense to select the material that have filled my articles. We must begin such a study with the assumption of a "literal" and "historical" Jesus and let the evidence discovered to tell us if such an understanding is correct or possibly if a "mystical," "metaphysical," and "allegorical" understanding of "Jesus" is a better choice. We will, at the end of these studies, be capable to answer that question with certainty.

THE JESUS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT WAS NOT A CHRISTIAN

Answer for yourself: If the Jesus depicted in the New Testament were walking the earth today, where would he go to commune with his father in heaven…a Christian Church or a Synagogue?

Answer for yourself: Where might he choose to pray?

Over the years I have often asked this of Christians. The question is not flippant, nor is it intended as an irreverent, clever ploy. What most Christians fail to consider is the seriousness of the questions at hand, because the question is indeed very serious and cuts to the very core of the Christian's Religious Belief System.

Answer for yourself: Would you ever see Jesus in your Christian Church, or would you have to visit the Synagogue to see him?

Although these questions are today clearly hypothetical, history's answers are profoundly disturbing and unsettling for the Christian. The straight-forward, unavoidable evidence, if the New Testament Jesus is at all to be believed or looked to for an example, throws clear light on the fundamental, still unresolved ambivalence which Christians continue to demonstrate about their own inherited Jewish identity. Christianity is Jewish and without such a recognition Gentile Christianity as it exists today has no validity.

THE CHRISTIAN PROBLEM...THE SURVIVAL OF THE JEWISH PEOPLE AND THEIR RELIGION

Christianity has a major fault as I see it; it has failed to deal with the life of Jesus, continually focusing only on his death and resurrection. Such a perspective has voided the Church of much truth that she desperately needs. As Jesus' disciples on earth and followers of this Jesus the vast majority of Christians have failed to acknowledge and appreciate his own Jewish ways. The undeniable fact is that God chose to express the "Mind of His Krst/Christ" through the great religions of Egypt and Israel; not Rome. Said again, the "Mind of Christ" is to be examined and obtained through the Jewish faith and not the Roman faith. This is hard to hear let alone obtain since being most of our readers are born outside of the Jewish culture and religion. In other words Christianity has lost its Jewish Heritage and Jewish Roots and the great truths contained within it that sadly are lost to most Gentile Christians today. Constantly and without conscious understanding of what they say, Christians for eons are to be found in their churches, which they call by the name of Jesus, as if these churches were his design or his intention, while the example of Jesus, as even their own sacred texts attest, never left his synagogue. Somehow this is strange to me. Seminary never taught me a Jewish Jesus, only a Christian Gentile Jesus; one which never existed.

It is precisely here that the unacknowledged but persistent Christian problem begins. It is rooted in the Jewishness of the Lord whom Christians claim as their own: the crucified Jesus.

Answer for yourself: But what of the living Jesus?

Ironically, had Jesus been born, or had he lived, as a Christian, there would be no "Christian problem." had he emerged from the stock of any of the other ancient but now defunct civilizations of his day (say the Roman or the Greek) to establish a new religion completely unconnected with Judaism, Christians would never have had to cope or even deal with the issue of Jewish survival. Had Jesus been a Christian, then these Christians would have been indifferent to Jews, and undisturbed by their continuing presence in history—if they even bothered to take notice at all. But Jesus is a Jew and not a Christian and never intended to found a new break-away religion such as Christianity has become today. Such is the heart of the problem for the Christian who says he follows Jesus.

If Jesus had been a Christian and not followed Judaism his whole life, such Christian followers of Jesus might have become as neutral towards the Jews as they later were towards the Romans, but such is not the case. It is because of the Jewishness of Jesus and the rejection by the Jews of a "Christian Jesus" that the Church as targeted Jews for evangelization. Such as been the perspective of the Gentile Church since the earliest centuries of its heritage.

Christianity, however, has remained to this day neither neutral towards the Jews nor relaxed alongside the Jew's historical presence. Politically, the Jews, too, had been vanquished—long years before, by Rome itself. But spiritually and psychologically for Christianity the Jews became, and still remain, the primary Christian problem: rival claimants who would not go away.

Answer for yourself: The Jews were an enduring puzzlement: if the mighty Roman Empire could convert to become the holy Roman Empire, why should not the synagogue also join the Church?

Because Jews held firmly to their own ground, refusing to accept a Gentilized Rabbi, their universal survival became an affront to a powerful and expanding Church. Christian leaders never forgave or forgot that.

That the people of Jesus could survive after he came to them and they refused to follow him, has confused Christians and provoked the less gentle among them. That Jews should possess a divine right to follow leaders of their own choosing never seemed to impress the Christian mind. And that Jews should have been as critical of Jesus as of all of their would-be messiahs—both before and after him—still remains unacceptable, or at best, inexplicable, to many Christians.

I think there is profound irony here, one that continues to trigger the ongoing Christian problem. Notice the following dichotomy and think about what I say. Jews think of Jesus as a living person, a maverick, apocalyptic Jew to be sure, but they do not deny Christians the right to worship and adore him as they please. To Christians, however, Jesus is the crucified Messiah, a veritable Christian god, who was brazenly rejected by his own people. To put the matter bluntly: to Jews, Jesus was a human "Jewish option" they did not follow; to Christians he is the only divine "Christian option."

JESUS THE JEW BECOMES JESUS THE CHRISTIAN ...WHAT?

To many Christians, in their deepest psyches, Jesus the Jew has become Jesus the Christian. And Jews, by their rejection of a Jesus that did not fulfill the prophetic passages, are guilty of offending their Christianity. As a consequence, what many Christians widely trumpeted and labelled as the "Jewish problem" is really their own. The Christian problem starts with Jesus, the living Jew, before his death and resurrection and continues with the whole Jewish people who survived him and who still see him as a Jew, in human, not cosmic Christian terms.

If Jews were to ask Christians to see Jesus only as a Jew, they would, in effect, be asking them to give up Christianity, and any dialogue would end abruptly there. On the other hand, if Christians were to ask Jews to see Jesus as they see him—as much more than a Jew, to be sure—they would really be inviting Jews to convert to Christianity, and that would also end the dialogue.

Answer for yourself: But what would happen Jews asked Christians to see Jesus not only as a Jew, but also as a human Rabbi and not a god which is totally foreign to their Scriptures? Need the dialogue falter at that point? On the contrary: I would say that this must be the starting point of all Jewish discussion with Christians:—to begin to understand the human, Jewish Jesus. And this cannot be done by the Christian without a through knowledge of the Jewish Old Testament and the prophecies concerning the Jewish messiah as taken from the Hebrew Scriptures and not the later forgery of them as we find them today in our New Testaments. Since mainline Christianity primarily teaches and preaches from the New Testament such an endeavor of acquiring Old Testament knowledge falls upon the discipline of each Christian and we all know how hard disciplined study is to achieve.

EVANGELIZATION OF JEWS?

Indeed, the Christian Jewish dialogue depends for its integrity upon the ability of the Christian to detach himself from all attempts to make Judaism the object of the Christian mission and the object of its evangelization. By learning to understand the Jewish Jesus before he became a "Christian" Jesus there is a chance that Christians may also understand the Jews, and that Judaism is yet today a valid expression of faith before God. Such awareness is acutely necessary to help Christians understand why Jews wish to remain faithful to Judaism to the end of their days, even as Jesus had done. But misinformation concerning Judaism abounds in Christianity today and such a distorted representation of the facts of Judaism, due to the anti-Semitism of the early Gentile Church, and the corruption of their New Testament document, has made an accurate understanding of Judaism by the Christian a very difficult quest in our day.

BUT WE HAVE MORE PROBLEMS FACING CHRISTIANITY -THE MISUNDERSTOOD IRONY OF Jesus'S DEATH AND SUBSEQUENT BLAMING OF THE JEWS

At the same time, as Christians review the life of Jesus from an internal Jewish standpoint, they must also confront still another problem of their own making. This question arises from their view of the meaning of his death.

Answer for yourself: If the death of Jesus resulted in the universal and glorious benefit for all mankind as Christians believe it to have done—the atonement for all human sin—then why do Christians continue to impose unforgiving blame, whether on the Romans, or more often, on the Jewish people as a whole, for causing the benefit?

Answer for yourself: If the Gospels, especially John, suppose, Jesus knew and predicted long in advance that the particular events would happen, and the events were neither a surprise nor a defeat, then were not the events merely a working out of some preceding arrived-at divine schedule?

Answer for yourself: If Jesus' death was part of a divine schedule and plan, then why blame mere men for acting out the preordained human role? I have always wondered why this is done, and the Jews have borne the brunt of such animosity for the death of Jesus, when in reality it was the Romans who killed him.

Christians must first dispose of their own long-standing, self-imposed Christian problem: they must purge themselves of any identification with that part of their Christian heritage which vilified Jews and Judaism in the name of the crucified Jesus.

When Christians can come to understand both of these issues—first, about his life; then, correctly about his death—they may also come to see how their ancestors (and perhaps even their own priests or preachers) have been involved in a centuries-old psychological game—sometimes also known as "theology"—to help Christians relieve themselves of their own problems by loading them onto the backs of Jews.

They may also begin to realize that historical Christianity had for so long succeeded in evading its own problem by concentrating principally upon the death, and not the life, of Jesus.

Let me give you an example. For three centuries after the founding of their religion, Christians did not celebrate Christmas, which related to the birth and life of Jesus. Their principal feast was Easter, which concentrated only on the death and resurrection. The Cross, or crucifix, not the star of Bethlehem, became the essential symbol of Christianity; Calvary, not Nazareth, was the chief sacred locus. These served as holy reminders of the "saving" mystery of his death. Indeed, to identify with Jesus as a living Jew is difficult: it requires Christians to study the Torah of Moses, and all the Hebrew prophets and writings that form the basis of the demanding system of Jewish ethics. These were the core of Jesus' public teaching—in the market places, the public squares, the hilltops, and the synagogues of ancient Israel.

One need not be a Freudian to recognize that intense preoccupation with the death of Jesus not only has led many Christians to regard Jews as Christ-killers, but may also have covered over a deeper, unconscious desire on the part of some who became profoundly hostile to Jews.

Answer for yourself: Did they wish to obliterate the Jews as "Christ-killers" because they really longed to obliterate them as the "Christ-givers"?

Indeed, I have the feeling that by obsessively focussing upon the so-called Jewish "rejection" of Jesus, they are demonstrating, perhaps unconsciously, their own revolt against the full acceptance of his stringent Jewish demands. For although Christianity is a belief in a man-god who died as a Christian deity, in virtually all respects, Jesus himself had lived as a self-regarding and faithful Jew. In sum, before dialogue can truly commence, Christians must carefully examine their own ambivalences and hang-ups.

In medieval times, the urge to deny was much stronger than the will to understand. This explains why the Church frequently arranged public disputations between priests and rabbis, all of which had predictably unhappy endings: victory for the Church, defeat for the Jews and often the burning of Jewish religious books in the town square. There followed inevitably the expulsion of the entire Jewish community from the area: their patent "error" could not be tolerated by an autocratic Church.

But in our new age of openness and dialogue, there are at last some Christians who are willing to listen to Jewish interpretations of their own faith and history. For those who are prepared for this, there can be hopeful solutions to the Christian problem. To begin with I propose that those who are willing, try to fathom how Jews understand the answers to two fundamental questions: Who was Jesus—in Jewish history? What was Jesus—in Christian theology?

HAS GENTILE CHRISTIANITY FAILED TO TEACH THE REAL MESSAGE OF JESUS?

Most scholars, whether liberal or conservative, assume without argument that modern Christianity began with Jesus and moved outward to become a world religion on that basis - perhaps elaborating on or modifying the teachings somewhat, but retaining this basic structure. Keith Akers, whom I referenced before in his book The Lost Religion of Jesus, believes, as I and a multitude of scholars today, that this view of history, and consequently most historical Jesus scholarship, is fundamentally flawed.

The New Testament, like any other literature, is easier to understand and more interesting when it is seen in its historical context. For a still better picture of the age in which the books of the New Testament were written, it is necessary to step back a bit and review important events in Jewish history leading up to that period. The social, political, and religious conditions in Judea at the time of Christianity's birth are of great significance in understanding the direction which that religion took. The sects or parties prevalent in Judea at the dawn of Christianity had an impact on early Christians, as well as on Jews. The names-Sadducees, Pharisees, Zealots--are mentioned throughout the Gospels, Acts, and Epistles. The Sanhedrin occupies a significant place in the recounting of Jesus' trial as does the Roman procurator, Pontius Pilate. No study of the New Testament is complete without an awareness of the character and influence of Paul, the great proselytizer, if not founder, of Christianity. Paul's role was pivotal in transforming Nazarene Judaism into Gentile Christianity. Even a cursory analysis of the historical evidence shows that Christianity was filled from the very start with internal controversy over basic issues. The differences between those claiming to be Christian in the first four hundred years after Jesus' birth were greater than at any other time in history - greater even than that today. Regardless of what view we take about Jesus, we must acknowledge and come to grips with these schisms - trying to understand all sides as best we can - before we can understand Jesus. These early Christians may not have understood Jesus, but they were closer to him than we are.

At the basis of all these schisms is the first and most divisive question in the first centuries of Christianity:

Answer for yourself: What is the relationship between the followers of Jesus and Judaism?

THERE WERE MANY WAYS TO SEE JESUS WITHIN JUDAISM

Early Christians interpreted Jesus within Judaism in many different ways. There are many reasons for doubting if Jesus could have founded Christianity. The new religion that emerged from the events of the life and death of Jesus contained too many divergent movements to have been the product of a single creative mind. At any rate, if Jesus had intended to found a new religion, he did not succeed in doing so in any coherent form. Much more probably, he had no intention of doing so. The Jesus newly revealed by the study of his Jewish environment is not likely to have founded the movements that collectively constituted early Christianity. Historians used to suppose that early Christianity was united in the legacy left by Jesus; only later did disunity arise, as new and unorthodox interpretations of the tradition developed. We now think it was far otherwise. Early Christianity moved in several divergent directions, and it was not possible to unify them by appealing to the authoritative teaching of a founder. Only in the second century did it begin to be unified around a form of Gentile Christianity, as a result of strenuous efforts by some of its leaders, most of them associated with the Church of Rome. The effort was never completely successful, and in later centuries new forms of disunity set in. But Christianity never again became as diverse as it had originally been. If we look back to the state of the Christian movement at the end of the first century and the beginning of the second, we find amazing variety and diversity. However, scholars usually group the many versions of Christianity flourishing then into three main tendencies, only one of which is at all familiar today:

In broad terms, there were three schools of thought in early Christianity as to what this relationship should be:

- Jewish Messianic Believers desired to maintain good standing with Biblical Judaism and with the followers of Jesus and Judaism. For the Jewish Christians, Jesus was the prophet predicted by Moses who had led the people back to the true law revealed to Moses but forgotten by the traditions of men. This lesser-known movement was composed of Messianic "Christian" Jews, remaining faithful to their Jewish heritage, while adding to it belief in Jesus as the Messiah. Scholars refer to the various movements that attempted to remain faithful to Christianity's original basis in Judaism as Jewish Christianity. Obviously, there were sharp disagreements between these movements. Gentile and Jewish Christianity soon parted company.
- One of these competing movements was Gnosticism, which has come into public attention recently as a result of new discoveries. In the second century the Gentile or early Catholic church fought a sharp, and in the end, largely successful battle to rid itself of Gnosticism and to put down the independent Gnostic communities. At the same time, it stigmatized as heretical all those groups that still held on to Jewish observance. Gnostics wanted a complete break between the followers of Jesus and Judaism. Many gnostics thought that the God of Jesus and the Jewish God who created the world were two different gods altogether. This led the gnostics to reject the world and adopt asceticism, because it was a botched creation of a lesser god. They believed that their special knowledge ("gnosis") from this highest God, the father of Jesus, led to salvation after death in a spiritual realm that was separate and independent of this world which was "fleshly" and full of suffering and death.
- The Pauline Christians, who saw in Jesus the culmination of Judaism and the Messianic hope and redemption. Like the gnostics, they wanted their own brand of Messianic Judaism ["Christianity "]to have a fundamentally different basis from Judaism. These Pauline Christians considered the basis of Christianity not to be the revelation of God's law to Moses on Mt. Sinai, but rather the revelation of God himself through Jesus as Paul revealed him to them and for them this new and unique revelation of Jesus superseded that law. This might not sound like a problem on the surface by when the one being revealed by Paul has more in common with paganism and mystery religions that Biblical Judaism then we have a serious problem. But first you have to know that such a situation exists but that or course entails prior comprehensive knowledge of both Biblical Judaism as well a comparative world religions. One possessing this information one see through the writings of Paul as if they were cellophane. One thing was held in common however. Like the Jewish Christians, these Pauline Christians worshiped the same God of the Jews did. But even thought that was good they were taught to see in Jesus the fulfillment of the hopes of Judaism and that ruse is the biggest lie ever foisted upon the world at present. The prophecies of the Jews were not fulfilled but the Gentile world never knew this because the Greek translation of the Bible had been cleverly altered 200 years prior whereby the doctrines and beliefs of sun-worshipping Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt, were written in among the texts and these concepts only later applied to Jesus by Paul, himself a Gentile convert, and others.

We have three views but only one was correct.

Answer for yourself: Which one? Which have you been taught by your church is the correct one?

All these views were differing ways of coming to grips with a fundamental problem: that Jesus was born a Jew, lived a Jew, and died a Jew. Yet in the years after Jesus, and following the dispersion of the Jews after the destruction of the Temple and the Jewish War of 135 C.E., the number of gentile Christians came to greatly surpass the number of Jewish Christians. Christianity, instead of a Jewish movement, came to consist less and less of those who continued to acknowledge their Jewish roots by remaining loyal to the Jewish law, and more and more of those who believed they had no allegiance to the law of Moses but only to the revelation of Jesus and Paul's particular brand of Judaism (would become Gentile Christianity). Eventually, as you would expect, Christianity came to regard any faithfulness and adherence to the Jewish law as a heresy and bondage. This is to be expected since the Gentile nations never had or understood the Torah before they heard the preaching concerning the "risen Christ" of Paul. Jesus was for them just another in a long line of "risen sungods."

This website is in part a re-examination of the history of Jewish Christianity and its implications for understanding the historical Jesus.

For the Jewish Christians, Jesus was a loyal Jew who preached the law given to Moses; but upon examining this law, Jesus reached radical conclusions. To the Jewish Christians, it was Jesus' ethics of simple living and nonviolence, rather than a new theology, that distinguished him and his followers from other Jews. They believed that Jesus' preaching was first and foremost about simple living, pacifism, and vegetarianism and that he never intended to create a new religion separate from Judaism. I believe that the Jewish Christians understood Jesus better than any of the gentile Christian groups that are the spiritual ancestors of modern Protestant, Catholic, and Orthodox churches; and it is to these people we must turn and listen if we are to understand the truth about Jesus.

Anti-Semitism throughout Gentile Church History has given the Jewish Christians an unusually bad rap. In fact they persecuted them to death often. Paul portrayed them as narrow-minded, the later church condemned them as heretics, and modern scholars have ignored them. These assessments, however, are not justified. Jesus lived and died a Jew; most of those who heard his message were Jewish; the initial leadership of the church was Jewish; Jewish Christianity is of the highest importance in understanding Jesus. When the larger gentile Christian church drove out Jewish Christianity it also lost the core of Jesus' teachings. Therefore much which the traditional Christian is taught today is in error. The values of simple living and nonviolence became increasingly marginalized in a church that came to accept the very materialism and violence against which Jesus had protested.

Modern Christianity, whether Protestant, Catholic, or Orthodox, has thus misunderstood not only Jesus the Jew, but the very message of Jesus as well! By the fourth century, the Nicene Creed had stripped a Torah obedient life-style from the religion of Jesus and in its place made mental ascent to a solar-godman's identity paramount for Eternal Life. In the place of Jesus' emphasis on living the Commandments of God we find a new way of living where a complex and unintelligent Trinitarian theology that replaced Ethical Monotheism of the Jews and the Torah. We find emphasis upon the virgin birth in the pattern of their sun-godmen which is traced all the way back to Horus and Egypt, emphasis of the rising from the dead of the sun-godmen in the form of this new Jesus, and of the final judgment, but nowhere of the teachings and the ethical and moral message of Jesus emphasized. If you think I am wrong then I challenge you to read the 2/3 of the New Testament written by Paul and find more than 2 single sentences referring to what Jesus both believed and taught! You won't find it because it is not there. The Gentiles were not concerned about what Jesus stood for or believed as his faith; only that he be recast in the image of the prior pagan Gods. Nothing for them changed. Look at the world today and you can see that among the low morality and ethical nature of our county which boast of being Christian. Yet we are taught to believe in "this Jesus;" we are just not taught that to live like him brings Eternal Life. Instead of a call to change our lives and our relationship with God and the world we have an all-powerful Jesus presented as the Messiah without a cause.

By and large the vast majority of Christians today have not been taught the truth concerning the Jewish Jesus and his true "Gospel." In place of it they have been handed a "substitute Gospel" that has more in common with the mystery religions and Sun-Worship that with Biblical Judaism. Recovering the real message and teachings of Jesus and understanding Jesus' message is as important for the modern world as for the historian. Many today are concerned about the environmental crisis and the pillaging of the earth's resources by rampant consumerism, the spiral of escalating violence, the victimization of the world's poor, and the slaughter of animals for food. Perhaps these problems are quickly remedied if the Christian Church repents of Roman theology and recovers and returns to Jesus' message of simple living and nonviolence is relevant for today's world - even though it has been lost from most of modern Christianity.

In this website we will examine several major doctrines held dear by mainline Protestant and Catholic Christianity in light of Biblical language, Biblical history, Biblical culture, archeology, etc., in hopes of recovering and restoring the pristine and elementary teachings of the Historical Jesus; teachings which have escaped the gaze of millions. Once confronted with the evidence, it is our hope at Bet Emet Ministries that the reader will take to heart what he has learned, repent of his theological error and sin, and begin a renewed worship of the Creator in Spirit and in Truth. Shalom.

LOOKING FOR THE JEWISH JESUS...THE HOPE FOR BOTH JEWS AND CHRISTIANS TO EVER BECOME "ONE"

There are many studies that one can undertake in his life for the pursuit of Spiritual Truth. There are many paths that open up once one begins to uncover long hidden truths that lie beneath the texts of our Bibles. Many of our readers have progressed to such a level in their studies that they have seen that mankind has preserved through recorded history that there has been 3 different ways to evaluate "the Christ" since man first began to life on this plane of existence. The summary of my studies these past twenty years can be summarized and categorized rather easily in 3 basic classifications which you will see yourself if you undertake similar studies. I found, and so will the reader, that there are three schools of thought down through history concerning the interpretation of just whom is this "Jesus Christ"!

- The Historical Jesus Christ (the presentation of "the Christ" as taught through the medium of a presumed "perfected" historical person to serve as "the model" and "example" for all mankind to emulate, follow, and evolve into as the goal of their incarnation. This is the "perfect" Adam Kadmon, the progressive, evolving, perfecting earthly man that was created on the model of the perfect cosmic Adam on high, the perfect God manifested and later incarnated in matter and "flesh" of all mankind).
- The Mythical Jesus Christ (the personification of the Sun as it moves on its prescribed path through the Heavens where we find it moving through each house of the Zodiac which goes hand in hand with the changing seasons of the year [Spring Equinox, Summer Solstice, Autumn Equinox, Winter Solstice). Again, we see the link with the Sun, the creative Living Energy of Divine Mind that animates all life and evolution of life in this Solar System). This is the story of the evolution of Divine Fire, the Divine Spark, within man evolving into the likeness of God as the "Mind of His Christ" in Earthly incarnation.
- The Mystical Jesus Christ (the allegorical expression of a hidden teaching, a secret doctrine, given under strict and exacting conditions to approved candidates by the Ancient Masters of Spiritual Wisdom regarding the descent of the Logos (God) into matter, ie., mankind). Believe it or not we find that Paul speaks of this in the New Testament:

Col 1:27 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

On entering now on the study of the life of "the Christ", of the rites of Christianity, its sacraments, it doctrines, it would be disastrous to ignore the facts presented by comparative mythologists and religionists down through history. These facts regarding the identity of "Jesus Christ", rightly understood, hold the "key" to answering the biggest question ever posed to mankind: "Who is Jesus Christ"?

Make no mistake about it. This is a massive study; a study that took me almost 15 years of daily scholarly study to obtain all the pieces of this Roman puzzle of confusion and jargon constructed over the last 1,800 years in order to hide the truth of the Divinity of humanity and in so doing misrepresent "the indwelling Christ" to the whole world. The "thinking believer" should want to know "why" all of this "textual gymnastics" have been done over these last 2,000 years or so by the organized Roman Christian religion and its various "sects" and "what it is" that they are trying so desperately to hide, bury, conceal and keep hidden from bulk of humanity by such unfaithfulness and forgery of the Scared Hebrew Scriptures. For this reason I have dedicated my life to presenting the truth to the world about this darkest moment of human history and its great loss of Divine Truth which is termed today "the Dark Ages". This "massive study" is literally 16 websites or "books" containing the necessary information to trace this deception of Spiritual Truth that began in the 2nd century with the rise or Roman Orthodoxy and its legacy in Protestantism which so darkens the minds of Christians the world over. For those who wish we offer a CD containing the complete series of our Websites and these "books" along with instructions as to how and in what order these websites are to studied in order to follow the progression of thought to solve this "Jesus Puzzle" with all its contradictions and inconsistencies that concerns and befuddles us all when read "literally" and "historically" in our Bibles. Let us not be mistaken, the "Mind of Christ" was revealed to mankind down through history. Most of us have been born into the Christian Faith whereby we inherited the "Mind of Christ" as expressed through the Jewish Culture and Religion. The question that I pose for this article is if the presentation of this "Mind of Christ" has been accurately presented through the New Testament in the Roman Bibles we have received.

It truly is amazing when I think about it. I graduated with a Master's degree in Divinity from Southwestern Theological Seminary in Ft. Worth, Texas, in 1988 and never was taught one thing about a "Jewish Jesus". Just the opposite really: I was taught about a "Gentile" Jesus, who in Mark 7:14, does away with all the Levitical food laws concerning "clean" and "unclean".

Mark 7:14-20 14 And when he had called all the people unto him, he said unto them, Hearken unto me every one of you, and understand: 15 There is nothing from without a man, that entering into him can defile him: but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man. 16 If any man have ears to hear, let him hear. 17 And when he was entered into the house from the people, his disciples asked him concerning the parable. 18 And he saith unto them, Are ye so without understanding also? Do ye not perceive, that whatsoever thing from without entereth into the man, it cannot defile him; 19 Because it entereth not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging all meats? 20 And he said, That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man. (KJV)

Now let us read the English Standard Bible and it relates these same verses:

14 And he called the people to him again and said to them, "Hear me, all of you, and understand: 15 There is nothing outside a person that by going into him can defile him, but the things that come out of a person are what defile him." 17 And when he had entered the house and left the people, his disciples asked him about the parable. 18 And he said to them, "Then are you also without understanding? Do you not see that whatever goes into a person from outside cannot defile him, 19 since it enters not his heart but his stomach, and is expelled?"(Thus he declared all foods clean.) 20 And he said, "What comes out of a person is what defiles him.

There it is in plain sight. Jesus just contradicted God and Moses and did away with the Book of Leviticus and the "clean and unclean" food laws. But this could never happen and never did happen since the New Testament Jesus is depicted as being Jewish. Had this happened "literally" or "historically" he surely would have been denounced as a blasphemer and more than likely stoned on the spot. Surely no expected Jewish Messiah could break the Levitical laws and be some sort of perfect and "sinless" sacrifice like New Testament theology pretends. If this Jesus really said this then he disqualifies himself as Messiah on the spot. Something was wrong there in this one verse. I wondered why this verse was written when historically this never could have happened in the first place. This only enlarged my thoughts as to what other passages in the New Testament were falsehoods like Mark 7:14. The only recourse for me was to seek out the "Jewish Jesus" and the "Mind of Christ" expressed through the Jewish Faith. But other problems were to later emerge that only complicated my search.

The nineteenth century marked the beginning of "the quest for the historical Jesus". Christian scholars by using various historical-critical methods sought to uncover the historical figure from the layers of Christian tradition in the Gospels. Even though the research has gone through particular waves and trends, there has been by scholars a general recognition that Jesus should be located within one of the diverse Judaisms of his day and not the founder of a completely separate and competing faith as is Christianity today. In this endeavor Jewish scholars have now taken seriously the historical Jesus research and are making distinctive contributions to this field.

In Israel itself there is very little interest in the figure of Jesus amongst the predominantly Orthodox Jewish communities. This is perhaps not surprising given the fact that their faith, unlike our Christian faith, can function adequately without any reference to him.

However, for those who are engaged in Christian-Jewish dialogue the figure of Jesus remains fascinating and above all problematic. There are Jews who feel unthreatened in the dialogue to express their views on Jesus. While some Christians, unaware of the forgery of their Old and New Testament use of the Hebrew Scriptures, find the Jewish "rejection" of Jesus as the Jewish Messiah and savior of mankind puzzling, often the dialogue has led to a rediscovery of the Jewishness of Jesus and the higher ethic that he exampled and taught for the most part excluding such verses as Mark. 7:14 and others. It is in this "Jewishness of Jesus" that we uncover the "Mind of God's Christ" projected through the Jewish Faith. I wish I could say the same about the Roman redaction and presentation of the "Krst/Christ" through its depiction of this "perfected man" as Jesus in the New Testament but I cannot. Coupled with Rome's deception and adulteration of the Hebrew Scriptures the picture of this "supposed perfected man" and "example for humanity" is terribly skewed and slanted antisemitically in many places and the "Mind of Christ" is often so terribly misrepresented that only a through study of the Jewish Faith will assure the Divine Truths within Judaism being obtained. This "Jewishness" is not to be understood so much as about a man but the religious ideas expressed in Biblical Judaism that are incorporated in the religious belief system of such an "example" to the whole of mankind. This, when understood properly, is beneficial to both Jews as well as Christians. I am not saying that a person or a Christian needs to become or convert to Judaism or become "Jewish" but rather that such a one needs to understand the religious teachings of Judaism and then contrast it with his or her inherited Christian religious belief system and then when understanding both and their divergences ask himself "why" when Christianity touts itself as being the fulfillment of Judaism and possessor of the truth concerning the "Jewish Messiah". Take time to ponder how Christianity can reject its mother's faith and religious dogmas yet be the truth and the goal of Judaism. Of course over 2000 years Judaism has denied strongly such a position as held by Christianity and its religious dogmas in many instances and will ever do so. What is surprising for most Christians is that generally Jews have no difficulty with the Jewish Jesus but they do reject the "Gentile" Christ of Christian faith; a supposed Messiah than can nullify Leviticus for example let alone die for the sins of others if they only believe in a "creed". It is one thing to accept Jesus as a great Jewish prophet and "anointed" rabbi, possibly the anointed one possessing traits of the expected Jewish Messiah, traits that lie latent in the whole of humanity at its present stage of Spiritual evolution, but quite another to accept him as the "literal" and "historical" Second Person of the Trinity and equal with God. And the list of problems only enlarges the more once thinks of the differences between a "Jewish Jesus" and a "Gentile Jesus" and compares the religious belief systems of both Judaism and later Roman Christianity. A "thinking believer", who does the studies, cannot help begin to wonder if behind much of the depiction of the New Testament Jesus and the theologies that lie connected to him through the pens of Rome and their antisemitic visions for a "Gentile Jesus", lies a truth that has yet to be heard.

JESUS FROM A JEWISH PERSPECTIVE: THE MIND OF CHRIST EXPRESSED THROUGH JUDAISM

Every major world religion of the ancients had their "Krsts/Christs/Messiahs"; Judaism was no different and should not be having had the benefit of picking up the ancient Sacred Science from their pilgrimage and captivities in Egypt, Babylon, and Persia. Basically, the Osiris cult found its way through the world and into the Mystery religions such as the Greek Mysteries of Dionysus at Eleusis, Attis in Asia Minor, Bacchus in Italy, and Mithras in Persia. They all involved a voluntary death, a flight from the body, a descent into the underworld, and ascent into Heaven, and then a resurrection. When we come to the New Testament we have a problem on our hands because this ancient metaphysical teachings of the Spirit realm and the Soul is merged with an expected human descendent from the loins of King David and out comes basically an anomaly that has ever existed. By that I mean the "historical" and "literal" presence of the indwelling "Krst/Christ" in mankind in the form of a solitary person to the exclusion of the rest of the human race. This figure Christians come to know as Jesus in the New Testament. Mystical Judaism is not a stranger to these same metaphysical teachings concerning the descent of the Divine into all "matter" and the whole of all physical manifestation including the human being. They also have their hoped-for human messiah and "anointed one". What the Jews don't have, nor believe in, is the "literal" and "historical" combination of Divinity and "matter" in one solitary person to the exclusion of the whole of mankind. This leaves no place for Jesus as depicted in the New Testament as opposed to the rest of mankind. Thus, when the studies have been done the proper interpretation and understanding of the New Testament Jesus has to be accomplished through the restoration of the Jewish religious truths expressed in such a person and his depiction in the New Testament. Only when the "Jesus Jesus", and not the "Roman Jesus", is restored to the Jewish Faith and its cultural milieu can the Divine Truths and "Mind of this Christ" as expressed through the Jewish faith for the whole of mankind be restored and benefit the progress of the Soul and its evolution.

The Jews have been fascinated by the figure of Jesus in the New Testament down through history. Some have strongly denounced such a one while others have valued such a one because of the Jewish teachings that often, but not always, come from the mouth of the New Testament Jesus. Wisdom requires that a distinction be make between this "Jewish" and "Non-Jewish" Jesus as we have received it in our New Testaments. In the New Testament this Jesus is depicted as having lived as a Jew among Jews for his recorded life, spoke Hebrew and Aramaic, was seen as a Jew by non-Jews. This Jewish Jesus kept the Biblical Festivals (Solar holidays associated with the equinoxes and solstices) and attended synagogue where "Moses is read". This characterization and personification of the Divine Mind through the Jewish Faith, when understood correctly, elevates the Soul of the reader and aid in his Soul's maturation and evolution in this human body we now possess. In the last 100 years many Jewish scholars have written about this Jewish Jesus and continue to do so like never before and that is good. One might say that today there is a "Jewish reclamation" to reclaim Jesus as a "good Jew" and an example to all. Make no mistake about it; the story of Jesus is part of Jewish history. From a Christian perspective I would like to see his story incorporated in that Jewish history, so that, in my view, suitable respect can be accorded to this presentation of the "ideal man" expressed through the Jewish faith, just as other Jewish figures are respected in other faiths. At the same time I would like to see the Jewish people respected by the ending of attempts to undermine the Jewish people's coherence and validity of their faith by the activities of Christian missionaries which want to convert them to a "paganized form" of Biblical Faith whereby the Divine teachings given to mankind for his Soul's evolution are so badly misrepresented and distorted. Many will not understand that statement without further study on their part but when we compare Judaism and Christian religious dogmas and their similarities and contradictions between them one is moved to realize that both cannot be "right"; one has erred from the path of truth and knowledge. Determining which one for certain cannot be accomplished from emotion or inherited traditions. Hard-nosed study to see where the "train jumped the track" is necessary to see just when in history did the ancient Divine Wisdom and Sacred Science of the Soul depart from the way of Divine Truth. The determination of which one of these major world religions has erred from Spiritual Truth and duly recognizing its aberrant theologies is most important for the unfoldment of one's Soul in this incarnation which we possess at present.

It may be difficult for Christians and for some Jews to accept anything that I have to say. I do not know, but when a Christian says, "Lord", in reference to the New Testament Jesus, I cannot help but wonder what is meant by such a word. A true Christian will see Jesus as the singular emanation of God, to the exclusion of all other Souls. Hence the problem, as Jesus depicted in the New Testament is treated both as being equal with God and very God as well as man at the same time. This is the problem; a man who is equal with God. The story detailing how this Jesus became God is a most interesting study and one what is not mastered quickly. It will behove us to look into this some before we continue.

The Council of Nicea took place in 325 C.E. by the order of the Roman Emperor Caesar Flavius Constantine. Nicea was located in Asia Minor, east of Constantinople and it was at this Council of Nicea, Emperor Constantine presided over a group of Church bishops and leaders with the purpose of defining the true God for all of Christianity and to eliminate all the confusion, controversy, and contention within the church regarding the "nature" of "the Christ" to which few could agree. The Council of Nicea finally affirmed the deity of Jesus Christ and established an official definition of the Trinity - the deity of The Father, Son, and Holy Spirit under one Godhead, having three co-equal and co-eternal Persona.

The main theological issue and focus had always been about "the Christ". But this "Christ" is not a new term since finding its origin in ancient Egypt thousands of years before the Jesus of the New Testament. If one does the studies into this ancient "Krst/Christ" he sees that this is the Metaphysical personification of the evolving Divinity within mankind as the human being evolves into the "fullness and stature" of Christ as the New Testament alludes. This is a slow process no doubt but one which is the path set before every human being whether he is aware of it or not. Since the ending of the Apostolic Age and beginning of the Church Age, saints, having long lost the "keys" to the ancient Wisdom Religions like ancient Egypt, began questioning, debating, fighting, and separating over, “Who is the Christ?” Is He more “divine than human” or more “human than divine?” Ancient Egypt had the answers to these questions and so did the Gnostics, but the answers were not to Rome's liking with an invincible legion that conquered the known world and found no adversary to stop their imperialism. Living life as "personified love" was not the desire of Rome nor its legions. So having lost the desire and "gnosis" behind the "Krst" Rome wrested with redefining the "Krst/Christ" for the entire known world of their day. Having accepted a blurred traditions of this "Krst" at issue were such questions needing definitive answers as: "Was Jesus (the Krst/Christ) created / made or begotten? Being the Son of God, is Jesus (this Krst/Christ) co-equal and co-eternal with Father God, or less and lower in status than He? Is the Father the One and only True God, or is the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit the One true God? Is God "one" in number or "one" in unity being made up of many parts as we see in "Let us make man in our image" for example? Was Egypt correct in sharing with man the Ennead and Ogodod to describe Emanationism in the cosmos from the hand of this one God? Is this manifestation of God, this "Krst/Christ" depicted in the image of this Jesus the “True God of True God”? Is this manifestation of God in the depiction of Jesus “One Being in Three Persons”, a tri-unity called more commonly today the “Trinity”? Jesus, the personified Christ in the New Testament said, “Who do you say that I am?” (Matthew 16:15). Man over the last two thousand years has debated this issue and continues to do so at present. The truth is there for all to see if they look before Nicea and the Constantine redefinition of "the Christ". The ancient Wisdom religions knew exactly what "the Krst/Christ" was. All Rome had to do was look at their own myths and bow their knee to this ancient Wisdom and they would have their answers. In so doing the Wisdom Religions and Sacred Science of ancient Egypt would have filled the world with love and knowledge. There would be no need for a Roman legion and such actions that dominate the human race. The Brotherhood of all mankind and the "oneness of all" could be restored to humanity if but Rome would have beat their swords into plowshares. But they would not! Power over mankind is a strong force not easily broken unless one has a contrite heart and is familiar with repentance such is taught in Judaism as bringing the Kingdom of God near mankind. Constantine decided for the world who this "Christ" was to now be and in my humble opinion not only got it wrong but denied the consensus of the ancients regarding "the Christ" which can be seen upon serious study to be a singular teaching and interpretation held in common down through history among major world religions since the beginning of time! That great ancient Spiritual legacy to the whole of mankind would all change with Constantine and few Christians ever awaken today to the fact that their understanding of the "Jesus Story" is flawed to the core and even entertain the idea of study into such a sensitive subject because of their implicit trust in one book that Rome itself gave the world that caused this whole deception in the first place. The "literal" and "historical" approach to the Jesus Story, along with the presentation of "the Christ" as taught through the medium of a presumed "perfected" historical person to serve as "the model" and "example" for all mankind to emulate, follow, and evolve into as the goal of their incarnation, is beneficial but only when understood in this manner. This "Jesus Story" is the "perfect" Adam Kadmon of mystical Judaism, the progressive, evolving, perfecting earthly man that was created on the model of the perfect cosmic Adam on high, the perfect God manifested and later incarnated in matter and "flesh" of all mankind. The "Jesus Story" is the example of the Soul's evolution; a "pattern if you will", of how man is to live a life of love among his brethren and in so doing unfold his Soul in this opportunity given it being incarnated in a manger and "animal nature" of this fleshy body of death (again the image of swaddling clothes seen with Jesus or the mummies of ancient Egypt with their burial clothes). The Soul when incarnated into humanity "dies" and all of life is purposed for the "awakening from the dead" while we yet live an animal nature as Paul attests.

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

This is how man is to live his life, awakened to the "indwelling Christ-Divine Mind" within himself which guides the Soul through this life. This "Krst/Christ" Divine Mind is not our consciousness; rather it is an enlightened consciousness obtained through mediation whereby a person comes into contact with the Kingdom of God "within himself". It is here that intellect can be enlightened by Spiritual intuition from touching the indwelling Christ "within". A person can live his whole life, read the "Jesus Story" a thousand times, and ever come to understand it correctly or the need for this "inter-spection" of himself because of the deceptions that line the pages of the New Testament after Rome got through writing it at Constantine's request. Most of us grow us in Christianity today being taught that the Gospels were supposedly written early. The only thing "early" is the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Mystery Religions in which can be found this same "Soul's Story" otherwise known today as the "Jesus Story". It is here in the Mystery Religions, nation after nation, from ancient Egypt downward, that we find these same events, same stories, same happenings, and even the same unique "sayings" that come from the lips of Horus and Ra which are later inserted into the mouth of this supposedly "historical" and "literal" person known today as the New Testament Jesus. Only when this hybrid "Jesus Story" is recognized correctly for what it "is" and what it is "not" and then restored and interpreted through the Jewish culture and religion can one hope to begin to separate the true religious dogmas for his Soul apart from the false ones and their pernicious theologies that cripple the Soul as given us by our inherited Roman "Jesus Story". For us today being born in Western Christianity, salvation truly is of the Jews since we inherit Rome's version of "Judeo-Christianity". It is about time we examine the Jewish faith and even Mystical Judaism to recover the Soul Science in Judaism today. Now, let us look at how Constantine tried to destroy the "Krst/Christ" and gave it a radical "reinterpretation". In so doing the prior understanding of God and His unique relationship with mankind as known from the beginning of time will be altered and its wake will emerge Constantine's "Jesus Christ". When you see this you will be breathless and hopefully stirred to do you personal study to recover the Divine Wisdom and Soul Science of the ancients that will prepare you for your next step in your Soul's evolvement. Besides that, in the wake of this theological synthesis and reinterpretation of Constantine we will see that he will order the production of fifty books we today call the "Bible" that will contain his ideas of God that will become the foundation and "glue" that will bring his empire together through religion and not the sword. In such a production the great light of the ancients and their knowledge of man's Soul dims to such a degree that the Dark Ages will emerge for mankind and mankind, under this Roman emphasis of Constantine's Bible, will delay and sidetrack the evolution of his Soul for almost two thousand years.

Let us continue our study in the next article.

LOOKING FOR THE JEWISH JESUS...THE HOPE FOR BOTH JEWS AND CHRISTIANS TO EVER BECOME "ONE" #2

Constantine demanded once the Nicea Council meeting was underway that the 300 bishops make a decision by majority vote defining who and how this new Jesus Christ is to be understood. For the great need of unity in his empire, Constantine commanded them to create a “creed” and "doctrine" that all of Christianity would follow and obey. This doctrine is termed today the “Nicene Creed” and is upheld by the Church and was enforced by the Emperor Constantine as the theological fruit of the Nicea Council. The bishops voted to make the full deity of Christ the accepted position for the church. As well, the Council of Nicea voted to make the Trinity the official doctrine of the church.

In the wake of such a decision Constantine ordered the production of the Bible! Thus we find that in the fourth century, the Roman Emperor Constantine united all religious factions in Christianity under one composite deity, and ordered the compilation of new and old writings into a uniform collection that became the New Testament. It is in these writings post-dating 325 C.E. that we find today comprise our New Testament and which teaches that Jesus is the Messiah and should be worshipped and trusted, which was/is to say He is co-equally God and man. The Catholic Encyclopedia, Herbermann ed., vol. iii, p. 712 states: "Our documentary sources of knowledge about the origins of Christianity and its earliest development are chiefly the New Testament Scriptures, the authority of which we must, to a great extent, take for granted." This somehow was never reassuring to me and seeing these great differences between Judaism and Christianity I wanted to know why the religion of this Jesus was so distorted and changed later in normative Christian dogma. For example, the New Testament forbids the worship of angels (Colossians 2.18; Revelation 22.8,9) but commands the worship of Jesus. Again, the Messiah of Judaism is "the messiah" and not "the Messiah". In other words, the messiah is a man from the loins of David and not a virgin-born savior of the world, only the Jews from the persecutions of the Gentiles. Again, the Apostle Paul, a known Gnostic today, is made to say about Jesus that “in Him the fullness of Deity dwells bodily” (Colossians 2.9; cf. 1.19). Paul again is made to to say that Jesus is Lord and is the One to whom a person must pray for salvation just as one calls on Jehovah, Yahweh (Joel 2.32; Romans 10.9-13). Furthermore, Paul is made to say in Constantine's Bible that "Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen" (Romans 9:5, KJV). This Jesus, as depicted in Constantine's Bible, is made to be our God and Savior (Titus 2.13). Faith in Jesus’ Deity is made basic to Paul’s supposed testimony and theology. Once again, the Apostle John’s Gospel declares Jesus being the Divine eternal Logos, agent of creation and source of life and light (John 1. 1-5, 9). This Jesus is made to be "the Way, the Truth, and the Life" (John 14.6), an advocate with the heavenly Father (1 John 2.1-2), that He is sovereign (Revelation 1.5), the Rider on a white horse (Revelation 19.11-16), and the totality of the Son of God from the beginning to the end (Revelation 22.13). The author of Hebrews reveals the full deity of Jesus through His perfection as the most high priest, Melchizedek (Hebrews 1; Hebrews 7:1-3), and the full humanity (Hebrews chapter 2). The Divine-human Savior is the Christian's object of faith, hope, and love. And so it goes. All the while Judaism sits in amazement of the depravity of such theology that a "literal" man could be God when the Hebrew Scriptures, let alone the great Egyptian religion and major religions of the world, teaches otherwise and always has!

One of the most amazing things that I can remember about my first five years of study following Seminary is that many old Christian sources, like the Catholic Encyclopedia, make extraordinary admissions about its New Testament. For example, this very same Catholic Encyclopedia, admits in its Preface that the Gospels "do not go back to the first century of the Christian era" although such an idea is the majority opinion held by most today (Catholic Encyclopedia, Herbermann ed., vol. vi, p. 137, pp. 655-656). This admission by the Catholic Encyclopedia conflicts with priesthood assertions that the earliest Gospels were progressively written during the decades following the death of this assumed "literal" and "historical" Jesus Christ in the first century. Study revealed to me that the Church itself admits that "the earliest of the extant manuscripts of the New Testament do not date back beyond the middle of the fourth century C.E." (Catholic Encyclopedia, op cit., pp. 656-657). Notice please that I said fourth century which happens to coincide with the time of Constantine! If we take a second and reflect upon this ancient attestation by the Church itself it truly stretches believability that it would be 350 years after the time supposed for a "literal" and "historical" Jesus before we find the writing, collection, and editing of writings known as the New Testament; especially in light of the inherited and accepted tradition that these writings were made at the hands of Jewish apostles who supposedly walked and lived among this supposed Jesus. I would find all the more incredible as my studies advanced is the fact that this same "Jesus Story" could be found repeated almost vertabim in all world religions and comparative religious study since the beginning of recorded history. By difference names this same "Jesus Story" was found to be repeated over and over again, beginning with ancient Egypt which gave the world and the whole of mankind the "prototype". Amazingly I would uncover in my studies that the events are identical and the "Logia", or the sayings of the Lord are so often the same as found in the mouth of Horus and the mouth of Jesus. To any "thinking believer" who sees these things only one conclusion can be made; namely, that the same Spiritual Wisdom of ancient Egypt is often repeated in the Jewish faith and in the "Jesus Story" as well. The problem surfaces when the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of not only ancient Egypt but the other nations that followed in their Spiritual footsteps is altered to contradict this ancient Wisdom at the hands of Rome and Constantine. Truly I came to see that there is nothing "new" under the Sun. God never changes and Divine Truth is not open for change as well. It is Eternal! It slowly dawned upon me that since there were no New Testaments until the fourth century then the majority of these writings must not have been written until then and all that came before were mainly oral traditions and small groups of writings which over time were collected and "projected backwards" in time and history by Rome in order to connect them to the great Jewish Faith and its authority during the pre-Temple and Temple era. Simply said, in so doing Rome created the "literal" and supposed "historical Jesus". That is why the study of the historical Jesus is so rewarding yet so heart wrenching for the traditional Christian in his desire for truth being taught untruths from which he has to repent if he desires to worship God in "Spirit and Truth".

I would learn during such studies that Flavius Constantine (272-337 C.E.) authorized the compilation of the writings now called the New Testament. Unless we understand the time in which Constantine lived it makes it even harder to understand the evolution of the "Jesus Story" as the hands of Constantine and in the Bibles he ordered written. Being Emperor, Constantine knew like any wise ruler that unity was needed in his nation for its strength, superiority, and prosperity. But such unity was not what Constantine saw when first made Emperor. In his kingdom "many gods and may lords" (I Cor. 8:5) existed along with numerous religious sects, each with differing doctrines (Gal. 1:6). Clergy and groups of dissidents clashed over attributes of their various gods and "altar was set again altar" in competing for an audience (Optatus of Milevis, 1:15, 19, early 4th century). Constantine recognized that many religious splinter groups and factions needed unifying and set out to develop an all-embracing religion during this period of irreverent confusion and disarray. We must remember Constantine's people were basically ignorant and illiterate. Estimates of the era indicate only 10% of Europe were illiterate and could read. That means that 90% of his subjects were illiterate. It is even stated by the Catholic Encyclopedia itself, Herbermann ed., vol. xiv, pp. 370-371, that there was no Christian religion at Constantine's time and the Church acknowledges that the tale of his "conversion" and "baptism" are "entirely legendary". To say that Constantine embraced the Christian religion as it existed in the 4th century and subsequently granted "official toleration" of this Christian religion is an absolute falsehood needing to be struck from every book which erroneous attests to such a supposed fact. According to Eusebius, "strife had grown so serious that vigorous action was necessary to establish a more religious state" and Eusebius further attests that Constantine was unsuccessful in bringing about a more established and unified "religious state" and a unity among these divergent and rival god factions (Eusebius, Life of Constantine, pp. 26-28). The reader needs to be reminded once again that at the very core of these religious factions lie the very nature of God being manifested in "matter" as "the Krst/Christ" (Divine Mind) and His connection and relationship with "matter"; in particularly God as incarnated within mankind. Again, the very core of this issue was how God related to mankind and this "link" had always been known to be through Divine Mind and consciousness by the ancients and the philosophers like Plato and Plotinus and many other such great men. The ancient Egyptians called this "link" the "Krst"; we call it today "the Christ". This again was never limited to but one person as Rome will do; it applies to every child of God that ever took breath.

Answer for yourself: Who is this "Christ" and how do men relate to God through His "Krst/Christ"? Is this "Christ" best known through Rome's interpretation of "the Krst" and the New Testament record? Is this evolving "Christ" best known through the religion of the Jews, Judaism, or the great Egyptian religion? Did Constantine decide who this "Christ" and "Jesus Christ" was to be for the western world and we not know it today? Could this possibly be the truth about the "Jesus Christ" of the New Testament and we not know this in our churches today? Have we swallowed hook, line, and sinker the Constantine Jesus and follow error and never know it? This is the 64,000 dollar question.

Being far removed from the ancient Egyptian religion the illiterate masses of Constantine's day were uncertain about much of the Mystery religions given that fact that there was an "outer" teaching for the masses and an "inner" teaching reserved for the initiated. Add to that the fact that the few who could read and "literate" were usually "initiates" into the Divine Mysteries. The distinctions between these two groups of peoples were great and we can easily see how in the 4th century confusion reigned supreme in Constantine's Kingdom and unity, both political and religious, was not to be easily achieved. Constantine fared little better in his knowledge of the Divine Mysteries than the illiterate masses. Constantine, however, knew one thing for certain. Nothing separates mankind like religion but at the same time nothing can unify man like religion either! Constantine decided to unify his kingdom through a religion of his own making and in the process.

Constantine saw in this confused system of fragmented religious dogmas throughout his empire the opportunity to create a new and combined State religion to which all must surrender. In fact imperial law of Rome would mandate this new religion in the making a success and secured its victory over the minds of the people for no one could stand against the power of Rome and to do so meant sure death. The power of Roman law and legion would enforce such a decree and unity in a new religion would now be achieved by force. That new religion would be a synthesis of the Divine Wisdom religions of the world in order to bring a little that every one was somewhat familiar thus ensuring conformity and unity among the masses. This new religion imposing a new "interpretation" of "the Krst" would be called the religion of the "the Christ"; or Christianity as we know it today.

Constantine conquered the East in 324 A.D. and subsequently sent letters to many bishops exhorting them to make peace among themselves in their religious disputes involving the nature of "the Christ" but this endeavor was doomed to fail. In response Constantine issued a decree commanding all presbyters and this subordinates to come to Nicea in the Roman province of Bithynia in Asia Minor where this religious schism throughout his empire would be settled once and for all. What few know without study is that Constantine, a sun worshipper himself, ordered these bishops to bring with them the testimonies and sermons that they preached to their congregations. These sermons were full of their "dogmas" and "religious beliefs", many of which separated them from other Bishops and created the discord and disunity that reigned throughout Constantine's empire. Upon arrival in Nicea these sermons and dogmas were to be given to Constantine as mentioned by Addis and Aronld (The Catholic Dictionary, 1917, "Council of Nicea" entry). Collected were over 2,231 scrolls and legendary tales of various manifestations of God or gods, saviors, and "Christs", together with a record of the doctrines and religious dogmas orated by them (Eusebius, Life of Constantine, op. cit., vol. ii, p. 73). Again, initiates into the Divine Mysteries and those possessing the "keys" to the ancient Wisdom religions of the world would have known that there is unity in diversity and each god was but a personification of a Divine attribute of the One Sole God but lacking this knowledge and the "keys" to the Sacred Science the various Bishops argued among themselves as to which god to worship and which not to worship. Lacking such knowledge the situation was almost hopeless and unity elusive. It was at this gathering that Christianity as we have inherited it today was to be birthed and with it Constantine's interpretation of "the Christ" let alone the Constantinian view of the "Jewish Messiah" and the "literal" and "historical" depiction of "Jesus as the Christ" as we have it written in the Bibles that Constantine would later order be written.

It is noted in history that Constantine never acquired a solid theological knowledge of the Divine Mysteries and relied heavily upon his advisors in religious matters (Catholic Encyclopedia, New Edition, Vol. xii, p. 576). Prior to this time, however, Constantine has been initiated into the religious order of Sol Invictus 4 years prior to the gathering at Nicea. Sol Invictus was one of the two thriving cults that regarded the literal Sun as the one and only Supreme God (the other was Mithraism). Because of his Sun Worship, Constantine instructed Eusebius to instruct all the Bishops to convene the first of their three sittings at Nicea on the Summer Solstice in June 325 A.D. I can remember being amazed at the amount of incriminating evidence that opposes the inherited church tradition that I received in Seminary. If one can step outside the "company line" and do personal study one is amazed at what he finds. For example, it is recorded for us by Sabinus, Bishop of Hereclea, who was in attendance at Nicea, that "Excepting Constantine himself and Eusebius, they (the company of Bishops at Nicea) were a set of illiterate, simple creatures who understood nothing" (Bishop J.W. Sergus, Secrets of the Christian Fathers, 1685, 1897 reprint). This is but one of many enlightening confessions of the ignorance and uncritical credulity of early churchmen who founded religious dogmas that we, as well as billions of other Christians down through history, have been led to trust for their Soul's salvation in the Christian Church today. This fact and single quote should make your Soul shudder and goes a very long way in explaining why the Jewish religion and Rabbis never accepted the Jesus or "the Christ" of the Christian Church and never will. Dr. Richard Watson (1737-1816), a disillusioned Christian historian and one-time Bishop of Llandaff in Wales (1782), referred to this Nicea gathering as "a set of gibbering idiots" (Dr. Richard Watson, An Apology for Christianity, 1776, 1796 reprint; also Dr. R. Watson, Theological Tracts, "On Councils" entry, vol 2, London, 1786, revised reprint 1791). Dr. Watson goes so far as to conclude that "the clergy at the Council of Nicea were all under the power of the devil, and the convention was composed of the lowest rabble and patronized by the vilest abominations" (Dr. Richard Watson, An Apology for Christianity, 1776, 1796 reprint). The conclusion that a "thinking believer" should make from such attestations is that this Nicean body of churchmen responsible for the depiction of "the Christ" and Jesus in our New Testaments in the Bibles that Constantine later ordered is that such a council was entirely made up of infantile men who were responsible for the commencement of a new religion and the theological creation of Jesus Christ and his attendant theologies as we have been taught today. Lost in all of this religious creationism by such "gibbering idiots" is the ancient understanding of "the Christ" that had remained unchanged for thousands and thousands of years from nation to nation let alone the truth concerning the "Jewish Messiah". In light of this and many other facts gleamed from serious study I could see why that the Jewish people and their rabbis will not believe in the New Testament Jesus as does 2.5 billion Christian people in the world today. The truth is out there; the task is for us who have been born into Christianity as it now exists to find it among such deception to which we have fallen in our innocent searching for God in our lives. Add to this that Constantine hated the Jews then one should ask himself seriously if the depiction of a Jewish Jesus as God, Jewish Messiah, and savior in the New Testament can be trusted let alone foundational for the Soul's salvation in this life. One example should suffice that was mentioned before in passing at the beginning of this article. In the Gospel of Mark we find Jesus doing away with all the Levitical food laws concerning clean and unclean in Mark 7:14. Had this been an actual, literal, and historical event such a person denying the Levitical food laws of Yahweh would have been stoned to death on the spot for denying Moses and the Torah! This passage put in the mouth of this Jesus is not the mind of a Jewish messiah speaking but the words of later Gentiles who wanted nothing to do with such food laws who created self-serving religious dogmas that were subsequently put in the mouth of this Jesus when Constantine's Bibles were created. If you should think that the Holy Spirit is behind such a verse, let alone many others, or a Jewish writer, then think again. This one passage alone should make us wonder where such a passage actually came from and the impact that this passage as well as many others of which we yet don't understand properly or notice when reading the New Testament have had on our lives since not seeing them through "Jewish eyes". Let us learn one thing and never forget it. The "Mind of Christ" has been expressed in every nation and religion down through history and being born into Judeo-Christianity we are instructed to let this "Mind of Christ" be in us. This "Mind of Christ" for us is first expressed through Judaism and when later looking at "the Christ" expressed through Roman Christianity and its religious dogmas, we should be aware that this God which changes not should only confirm such prior Divine thoughts and teachings expressed in Judaism and not controvert them as is so often the case in the New Testament. Something is amiss in the New Testament depiction of this Jesus and "the Christ". As you are beginning to see, restoring the mind set of the "Jewish Jesus" is important in separating truth from error in the New Testaments we have inherited. It is sad to say but oh so true, our standing before God as Christians accepting Christian dogmas is often not what we think it to be having inherited unquestioningly Christian religious dogmas. Let Mark 7:14 be our wake-up call. We have failed to understand the truths hidden behind such passages as Mark 7:14 let alone the untruths that ring out from many other passages at the hands of Constantine and his monks who gave us our "altered New Testament" view of God's "Krst/Christ". Restoring the Jewishness of Jesus is a good start to recovering lost Divine Truths; steps that when followed ensure the truth-seeker eventually finding the inevitable link with ancient Egypt which can give mankind the greatest understanding of God ever known on this planet.

Constantine's intention at Nicea was to create an entirely new god for his empire who would unite all religious factions under one deity. Constantine desired a synthesis of sorts that could please everyone. Presbyters were asked to debate and decide who their new god would be. What one finds amazing when investigating Nicea is that vital elements of the Nicaea proceedings are "strangely absent from the canons" (Catholic Encyclopedia, Herbermann ed., vol. iii, p. 160). This quote means that the proceedings at Nicea have been expunged and censored to the public. Nicea was called for one reason only; that being the gathering of divergent religious cults to debate and decide upon a unified religious belief system for the Roman empire that could bring all peoples together under the common belief in only one god (Dr. Richard Watson, An Apology for Christianity, 1776, 1796 reprint). The list of gods represented by the Bishops of Nicea seemed endless and unity seemed illusory. A great number of Eastern and Western gods and goddesses like Jove, Rhets, Mithra, Baal, Thor, Gade, Apollo, Juno, Aries, Taurus, Minerva, Atys, Krishna, Indra, Durga, Neptune, Vulcan, Kriste, Agani, Croesus, Pelides, Huit, Hermes, Hesus, Thulis, Thammus, Eguptus, Iao, Aph, Saturn, Minos, Gitchens, Maximo, Hecla and Phernes were for the choosing (God's Book of Eskra, anon., xlvii, paragraph 36). Up and until the First Council Of Nicea, the Roman religion accepted by the aristocracy worshipped primarily two Greek gods Apollo and Zeus. The common people, however, looked to Caesar as their god who was deified by the Roman Senate after his death and venerated as "the Divine Julius" and "Savior". Caesar was called "God made manifest" and "Universal Savior of human life" and his son and successor Augustus was called the "ancestral God and Savior of the whole human race" (Homer Smith, Man and His Gods, Little, Brown, and Co., Boston, 1952).

Constantine intended to create a completely new god for his empire who would unite all religious factions under one deity. Having asked the Bishops and presbyters to debate the issue and decide upon one god among hundreds Constantine had hoped they they could reach a religious consensus. History shows us that they could not and one year and five months later no consensus was yet to be found (God's Book of Eskra, Prof. S. L. MacGuire translation, Salisbury, 1922, chapter xlvii, paragraphs 36, 41). Constantine was furious upon his return to Nicea to find little if any unity as he had hoped regarding this religious schism in his empire. The best that the Bishops had done was to limit their choices down to five gods: Caeasr, Krishna, Mithra, Horus, and Zeus (Eusebius, Historic Ecclesiastica, c. 325). Constantine, in charge of the Nicea proceedings, decided that he would choose this new god for everyone and enforce his choice upon all mankind in his empire. To appease the British Constantine chose the name of the great Druid god, Hesus as well as the Eastern Savior-god Krishna.

Now get ready for a shock. The Latin word for pig is written "sus"! "Je-sus" is pronounced "Gee-sooce" and this is from the Latin word/name "Ie-sus" which is pronounced "Ee-sooce". Now please don't get mad at me but amazingly, the suffix "sus" is the same as the Latin word for "pig". Added to this there was a Celtic demon god by the name "Esus" pronounced "Ee-sooce" also known as "Hesus" which is pronounced "He" or "Hey - sooce". Now, this god Hesus was worshiped by the ancient Druids (Dictionary of Pagan Religions, p. 117, 152). This "Esus" was found on a relief (the projection of a figure or part from the ground or plane on which it is formed, as in sculpture or similar work) that is on an alter of Zeus that was found in Paris in the Roman Catholic Cathedral of Notre Dame (Encyclopedia Britannica Macopedia, p. 575). On this relief you can see that on the chest of "Esus" is a Cross. Now, on a much higher note, there exists an Egyptian connection whereby Hesus was previously known as the Egyptian god Hu! In the heavens and cosmos this God is known to have "breathed out" and "breathed in" all that would later become life, along with its destruction/death, and rebirth. Egypt likened the creative acts of Amen or God as if he expelled his his first breath as "Hhhhhhooooooo". This is the breath of God who, as we received it, breathed life into matter. We see it so clearly in the Adam story which is at best an allegory. As the first Word of God is pronounced it sounds like the harmonics of a cosmic breeze. As a second breath is expelled Hhhhhhooooooo which becomes the sounds and name of the Ancient Egyptian god Hu. The bottom line is that Hu means an "Authoritative Utterance: Word of God: Word of Creation". This is the "Word" of God of which we also read. Clearly "Hhhhhhooooo" or "Hu" is the Word or utterance which means "God". Added to this later in the Jewish culture Hesus (pronounced heysoos) was a Hebrew term that meant "neither He nor She." It was neutral. This should make you wonder why we never hear of the feminine aspects of God or the goddesses. Amazing, we find that up until 2000 B.C.E. God was known to the culture religions of the world as feminine and not masculine. Following the northern barbarian invasions of the Southern hemisphere, the God of the battle ax destroys the God of love known in the Southern hemisphere. Truly, God is love and not a warrior God, a God to be feared. Sadly, God becomes overemphasized as "masculine" and has remained so since to most world religions since today they have separated themselves apart from the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Sacred Science. But this is only half of the puzzle.

Now it is also important to know that Krishna is Sanskrit for "Christ" which is in Egyptian the word "Krst". To these two names for god Constantine decided to combine and out comes "Hesus Krishna" as the new name for the new Roman god that would unify Constantine's kingdom. This name, "Hesus Krishna" was put to a vote and the majority of hands agreed by a vote of 161 to 157 that the name of this new Roman god would be "Hesus Krishna". This official gathering at the summons of Constantine gave the world "Hesus Krishna" as the new god of the Roman empire to which all could show allegiance and this new god was "officially" ratified by Constantine (Acta Concilii Nicaeni, 1618). This was a political act of deification by the power of Rome and the Emperor had his new religion. The astute reader might know that there is no "J" in the alphabets until around the 9th century and later "Hesus Krishna", which had existed from the 4th century, will in the 9th century, become subsequently "Jesus Christ". There you have it!

Now, knowing this, I challenge any and all to tell themselves before God that this "Jesus Christ" in the New Testament refers to a "literal" and "historical" personage that supposedly lived some 4 centuries earlier than Constantine in the Jewish culture and who died on an old rugged tree for the sins of mankind. No wonder Judaism cannot accept our Jesus as depicted in the New Testament. A little knowledge goes a long way to deliver man and save him from ignorance and foolishness. All that remained now for Constantine was the publicizing to the entire Roman empire the name of "Hesus Krishna" or, as it becomes some five hundred years later, "Jesus Christ". This synthesis of two ancient names for god was easily accomplished by Constantine and was done so when he ordered 50 new "Bibles" written containing this "Hesus Krishna" or "Jesus Christ" as a conglomerate of the hoped for seed from the loins of King David as the "Jewish messiah" (small "m" since not a God but only a man) and "Savior" (incarnated Divinity in "matter") of the world, the access to which was now only obtainable through the doors of the Roman Church and its Bishop. There is now "no salvation" outside of the Roman Church for mankind and again it only through the "Jesus Christ" of its own creation.

Immediately Eusebius was instructed by Constantine to organize a compilation of a uniform collection of new writings developed from the findings of the Nicean Council. Eusebius was instructed: "Search ye these books, and whatever is good in them, that retain; but whatsoever is evil, that cast away. What is good in one book, unite ye with that which is good in another book. And whatsoever is thus brought together shall be called The Book of Books. And it shall be the doctrine of my people, which I will recommend unto all nations, that there shall be no more war for religions' sake" (God's Book of Eskra, op. cit., chapter xlviii, paragraph 31). To this Constantine added "Make them to astonish" and the "books were written accordingly" (Eusebius, Life of Constantine, vol. iv. pp. 36-39).

Answer for yourself: What are these books that Constantine demanded written? Dear ones, they are what we call the Gospels and the Epistles today which Roman Church tradition will maintain were written "early". They had to be written early to identify with and thereby rob the authority of Judaism since Rome and the gentiles had little if none. The "Logia of the Lord" ("sayings of the Krst/Christ") from ancient Egypt down through history were collected and re-edited whereby no longer were the gods of the nations known by their prior names but now as "Hesus Krishna" only (Jesus Christ). And the "fish story" gets longer.

The truth is not always pretty but truth is the highest form of religion ever given man by God. The truth of the matter to which Seminary began to open my eyes is that the one god of Christianity was an invention. When Constantine ordered the council to come up with a "Bible," that promoted this new god of the Romans the council gathered all the books and writings and oral traditions of the many religions at the time, modified some, threw out a bunch, forged and fabricated others, and came up with the "New Testament" for this invented god of Rome, complete with invented stories about what this invented god "said" supposedly three hundred years earlier, what he did, and what other people (also fictitious) said about him. Given this history, we have an invented god and an invented set of writings supporting the "ideas" of this god. The only safe ground that one can find once knowing this truth is to look at the great religions of Judaism and Egypt and study them with all his or her might and in so doing find the undeniable truths of Divinity which has made contact with humanity; a feat that cannot be accomplished when taking the "Jesus Story" as a supposed "literal" and "historical" truth.

To continue, Eusebius set out and synthesized the "legendary tales of all the religious doctrines of the world together as one". Eusebius looked at the ancient metaphysical god-myths from ancient manuscripts the world over for his sources. Constantine was no idiot for he knew that the amalgamated collection of metaphysical divine religious myths would unite variant and opposing religious factions under one representative story. All he had to do is "literalize" and "historize" it and limit one's access to this new god to the doors of the Roman Church. Under the authority of Eusebius he selected scribes to produce "fifty sumptuous copies ... to be written on parchment in a legible manner, and in a convenient portable form, by professional scribes thoroughly accomplished in their art" (Eusebius, Life of Constantine, vol. iv. pp. 36-39). "These orders," said Eusebius, "were followed by the immediate execution of the work itself ... we sent him [Constantine] magnificently and elaborately bound volumes of three-fold and four-fold forms" (Eusebius, Life of Constantine, vol. iv, p. 36). They were the "New Testimonies", and this is the first mention (331 A.D.) of the New Testament in the historical record. So much for being written by presumed followers of a historical Jesus. With his instructions fulfilled, Constantine then decreed that the New Testimonies would thereafter be called the "word of the Roman Saviour God" (Eusebius, Life of Constantine, vol. iii, p. 29) and official to all presbyters sermonizing in the Roman Empire. Next, Constantine, to cover the truth of what happened at Nicea, ordered earlier presbyterial manuscripts and the records of the council "burnt" and declared that "any man found concealing writings should be stricken off from his shoulders" (beheaded) (Eusebius, Life of Constantine, vol. iii, p. 29). As the record shows, presbyterial writings previous to the Council of Nicaea no longer exist, except for some fragments that have survived.

Some council records also survived, and they provide alarming ramifications for the Church. Some old documents say that the First Council of Nicaea ended in mid-November 326, while others say the struggle to establish a god was so fierce that it extended "for four years and seven months" from its beginning in June 325 (Secrets of the Christian Fathers, op. cit.). Regardless of when it ended, the savagery and violence it encompassed were concealed under the glossy title "Great and Holy Synod", assigned to the assembly by the Church in the 18th century. Earlier Churchmen, however, expressed a different opinion.

Almost beyond belief, the Second Council of Nicaea in 786-787 denounced the First Council of Nicaea as "a synod of fools and madmen" and sought to annul "decisions passed by men with troubled brains" (H. H. Milman, D.D., History of the Christian Church, , 1871). If one chooses to read the records of the Second Nicean Council and notes references to "affrighted bishops" and the "soldiery" needed to "quell proceedings", the "fools and madmen" declaration is surely truthful to the historical example.

Constantine died in 337 and his outgrowth of many now-called pagan beliefs into a new religious system brought many converts. Later Church writers made him "the great champion of Christianity" which he gave "legal status as the religion of the Roman Empire" (Encyclopedia of the Roman Empire; Matthew Bunson, Facts on File, New York, 1994, p. 86). Historical records reveal this to be incorrect, for it was "self-interest" that led him to create Christianity (J. M. Dent, A Smaller Classical Dictionary, London, 1910, p. 161). Yet it wasn't called "Christianity" until the 15th century (Professor Edmond S. Bordeaux [Vatican archivist], How The Great Pan Died, , Mille Meditations, USA, MCMLXVIII, pp. 45-7).

Over the ensuing centuries, Constantine's New Testimonies were expanded upon, "interpolations" were added and other writings included (Catholic Encyclopedia, Herbermann ed., vol. vi, pp. 135-137; also, Pecci ed., vol. ii, pp. 121-122). For example, in 397 C.E. John "golden-mouthed" Chrysostom restructured the writings of Apollonius of Tyana, a first-century wandering sage, and made them part of the New Testimonies (Secrets of the Christian Fathers, op. cit.).

Answer for yourself: Can you guess where this will lead us?

The Latinized name for Apollonius is Paulus (J. T. White and J. E. Riddle, A Latin-English Dictionary, Ginn & Heath, Boston, 1880), and many believe today that the Church today calls those writings the Epistles of Paul. This helps to explain why there are two different Paul's in the New Testament with conflicting theologies; one a Gnostic associated with the Divine Mysteries and one completely opposite to such beliefs as seen in the one preached by the Church and its pro-Roman Constantinian theology. Apollonius's personal attendant, Damis, an Assyrian scribe, is Demis in the New Testament (2 Tim. 4:10). Over the centuries, not a few people have noticed a resemblance between the lives of the ancient sage Apollonius of Tyana and the Christian savior Jesus Christ, a comparison most notably brought to light by the "very important Roman official" Sossianus Hierocles in the fourth century. Apollonius was said to have lived in the first century, precisely at the time of Jesus's supposed advent, although the former supposedly lived to be around 100 years old, while the latter allegedly died several decades earlier. It is claimed that hundreds of statues of Apollonius were erected during the first centuries of the Christian era, with his fame as a "divine man" widespread around the Mediterranean. As well, many scholars have noticed that the stories of both Jesus and Paul were in part fabricated from that of Apollonius. It is difficult to determine what, if any, of Philostratus's Life of Apollonius constitutes history, although there appears to be confirmation at least of Apollonius's existence. In fact, from the odd coincidences between his life and that of Jesus, it has been suggested by not a few people that Jesus Christ is a fictional character based in large part on Apollonius of Tyana. In addition to this possible development are striking correlations between the lives of Apollonius and the apostle Paul, who, like Jesus, strangely finds no place in contemporary history, despite claims to his having made quite a ruckus in a populated and well documented part of the world. It appears that the stories of both Jesus and Paul were quite possibly in part fabricated from that of Apollonius.

The Church admits that the Epistles of Paul are forgeries, saying, "Even the genuine Epistles were greatly interpolated to lend weight to the personal views of their authors" (Catholic Encyclopedia, Herbermann ed., vol. vii, p. 645). That is why when we read Paul in the New Testament he seems to contradict what he has said otherwise. In other words, there appear to be "two" Pauls in the New Testament and often they don't disagree. Likewise, St Jerome (d. 420) declared that the Acts of the Apostles, the fifth book of the New Testament, was also "falsely written" ("The Letters of Jerome", Library of the Fathers, Oxford Movement, 1833-45, vol. v, p. 445). And all the while Constantine was creating a new god for the world the Mind of Christ expressed through the Jewish Faith fell upon the deaf ears of illiterate non-Jews the world over and does so yet today. What a shame. Thus, in light of such evidence, along with the abundant others obtained through Bet Emet Ministries, the need to recover the Mind of Christ expressed through the Jewishness of "the Christ" and Judaism where it can yet be found in the New Testament, or better yet, the study the Jewish ethic of the Torah and the Divine pattern for one's life upon it is the "key" to our incarnational purpose because such a life lived and established on the principles of the Jewish Faith truly displays the highest religious ethics found in the Laws of Ma'at of ancient Egypt (the Jewish Torah and laws were taken from it) that elevates and evolves the Soul of man as the Creator intended before the likes of Constantine who tried to destroy such Spiritual ambition.

Let us continue our studies in the next article in this series.

LOOKING FOR THE JEWISH JESUS...THE HOPE FOR BOTH JEWS AND CHRISTIANS TO EVER BECOME "ONE" #3

There are Jews who, even today, cannot bring themselves to mention the word Jesus, so painful is it because of the terrible persecution committed in his name. Christian history is littered by many attempts by Christian leaders to rouse their people to fury against the Jews because of the supposed physical death on the cross of a "literal" and "historical" Jesus of Constantine's making. When one compares our "Jesus Story" with the abundant other so-called "Solar Saviors" of the nations we find the exact same "story" and "sayings" which we find in our "Jesus Story". This should alert a "thinking-believer" that there is nothing "new under the Sun" and that man has always been given the "pattern" for his Soul's unfoldment and evolution. Every nation has had its "Jesus Story" in one way or the other; so better and more complete than others. The horror only God knows that Rome has done to the Jewish people for not accepting the forged New Testament and a distorted "Jewish Messiah" at the hands of Rome. This behavior and religious mind set of the Roman Church down through history remains the main cause of past and current antisemitism, which can even prevail in a country where few Jews are present. Those teachings provided fertile ground for the assault on the Jewish people from 1933 to 1945 and gave Hitler the ammunition he needed to almost wipe the Jewish people off the face of the Earth.

There is no doubt but that there are massive differences of doctrine between Judaism and Christianity, as to sin, priesthood, marriage, divorce, righteousness, giving, reincarnation, messiah, even the the path to salvation of the Soul. There are similar problems within each religion—violent differences, where one group of Christians will call other Christians anti-Christ, where one group of Jews will never set foot in certain synagogues and refuse to acknowledge their Ministers by the title Rabbi. Jesus, who teaches us above all love and forgiveness, yet who was angered by hypocrisy, would call them all vipers and hypocrites.

What the Jesus example in the New Testament does have, as other great religious leaders had, is a sense of the Eternal. His example shares with us that man is to know the true reality of his metaphysical Self that lies was beyond space and time. Judaism has always taught, and the "Jesus Story" likewise teaches, that all men are travelers between two worlds, in fact he was aware of both worlds all the same time, in touch with both worlds constantly, and tried to help others in their individual voyages between here and there.

Matt 3:2 2 And saying, Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. (KJV)

Matt 5:19 19 Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven. (KJV)

Matt 6:10 10 Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. (KJV)

Heaven is only a thought and one simple "willful" action away for man. He knew that the physical realm was merely an emanation of the Spirit-Energy, hence his insistence on the search inwards to find the Kingdom of Heaven which lies only within a person, not outside of the person.

Luke 17:20-21 20 And when he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: 21 Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you. (KJV)

This passage reminds us to not look "here" or "there" for "the Christ"; He only lives within and not outside of a person!

Matt 24:23-27 23 Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not. 24 For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. 25 Behold, I have told you before. 26 Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not. 27 For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. (KJV)

This is "true enlightenment" that quickens the Soul and Divine Mind within us all. This is the "true second birth"; a birth that delivers from man-made religion. This is "Spiritual Birth". This is the truth of the heart of the Jewish messiah and his message. Man is to find the Makhut, the Kingdom of God ONLY within. Each person coming into the world is animated by the Real Self within, this Self being capable of unlimited unfoldment and Spiritual evolution, having come to Earth for the purpose of its own development. The physical body and the mentality are the manifestations of this Inner Self, as are also the environment and all the experiences of life to which the Soul of man experiences in this life. Such is growth. Evolution of the Spiritual Soul is the "Father's Business" to which men must concern themselves while here in this plane of existence. The I AM of each person is the God quality, the spark of Divinity which lifts him above a mere physical and mental being, or animal-like existence, giving him dominion over all substance and creation. This is our "true Self", the "God-Self" within us all called "the Krst/Christ" down through history. Never, never was this "Krst/Christ" confined to but one person. Never was there a "dogma" that "saved"; only a "life" to be lived "patterned" upon the laws of God that produced the "awaking Christ" within to order the life of the person through whom "He lives". This is the "resurrection" of "the dead" while we yet live in the Gnostic Pauline epistles before Rome will later alter them as we attested before with abundant quotes from the Catholic Encyclopedia. Thus life become a series of causes with their resulting effects. Chance does not exist. Fixed laws and principles operate with such exactitude that if we understand the law and fulfill it, we may know what the result will be. Christianity, again, prides itself on being without law; Judaism finds its religious integrity and truth living the laws of our God. This alone should make you ask why Christianity teaches an "anti-law" religion but yet holds a supposed Jew, this Jesus, as its central focus. Such laws elevate the Soul and true Self of man above his animal nature. In truth, we don't get away with Spiritual mediocrity by just "believing in this Rome's Jesus" or the "dogmas" attached to Rome's depiction of him. Only living the laws of God as seen in the Jewish and Egyptian Faith and as taught by this "Jewish" model, this "Jewish Jesus", perfects, elevates, and trains the Soul to master its incarnational purpose and goal.

THE DIFFICULTIES OF A JEW TALKING TO A CHRISTIAN ABOUT THIS JESUS

For most Jews, the key issue that separates them from Christians is a Christological one: Jesus the Christ becomes a way to God for Christians but not for Jews. Any dialogue between such parties must explore the ways in which God is present in the Torah for Jews and in the person of Christ for

Christians

The centrality of Jesus to Christian faith, as well as centering in Jesus most of the leadership archetypes of the Hebrew Scripture from the writings of the earliest Christians on, has no simple parallel within Judaism. Kingship, prophecy, sacrifice, redemption, priesthood, messianism, apocalypticism, discipleship, and so on are among the many topics that find their focus in Jesus in Christianity but have no such single focus within the Jewish tradition! This should make one wonder where the "origin" of such Christian doctrines originated.

In addition, Jesus, particularly in the guise of the proclaimed Christian Gentile Christ, becomes a way of access to God for Christians. As Christians find God through Jesus, Jews find God through Torah. Investigating this aspect of the dialogue surely needs to bring the partners beyond the historical question of Jesus's understanding of the Law and into the deeper question of how one approaches God.

Answer for yourself: What is one to do or to believe? Who is right in their perspectives on Jesus...the Jews or the Christians; or is the truth about him somewhere in the middle of both extremes? Does the integrity of the religious texts as they are found in Judaism and Christianity matter and should their reliability have an impact upon one's "religious belief system". If we have as Christians forged texts about "the Christ" and Hebrew Scriptures, should we not "repent" and bring the truth of the Kingdom of God near us for a change?

Answer for yourself: What does it mean if one considers God's word as incarnated in a solitary flesh-and blood human being some 2,000 years ago or in a book of dubious reliability when compared to the Torah and Hebrew Scriptures?

Answer for yourself: What does it mean that this book itself has a history of adulteration and that it grew like a "fish-story" over time?

Answer for yourself: How does the presence of God's word in a continuing Torah tradition in the Jewish tradition function with respect to Jesus in the Christian tradition? How are we to look at this Christian Jesus knowing the facts concerning the forgeries of the Roman book that present his depiction to us in the first place?

THE CHRISTIAN REDISCOVERY OF JESUS' JEWISHNESS ...IT'S ABOUT TIME

Coming to terms with the Jewishness of Jesus has been a relatively recent development for Christians. Christian scholars have been engaged in historical Jesus research since the nineteenth century. Until then the overt recognition of the Jewishness of Jesus was rare, deemed irrelevant to Christian faith. It was often assumed that because Jesus founded the Church he was a Christian. Nothing could be further from the truth! On occasions it has been known for Christian preachers to talk about Mary taking Jesus to Church! However, there is a growing awareness in the Churches of Jesus's Jewish roots. In this respect today many Christian and Jewish scholars, due to their research into this area, are providing a clear and helpful summary of Jesus's ministry. The overwhelming consensus locates Jesus within the prophetic tradition as an itinerant preacher who proclaims the imminent kingdom of God within mankind; the kingdom of God as taught through the Jewish Faith and Judaism of the first century.

The context of Jesus's teaching was Judaism. To be even more precise, its context was first-century Judaism in the land of Israel. Thus there is a basic level on which Christians and Jews can agree about Jesus of Nazareth. That common ground necessitates filtering everything about this New Testament Jesus through "Jewish eyes"! Failure to do this ensures you receive the "Roman lie". That Jesus, the perfected man, is depicted a a Galilean that was born, lived, and died in the land of Israel in the early part of what we now call the first century C.E. is the groundwork for all that is taught through this "Jewish Mind of Christ". This Jesus, "God's Christ", is made to be a Jewish teacher, though a somewhat unusual type. He taught by means of short sayings and parables, which could be easily remembered and then recited from memory. He, as the "perfected man", as would be expected, would have attracted disciples, who would have come to him to learn from him and to be with him. While Capernaum is made to be his base of operations, much of his teaching ministry involved traveling from place to place and relying on the hospitality of local people. He is not a cleric, he is not a religious pastor elevated above his flock. He identifies with the people and their sufferings. His first followers were encouraged to share his itinerant ministry of preaching God's kingdom and healing the sick and the world has benefited from such a view not nearly enough.

Much of his teaching recorded in the gospels breathes the air of first-century Judaism. Though now expressed in Greek, many of the teachings we find in the mouth of the "Jewish Christ" incorporate Semitic idioms and words and presuppose conditions that prevailed in the land of Israel. Many respond well to translation back into Aramaic or Hebrew. The content of Jesus's teaching is firmly rooted in Judaism as it is expressed in the Hebrew Bible and the Jewish tradition. The God of Jesus can be approached as a loving Father. This God created and sustains all things. This God has entered into a special relationship with the people of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. This God has special concern for the poor and the outcast. There is no doubt: The God of Jesus is Israel's God. Along with other Jews of his day, Jesus looked to the time when God would intervene in his people's history and when all creation would acknowledge the sovereignty of God. This decisive moment in human history, or rather the end of human history as we know it, is what is meant by the expression "the kingdom of God". Preparation for God's kingdom requires repentance and constant vigilance. Not all Jews in the land of Israel at Jesus's time necessarily shared this sharp sense of God's imminent intervention. Their lack of preparation for the kingdom would mean the postponement of the Kingdom as well as its King Messiah. Israel's expected and "hoped-for" anointed one, messiah, never appeared. The people of Israel failed to "merit" their messiah because they loved Hellenism more than Mosaic Faith. The prophecies in the Hebrew Scriptures remained unfulfilled and remain so today; only in the New Testament with their "purposeful mistranslation, purposeful misquotation, and outright invention" can we find supposed "fulfilled Messianic Scriptures"! This might sound strange to a Gentile or Jewish Christian who is falsely reassured constantly that Jesus in the New Testament fulfilled the prophecies thereby making him the Jewish Messiah. The truth is to anyone well versed in the Old Testament and the Hebrew Masoretic Text that such a statement is not correct and advocacy of such a position only demonstrates one's total lack of understanding the Messianic contained in the true unaltered Hebrew Scriptures. Along with this I must mention the numerous false prophecies stated as "fulfilled" within the New Testament which is nothing more than verbal gymnastics by the Gentile Church in their attempt to present Jesus as the awaited Messiah to their non-Jewish audiences which were totally unfamiliar with the Old Testament. These Gentile audiences, most of whom were illiterate, would not know a Messianic passage at that time from a misquoted or mistranslated Old Testament passage due to their unfamiliarity with the Old Testament let alone the Hebrew language. Such ignorance of Hebrew and the Hebrew Scriptures plagues the Christian Church and their supposed scholars today as well. This could all be remedied in the Christian Church if believers had been "Old Testament Christians" before they were "New Testament Christians". They could spot the deception if they thoroughly knew and understood the Old Testament before reading a falsified account of it as contained in the New Testament. Our websites devotes a large amount of space to this problem and it is our hopes you investigate the matter for yourself.

AN EVANGELICAL PERSPECTIVE ON JESUS THE JEW

The quest for the historical Jesus as one of the accepted interpretation of God's Christ has made its mark on the inroad spectrum of Christianity. Much of Jesus's teaching has parallels in the rabbinic writings of the Talmud:

The life and teachings of the New Testament Jesus reveal a deep commitment to the Jewish beliefs and practices of his day. It is through this New Testament Jesus that we have been given a picture of the "Mind of Krst/Christ" revealed through the Jewish Faith. The historical Jesus is a real problem reserved for serious and seasoned mature students so we will reserve this issue for later but in what follows we will assume his historicity for teaching purposes. I have found that if we look at the Jesus, as the "Mind of God's Christ" for you and me then all will work out well. The other nations did the same for their own "Christs" that came long before Judaism. Whether it be Osiris/Horus in ancient Egypt, or Dionysus at Eleusis, or Attis in Asia Minor, or Mithras in Persia, God has never not communicated to man these higher Spiritual Truths about his Soul through nations and their religions. Personification is a key concept in delivery of such Spiritual Truths and the "messengers" of God's Truth have always been internal to those elevated Spiritually above the masses. That is why the ancient teachings of the Soul dovetail so beautifully; there is only One Truth and this Spiritual Truth is the only religion ever given man by God.

So we look to Judaism for this "Mind of Christ" which is expressed through a righteous Jew whom we will call Jesus. The name "Jesus" is we recall the term for "Yahweh is salvation". God, by whatever name you call Him has and is and will always be the Savior for there is no other. So we find that this Jesus, the example for us of God's salvation, was born of Jewish parents (Matt. 1:16) and circumcised on the eighth day in accord with Jewish Law (Luke 2:21). As a boy he celebrated Passover (Luke 2:41-43), and as a youth he learned by interacting with various Jewish teachers, all of whom were amazed at his understanding (Luke 2:46-47). Frequenting the synagogue from Sabbath to Sabbath as was his custom at the start of his adult ministry (Luke 4:16), Jesus was exposed to a wide range of Jewish thought. To be sure, first-century Judaism was far from monolithic. Pharisees, Sadducees, Essenes, Zealots, and other sects dotted the religious landscape and often their beliefs differed; especially when we look at their eschatology and apocalypticism. It would appear, however, that the teachings of Jesus show closest affinity to that of the Pharisees and let us not forget that of all the sects of Judaism only the Pharisees survived the destruction of the Temple and Israel at the hands of the Romans. This should tell us that God determined for only the Pharisees and their message to survive. To a certain degree but not exclusively—the rabbinic teachings of the Talmud reflect this Pharisaic teaching. It has been estimated that one can find parallels in rabbinic literature to perhaps as much as ninety per cent of Jesus's teachings. In particular the teachings of Jesus follow the rabbinical school of Hillel; only in divorce do they disagree since Jesus takes a tougher stance than Hillel in this one issue only. Though this estimate is doubtless excessive, current research on the Synoptic Gospels is revealing in increasing measure a profoundly Jewish setting for the words of Jesus.

Furthermore, Jesus's early followers would have been Jews. Jesus is shown to have discipled his followers in the fashion of a typical first-century itinerant teacher of Judaism. Not in synagogue classrooms but on hillsides, in fields, and in remote locations this Galilean carpenter's son clustered many pupils about him. Jesus was articulate, and drew much of his rich teaching material from the Hebrew Scriptures and from rabbinic traditions familiar in his day. But he also taught directly, on his own authority, which sometimes resulted in the inability of his disciples to understand (Mark 4:1-13). Though the company was often wider than the Twelve (Luke 6:13; 10:1), Peter, James, and John, an inner circle of three, become most prominent in the Gospel narratives. But in addition to the common people Jesus discipled, some of his chief followers were Jewish leaders John 12:42; 19:38-39). In sum, the ministry of Jesus was focused; in his words, he came to find the "lost sheep of Israel" (Matt. 15:24).

JESUS AS THE HISTORICAL MESSIAH....WHAT CAN WE SAY FOR SURE?

During the post-exilic period, the Jewish concept of messiah developed into the expectation of a single figure who would liberate the people from. What Christians don't know is that this figure of a single Jewish figure was not conceived of in divine terms as the Christian Church claims today. This is particularly significant for the Jesus-period and may shed some light on the Jewish "no" to the messiahship of Jesus as defined by the Christian Church from the second century onward. During the first century B.C.E. and C.E. the Jewish people were living under Roman occupation, with all the tensions that it entailed. There was an increased expectation of liberation. As things got worse their faith rose even higher than God would "save" them from Rome. The disagreement between Jews and Christians in what did or did not materialize during, or immediately after Jesus's lifetime—namely, that Jesus, nor anyone for that matter, did not appear and liberate the Jewish people from Roman occupation and judge the Gentile nations (in a negative sense). This would again be a widely held view within Jewry today and explains to a great degree the Jewish lack of acceptance as Jesus as their Messiah since no historical Jesus showed up to liberate Israel from the persecution and murder of the Jews. The Jews, well familiar with their Bible and the Prophets, knew what the Prophets had predicted and the record of the New Testament Jesus states that he did not do what was expected and promised as detailed by God's Prophets and messengers. This is a severe problem that exists with the Jesus as "Messiah" dogma.

This becomes a major problem for the "thinking Christian" who likewise knows the Jewish Scriptures and their prophecies concerning the Jewish Messiah...and whom is aware of the corruption and falsification and outright forgery of every one of them as found in our Christian Bibles and their Old and New Testaments

This above statement is almost unbelievable. If you have ever read and compared the Messianic promises within your Christian Bible with them in the previous Greek Bible and even before that with the Hebrew Scriptures (Hebrew/English translations...the Tanakh) then you know now that what I say above about the forgery of our Christian Bibles when compared to the Hebrew Scriptures is a truth that cannot be denied before man or God! This is a study which all Christians need to undertake. Good books to help in this study are Let's Get Biblical (plus tape series) by Rabbi Tovi Singer (http://www.outreachjudaism.org/), Antisemitism in the New Testament by Lillian Freudmann, Faith Strengthened by Isaac Troki, Judaism's Truth Answers the Missionaries by Beth Moshe, Forgery In Christianity by Joseph Wheless, and Putting Away Childish Things by Uta Ranke-Heinemann. If you want the truth that you can compare for yourself then here it is dear ones.

When this Jesus supposedly lived in Judea, the Romans occupied that tiny land. It was a very cruel occupation. The soldiers were billeted in the country and were not considerate in their treatment of the natives. The taxes enacted by the Romans were a heavy burden, and the people lived in poverty and fear. So again, in the first century of the common era, Judeans prayed for deliverance and cried out for the son of David to come as their "deliverer" and "messiah". If one looks at the overall ministry of Jesus this type of "deliverer" and "savior" of the Soul of mankind was not what many Jews were looking for, for the vast majority of prophecies lied unfilled concerning this son of David and messiah in their own Hebrew Scriptures. When Jesus appeared on the scene many had hopes that he would be the messiah, but again, if you line up Prophet after Prophet and their prophecies concerning this "son of David" over against the historical fulfillment of the prophecies and the life of Jesus, one is relegated to creating a "second coming" to keep alive any hope that Jesus is yet the expected and hoped for messiah. The harsh truth is that the true Jewish Scriptural messianic prophecies went unfulfilled during and after Jesus's life and death. They remain unfulfilled even today. If this is news to you maybe you should begin a serious comparison of the Jewish Messianic Scriptures as taken from the Jewish Bible (Tanakh) and compare them with what we as non-Jews have been given by Rome as supposedly "fulfilled prophecies." Let me direct your attention to: http://returningtofaithofJesus.netfirms.comas well as http://paulproblem.netfirms.com in order for you to see how the true Jewish Scriptures were corrupted as they were presented to the non-Jewish world.

The New Testament depicts this "anointed one", this Jesus as a charismatic leader of the people, one who was respected as a rabbi, a teacher of teachers within Judaism. As one might expect, it is recorded that such a teacher like Jesus attracted a following who hoped that he was the promised messiah. But the New Testament Jesus is shown to have lived and died without enabling the people to overthrow the Roman rule and live in freedom. In the wake of unrealized prophecies following the death of Jesus, many of his Jewish disciples no longer felt that he was the messiah, the anointed one who would free the country. This is depicted in the New Testament to have not happened over night, but occurred over time. There were others of Jesus's followers who are shown to have predicted his imminent return for the fulfillment of the messianic hope. This never happened and the Jesus of the New Testament, if prophecy can be distorted and twisted at every turn, is late to say the least.

It is important to recognize that the disagreement about Jesus as "the messiah" and "Christ" is not over what Jesus taught or did, but rather about what did or did not occur through him during his lifetime in the land of Israel. The messianic prophecies concerning the Jewish messiah as found in the Prophets and Writings were not fulled in the historical record of Israel and remain unfulfilled today. Now, if we look at the purposeful mistranslation, purposeful misquotation, and outright invention of the Hebrew Scriptures and their forged misrepresentation of them in both the Christian Old and New Testament texts, well that is a whole other story. But "truth" and not "deception" pleases God and assures man that the path for his Soul can be trusted. Thus, when one does these comparative studies of the Hebrew Bible with its forgery at the hands of Rome and Constantine's monks it is nigh impossible to say that the Christian Bible is a faithful translation of the Hebrew Scriptures. The Hebrew Scriptures cannot be used to make the New Testament Jesus the historical messiah of Israel. That is why Judaism and Israel has rejected the New Testament Jesus as their messiah because to do so would deny Moses, the Prophets and the Writings given mankind by the finger of God.

Yet, in spite of the Jews' rejection of Jesus as their messiah they accept Jesus as teacher and as prophet, not as "Christ" or "messiah". Orthodox Jews still look forward to the coming of the "mashiach" who will bring God's kingdom on earth with the establishment of a free Jewish nation in Palestine. The orthodox believe that will come about through a messiah, not through political or military action. Liberal Jews interpret the prophecy still differently and look forward no longer to the coming of an individual messiah, but rather to a messianic age, a time when all the children of God, living by God's moral law, will together establish God's kingdom on earth. Only time will tell.

Another aspect of the Christian understanding of Jesus is also difficult for Jews. Jews do not accept Jesus as the "Son of God", but rather as a "son of God", because Jews believe that all human beings are children of the one God.

LISTEN UP CHURCH….THE JEWS HAVE NOT REJECTED THEIR MESSIAH!

In depth study will reveal that it was the "Romanized" Paul and not Jesus who was used by Rome to be the founder of Christianity. It was not the Gnostic Paul but the later "Romanized Paul", the anti-Gnostic Paul of the Roman monks, that was the one used by Rome who transformed the Jewish concept of messiah, an "anointed man" (a simple human being used by God) from the loins of David into a divine figure. Thus the Jews have not rejected the Jewish Jesus; rather they have rejected the claims for his messiahship as altered and changed by this Romanized Paul—based on the fact that the kingdom of God did not arrive as Jesus had prophesied as reported by Paul and other Gentile writers of the Gospels and not as they, the Jews, had expected according to Moses and their Prophets.

How the title "messiah" (a human being) became changed into "M" as in "Messiah", a divine title from its Jewish meaning of "anointed king of the House of David" is a major question that requires long and patient inquiry. My own view, and that of many other scholars, is that this change was initiated by Saint Paul at the hands of later Roman scribes detailed above in the post Nicea age. Therefore, we look to a Romanized Paul and his forged epistles, in reality Rome, who should therefore be regarded as the founder of the central trend of historical Christianity (http://paulproblem.netfirms.com). It should never be forgotten that Paul never knew this supposed historical Jesus in the flesh. The full doctrine of the Trinity did not develop until the fourth century, and there were always some Christians who opposed the divination of Jesus but they were few and were not to influence Christian dogma sadly.

As the Book of Hebrew 8:4 states: "For if he were on earth", I believe, such a one as Jesus would have regarded this development of the Christian interpretation of the Trinity and Christian Christology with great sorrow, since he accepted Jewish monotheism, and would have regarded any worship of himself as God a contravention of the First Commandment.

Answer for yourself: As a side note, if not on Earth, then just where is this "Christ" of which we read in the New Testament? Could he, this Jesus, this "Krst/Christ" be in the hearts of the whole of mankind? Could he be the Divine Mind at the ever higher Self of all of God's children like the ancients taught? Could this Jesus be but personification used to express Heavenly concepts as were all other of the nation's Krsts/Christs? That is something to seriously consider. As you gather the "keys" to interpret this ancient Sacred Book which follows the "pattern" of the ancient Sacred Wisdom Religions the light slowly dawns upon you that you are this "Christ" and that this "Jesus Story" is your "pattern" that you not lose your way in this world of "matter". So wonderful when you get enough puzzle parts from thousands of years of Roman deception to see the picture that our loving God wanted all His children to see while here. Earth is the school of God for His children and God goes to school in us and with us.

Many Christian scholars too have come to the conclusion that this Jesus, if he had been on earth, did not regard himself as divine. The belief in his divinity, in my view and in that of the Christian theologians who produced the bookThe Myth of God Incarnate, has had sad consequences in history and a post-Nicean world, including the tragic split between Judaism and Christianity and the persecution suffered by the Jews down through the Christian countries. Because Jesus was regarded and made identical as God by the Gentile Constantinian Church, the Jews, wrongly regarded as Jesus' opponents, were also deemed to be the enemies of God, and therefore as allies of Satan. The demonization of the Jews in Christian medieval Europe was the precursor of the Nazi Holocaust and Hitler, himself a Christian, used the Bible and Roman antisemitism in it to give authority to his atrocious acts toward the Jews. He was doing God a favor by killing the "Christ killers".

In historical fact, the Jews did not reject a Jesus Jesus, only a Gentile Constantinian Jesus

The vast majority of Jews as seen in the New Testament regarded the messianic hope with their highest faith, as in the case of other messianic claimants besides this one Jesus. The only Jews who opposed Jesus were those, like the High Priest, who stood for the interests of the Roman occupation. It is the greatest mistake in New Testament studies to think that the High Priest was the supreme Jewish religious leader—rather like the Pope in the Catholic Church. The teaching authorities of Judaism were the leaders of the Pharisees, such as Hillel and Gamaliel. The latter, indeed is highly praised in the New Testament as "respected by the whole people" (acts 5:34). The High Priest was not only a Roman appointee and police chief, and was also a Sadducee, and therefore to the masses, a heretic. It is ludicrous that such a person should be represented (as in the Gospels) as the guardian of orthodox Judaism. To the Pharisees, the High Priest was only a ceremonial official in charge of the Temple rites, a task for which his personal inadequacies did not disqualify him.

When the Kingdom of God prophesied by Jesus did not materialize, this was considered to be the refutation of his messianic claim. Jesus was rejected not by Jews, but by events. Few seem today to know enough of the facts and the teachings of Judaism to know why such events failed to materialize and why the prophecies of the Messianic age failed to be fulfilled yet what they actually say. Having read the falsified ones only most of one's life we are brainwashed to believe a "theology" that simply is not true. It was not the fault of a failed messiah but rather the failure of Israel to "merit" the Kingdom of Heaven and her "King" that prevented the true Hebrew messianic prophecies being fulfilled in the first century. At the same time, there is nothing in Judaism that prevents Jews from continuing to regard Jesus as an example of a supreme teaches of Jewish truth and Jewish ideas.

Moreover, there is nothing in Judaism that opposes the existence of Christianity as a separate religion, with Jesus as it Teacher. Judaism is a universal religion, but not a universal church. The covenant at Sinai is the way in which Jews worship the One God, but they do not regard it as the only way. The previous Noahide Covenant between God and the whole of mankind was not abrogated by the Sinaitic Covenant between God and Israel (see our articles on the Laws of Noah). Proselytes are welcomed into Judaism, but not as a matter of salvation, since salvation may be attained outside Judaism. The kind of pluralism that Judaism has always advocated is the key to reconciliation between Judaism and Christianity. If the Jewishness of Jesus were fully acknowledged and understood, Christianity's exclusiveness and claim to unique salvific power apart from Judaism could be tempered sufficiently to allow for the validity of other faiths which share Judaism's higher ethic for man's Soul. With just a little knowledge of the Jewish Jesus and what he believed since he practiced 2nd Temple Judaism, such is easy to see and understand.

Besides the corruption of writings called the New Testament which contain much which is not true since added by the Roman church over the earliest centuries of the church, but yet accepted as "truth" by unknowledgeable Christians, it is easy to miss truths taught by this Jewish Jesus which Judaism has always held sacred. It is our utter lack of any background into Biblical Judaism which robs us of necessary facts and information to see this fact of God's true salvation of man's Soul for ourselves. One needs only to look at and understand Acts 15 to see that salvation is not nearly as narrow as the Gentile Christian Church would have us believe.

GOD'S YES IN THE JEWISH "NO"---WAS JESUS THE MESSIAH FOR THE GENTILES?

A helpful way forward in Christian-Jewish relations is to see Jesus as the instrument of redemption for the Gentiles. The depiction of Jesus in the New Testament, in spite of its many problems, is in a unique way "the anointed one" in the sense that he, and his followers, opened up, along with the Jewish outreach in the early centuries, the Jewish God to the Gentile world. In that way also he can be seen as the "non-Jewish Savior" in an allegorical concept but not in a "literal" or "historical" manner. Overall, the theology and Christology expressed in the New Testament surrounding its Jesus is not accepted by Judaism nor the great ancient Egyptian religion. New Testament Christology is not Biblical according to the Hebrew Scriptures nor Jewish! Such New Testament Christology betrays the severe misunderstanding of the ancient Sacred Science of the Mystery Religions and the "literalized" and "historicized" presentation of Jesus as a historical person whereby God's Presence and Divine Mind as "the Krst/Christ" is limited to but one person. Such a limited presentation of God in mankind severely misrepresents the greatest Spiritual Truths given to mankind concerning the incarnation of God into all "matter" let alone mankind. Consequently Jews are NOT able to accept Jesus as "messiah" as presented in the New Testament without negating their own covenant with God through the Torah.

When one considers the Jewish rejection of the Messiahship of Jesus, it is important to understand that such rejection is not based on resentment or bad will but on the Biblical facts present: that the kingdom that is promised to come with Israel's messiah has not yet arrived. Understanding that the perfect rule of reign of God is absent from the world today, then there is no reason for Christians to deplore the Jewish rejection of the messiahship of Jesus, nor to make a rebuke of the Jewish people out of it. The "no" of Israel is not identical to the "no" of the non-believers, who are everywhere. It is a special "no" and must be respected as such; especially in light of the FACT that the Hebrew Scriptures were not fulfilled by Jesus or anyone as of yet.

But one must always remember that what we have come to understand today about the Gospel of Jesus was not the truth as taught by the Jerusalem Church of the first century.

Biblical Salvation as found in the Hebrew Scriptures was never accepting a belief system or a "creed" about something or someone. It is never about accepting a "belief" about this Romanized version of "the Krst/Christ" depicted as Jesus or accepting a creedal faith in line with Catholic doctrines about Jesus which were created down through the centuries after patterning many of them after a "literalized" and "historicized" astral, solar, and sun-worship. In such a way this Jesus was recast in the form of 'literal" and "historical" virgin-born sun-godman who died for his followers and required they eat his body and drink his blood to be one with him. Sure, the ancients taught that God "died" for mankind but this "death" was always "allegorical" and was always connected to "incarnating" into "matter" whereby God humbled "himself" and took upon himself the likeness of "matter" and "flesh". We read the same thing in Phillipians 2 and the only "cross" that is connected to this death of Divine Mind, or "Krst/Christ" is the descent between planes of existence in this cosmos. Such a "crossing" or "crossification", as the ancient held, between Spiritual plane and plane in God's descent into humankind was an "allegorical" and "metaphorical" death only. This was never "literal" unless it applied to you as it did to everyone who ever drew a breath. To limit it to one person to which access was only through the Roman doors of the Roman Church is a tragedy of unbelievable proportions. The Jews were well aware of these Mystery Religions which taught such concepts only "metaphorically", "allegorically" and "symbolically"; never "literally" or "historically". It was the illiterate non-Jews, Constantine's subjects, who did not know and would follow any "belief" to escape the fires of Hell that Rome so cleverly created to motivate the masses of humanity under their control. The Jews, as well as the non-Jews that have said "no" to the messiahship of Jesus do not forfeit their salvation; in fact they are closer to it without such idolatry and blasphemy that is entrenched in the "literalized" and "historicized" version of the "Jesus Story". Two thousand years have passed without such fulfillments but the good news is that salvation which is of the Jews was taken to the non-Jewish world. It is sad that today we never hear about it in our Churches.

By no means can it be said that God has finally rejected the people of his choice—then he would have to reject his own choice (Rom. 11:29). Constantine would have us believe that God has sought a new people for himself and that people is the Christian Church. The promises of Israel have not passed on to the Church, the Church does not oust Israel from her place in the history of God. In the perspective of the Gospel, Israel has in no way become like all other people. And finally, with its "no" to the Roman Jesus and Roman messiah, Israel is also not a historical witness for the judgement of God and not a warning for those who reject the Roman Christ. If anything, it is still the path for unfoldment of man's Soul and Spiritual evolution. Unless the Mystery Religions, like the ancient Egyptian Religion and Gnosticism can be restored and interpreted properly, which is hard to do with over 2000 years of misinterpretation of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom by the Roman Church, then Judaism is, in my opinion, the best way of recovering Spiritual Truth in today's world for the elevation and Spiritual evolvement of man's Soul.

JESUS AND THE FOUNDING OF CHRISTIANITY?

In the Western world, Christians imagine Jesus as tall, probably with blond hair and beard, blue eyes, and wearing a white robe and an other-worldly expression. Almost certainly, he was short by modern standards and dark-skinned. His black beard was long and untrimmed. He undoubtedly wore earlocks, the peyot that are displayed today not only by the ultra-Orthodox but were once worn by all Jews as a matter of course. It is legitimate to infer this from the fact that Yemenite Jews, who had been separated from the mainstream of Judaism for many centuries, turned out to be wearing the earlocks when they were brought to Israel in 1948. The practice of cutting the rest of the hair close in order to emphasize the earlocks is modern and is not followed by the Yemenites. The New Testament is silent on the point, which was doubtlessly taken for granted at the time. We know from the Gospels that he wore fringes on his garments like other Jews. Like other Jews, he wore tefillin (called "phylacteries" in the Gospels) when he prayed formally, and perhaps at other times, and he took it for granted that others would do the same. He objected only when they were ostentatious in wearing them in public, as some did in his day. He observed the feasts and fasts, and he must have gone to the ritual bath on appropriate occasions to purify himself (before each Sabbath and before celebration of festivals and feasts; totaling at least 59 times a year), for we know from archaeological findings that the ritual bath (mikvah) was in common use in Jesus' time. He said the customary blessings when he drank wine (Kiddush) and when he ate bread (ha-motzi). He washed his hands whenever he sat down to eat (considered a type of immersion), thought apparently his disciples sometimes neglected to do so, without being reproved by him.

He personally obeyed all the commandments, ethical and ritual, and took part in the sacrificial worship of the Temple when he was in Jerusalem. Like the prophets in whose tradition he stood, he objected to these things (ethical and ritual obedience to Torah) only when they were done mechanically, without the intention toward God that made them valid, and without the social morality that God demanded above all.

Jesus was a faithful and observant Jew, according to the halachah, the interpretation of the Torah, accepted in his day. He did not regard the Jewish Law itself as mechanical and ritualistic, or those who kept it carefully as spiritually decadent. He loved the Torah and observed it with the deepest faithfulness and spiritual dedication. He lived by it until his last breath.

The "real" Jewish Jesus was in no way like the gentle Gentile Jesus, seen always as a meek and non-offensive teacher as portrayed in the Christian tradition. While he advocated the transcendence of anger to the point of loving enemies, he evidently did not always avoid it himself (take for instance the cleaning of the Temple). His criticism of all religious phoniness is as direct and even brutal as anything to be found in religious history. In this, he was the toughest of teachers. Yet his compassion for sinners is rightly regarded as remarkable, and it is this that marked him out as the bearer of a distinctive message concerning divine compassion.

If this message aroused opposition, and it seems that it did, it was not because it was un-Jewish. It was not. Rather, Jesus' convictions concerning the compassion of God for sinners and the way human beings should imitate it went even beyond what some of the devout of his day had been able to imagine of God. And if Jesus was scathing in his criticism of religious phoniness, it was not because he was opposed to Judaism, or regarded it as intrinsically defective, but because he wanted the Torah to be fulfilled by everyone as completely and perfectly as possible, from the heart.

His personal name was Yeshua, in the Aramaic he spoke, or Yehoshua in Hebrew, a very common name usually translated as Joshua. We get the form Jesus from the Greek rendering of the Aramaic name Yeshua, which comes out as Iesous, which is Jesus in Latin and also in English. His parents were Yossef and Mariam, or Miriam. He had brothers called Yaakov (James), Yosef, Shimon (Simon), and Yehudah (Judah). He also had sisters, but their names were not remembered.

Jesus was probably born a few years before the date usually reckoned as the beginning of the Common or Christian era, during the reign of Herod the Great (4 B.C.E.). Unfortunately, we have no reliable means of ascertaining the exact date. The methods usually employed depend on the birth stories in Matthew & Luke, which have many obviously legendary elements, and in any case do not agree with each other (check it out for yourself). He died during the rule of the Roman governor, or Perfect, Pontius Pilatus, which lasted from 26 to 36 C.E. It seems certain that the Romans executed him because they regarded him as an insurgent, on account of his reputation as a claimant to the title of Messiah, whether or not he actually made the claim. The Gospels do tell a story of growing conflict between Jesus and SOME of his fellow Jews {Sadducees and the Shammai Pharisees but not the Hillel Pharisees], ending in a religious trial before the highest and most solemn court of his people, which condemns him for blasphemy on account of a claim to be the Messiah and hands him over to the Romans for execution. This is the basis of the ancient and long-standing belief that the Jews killed Christ.

Answer for yourself: Did the Jews kill Christ (Messiah)?

There are many stories in the Gospels that suggest that they did, but upon close examination seem exceedingly improbable. The Jews did not kill Jesus because they had no reason to do so. He was not guilty of any religious offense. It is in the highest degree improbable that such a trial before the Sanhedrin as we read of in the Gospels of Mark and Matthew ever took place. What we read in the Gospels about the trial of Jesus is the product of later Christian imagination, and it reflects Christian, not Jewish, views of the nature of the Messiah.
It was not the Jews but the Romans who killed Christ. They did it for their own political reasons; evidently, the Romans did believe him to be a claimant to the title of "The Messiah", although he made no such claim (such as promise to be the Messiah who would liberate Israel from Roman bondage). No doubt, the Romans correctly understood that from their own point of view a Messiah must be a rebel and an insurgent, since he is expected to deliver the Jewish people from pagan domination. In any case, enough people thought Jesus was the Messiah (both Jewish and Romans) to constitute a political danger to Roman rule. No one should any longer imagine that it was the Jews who were the Christ-killers.

We cannot reconstruct the order of the events in Yeshua's life from the Gospels, because the writers of the Gospels did not know what it was themselves, as was already recognized in the second century. Nevertheless, it is possible to discover the kind of person Jesus was and what he stood for, by a careful comparison of the gospel stories about him with what we know of the religious environment in which he lived.

To imagine Jesus in a thoroughly Jewish way is very difficult even for Jews, most of whom have been conditioned to think of him as some kind of Christian.

Jesus was not and never would be a Christian or adhere to traditional Christian doctrines of today.

For Jesus to believe the Christian doctrine over Apostolic doctrine of the first century would be out-right sin in many instances.

For Christians, it takes real effort to see and understand Jesus within the Judaism of his time. The degree of effort required reveals the anti-Jewish prejudice with which all Christians have been inflicted, including those who do not think they have such prejudices.

DID JESUS FOUND CHRISTIANITY?

Even as recently at the late 1970's, a justly celebrated New Testament scholar entitled one of his books The Founder of Christianity. Like almost everyone else at the time, he assumed that Jesus had been its founder.

Answer for yourself: But can we really imagine the Jewish Jesus founding Christianity?

This is the first assumption we have to call in question.

Answer for yourself: How could this authentic and faithful Jew, living according to the halachah [accepted and orthodox interpretation], have thought of founding a new religion in opposition to the one he loved and lived? To do so would have been absurd, not to mention sin!

The Prophets of the Bible were very critical of the Jews of their day, much more critical in fact than the Gospels represent Jesus as being, but they never dreamed of founding a new religion. They envisaged a national repentance from all the sins they reviled, followed by divine forgiveness and the full restoration of Israel to its status as God's beloved people.

Answer for yourself: Could it have been otherwise with Jesus?

Nevertheless, no new religion was founded in the name of any of the biblical prophets, and it is a fact that a new religion did grow out of Judaism in the first century. It was called Christianity. The name of Christianity comes from the title Christ (Christos, the Greek form of the Hebrew word meshiach, our word Messiah), but not from Jesus' personal name. By the time the movement received the name by which it has ever since been known he was already most often referred to simply as Christ, Messiah. But there was no doubt which Messiah was meant.

There were also other first-century messianic claimants. No large-scale religious movement emanated from their careers, however. In the case of Christianity, its early leaders acted "in the name of Jesus of Nazareth," whom they proclaimed as Messiah, or Christ.

Answer for yourself: Were they justified in invoking his name to legitimate their action in spreading a new religion?

The very name of Christianity shows that in its earliest days it was understood by everyone to be inseparable from the belief that Jesus was the Messiah (Christ).

JESUS WOULD NEVER HAVE FOUNDED CHRISTIANITY AS WE KNOW IT TODAY

\The new religion that emerged from the events of the life and death of Jesus contained too many divergent movements to have been the product of a single creative mind. At any rate, if Jesus had intended to found a new religion, he did not succeed in doing so in any coherent form. Much more probably, he had no intention of doing so. The "real" Jewish Jesus is not likely to have founded the movements that collectively constituted early Christianity.

Historians used to suppose that early Christianity was united in the legacy left by Jesus; only later did disunity arise, as new and unorthodox interpretations of the tradition developed. We now think it was otherwise. Early Christianity moved in several divergent directions, and it was not possible to unify them by appealing to the authoritative teaching of a founder.

Only in the second century did it begin to be unified around a form of Gentile Christianity, as a result of strenuous efforts by some of its leaders, most of them associated with the Church of Rome. The effort was never completely successful, and in later centuries new forms of disunity set in.

If we look back to the state of the Christian movement at the end of the first century and the beginning of the second, we find amazing variety and diversity. Scholars usually group Christianity into three main tendencies, only one of which is at all familiar to us today.

This is Gentile Christianity, sometimes called by historians Early Catholicism, since it represents the earliest form of the Catholic church of history. It is the ancestor of all modern forms. But alongside it were two other movements, equally popular at the time, and in some places certainly more so, but not destined to survive. It would not have been obvious to an observer in the year 100 that early Catholicism, at that time largely a religion of urban slaves, and the underprivileged, was the movement of the future.

One of these competing movements was Gnosticism, which has come into public attention recently as a result of new discoveries. Another, now lesser-known movement was composed of Christian Jews [Ebionism], remaining faithful to their Jewish heritage, while adding to it a belief in Jesus as the Messiah. Scholars refer to the various movements that attempted to remain faithful to Christianity's original basis in Judaism as Jewish Christianity.

Obviously, there were sharp disagreements between these movements. Gentile and Jewish Christianity soon parted company. In the second century, the Gentile or early Catholic church fought a sharp, and in the end, largely successful battle to rid itself of Gnosticism and to put down the independent Gnostic communities. At the same time, it stigmatized as "heretical" all those groups that still held on to Jewish observance. In other words Jewish Christianity was considered as heretical by Early Gentile Catholicism.

GENTILE CHRISTIANITY

Christianity began with the preaching of the earliest Apostles of Christ, all of whom were Jewish. It made its appeal to Jews, and as a movement it differed from other forms of Judaism only in its belief that Jesus was the Messiah. Soon its members began to preach to Gentiles and met with success, creating a distinct branch (Gentile) of their movement. Before long, its leadership was assumed by Paul, the great Apostle to the Gentiles. As the name the historians give it indicates, its members were Gentiles, and following the teaching of Paul, they did not consider conversion to Judaism a possible option. Obedience to the Torah as the Word of God was too much for the majority of them, let alone circumcision; thus when given the opportunity of all it's privileges without the responsibilities, they majority readily accepted. Such was a big mistake and would later cause the irrevocable severing of the Jews from the Gentiles as the people of God.

The Gentile community interpreted Paul's writings as meaning that Judaism was seriously defective, considering that the new faith had superseded Judaism in the plan of God. In other words, Sinai, Moses, etc., was not sufficient because God had made a mistake giving them His teaching (the Torah), but all would be corrected by rescinding the Torah with Grace. Gentile Christianity soon came to think that the Jews had been rejected by God and lost their place as his chosen people, because of their rejection of their Messiah (read Hosea again). They erroneously regarded those Jewish Christians who attempted to continue their membership amidst the Jewish people as neither Jews nor Christians, and they fought other Gentile Christians who wanted to retain within the later Catholic church customs practiced by Jesus and the early Jewish-Gentile Church such as keeping the festivals of Passover, Pentecost, First-Fruits, Rosh HaShannah, Yom Kippur, and Sukkot. The Catholic church's substitution of pagan holidays for Jewish and Biblical holy days was blatant Idolatry and broke the first Two Commandments.

Gentile Christianity differed from the earliest form of the new faith in more than one important way as detailed above. From the beginning Gentile Christianity had rejected the Torah, together with its commandments constituting the human side of the covenant with God. At the same time, it had radically reinterpreted the Jewish Bible (the book that Jesus said that in the Law and the Prophets it was written of him), reading it as a complex web of prophecy of Christ (Messiah) & a presenting it as a systematic slander of Jews and Judaism.

Gentile Christianity soon developed beliefs concerning the role of Jesus that differed greatly from those of the earliest Christians (Jewish as well as Early Gentile Christianity). Later Gentile Christians (following the first century) believed that Jesus had brought forgiveness to individual sinners through his death, and they came to see him also as a cosmic redeemer, irrespective of the role or repentance in the Bible. These beliefs were largely based on the teachings of Paul, who had begun the systematic adaptation of an originally Jewish message to a Gentile audience. He, like them, mush have been influenced by ideas drawn from the surrounding culture and environment which had paganism as its core.

The earliest Christians (first century Jewish believers) themselves, had not thought of Jesus' death in this way. Jesus' death was something that required explanation in the light of their overriding belief that he was the Messiah; on the face of things it was incompatible with it, since it was not part of the destiny of the expected Messiah to be put to death. They believed, however, that with the resurrection of Jesus the general resurrection of all the dead had begun. Perhaps they also saw his death as a martyrdom (the death of a righteous man "tzeddek" atoned for the sins of Israel). They would not have regarded Jesus' suffering on the cross as a unique way of obtaining forgiveness for their sins, since (like Jesus himself) they knew that forgiveness was already freely available within the existing covenants to repentant sinners. The changes introduced by Gentile Christianity were therefore of major consequence, a fact masked from modern people due to their lack of understanding and study of the events of the first century.

Answer for yourself: Does it not sound preposterous to believe that Gentile pagans, once accepting the Messiah, are better interpreters of the Jewish Bible than the Jewish scholars and sages, since they had never seen it before, let alone studied it for thousands of years as had the Hebrews?

Salvation is of the Jews, was of the Jews, and will always be of the Jews.

Gentile Christianity gained further momentum at a period near the end of the first century, when the original expectation of the Jewish originators of the new movement, that Christ would very shortly return and do all that had been traditionally expected of the Messiah (which was not done by Jesus in his first coming), had died down. Instead of a literal return of Messiah Yeshua, they came to understand his Parousia as a spiritual coming or presence in 70 C.E. with the destruction of the Temple and the deliverance of the Messianic community of Jerusalem before the annihilation of the Jews by the Romans.

Jesus had preached the imminence of the kingdom, or kingship, of God. After his death, his followers preached the arrival of the messianic age under his auspices. All the earliest Christians, whatever their other differences, were united in the ardent belief that the end of history had come, that it had only a few months or years to run before being utterly transformed into a new age. Such an age began after the destruction of the Temple in 70 C.E. as "the age of the Gentiles."

The Jewish Christians did not think of themselves as originators and shapers of a new religion but as those upon whom the duty had fallen of announcing this new age to their fellow Jews, in the name of Jesus. But Jesus did not physically return, and as the years passed, it became impossible to sustain the original tension of anticipation of his physical coming. Gradually, the new movement settled down into history to await the judgment of 70 C.E.

The expectation of a new age was too fundamental an element in the original Jewish heritage of the Church to be simply discarded by Gentile Christianity. It had to be retained in some form. In its original form, it meant very little to Gentiles, who had not learned to share the Jewish expectation that God would assert his sovereignty over a rebellious world and deliver his own people. And it did not seem that the expectation would not be fulfilled very soon, in any case.

The expectation of a new age, called eschatology by scholars, was reinterpreted by the Gentile church, now assuming the shape of a new religion. The original contrast between the present age and the new age to come, already dawning in the life of the Christian movement, became transformed into a contrast between the natural and the supernatural. Such a contrast was much easier to understand for pagans, especially the philosophically educated.

Now the Gentile Church thought of itself as privileged to be the bearer of a new supernatural life of grace, stemming from the incarnation of God in Christ, a divine-human life to which the sacraments of the church gave entrance. The Church could then contrast itself with Judaism, which lacked this supernatural element of grace, stemming from God incarnate. Thus, a Jewish contrast between two historical ages in time became transformed into a Greek contrast between two metaphysical levels, this material world and an invisible, spiritual one.

The new Gentile Christianity became greatly assimilated to the Graeco-Roman culture in which it lived, as it rethought the whole Jewish heritage of Christianity, stemming from the Bible, in the terms of Greek philosophy. Soon the theology of the early Catholic Church would be expressed exclusively in Greek philosophical language, even when it was translated into Latin, and the simpler and more concrete language of the Jewish Bible reserved for popular preaching and devotion.

Greek philosophy was often monotheistic in its theology and ethical in its teaching about personal conduct, but it was pagan in origin and had no natural affinity with Jewish ways of thinking and acting. Gentile Christianity felt much more at home with this kind of pagan philosophy than with the Jewish heritage mediated to them through the original Christian preachers (Jewish), and through the Jewish Bible that had been bequeathed to them as the foundation of their faith. The Jewish Bible in Greek translation was for a long time their only Scripture, but they read and interpreted it in ways Jews would not have done.

The reinterpretation of Jewish eschatology into Greek metaphysical terms led to extremely important changes in the pattern of religion by which the church lived. So effective and sweeping were these changes that it is now hard to imagine Christianity without them. Gentile Christianity, now developing into Early Catholicism, changed the whole pattern of religious life by its introduction of the sacramental system, to become the core of later Catholic Christianity. The sacraments are rituals (significantly called "mysteries" by Greek Christianity) believed to have a supernatural effect on the believing participant.

Like Jews themselves, which indeed they were, the earliest Christians knew nothing of sacraments. They did, of course, possess rites and rituals, especially immersion (mikvah) an the breaking of bread (ha-Motzi associated with Sabbath services), soon to be understood in a sacramental sense. Ideas that may have been the precursors of sacramental theology can be found as early as the writing of Paul. However, the rites which would become sacraments for the Gentile church were originally understood in a Jewish way. Indeed, Paul may have been the one responsible for transforming them into something Gentiles could understand and respond to, in the light of their experience of the pagan mystery religions of their own culture.

In other words they paganized Judaism and called it Gentile Catholic Christianity!

Greek ways of thinking in a Gentile church led to radical reinterpretation of rites originally understood with a Jewish frame of thought. It is most likely true that, as many historians have supposed, the model for the transformation was the Hellenistic mystery religions. These promised the initiate a new life through mysterious rituals of death and rebirth. Instead of understanding the words of Jesus that a man must be "born again" in their Jewish context, they removed them from association with renewal and enhancement of one's relationship with God through the mikvah immersion bath, and translated the meaning to a mystical, heavenly experience patterned after the pagan mystery religions. Being "born again" was a Jewish concept that pre-dated John chapter 3 and was not created by Jesus. God gave the concept as far back as the Garden of Eden and we see Adam was the first to be "born-again". Due to erroneous Gentile Christian teaching we have lost much of the truth God had given to his people, and we must diligently study to recover that truth for our generation.

The Jewish rites of incorporation into the community, circumcision and immersion, are not comparable in meaning to Christian baptism as it came to be understood by the Catholic church, and later by the Protestant church. They more closely resemble naturalization to citizenship of a new country. The earliest Christians must certainly have interpreted the "breaking of bread" as comparable to the Jewish common meals of religious significance, such as the meals taken together on the Sabbath (called the Lord's supper), or the Passover Seder.

Gentile Christians soon came to think of these rites as having a supernatural effect. They were supposed to transform the believer invisibly, bringing about spiritual effects humanly impossible to accomplish through the identification of the believer with Christ. Membership in a sacramental church meant participation in a supernatural or divine-human life of grace, sharing in fact the divine-human life of Christ.

The center of this transformation of Jewish into Greek, or in fact pagan, ways of thinking was the new Greek doctrine of Christ, now thought of as fully divine. From the second century on, theologians became centrally interested in the relationship of Christ to God and preoccupied with questions about the divine nature. This is not a typically Jewish concern, since Jews regard the divine nature as beyond human comprehension, and suspect attempts to explain it as idolatrous.

Now the developing Gentile Christian myth presented a problem for monotheists.

Answer for yourself: How could two persons be divine?

Yet Gentile Christians were convinced that their redemption had been the work of no one less than God. It was now axiomatic to them that Christ was nothing less than divine. Indeed, it was his human nature, originally taken for granted, that now became problematic.

The model on which the theological solution was arrived at was Platonic and Stoic. The Greek philosophers of these schools had already though of a Logos, or creative Word, the pattern on which the whole universe had been created, its immanent rationality or logic. Since the New Testament had described Christ as the Word of God, it was not difficult to identify this Word with the Word or Logos already spoken of in Greek philosophy.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever asked yourself if Jehovah (YHVH) wanted to share with the Jewish people a Platonic concept from Greek philosophy? Does not sound right does it?

The author of the Fourth Gospel had already done so in his prologue.

Answer for yourself: Would John, a Jew, familiar with Jewish religion, write a letter to Jewish believers and use Greek concepts let along continually say "which being interpreted mean" as if Jewish concepts would not be common knowledge to a Jewish audience?

Thus the theologians came to teach that God had created the world through His Logos, Christ, and had then redeemed it through him also. The Word or Logos was divine, but in a derivative sense.

In the second century, we find the theologians of the Gentile church thinking of Christ primarily as the Word, or Logos, of God, and even as a "second God." The latter term was too risky and threatening to the monotheism to which the church intended to adhere, and it was soon abandoned. Eventually, though not until the fourth century, the complex theology of the Trinity, which also incorporated the Holy Spirit on the same level of divinity, was worked out. Such a Trinitarian ideas goes completely against Jesus and his declaration of the Greatest Commandment in Mark 12, where he states..."Hear of Israel, I Am the Lord God, I am One".

Eventually this transformed Gentile church became the state religion of the Roman Empire, dominating the world in which Jews had to live. Now there arose a remarkable synthesis between Graeco-Roman culture of classical antiquity and the beliefs of the Christian movement, already transformed by the impact upon them of Greek and pagan ways of thinking. The Catholic church of history, including its Eastern wing that later became the Orthodox church, was the bearer of the synthesis into the Middle Ages. This classical Christian civilization is in turn the basis of modern culture.

From the pagan world from which they had come, Gentile Christians had inherited many prejudices against the Jews, and these prejudices played in to the anti-Jewish reading of Paul to create a very anti-Jewish outlook in the Gentile church from early times. Christian anti-Semitism is not the same thing as pagan anti-Semitism, though they are often thought to be continuous with one another. The destructive energy of Christian anti-Semitism is inconceivable without the myth that the Jews killed Christ, a myth absent from pagan anti-Jewish calumnies, many of which were also leveled against the early Christians. Nevertheless, there was little or nothing in the form of Christianity that these Gentiles were receiving to rid them of their preconceived attitudes of hostility and contempt toward Jews, or to cause them to read Paul's writing otherwise than as confirmation and intensification of these existing attitudes.

Gentile Christianity saw itself as a new and superior religion, intended for Gentiles, and adapted to their situation. It is not surprising that very soon theologians were arguing that the Jewish Bible should be discarded, and no longer incorporated in the Christian Scriptures. Looking back, it is in fact astonishing that it was not discarded in the second century by Gentile Christianity. The reason it was not discarded was its grounding in Judaism, which was necessary to give Christianity a pedigree deriving from an ancient past that people of that day thought a religion ought to have. And of course it was already basic to Christian faith that Jesus had been the Jewish Messiah and that he had died on the cross and thus become the Savior of the world as a result of the rejection and hostility of the Jewish people. Such ideas, un-Jewish as they are, would have been unintelligible without the Bible as their background.

Because Gentile, or Early Catholic, Christianity has had this immense influence on the culture in which we all live today, Jews, Christians, and secularists alike, it is hard to imagine other forms of early Christianity except in this image. Yet, other forms did exist, and at the turn of the first and second centuries they were formidable rivals to Gentile Christianity. In fact, the earliest expression of Christianity was Egyptian and later we find these same Spiritual concepts taught by the earliest Christian Gnostics before the rise of Roman Orthodoxy. This is a whole study in itself.

JESUS THE JEW….OR JESUS THE CHRISTIAN?

Apart from a few radical anti-Semites, everybody had always acknowledged that Jesus was born a Jew. Throughout Christian history, readers of the Gospels had known that Jesus was born into the Jewish people, of a Jewish mother, circumcised on the eighth day, and brought up to fulfill the commandments of the Torah. But somehow no one, at least among Christian readers of the New Testament, had taken his Jewishness seriously until fairly recently. Everyone had always assumed that no sooner did he reach adult life than he started to utter fundamental criticisms of the religion of his own people, bringing a new message that would soon make it obsolete. And everyone likewise assumed that it was Jewish rejection of this new message that brought him to the cross. Such is not the case.

For some time, modern scholars had begun to see more and more clearly that real progress in the understanding of Jesus' life and teaching would only come about when his relationship to Judaism was better understood. I must say that in my study and reading over the last fifteen years I am constantly persuaded of the correctness of the above premise. As was commonly said, scholars needed to understand "the Jewish background" better than was yet possible. But Jesus, as the founder of Christianity, was the foreground. They took it for granted that the relationship between foreground and background would be contrast. It could only be expected that the contrast would become more vivid as the background was better known and understood.

As early as a hundred years ago, a few Jewish scholars who had interested themselves in Jesus had already given their fellow scholars a warning of what might be found if they went along these lines, but their voices do not seem to have been listened to when they said that they themselves could see no gap between Jesus and Judaism. Christian historians assumed, perhaps, that this was Jewish prejudice. I assure you that such is not the case if you examine the evidence for yourselves.

For Christian writers, especially in the predominant German tradition, it was obvious that Jesus was a divinely disruptive force in "late Judaism." The very phrase, so commonly used by these scholars to refer to the religion of the period, was an uncriticized legacy from the old theology of supersession, as we now call it, according to which Christianity had displaced and superseded Judaism in the plan of God. In a truer perspective, the Judaism of Jesus' time was early, not late. It was not destined to be superseded, and it had an important future ahead of it.

Now, such historians as David Flusser, Hyam Maccoby, Geza Vermes, James H. Charlesworth, and E. P. Sanders, among a number of others, both Jewish and Christian, are teaching us to start with early Judaism and then to study Jesus in its light. Following my graduation from Southwestern Baptist Seminary, I preceded to study in depth a Jewish Jesus and found, over time, that many of my cherished beliefs were not only challenged by facts over faith, but often destroyed in the light of truth. Let me give you a list of books that will help you in your studies if you seek the Real Jesus:

- David Flusser, Jesus, trans. Roland Walls (New York: Herder and Herder, 1969)
- Hyam Maccoby, Revolution in Judea (London: Orbach and Chambers, 1973)
- Geza Vermes, Jesus the Jew: A historian's reading of the gospels (London: Collins, 1973; Philadelphia:

Fortress Press, 1983)

- Geza Vermes, Jesus and the World of Judaism (Philadelphia: Fortress Press, 1984)
- E. P Sanders, Jesus and Judaism (Philadelphia: Fortress Press, 1985)
- James H. Charlesworth, Jesus within Judaism: New light from exciting archeological discoveries (New York: Doubleday, The Anchor Bible Reference Library, 1988).

All of these writers have an exact and extensive knowledge of first century Judaism. Not all of them are equally consistent in starting from Judaism and interpreting the gospel record from that perspective. Sanders and Charlesworth still retain some of the habits of the guild of New Testament scholars to which they belong. Sanders still starts with Christianity and attempts to account for its origins in the work of Jesus. Thus, he ends up with what can only be called speculation, inadequately supported by evidence. Although though Vermes' illuminating comparison of Jesus with other Galilean Hasidim may not be the whole story, it does unequivocally set Jesus where he belongs, in his Jewish context, and as a result is able to show that far more of the gospel record than has recently been supposed has a foundation in real history.

As Charlesworth a leading Christian scholar on the so-called "Inter-Testamental period" put it, "During the past two centuries, hundreds of attempts have been made by brilliant scholars to place Jesus within the thoughts of the Church. Others, more historically inclined, have endeavored to discuss Jesus and Judaism. Now, I am convinced that the new discoveries, sensitivities and methods compel us to see Jesus within his contemporary Jewish environment . . . Jesus of Nazareth as a historical man must be seen within Judaism" (Charlesworth, Jesus within Judaism, Preface, p. xi).

E. P. Sanders, writing a little earlier, summarized the findings of the newer research on Jesus: "The dominant view today seems to be that we can know pretty well what Jesus was out to accomplish, that we can know a lot about what he said, and that these two things make sense within the world of first-century Judaism" (Sanders, Jesus and Judaism, p. 2).

Geza Vermes, in an article with the same significant title as his book, Jesus the Jew, puts the same thought in this way: ' 'Jesus the Jew' . . . is an emotionally charged synonym for the Jesus of history as opposed to the divine Christ of Christian faith that simply re-states the obvious fact, still hard for many Christians and even some Jews to accept, that Jesus was a Jew and not a Christian.""

When we do study the history of Jesus within its proper Jewish context, we thus discover a Jew who lived and observed Biblical Judaism and not a Christian who practiced what we today call Christianity. At every point, what the Gospels tell us about Jesus, where we have reason to believe that their information is authentic, fits in to Judaism. It does not fit nearly as well into Christianity. In fact, if we start from Christianity, as depicted in the New Testament, and try to work back to discover how it began in Jesus, we kind very few links from the early Christian church to Jesus-so few, indeed, that only with some ingenuity can any connection be traced between them.

That is, I believe, the main reason why until recently New Testament critics had become so skeptical about the possibility of recovering a satisfactory picture of the life and teaching of Jesus. New Testament critics had been starting in the wrong place, with an already anti-Jewish church, instead of analyzing this anti-Judaic bias in their sources and filtering it out, so as to reach back to something closer to the original memories of Jesus.

This skepticism is also the outcome of the scholarly tradition, mentioned earlier, in which the majority of present-day clergy have been educated, except in the more conservative churches. Please understand of what I write today I did not learn in Seminary when I earned a Masters Degree in Divinity. I dug it out on my own using the skills I acquired while in Seminary. I am living proof that current educational facilities that are preparing young ministers are not equipping them with the facts or the truth. Denominational rhetoric is the fruits of these religious institutions. The gospel writers and their original readers, it was supposed, did not want to know about the Jesus who had lived in Galilee a few years before. Instead, they wanted to know about the Christ who was now sitting at the right hand of God and would soon return to judge the world and bring in the promised age of universal peace and righteousness. Students of the New Testament have learned from their teachers that the oral tradition of the early Gentile Church so molded the stories of the life and teaching of Jesus that the original can very seldom be recovered at all.

My theological professors, and current ministers today for the most part, have failed to emphasize that somewhere along the line of transmission this tradition of the early Gentile Church had turned profoundly anti-Jewish. But this early Gentile tradition of the Church still preserved accounts later collected in the New Testament that can be re-read today by those who do not share the hostility toward Jews and the Judaism of those who were the original foundation for these traditions. The New Testament and its many accounts, when read with knowledge and understanding of Biblical Judaism and a Jewish Jesus, can be restored to something like their original context in Jewish life, and then they come to life in a new way.

It is startling for people brought up in that tradition to discover that the familiar Gospels, which are in the hands of millions, can after all give us all kinds of valuable information about Jesus, once they are read in the right way, that is to say, a Jewish way.

Let me close by saying that I have the above books in my library along with hundreds of others. These books are my best friends and I have read many of them 2-3 times. Hosea the Prophet once said that God's people perish for lack of knowledge. Such is the tragic legacy I inherited even with a Master's Degree for a very reputable and respected Seminary in Texas. And if that is my evaluation of my training, what does that say for the average Christian who knows little of what I speak. Literally the blind are following the blind today, and I assure you, will ultimately come to rest in the proverbial ditch. But it does not have to be that way for you.

HAS GENTILE CHRISTIANITY LED ME TO BELIEVE IN THE WRONG JESUS?

The New Testament embodies a Christian myth of salvation. The previous statement introduces a familiar word, "myth," in an unfamiliar sense. In ordinary speech, a myth is an untrue story. When we say such and such is a myth, we mean that it is untrue and baseless. When scholars who study religion use the word, they understand it rather differently: they mean a story or group of images in which religious energy and emotion are invested. The story tells the members of the community who they are, giving the community its identity and distinguishing it from others. The myth is the charter of the religious community, the energy center by which it lives. This Christian myth deeply colors all we read about Jesus in the gospel story. But the Gospels could not altogether escape from history into myth, for the subject of their myth was a historical person. This fact makes it possible for critical history to recover at least the outlines of the real Jesus and to compare him with the way the myth depicted him. When we do so, we can see that even at the comparatively early stage in its development reflected in the Gospels, the myth was already strongly anti-Jewish.

Answer for yourself: Are you confident, as you understand Jesus, that there is not a great difference between the Jesus of the Christian myth and the real historical Jesus?

Answer for yourself: Are you currently aware that there is, despite what you have heard most likely in your church, a great gulf of historical and factual discrepancies that separate the Christ of faith from the Jesus of history?

Answer for yourself: What will you do when you see these differences, which brings the Christ of faith and its truthful representation into question, substantiate the historical Jesus as the only true Jesus that ever existed?

By the time the Gospels were being written, near the end of the first century, the stories about Jesus had taken on a transcendent and cosmic dimension. No longer a Jewish healer and teacher, but a triumphant hero and a savior figure, Jesus defeats his enemies on the supernatural plane, though defeated by them on the plane of history. Having conquered sin and death, he reigns as King on the right hand of God, while his followers await his triumphant return to history, still imminently expected.

As this myth took form, under various historical pressures, it came to level a deadly case against the Jews.

The case against the Jews turned on two charges:

- It was the Jews (not the Romans, as in historical reality) who were Jesus' earthly enemies, agents in fact of his supernatural foes, the forces of evil. They rejected the more spiritual teaching he brought them because they were attached to their old Law and could not see that Jesus' message of love and forgiveness had made it obsolete.
- Though their own Bible had clearly foretold his birth, death, resurrection, and all his doings, they rejected him as their Messiah because they found his claim to divinity blasphemous, condemning him to death and persuading the Romans to carry out the sentence, since they could not. And so they became the Christ-killers.

We shall look critically at the first of these charges in the present article, and the second in the next.

The myth sets Jesus and his own people at odds with each other, as bitter and irreconcilable opponents. As the developing myth came to exalt Jesus to divine status, his alleged quarrel with Judaism became a divine judgment on a faithless people. Critical history does not find such a quarrel: instead it finds Jesus the Jew, a prophetic teacher who loved the Torah, who wished that everyone would follow it from the heart. And it does not find Christ-killers, but at most, disagreement between Jesus and some other Jews on how best to reclaim sinners.

These are not just academic questions. Because Christians read the New Testament uncritically, through the myth, they came to distrust and often to hate Jews. Seeing the Jews as the Christ-killers, they saw them as belonging to the forces of evil, capable of all kinds of crimes. Viewing them as evil licensed them to inflict evil upon them in their turn. The modern secularized world abandoned the myth, but retained the "knowledge" that the Jews were bad. This "knowledge" made the Holocaust possible.

The rediscovery of the historical Jesus in modern times strikes a blow at the roots of the anti-Jewish myth. That is why it is important for both Christians and Jews, and even for secularized people, to know something of the findings of critical history about the real story of Jesus.

The best historical scholarship now available shows beyond reasonable doubt that both the charges the myth brings against the Jews are false.

Regardless of what your Pastor or Church has taught you, the real Jesus did not teach anything against the provisions of the Torah his people lived by; he lived by them himself-and therefore could not have been opposed by his fellow Jews for what he taught. He was not convicted of blasphemy in their highest court for any messianic claims and his people did not encompass his death on that account, or any other.

In the New Testament, however, the above Christian myth has been read back into the story of his life: many of the details of the story have been altered in the retelling to fit the new demands of the myth, thus producing a false picture of radical opposition between Jesus and other Jews, especially the Pharisees. Later beliefs about Jesus' messianic status were read back anachronistically, so that Jesus is depicted as claiming in his own lifetime to be what Christian theology would make him after his death. The Gospels speak for the Church, already a predominantly Gentile body, fast becoming in its own eyes the true Israel, the inheritor of all the promises, now lost by the Jews because of their unbelief in their Messiah.

All four of the Gospels in the New Testament were written, it now seems likely, by Gentile writers for Gentile audiences belonging to a movement that from its inception had abandoned the Jewish way of life and was unfamiliar with it. They take the stories about Jesus their predecessors had remembered out of their original Jewish context, putting them into a new one, the context of the rapidly growing salvation myth.

Even the original oral traditions, their sources, had no doubt often taken for granted the Jewish context of the stories, and therefore did not need to record it. This context would naturally have been familiar to those who originated the traditions, and to their first hearers, themselves Jewish. Later, Gentile readers of the gospel stories knew little of it. In reporting events in Jesus' life, the gospel writers sometimes display their own ignorance of Jewish beliefs and customs. At other times, they pass over or misunderstand them. They view the traditions they have received about Jesus through the situation of their own church in their own time, a Gentile movement now facing a radical breach with its Jewish parent.

Until modern times, Christians had always read the story of Jesus through this myth. They had learned the myth from parents and teachers before they began to read the New Testament; when they began to do so, their reading strongly reinforced the myth through which they read it. Most Christians still do read the Gospels in this way. Only those belonging to an instructed minority, conversant with the results of critical scholarship, have begun to question the old reading.

For the most part, profoundly ignorant of Judaism, Christians fail to understand the allusions to Jewish faith and life remaining in the Gospels and do not know how to supply them where they are missing. Thus the mythological aspects of the story seem plausible to them. Jewish readers are able to make these corrections, but until modern times they were discouraged from opening the New Testament at all. Even today they are liable to take the New Testament view of Jesus' relationship to his own people as correct, though they will evaluate the apparent conflict in a different way from Christian readers of the Gospels.

To read the stories correctly, we need knowledge and an imagination open to a Jewish world. We must now learn to extract the accounts of Jesus' sayings and doings from the later context of the myth and restore them to their original Jewish context. We will then find that authentic memories of the real Jesus have frequently survived. The outlines of a credible picture begin to emerge. It is not the picture of any kind of Christian but of a great Jew.

Answer for yourself: Are we guilty as Christians in falling into the trap of believing and following a religion based on what we have heard most of our lives in Church, only to find upon diligent study that we have been lied to and misled by our spiritual authorities?

Answer for yourself: Have we listened to others who have read back into the story of Jesus' life inherited fictional details created by the early Anti-Semitic Church?

Answer for yourself: Have we as Christians bought into the false picture of radical opposition between Jesus and other Jews, especially the Pharisees, when knowledge of Judaism reveals otherwise?

Answer for yourself: Have we put our faith into beliefs about Jesus' messianic status which were erroneously read back into his life and thereby accepting a false Jesus as depicted as claiming in his own lifetime to be what Gentile Anti-Semitic Christian theology would make him after his death?

Answer for yourself: Have we learned, before we learned to read and study for ourselves, the Jesus Christian myth from our parents and teachers, only to find when we study for ourselves, that previous beliefs given to us as children has strongly reinforced the myth through which we read the New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Have we been previously programmed to accept a lie foisted upon us by the anti-Semitism of the early Gentile Church?

Answer for yourself: When reading the New Testament, are we aware that the writers of the Gospels are Gentiles instead of Jews, and are we aware that such writers frequently reveal their own ignorance of Jewish beliefs and customs as recorded in the New Testament?

Answer for yourself: When reading the New Testament, are we aware that the Gentile writers of the Gospels frequently reveal their ignorance of Judaism, and that this brings into serious question any attempts to regard this literature as infallible, inerrant, or inspired?

Answer for yourself: Do you, as one who senses the seriousness of what we discuss, desire to go further in your studies in order to know for yourselves the truths concerning the real historical Jesus over against the Christ of faith created by the Gentile anti-Semitic Gentile Church?

The Gospels speak for the Church, already a predominantly Gentile body, fast becoming in its own eyes the true Israel, the inheritor of all the promises, now lost by the Jews because of their unbelief in their Messiah (or at least how it is depicted in the New Testament).

We need to consider some of the most important of Jesus' recorded sayings and doings. Many of the sayings of Jesus have been taken to mean that he intended to supersede standard Jewish teaching with a new message and that he was bitterly opposed for it. This is again the great error of the Christian myth. You will quickly find out for yourselves that those aspects of the Christian myth that present the Jewish people in a hostile light are devoid of historical foundation. Such is the great lie which undergirds all Christian theology today.

HAS YOUR CHURCH LED YOU TO BECOME A FOLLOWER OF MITHRA...OR JESUS?

For over three hundred years the rulers of the Roman Empire worshipped the god Mithras. Known throughout Europe and Asia by the names Mithra, Mitra, Meitros, Mihr, Mehr, and Meher, the veneration of this god began some 4000 years ago in Persia, where it was soon imbedded with Babylonian doctrines. The faith spread east through India to China, and reached west throughout the entire length of the Roman frontier; from Scotland to the Sahara Desert, and from Spain to the Black Sea. Sites of Mithraic worship have been found in Britain, Italy, Romania, Germany, Hungary, Bulgaria, Turkey, Persia, Armenia, Syria, Israel, and North Africa.

In Rome, more than a hundred inscriptions dedicated to Mithras have been found, in addition to 75 sculpture fragments, and a series of Mithraic temples situated in all parts of the city.

One of the largest Mithraic temples built in Italy now lies under the present site of the Church of St. Clemente, near the Colosseum in Rome.

The widespread popularity and appeal of Mithraism as the final and most refined form of pre-Christian paganism was discussed by the Greek historian Herodotus, the Greek biographer Plutarch, the neoplatonic philosopher Porphyry, the Gnostic heretic Origen, and St. Jerome the church Father. Mithraism was quite often noted by many historians for its many astonishing similarities to Christianity.

HAVE YOU HEARD THIS BEFORE?

The faithful referred to Mithras (REMEMBER 4000 years ago) as "the Light of the World", symbol of truth, justice, and loyalty. He was mediator between heaven and earth and was a member of a Holy Trinity. According to Persian mythology, Mithras was born of a virgin given the title 'Mother of God'. The god remained celibate throughout his life, and valued self-control, renunciation and resistance to sensuality among his worshippers. Mithras represented a system of ethics in which brotherhood was encouraged in order to unify against the forces of evil.

The worshippers of Mithras held strong beliefs in a celestial heaven and an infernal hell. They believed that the benevolent powers of the god would sympathize with their suffering and grant them the final justice of immortality and eternal salvation in the world to come. They looked forward to a final day of judgement in which the dead would resurrect, and to a final conflict that would destroy the existing order of all things to bring about the triumph of light over darkness.

Purification through a ritualistic baptism was required of the faithful, who also took part in a ceremony in which they drank wine and ate bread to symbolize the body and blood of the god. Sundays were held sacred, and the birth of the god was celebrated annually on December the 25th. After the earthly mission of this god had been accomplished, he took part in a Last Supper with his companions before ascending to heaven, to forever protect the faithful from above.

However, it would be a vast oversimplification to suggest that Mithraism was the single fore-runner of early Christianity. Aside from Christ and Mithras, there were plenty of other deities (such as Osiris, Tammuz, Adonis, Balder, Attis, and Dionysus) said to have died and resurrected. Many classical heroic figures, such as Hercules, Perseus, and Theseus, were said to have been born through the union of a virgin mother and divine father. Virtually every pagan religious practice and festivity that couldn't be suppressed or driven underground was eventually incorporated into the rites of Gentile Christianity as it spread across Europe and throughout the world.

The Lord's supper was not invented by Paul, but was borrowed by him from Mithraism, the mystery religion that existed long before Christianity and was Christianity's chief competitor up until the time of Constantine. In Mithraism, the central figure is the mythical Mithras, who died for the sins of mankind and was resurrected.

Believers in Mithras were rewarded with eternal life. Part of the Mithraic communion liturgy included the words, "He who will not eat of my body and drink of my blood, so that he will be made one with me and I with him, the same shall not know salvation."

Answer for yourself: Any of this vaguely familiar to the Christian who follows a Jewish Rabbi?

The irony of this whole mess is that a Jewish Rabbi would have nothing to do with such things.

Answer for yourself: Why do we?

The early Church Fathers Justin Martyr and Tertullian tried to say that Mithraism copied the Lord's Supper from Christianity, but they were forced to say that demons had copied it since only demons could copy an event in advance of its happening! Nice try!

They could not say that the followers of Mithras had copied it because it was a known fact that Mithraism had included the ritual a long time before Christ was born.

Answer for yourself: Where did Mithraism come from?

The ancient historian Plutarch mentioned Mithraism in connection with the pirates of Cilicia in Asia Minor encountering the Roman general Pompey in 67 BC. More recently, in 1989 Mithraic scholar David Ulansey wrote a book, The Origins of the Mithraic Mysteries, in which he convincingly shows that Mithraism originated in the city of Tarsus in Cilicia. That this is also the home town of the apostle Paul cannot be a coincidence.

Answer for yourself: Is it any wonder why the Jews, who know their Jewish Scriptures better than Gentile Christians, and who have been instructed by their Rabbis concerning such deceptions, reject the Pauline Yeshua as depicted in the New Testament?

Answer for yourself: What does this say about the "inspiration of the New Testament?"

Answer for yourself: Would the real Jesus (Yeshua of history) both believe and practice, let alone follow as his religious belief system, once knowing these facts..the pagan religion modeled around him in the New Testament? If not, will you continue?

Answer for yourself: Knowing this, should you not possibly seek the Jewish roots of your faith and follow a more Biblically centered life-style by rejecting such lies and accepting the Torah of Sinai and learning about the meaning of "Gentile in-grafting into Israel" instead of their "in-grafting into the Gentile church"?

Shalom.

JESUS THE JEW & THE RELIGION OF JESUS

Apart from a few radical antisemites, everybody had always acknowledged that Jesus, as depicted in the New Testament, was born a Jew. Throughout Christian history, readers of the Gospels had known that Jesus was born into the Jewish people, of a Jewish mother, circumcised on the eighth day, and brought up to fulfill the commandments of the Torah. But somehow no one, at least among Christian readers of the New Testament, had taken his Jewishness seriously until fairly recently. Everyone had always assumed that no sooner did he reach adult life than he started to utter fundamental criticisms of the religion of his own people, bringing a new message that would soon make it obsolete. And everyone likewise assumed that it was Jewish rejection of this new message that brought him to the cross. This is the typical Christian understanding of the "literal" and "historical" approach to these New Testament texts.

For some time, modern scholars had begun to see more and more clearly that real progress in the understanding of Jesus' life and teaching would only come about when his relationship to Judaism was better understood. As was commonly said, scholars needed to understand "the Jewish background" better than was yet possible. But Jesus, as the founder of Christianity for many, was the foreground. They took it for granted that the relationship between foreground and background would be contrast. It could only be expected that the contrast would become more vivid as the background was better known and understood.

As early as a hundred years ago, a few Jewish scholars who had interested themselves in Jesus had already given their fellow scholars a warning of what might be found if they went along these lines, but their voices do not seem to have been listened to when they said that they themselves could see no gap between Jesus and Judaism. Christian historians assumed, perhaps, that this was Jewish prejudice.

For Christian writers, especially in the predominant German tradition, it was axiomatic that Jesus was a divinely disruptive force in "late Judaism." The very phrase, so commonly used by these scholars to refer to the religion of the period, was an uncriticized legacy from the old theology of supersession, as we now call it, according to which Christianity had displaced and superseded Judaism in the plan of God. In a truer perspective, the Judaism of Jesus' time was early, not late. It was not destined to be superseded, and it had an important future ahead of it.

Now, such historians as David Flusser, Hyam Maccoby, Geza Vermes, James H. Charlesworth, and E. P. Sanders, among a number of others, both Jewish and Christian, are teaching us to start with early Judaism and then to study Jesus in its light. As Charlesworth a leading Christian scholar on the so-called "Inter-Testamental period" put it, "During the past two centuries, hundreds of attempts have been made by brilliant scholars to place Jesus within the thoughts of the Church. Others, more historically inclined, have endeavored to discuss Jesus and Judaism. Now, I am convinced that the new discoveries, sensitivities and methods compel us to see Jesus within his contemporary Jewish environment . . . Jesus of Nazareth as a historical man must be seen within Judaism."

E. P. Sanders, writing a little earlier, summarized the findings of the newer research on Jesus: "The dominant view today seems to be that we can know pretty well what Jesus was out to accomplish, that we can know a lot about what he said and that these two things make sense within the world of first-century Judaism."

Geza Vermes, in an article with the same significant title as his book, Jesus the Jew, puts the same thought in this way: "'Jesus the Jew'. . . is an emotionally charged synonym for the Jesus of history as opposed to the divine Christ of Christian faith that simply re-states the obvious fact, still hard for many Christians and even some Jews to accept, that Jesus was a Jew and not a Christian."

Understand, all these above statements are voiced from an assumption that these New Testament texts are reliable both "literally" and "historically." This is open to huge debate today. But assuming that the New Testament is accurate history, we then continue. When we do study the history of Jesus within its proper Jewish context, we thus discover a Jew who was devoted to the worship of God through the Jewish faith and religion. At every point, what the Gospels tell us about Jesus, where we have reason to believe that their information is authentic, fits into Judaism. It does not fit nearly as well into later Roman Christianity. In fact, if we start from Christianity, as depicted in the New Testament, and try to work back to discover how it all began with Jesus, we find very few links from the early Christian church to Jesus - so few, indeed, that only with some ingenuity can any connection be traced between them.

That is, I believe, the main reason why until recently New Testament critics had become so skeptical about the possibility of recovering a satisfactory picture of the life and teaching of Jesus. They had been starting in the wrong place, with an already anti-Jewish church, instead of analyzing this anti-Judaic bias in their sources and filtering it out, so as to reach back to something closer to the original teachings of Judaism held by this Jesus of the New Testament.

This skepticism is also the outcome of the scholarly tradition, mentioned earlier, in which the majority of present-day clergy have been educated, except in the more conservative churches. The gospel writers and their original readers, it was supposed, did not want to know about the Jesus who had lived in Galilee a few years before. But it still preserved accounts that can be re-read today by those who do not share the hostility toward Jews and Judaism of those who transmitted it. They can be restored to something like their original context in Jewish life, and then they come to life in a new way when seen through "Jewish" and "Hebrew" eyes.

It is startling for people brought up in that tradition to discover that the familiar Gospels, which are in the hands of millions, can after all give us all kinds of valuable information about the religion of Jesus, once they are read in the right way, that is to say, a Jewish way.

DID JESUS FOUND CHRISTIANITY?

Even as recently as the late 1970s, a justly celebrated New Testament scholar entitled one of his books The Founder of Christianity. Like almost everyone else at the time, he assumed that Jesus had been its founder.

Answer for yourself: But can we really imagine the Jewish Jesus founding Christianity? Is not this the very first assumption we have to call in question?

Answer for yourself: How could this authentic and faithful Jew, living according to the ha!achah, have thought of founding a new religion in opposition to the one he loved and lived by?

The Prophets of the Bible were very critical of the Jews of their day, much more critical in fact than the Gospels represent Jesus as being, but they never dreamed of founding a new religion. They envisaged a national repentance from all the sins they excoriated, followed by divine forgiveness and the full restoration of Israel to its status as God's beloved people.

Answer for yourself: Could it have been otherwise with Jesus?

Nevertheless, no new religion was founded in the name of any of the biblical prophets, and it is a fact that a new religion did grow out of Judaism in the first century. It was called Christianity. The name of Christianity, of course, comes from the title Christ (Christos, the Greek form of the Hebrew word meshiach, our word Messiah), but not from Jesus' personal name; by the time the movement received the name by which it has ever since been known he was already most often referred to simply as Christ, Messiah. But there was no doubt which Messiah was meant.

There were also other first-century messianic claimants. No large-scale religious movement emanated from their careers, however. We shall have to consider why the history of Christianity turned out so differently from theirs. In the case of Christianity, its early leaders acted "in the name of Jesus of Nazareth," whom they proclaimed as Messiah, or Christ.

Answer for yourself: Were they justified in invoking his name to legitimate their actions in spreading a new religion?

This must be our first question, and it will occupy us in the remainder of the website.

The very name of Christianity shows that in its earliest days it was understood by everyone to be inseparable from the belief that Jesus was the Messiah. A further question to be examined, therefore, will be the grounds for the belief that Jesus was the Messiah expected by the Jews. We shall find that they are flimsy: in all probability, in the wake of the non-fulfillment of the Prophets, Jesus realized the Jerusalem had missed the days of her visitation and no one, not even himself, would be raised up as the L-rd's Anointed to bring in the Messianic Kingdom of God. That being the case, he emphatically rejected the title when used of him by others, for he knew what most had forgotten, that Israel had to merit the Kingdom of God and her Messiah. She failed the test in the first century. One only needs to read the Psalms of Solomon and the Jewish Bible to understand what kind of Messiah was expected and the responsibilities of Israel that must be met and fulfilled by them for the King to be revealed along with the Kingdom. Apocalypticism would stir the hopes of people, but it was repentance that would stir the heart of God, and let us not forget that God is the "Savior," and not military exploits! Jesus would die and the Kingdom not appear, nor her King; it had happened before and it would happen again with Bar Kochba.

The Gospels do tell a story of growing conflict between Jesus and his fellow Jews, ending in a religious trial before the highest and most solemn court of his people, which condemns him for blasphemy on account of a claim to be the Messiah and hands him over to the Romans for execution. This is the basis of the ancient and long-standing belief that the Jews killed Christ.

Answer for yourself: Did the Jews kill Christ?

We shall discover that the stories in the Gospels that suggest they did are exceedingly improbable. The Jews did not kill Jesus because they had no reason to do so. He was not guilty of any religious offense. It is in the highest degree improbable that such a trial before the Sanhedrin as we read of in the Gospels of Mark and Matthew ever took place. What we read in the Gospels about the trial of Jesus is the product of later Christian imagination, and it reflects Christian, not Jewish, views of the nature of the Messiah.

It was not the Jews but the Romans who killed Christ. They did it for their own political reasons; evidently, the Romans did believe him to be a claimant to the title of Messiah, although he himself made no such explicit claim. No doubt, they correctly understood that from their own point of view a Messiah must be a rebel and an insurgent, since he is expected to deliver the Jewish people from pagan domination. In any case, enough people thought Jesus was the Messiah to constitute a political danger to Roman rule. No one should any longer imagine that it was the Jews who were the Christ-killers.

If Jesus did not claim "outright" to be the Messiah and was not rejected, still less killed, by his own people, there is little reason left for believing he could have founded Christianity; especially in light of the fact that many of its religious dogmas conflict and contradict what the Jewish revelation of God since before Moses no less. Christianity has always been based on the belief that Jesus was the Messiah of the Jews, rejected by his own people. If that central belief is without foundation and must now be abandoned, it becomes much harder to discover anything Jesus said or did that could have led to the development of Christianity from his own work. One must look to Paul for that. One of the reasons why Jesus never claimed to be the Messiah was that, upon examining Israel for "fruit," he found them wanting; thereby realizing that he prophecies could not be fulfilled and any Messianic "claimant" would fail. Such was he lot.

In view of these findings, to be justified more fully in later articles in this website, we should now make it our working assumption that Jesus did not found Christianity, unless and until we find overwhelming evidence that he did. In fact, there is no such evidence.

DID JESUS ABOLISH THE LAW FOR THE CHRISTIAN?

Having survived 1994, Bet Emet Ministries has the enjoyable task of having no longer to expose, reveal, and correct the many errors and areas of disobedience that has crept in unawares in the Christian faith. It has been our purpose to reveal to our readers the tragic truth concerning how we have been led so far astray from obedience and proper worship of God in the majority of Christian churches of today. This has not always been as easy task for me as I have had to use a "sharp" pen to confront you with the tragic failure on our parts to worship God "in spirit and in truth" as I hope is your desire. Having spent the last year exposing these many errors and sins, we now can devote much needed time to investigating in depth the life of Yeshua as pictured in the Gospels. In this way, we will come to understand more accurately how we are to pattern our lives after him, for it is he who said "when you see me you have seen the Father." Understanding that we are to follow after his example, let us continue our pilgrimage to holiness as we study to learn in order to obey, thus ensuring we are truly becoming more like God who is to be our model for life and perfection.

The natural starting point in the study of Yeshua's teaching as seen from the Jewish perspective is his attitude toward the Law, for the Jews are first and foremost the people of the Torah (the Torah is the Jewish word for the Bible, primarily the first five books of the Bible). In first-century Judaism, as is in much of Judaism today, the Law was virtually synonymous with authority. The traditional view, still held by Orthodox Jews, is that God's revelation of the Torah to Moses on Mount Sinai included not only the Written Law (Pentateuch-Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy) but also the Oral Law (the "traditions of the elders"). This "tradition of the elders" is the interpretation of the written law which has been handed down in Rabbinic literature as found in the Mishnah (the collections of Jewish Oral Law) and its commentaries (which together make up the Talmud). The religion of Yeshua (Second Temple Judaism) is founded upon the Law. And since the Law constitutes the very essence of Judaism, one's view of the Law determines one's validity of Judaism itself. One's view of the Law determines if the religion of Yeshua is still valid for today or if it has been replaced by another religion; namely Christianity which, for the most part, rejects the Law that Yeshua upheld. The attitude of Yeshua toward the Law is therefore of the greatest importance to not only the Jew, but the Christian as well.

It is not surprising to note that in the Gospels it is clearly the Law that is the focal point of disputes between Yeshua and some of the Jewish leaders. The majority of scholars hold to the belief that the Law has been the basis of separation between Jews and Christians, not the crucifixion (see J. Parkes' The Conflict of the Church and the Synagogue, pp. 45). C. Montefiore, a Jewish author that esteems Yeshua highly, states that "the quarrels of Yeshua with the Jews of his age, and more especially with the Pharisaic Rabbis, were not about the nature of God, His unity, His justice, His mercy; they were about the Law and its authority, and about the relations of outward ceremonial to morality, of ritual ordinances to spiritual religion" (The Religious Teaching of the Synoptic Gospels in Relation to Judaism).

HOW JUDAISM VIEWS YESHUA...AFTER THE FACT

Without study on your part, the stance taken by Yeshua with respect to the Law and its authority will be vague and hard to comprehend. It seems to the casual reader of the Bible that at times Yeshua speaks of the permanent validity of the Law as seen in Matt. 5:17-18; yet his actions and words often seem contrary to the Law (Mark 2:18-27 records the plucking of grain on the Sabbath, a form of work forbidden on the Sabbath). How are we to interpret his intentions as he seems to contradict himself? Much learning is necessary to arrive at the truth of the matter.

The majority of Jewish scholars, consistent with their affirmation of the Jewishness of Yeshua (this means that he was not rejecting his religion and his faith when he, for instance, calls for repentance within his faith by rebuking those leaders who were leading the people astray), take note of the strong emphasis of Yeshua's faithfulness to the Law. A survey of their writings brings us to a consensus of opinion concerning Yeshua's faithfulness to the Law of Israel. With this understanding it is easy to see that Yeshua upheld the Law and did not create a new religion. Notice with me:

- Yeshua restricted not only his but his disciples' ministry to Israel (until after the resurrection).
- Yeshua had a high regard for the Temple and its worship.
- Yeshua advocated the paying of the Temple tax.
- Yeshua supported the offering of sacrifices.
- Yeshua advocated the reciting of Pharisaic-like prayers.
- Yeshua said grace at meals and the blessings over wine.
- Yeshua wore the tzitzit (fringes or tassels) attached to the four cornered garment in fulfillment of the commandments of Num. 15:37-41 and Deut. 22:12.
- Yeshua regarded pagan Gentiles ("dogs") and swine as unholy.

Such attitudes of Yeshua reflect not only his obedience to the Written Law but his agreement with the social customs (Oral Law) of his day.

To the casual reader the assumed paradox of Yeshua's affirmation and denial of the Law must be understood if we are ever to arrive at a correct conclusion regarding Yeshua either continuing in the faith of his fathers or else replacing it with a new faith. Upon correctly understanding what we read in the Synoptic Gospels we shall be able to understand Yeshua and his relationship to the Judaism of his day. It is this issue, which we at Bet Emet Ministries maintain is of crucial importance to properly understand if we as Christians are to justify our current practice of our faith, or in need of correction and repentance. Let us look at various positions regarding Yeshua and the Law and then draw some conclusions.

POSITION #1: YESHUA...A MODEST BREAK WITH THE LAW

The majority of Christian scholars and only a few Jewish scholars speak of Yeshua in terms of breaking the Law or replacing the Law. Even so, if you read their works, they only imply a break, and several who imply it make other statements that seem to contradict their implication. This is very confusing; either Yeshua did or he didn't violate or replace the Law. It is important to note that where a break is spoken of or implied, it is always with the insistence that this in no way lessens Yeshua's true Jewishness. This in itself is a paradox, for the Jews are the people of Law. Those who imply a break see in Yeshua a novel attitude toward the Law, even some go so far as to say "revolutionary." Some see in the Gospels that Yeshua minimized the Oral Law by distinguishing between moral and ceremonial laws (the moral in every case taking precedence over the ceremonial laws). They also point to Yeshua's emphasis upon the inward over the merely outward as well as his stressing of the importance of the higher law of love. It is this "unique" emphasis that the supposed genius of Yeshua is said to consist. Thus, these scholars (primarily Christians) see that Yeshua's teaching regarding the Law forms a new departure from and a break with the Judaism of his age.

What they fail to understand if they had studied Judaism as I have, that within the religion of Judaism are allowances to do just that; to choose the ethical over the ritual to promote life. The Commandments were given by God in order that we might "live by them" and "not die by them." What I find hard to accept about the conclusion of such important scholars is that in ascribing to Yeshua that he makes a radical departure from Judaism, then Yeshua would have violated and broken the Law in certain of his teachings and actions and also contradicted his own assertion of the permanent validity of the Law (Matt. 5:17-18). To the Christian this poses a very important question; "how could Yeshua be, according to accepted Christian theology, the substitutionary atoning sacrifice without spot and blemish but yet have sinned because he violated and disobeyed the Law? Such would be sin. This would be impossible! Of course if you have done any personal investigation into how the sacrificial system operated in the first place you now understand how Christianity has taught atonement wrong and how that it never applied to Yeshua's death in the first place. If this is news to you then you need to ask this ministry for the information in such subjects in order that you become knowledgeable about such matters as are the Jewish people to whom the sacrificial system was given in the first place. So it is easy to discount totally such an interpretation as applied to Yeshua. Let us move on.

Some scholars see Yeshua's departure and break from the Judaism of his day in his relaxing the rigid observance of the Sabbath as well as the dietary restrictions. Such a stance is unsupported by a proper understanding of the text. Yeshua taught the people of Israel that they must observe the Law in every particular aspect (jot and tittle) and that loyalty to the Law was essential.

Samuel Sandmel, a Jewish Biblical scholar, is willing to admit a break with the Law if Yeshua actually spoke the words of Mark 7:15: "There is nothing outside a man which by going into him can defile him." He believes that this was added to the text by the early Gentile Christian community. For Yeshua to say this is for him to repudiate the Mosaic food laws of Leviticus 11 and Deut. 14. Again this would be sin to Yeshua. According to Sandmel one cannot be certain that Yeshua did say these words because they stand against the general picture given in the Gospels, which is one of basic agreement between the Jews and Yeshua (conservative Phariseeism), with only "hints" at any profound differences (primarily the school of Shammai which was ultra-strict). What we have then is a tension between Yeshua's affirmation of the Law on the one hand and his supposed neglect and infraction of it on the other hand, and this view is not held by the majority of scholars to say the least. This tension is dealt with by understanding that for Yeshua the "Law should be obeyed unless a higher principle intervenes." Those holding to this viewpoint point to Luke 6:4 according to the Codex Beza (early Greek manuscript) as reflecting this viewpoint. There, seeing a man working on the Sabbath and thus violating Torah, he says, "O man, blessed are you if you know what you are doing; but if you do not know cursed are you and a transgressor of the law." It is beneficial to our study understand that it was always permissible to violate Sabbath Law if one was to do so to preserve life. Possibly the meaning might be intended that with know-ledge and increased understanding, one might violate Sabbath Law for the intended purpose of honoring and observing a higher Law, but to do so without such understanding that you are responding to a higher Law would be considered sin. So, I believe that Yeshua did not violate or set aside the Law for a new religion that maintains that the Law is ended.

POSITION #2: YESHUA...NO BREAK WITH THE LAW

The vast majority of Jewish scholars are inclined to understand Yeshua as differing only mildly with the typical Jewish understanding of the Law in his day. Again, this can be seen somewhat in the above account. Yeshua is thus regarded as not essentially different from the Pharisaic Rabbis of his day. Let me interject, that there were two types of Pharisaism in the days of Yeshua; one of which he ascribed and supported, and another to which he would rebuke in Matt. 23. But by no means, was Yeshua rebuking and calling for the abolition of all Pharisees in his day. Failure to under-stand the two currents within Pharisaism has been responsible for the erroneous conclusions drawn by the majority of Christians that Yeshua condemned all the Pharisees and that all the Pharisees plotted against Yeshua.

It is necessary to remember that Yeshua taught in a period of transition, during the development of different schools of exegesis (interpretation) in Judaism. It is thus inevitable that there would be variant interpretations of the Law as recorded in the Gospels. These variety of interpretations would clash daily. With the Pharisees, Yeshua accepts the Law of the Sabbath; he differs only in the interpretations of that law as found in the Oral Law. The Oral Law detailed the many conditions that allowed for the breaking of the Sabbath. Grace was provided by God for those who needed to break the Sabbath for a higher ethic and moral law. For example, the Rabbis of the Hillel School of Pharisaism declared that is was permissible to violate the Sabbath to preserve life, that in doing so you violate a Sabbath to ensure the observance of future Sabbaths. This was accepted halakhah (interpretation) by the Hillel Pharisees (of which Yeshua belonged), but not to the Shammai Pharisees or the Sadducees who were ultra-strict, always adhering to the letter of the Law over the spirit of the Law (Oral Law). It has been said that in elevating the spirit of the Law over the letter of the Law one can understand the minimizing of the ceremonial laws. But it is not that simple according to Yeshua. As Christians, we are not aware that the Oral Law brought a proper understanding to the Written Law if matters were in doubt. Let us not forget that the Sadducees rejected the Oral Law, and Yeshua and the Pharisees did not.

Luke 11:42 says "these (least commandments) you ought to have done, without neglecting the others (grave-weightier commandments)." In drawing such a contrast, Yeshua does not annul the Written Law (613 laws), nor even the ceremonial laws; he only brings priority to our obedience of all the Laws.

Some mistakenly see in his words his opposition to Judaism, and these are usually Christians. This "supposed" opposition to Judaism would be carried to its final conclusion by Paul; namely the replacement of Judaism with a "new Judaism" called Christianity. What was only a re-prioritization of the Law with its many statutes, was mistakenly assumed by others to be a call for abolition of the ceremonial laws (Sabbath, Festivals), and eventually the Law itself. Many have assumed that when Yeshua placed only a "little stress" on the ceremonial Laws, his intention was to abolish them. Nothing could be farther from the truth. Such a concept is not in the context of the Scripture because Yeshua goes on to say "these (ceremonial laws) you ought to have done!" This is far from abolition of the ceremonial Laws in my opinion. Those who have read into this text the abolition of ceremonial Law (for example the celebration and observance of the Festivals) have unwittingly given ammunition to the founding of a new religion that has rejected then tenets of the real faith of Yeshua. Repentance and ethical deeds, as important as they are, are not to be set above or replace the Law, either ethical, moral, or ceremonial Laws. Repentance and ethical deeds are the appropriate response to the Law. Again, Yeshua states "these ought to be done" along with the "weightier matters of the Law" which regards love, the tithe, the Tallit, alms, and benevolence. Failure to understand the mechanics of these verses properly have led well-intentioned people to erroneously believe that Yeshua and Paul set aside ceremonial Laws. More true to the point, is that Yeshua understood that people in daily life cannot retain their distinctiveness solely by means of abstract ethical views. He understood that if Israel were to abandon the ceremonial Laws peculiar to itself, it would gradually be absorbed into the Gentile cultures and would disappear. This is the tragic story of the Christian Church, for when casting off its Hebraic roots (many of which were obedience to ceremonial laws), it has assumed many of the beliefs of paganism and its Hebraic distinctiveness has disappeared.

Yeshua did not stand against the Written Law or Oral Law, nor even Pharisaism, but only against the elevation of the letter of the Law above the spirit of the Law. Jules Isaac states "Yeshua was born and lived under the Jewish Law. Did he intend or announce its abrogation? Many writers hold that he did, but their statements exaggerate, distort, or contradict the most important passages in the Gospels." The supposed violation of the Sabbath by Yeshua was a violation of Pharisaic scruples held by only one sect of the Pharisees (Shammai) and not Hillel Pharisaism. Such a violation for a higher principle (preservation of life) was not in and of itself a violation of the Law. On the matter of dietary restrictions, Yeshua did not declare all foods clean despite the passage as it reads in Mark 7:19. Yeshua tells us in John 8: 26 "I speak to the world those things I heard from Him." How could Yeshua contradict the words of his Father in Heaven as He spoke the dietary Laws in Leviticus? Again in John 12: 49-50 he says "I have not spoken on my own authority; but the Father who sent me gave me a command, what I should say and what I should speak...whatever I speak, just as the Father has told me, so I speak." Now, do you think that God would contradict His Word which He overlooks to perform it?

"Take just a minute and remember Peter's vision of the unclean animals on the sheet lowered from heaven and that he heard God tell him to "take and eat." It was later he understood fully what the vision had originally meant; not that God was abolishing the laws concerning the eating of clean and unclean food, rather that God was cleansing the Gentiles (whom Judaism had previously considered unclean as was the food).

Now back to Yeshua. Yeshua's intention was to separate morality from the strict interpretation of Laws of the Old Testament as held by one of the two major branches of Pharisees (Shammai school). Although those Pharisees were resentful of this, the majority never desired to be rid of Yeshua or to kill him. It would be the chief Priests and their scribes (Sadducees) who would be responsible for handing over Yeshua to the Romans. These were Sadducees and not Pharisees.

Having stated the above, it is the opinion of Bet Emet Ministries that Yeshua was a faithful holder of the Law all of his life. Any portrayal of Yeshua as one deliberately and consciously opposed to the Law is the reflection our lack of understanding of the religion of Yeshua and the hostility between the early Gentile church and the Synagogue. The only real differences between Yeshua and the Pharisees are to be found in matters of halakhah (interpretation) and other major differences do not in fact exist, but are due to the misunderstanding of the Gospel data by modern readers (especially when comparing their church's theology to that of Yeshua). So, we can summarize as the bottom line on the matter that any hostility between Yeshua and the Pharisees are due to differences of interpretation of Law (school of Hillel as against the school of Shammai).

POSITION #3: YESHUA...NO ESSENTIAL BREAK WITH BIBLICAL JUDAISM

Recent Jewish writers on Yeshua are beginning to see Yeshua as an authority within Judaism of the first century. This is great news! Although Yeshua does speak with his own special authority ("But I say to you"), it is a mistake to regard this as a break with Judaism. Yeshua is not seen to challenge the authority of Scripture and never violated the Law in any sense at all, either Written or Oral Mosaic Law. Not seeking to abolish the Law or even reform the Law, the mistaken impression that Yeshua did oppose the Law is in part due to the exaggerated wording contained in the Gospels; this wording reflects the later and growing rift between the synagogue and the church (who would write the documents we have called the New Testament).

David Flusser sees only one explicit violation of the Law attributed to Yeshua in the Synoptic Gospels (the plucking of gain on the Sabbath). This, however, is understood as coming from a Greek translator who added the "plucking" of the grain to make the scene more vivid. What actually took place was only the rubbing of grain in the hands, which was allowed by Torah (rubbing was not considered work which was forbidden on the Sabbath). Even so, it was Yeshua's disciples who were guilty of the supposed infraction, and not Yeshua.

Having understood the Greek copyist addition to the text, we find in Yeshua a "Torah-true" Jew, who never and nowhere in the Gospels transgressed against the Mosaic and orthodox Rabbinic legislation. Nowhere and never does he condemn or reject one single Mosaic or Rabbinic institution.

Answer for yourself: If we are to be like Yeshua then how can we who carry his "name" reject the Law or believe it has passed away?

Where Yeshua appears to go against the Law in the synoptic tradition, closer examination reveals repeatedly that this is the result of Christian misunderstanding or, as in the case of Mark 7:19, a later Christian addition. The overwhelming evidence of the Gospels is that Yeshua upheld the authority of the Torah and the Prophets and did not attack a single Biblical Law. On this point Yeshua is in the good company of Hillel, Akiba, and the Hasidim. There is no serious rift between Yeshua and conservative Pharisaism; what minor disagreements there were are properly understood as an "in-fighting" and not untypical of the Rabbinic tradition, which was itself in the process of change. What does set apart Yeshua is his prophetic rhetorical stress of the ethical over the ritual, as would be expected from a preacher of repentance. Where the Law is concerned, the real distinction of Yeshua's devotion is in his extraordinary emphasis on the real inner religious significance of the commandments. Of this view Bet Emet Ministries can concur.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE GREEK GENTILE CHURCH

Whereas Yeshua himself never contemplated abolishing the Law, the Gentile-Greek converts "by putting their words in Yeshua's mouth (altering existing manuscripts or adding to existing manuscripts) made it appear that it was Yeshua himself who undertook to tear down the whole fabric of the Mosaic Law." Thus, whenever Yeshua appears to go against the Law, most reputable scholars tell us we encounter the opinion of the later church and not that of the historical Yeshua. A prime example again is Mark 7:19. Upon study you will find that there was a deliberate twist in misrepresenting a play on words in the Aramaic as meaning "thus he declared all foods clean." This, more than likely, is the view of the writer's church rather than an accurate account of what Yeshua actually said.

BET EMET'S POSITION

Many today are confused concerning Yeshua's standing toward the Law. Many either cannot fit Yeshua and his view of the Law into their current church's theologies, while others, upon study, see that he fully agrees with first-century, Second Temple, Hillel-Pharisaism. G.F. Moore is content to assert that Yeshua's attitude toward the Law, even the ceremonial law, was completely orthodox. This view I support. Others see that Yeshua'ss teaching supersedes the Torah since the authority appealed to by Yeshua is radically different from the authority appealed to by the Pharisees. To this I disagree. Conflict is inevitable and without further study the differences are irreconcilable.

THE TRAGIC RESULT OF ANNULLING THE LAW BY THE GENTILE CHURCH...WE ALL ARE PAYING FOR THAT TODAY

It is evident in the headlines of every newspaper almost every day, America in a state of moral decay. It is my opinion this can be traced to the churches leaning more on grace than Law in their messages. I feel strongly that this major loss of moral standards is because the American Church has lost its way and are not following Yeshua. It has been weakened because it has a loss of reverence for the Law and the Old Testament. What the American Church badly needs is to be awakened to the need to restore the Hebraic Roots of her faith. I firmly believe that this loss of reverence for the Law has caused a lowering of Biblical standards across the board in our society.

As stated before, I strongly believe that the above condition can be changed by the restoration of the Hebrew Roots of the Christian faith. It is my ambition to help others have a higher regard for and return to the Old Testament, the Bible Yeshua used. It is my hope to point the way for the return of many who will hear the message. Those of you who have ears to hear, hear what the voice within my voice is saying. Discern the time. Be wise. It is my humble prayer that not only I have a part in restoring the reverence for the Law of God, but you contribute as well. Shalom.

THE JEWISH ORIGINS OF CHRISTIANITY & THE DE-JUDAIZING OF JESUS BY THE GENTILE CHURCH

Many ways were found by Paul and later Gentile-oriented founders of Christianity to disassociate Yeshua from the Jews and his Jewish religion as far as possible and to bring their new religion into a closer alignment with such favored pagan religious doctrines and practices as were dominant in Greco-Roman antiquity. And even though the great majority of modern Christian believers are unaware of this fact, observes A. Powell Davies, the Protestant commentator on Paul's evangelical labors. ". . . he [the scholar] has known all along that historically, Christianity is not the religion founded by Yeshua. . . ."

Without a doubt the most dramatic and drastic step taken by Paul was to transform "Yeshua the Messiah" which is a Jewish concept, into Yeshua "the Son of God," which is a pagan manifestation of God that was by no means a mere figure of speech or symbolism but literally meant a pagan conception that was formulated in the famous Gospel declaration by John 3:16: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

While it is not within the province of this brief excursion into Christianity to examine critically its theological dogmas, nevertheless, it is of genuine pertinence to point out that if, with the exception of some small groups, Jews remained impervious to Christian apostolic allurement, it was entirely because they were undeviating believers in the Oneness and "the Onlyness" of God. The Pauline conception that God had a literal "son" was altogether shocking and unthinkable to them. The same conception was, however, entirely acceptable to Gentile pagans in the Hellenistic world, for they had been conditioned to accept such a notion by their own "ages-old religious beliefs and practices." In the mythology of the Greeks and the Romans, for divinity to have offspring by mating with a human being was commonplace. Zeus-Jupiter, the chief of the gods, was singled out for this extraordinary procreative activity with various daughters of the earth such as Leda, who became the mother of the heroes Castor and Pollux, and Europa (the daughter of a Phoenician king), who bore Minos; Apollo, who fathered Linus with Psamanthe, a virgin daughter of the king of Argos; Pluto, who loved Persephone, etc.

Ultimately, the apostheSizing of Yeshua of Nazareth as "the only begotten Son of God" was accompanied by the explanation in the New Testament that God had sent the Holy Ghost down to earth to effect the Immaculate Conception of Mary, the virginal wife of Joseph. This dogma, held sacred by Christians, is reverently enunciated in the teaching of the Roman Catholic Church: "Christ, conceived of the Holy Ghost, was born of the Virgin Mary, who, by divine intervention, remained a virgin before, during, and after the conception and birth." The view shared by several Protestant denominations today is that Yeshua was conceived in the womb of the Virgin Mary without a human father.

Historians of comparative religions have been marveling over the strong resemblance which exist between the Christian concept of the Holy Trinity-"the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost" and the pattern of divinity that prevailed in the Egyptian religion. It should be noted that one of the most fertile of missionary fields for the early Christian Church was Grecized Egypt, where more than one million Jews lived and where the process of theocrasia (a fusion of the identity of one god with another) had been vastly stimulated by Ptolemy 1, who had introduced (300 B.C.E.) a mixed Greek and Egyptian worship in the Serapeum temple in Alexandria.

The trinitarian arrangement of the deities in ancient Egypt seems to have been traditional. Referring to this design, Samuel Birch, keeper of Egyptian Antiquities in the British Museum during the middle of the nineteenth century, wrote: "In the local worship of Egypt the deities were arranged in local triads; thus at Memphis, Ptah, his wife Merienptah, and their son, Nefer Atum, formed a triad, to which was sometimes added the goddess Bast or Bubastis. At Abydos, the local triad was Osiris [the father], Isis [the mother],and Horus [the son], with [the additional deity] Nephthys, etc."

This divinity pattern appears even more arresting when it is taken into account that the Virgin Mary, too, was accorded an appropriately divine elevation alongside the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost of the Christian Trinity, thus duplicating the exact design made by the Egyptian triad, to which a lesser deity was usually added. It should be said, however, that the prestige of the mother of Yeshua, far from being evaluated as "lesser," has loomed ever larger with the centuries, ultimately occupying, as in Roman Catholicism, the position of centrality with her son in Christianity. Actually, the identity of Yeshua has been so blended with that of the Father as God as to make them appear the same.

Mary has been venerated, worshipped, and extolled as the Mater Dolorosa, the Mother of God, the Mother of the World, and the Queen of Heaven. Of no little associative significance, suggest some scholars, is the fact that also the Egyptian goddess Isis was hailed as the universal Mother and the Queen of Heaven, and her cult, which endured into the sixth century, was the most formidable rival that Christianity had to compete with for converts in Hellenistic Egypt. It has sometimes drawn the startled attention of students of Egyptian art that in many graphic and sculptural representations of Isis, she is shown holding maternally in her lap the divine child Horus; it immediately brings to mind the classic depiction of the Madonna and the child Yeshua in Christian religious art.

It should be emphasized that there actually were two opposing movements within early Christianity following the crucifixion of Yeshua: One was Gentile oriented, declaring itself to be "the true Israel" and the Jews "the false Israel." This was led by the brilliant Paul and this was the one that ultimately triumphed when Constantine imposed it as the state religion of the Roman Empire in the fourth century. The second was the Jewish-oriented movement in Judea that was piloted by Peter (the Elder of the Twelve Apostles) and James ("the Lord's brother"; i.e., literally the brother of Yeshua); this, within a short time, disappeared due to the intense persecution by the Gentile Church. The several congregations of the Jewish-Christians, which were few in number, resisted every effort by Paul and Barnabas to de-Judaize Yeshua. There are leading Christian scholars today who disbelieve that the Epistles of James and Peter, which are included in the New Testament, were actually written by them either in their entirety, or even at all, but for reasons not clearly definable, had been attributed to them in the canon which was closed early in the third century.

The early Christians of Judea who followed Peter and James could not, strictly speaking, be classified as Christians in the Pauline sense. They considered themselves to be Jews. They adhered faithfully to the Jewish religion, observed the Sabbath (on Saturday), kept all the festivals and fast days, circumcised their male infants, ate kosher food, and, like the Pharisees, fasted on Mondays and Thursdays. They prayed in Hebrew and devoted themselves to Torah study, and when, a generation or two later they no longer knew any Hebrew, they studied the Torah in Aquila's Greek translation. Their one sectarian deviation, which resulted in their ostracism as heretics (minim) from the main body of Jewry, was their fervent belief that Yeshua was the authentic Messiah whom God the Father-the One God-had sent to redeem Israel, and that although he had died on the cross, he had risen from the grave and would reappear in a Second Coming, whenever God willed it. They completely disavowed the "Son of God" claim made for Yeshua; they considered Paul an apostate and rejected his writings. The fact should not be minimized that, when the Jewish revolt against the tyranny of Rome broke out in 132 C.E. under the messianic banner of Bar Kochba, there were sectarian Jewish-Christians who also fought in the ranks.

While the Talmud refers to Christians (without attempting to make any distinction between the Jewish-Christians who adhered to the One God and the Gentile-Christians who worshipped the Trinity) as Notzrim (Notzri), it has not been conclusively established that this name was derived from Nazareth, the Galilean birthplace of Yeshua. The early-fourth-century Christian writer Eusebius calls these Jewish-Christians in his Ecclesiastical History "Ebionites" (in Hebrew or Aramaic: Ebionim or Ebion, meaning "the Poor"; i.e., those dedicated to poverty). And Eusebius, like his contemporary, Origen, abuses them roundly for denying that Yeshua was the Son of God.

During the reign of Trajan (98-117 C.E.), there were some Jewish-Christians who followed the leadership of one Elchasai. They had somewhat different variations in dogma, although they had much in common with the Ebionites in that they stood determinedly in opposition to Gentile Christianity. They too affirmed the existence of One God, and believed that Yeshua was human, but a reincarnation of the Prophets of old into whom the Holy Spirit had entered, and that he was the Messiah who was predestined to lead Israel to salvation.

It should be carefully noted that the Judean-Christians, who identified themselves with the Jewish people and who clove to the religion of Israel until the first Nicene Council in 325 obtained their theological and inspirational sustenance from writings said to have been derived from the preaching of Peter (known in Greek as Kerygmata). They spurned the New Testament altogether, indicting those Christians "who have rejected Peter's teachings and have attached themselves to the frivolous teachings of the enemy [this was a reference to Gentile Christianity] which is contrary to the law [i.e., the Torah] ... the Law of God which Moses proclaimed, and to whose eternal duration Yeshua attested when he said: `Heaven and earth shall pass away but not one jot or title shall pass away.' " Rejecting, too, the Pauline claim that Yeshua was divine and "the Son of God," the Judean-Christians declared: "Only the God of the Scriptures should be called God. Nor is it lawful to think that there is any other, or to call any other by that name. And if anyone should dare do so, eternal punishment of soul is his."

In the light of these monotheist views, which presumably represent the Christian thinking of Peter and James, it cannot come as a surprise to read in the Koran (written in the seventh century) the crude but forthright rebuke by Mohammed, who was an uncompromising monotheist: "O Yeshua, son of Mary, hast thou said unto mankind, 'Take me and my mother as two gods beside God?"' To the Mohammedans, the Prophet of Allah gave this counsel: "Believe, therefore, in God and his Prophets, and say not there are three gods; forbear this, it will be better for you. God is but one God. Far be it from him that he should have a son!"

The theological detachment of Christianity from its Jewish parent seemed to become even more urgent as time went on. There were some Christians, like the sectarian Gnostics, who actively agitated for a complete divorcement from the Jewish religion. There was even, during the second century, a determined attempt made by a schismatic group of Gnostics (branded as heretics by the Church) under the leadership of Marcion, to eliminate the Jewish God from the faith, the Bible from sacred Christian literature, and all institutions and practices in the Church that could be attributable to Jews.

Even in modern times, there has been a sentiment in certain quarters to make Christianity free of Jewish influence. The late Dean W. R. Inge of Westminster, in a sermon he preached in August, 1950, before the Cambridge Conference of the Modern Churchmen's Union, posed this question to the clergy of the Anglican Church: "Do you agree with me that our services are terribly clogged with Judaism?" As indeed they are!

For "unclogging" Christian practice of its Jewish observances there was no want of eager theological hands in early times. Until the end of the second century, Easter, the festival which memorializes the resurrection of Christ, was invariably celebrated on the fourteenth of Nissan-the same day on which the Jewish festival of Passover falls. It took the energetic First Roman Synod, convoked by Pope Victor 1 (189198 C.E.) to order the Near Eastern bishops to refrain, under pain of severe penalties, from designating that day for the observance of Easter. The Corpus juris Civilis of the Emperor Justinian in sixth century also forbade it. But so persistent was the custom, that in 784, the Second Council of Nicea required of all new converts that they take this oath of abjuration: "We will not . . . celebrate the Passover, the Sabbath, or the other feast days connected with the Jewish religion."

The famous Church historian, Eusebius, noted that during the first three centuries of Christianity, the Jewish Sabbath was observed by the faithful together with "the Lord's Day." It was this "Lord's Day" which was called such in honor of the pagan god Mithras on Sunday. But upon the conversion of the Roman Emperor Constantine, the First Ecumenical Council of the Church, held in 325 in Nicea, abolished the observance of the Sabbath on Saturday and substituted for it the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath-the day of rest-for Christians. Despite their repudiation of the Jewish Sabbath, so strong was the power of custom and habit, that even on Sundays, well into the sixth century, Christians observed Jewish Sabbath laws against making a fire, cooking, working, riding, etc. So stated the Church Fathers.

The Church itself, in its very concept as a house of prayer, in many of its institutions [the congregation, the chanting of prayers, the singing of the Psalms, the reading of Scripture (Gospels), the antiphonal responses, the congregational "Amen!" and the preaching of a sermon based on a Scriptural text followed by its exposition] adopted existing liturgy from the service of the Synagogue.

In several of their traditional elements, the liturgical texts of the Church, too, were adapted from the Synagogue service in the form in which it existed during the first centuries of Christianity. Some of the same literary sources were drawn from by both; not infrequently, the identical phraseology was used. There could be no more monumental irony than that the congregational reading of the Ten Commandments, which formed a high point in the service of the Synagogue, was introduced into the Church service, and when the Rabbinic Sages during the second century were faced with this staggering development, in order to save the simpleminded and unwary from confusing the synagogue with the church, they promptly placed a ban on the public recitation of these central postulates of the Torah of Moses and ordered the Shema read instead!

Padre Martini, the eighteenth-century composer-musicologist, wrote in his Storia della Musica that it was to be expected that the Apostles of Yeshua should have incorporated into the church service the synagogue melodies that they had known since earliest childhood.

Answer for yourself: Weren't those the songs that the Levites used to sing in the Temple in Jerusalem?

Actually, the Jewish musicologist, A. Z. Idelsohn, has been able to trace a number of melodies, still sung today in the synagogues of the Oriental Jews, which bear striking resemblances to the plain chant of the ancient church.

There is no question but that the Gregorian Chant, which is the most pervasive element in the musical service of Roman Catholicism and the Anglican Rite and which exerted such a profound influence on the development of European music, was also derived, as the musicologist Peter Wagner avers, from the "solo-psalmistry of the synagogue." Another authoritative opinion on this subject is given by the Catholic musicologist, Monsignor Dechevrens in his Plain Song: "Gregorian Chant is the music of the Hebrews, and there is for the totality of the Roman Catholic melodies but one modal system, not that of the Greeks, but that of the Hebrews."

To devout Christians, the rite of the Eucharist (Greek, meaning "thanksgiving") is the most awesome and mystical manner of personal communion with Christ. To many of the liberal faithful, it is a symbolic act of personal identification with Yeshua, but to most, especially to Catholics and Lutherans, it is meant to be taken in its literal sense. The Lutheran Church, for example, teaches: "Yeshua said: `This is My Body' and `This is My Blood.' These statements should not be rejected, or explained as merely figurative. The Lutheran church teaches that the glorified Christ is able to be present with his Body and Blood, wherever the Lord's Supper is celebrated, and to give them in a real way which we cannot understand, along with the bread and wine as a pledge of our forgiveness." As the ethnologists explain: The Eucharist was conceived of as a rite of magical fellowship, or communion with God, by "eating with Him" and also, symbolically, "of Him."

Answer for yourself: What was "the Lord's Supper"?

It is said by many to have been the last meal that the disciples ate with Yeshua before his impending arrest, trial, and Crucifixion. And from the clear-cut statements made in the Synoptic Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke, it actually was the Passover Seder home-service that has been celebrated for three thousand years in every Jewish home on Passover in commemoration of Israel's liberation from the Egyptian Bondage. The Seder's chief ritualistic symbols are the matzot (the unleavened bread which is, in the Eucharist, the wafer) and the arbah kosot (the four ritual cups of wine in the Passover). But in what strange manner this symbolic Passover food and drink was metamorphosed by Gentile-Christians into holy sacraments remains unknown.

Scholars of comparative religions have discovered that a strong similarity existed between the conception of the Eucharist and certain sacraments that were employed in the cult of the Persian sun-god Mithras, whose "Mysteries" enjoyed enormous popularity in the Greco-Roman world in the time of Paul of Tarsus. This strange resemblance must have perplexed many people. As if in answer to this bafflement, Justin Martyr, early in the second century, blamed it all on the magical foresight of evil spirits who, knowing that someday in the future Christians would consider this sacrament the holiest in their faith, had taught it centuries before to the idolators "out of memory, in the Mysteries and Initiations of Mithras. For in these likewise, a cup of wine, and bread, are set out with the addition of certain words, in the sacrifice or act of worship of the person about to be initiated." This explanation was given even greater prominence by the authoritative Church Father Tertullian in the third century: "The Devil, whose business it is to pervert the truth, mimics the exact circumstances of the Divine Sacraments in the Mysteries of Mithras. . . ."

It should serve as a historical footnote that the Church Fathers and priests of Mithras were in fierce opposition to each other until the fourth century, when the emperor Julian the Apostate made an unsuccessful attempt to overthrow Christianity as the state religion of Rome (it had been established as such by his uncle, Constantine) and tried to supplant it with Mithraism. According to Porphyry, the third-century moralistic-philosopher who was an opponent of Christianity, all the Mithraic writings were hunted down and destroyed by the triumphant Church, which fact explains why so very little is known today about the once popular and worldwide religion of Mithras.

Much has been written about the vicarious sacrifice of Yeshua on the cross in atonement for all the sins of the world which had accumulated since Adam's Fall. The doctrine of "Original Sin" is one which Judaism does not share with Christianity, yet the very notion of atonement is central to Jewish ethical-religious belief; it is an affirmation of the perfectibility of mankind, which learns from its mistakes and corrects them by volitional acts of conscience. Martyrdom (not as atonement) on behalf of others has run a long and heroic course in Jewish history. It has been said that to suffer death deliberately as an atonement-sacrifice for others' sins is not a Jewish notion at all. "May my death be an atonement for all my sin!" This is the abbreviated form of the Viddui-the Jewish confession before death which is designed for the recitation of that dying person whose strength is fast ebbing, but the atonement petitioned is for one's own sins and not for anybody else's, inasmuch as Jews believe that each person is responsible only for his own actions. The Fourth Book of Maccabees recounts in elegiac cadence the martyrdom of Eleazar who, as he lay dying, pleaded with God: "Be merciful unto Thy people, and let our punishment be a satisfaction on their behalf. Make my blood their purification, and my soul to ransom their souls." But also the kind of atonement mentioned here is not the predetermined (by God) sacrifice of Yeshua for the salvation of mankind in his ritual-drama of the Passion and Crucifixion.

Some scholars (among them the great ethnologist, James G. Fraser) have found a number of analogues in ancient religions for the Yeshua-tragedy with similar themes of suffering, death, and resurrection. In the mystery-cult of Attis, that divinity of Phrygia (in Asia Minor) was the protagonist in an annual ritual-drama of sacrifice, death, and eternal renewal. He was tied to a tree in effigy, pierced with knives by the priests until "he bled to death," and then buried in the ground. But with the spring blossoming of the earth, Attis arose triumphantly from the dead, amidst the rejoicing of all mankind.

This redemption-theme through the self-sacrifice of a divinity is even more explicitly delineated in the ritual-drama of Osiris, the paramount divinity in the religion of Egypt. In order to atone with his death for the human race and thereby bring it to redemption, Osiris achieved incarnation in human form. It was said that he, like Yeshua, had long foreseen the inevitability of his sacrifice, it being recorded in the Egyptian "scriptures"

The Book of the Dead: "Osiris knows the day of his sacrifice." His death, by hate and treachery at the hands of the Evil One, Set, was followed by his miraculous resurrection, bringing with it happiness to the human race.

The sacrifice, death, and resurrection of the Greek god Adonis and of the Babylonian divinity Tammuz followed a similar pattern of the eternal renewal of life on the earth in the rites of spring.

THE TRIAL & CRUCIFIXION OF YESHUA

Almost a hundred years after the crucifixion of Yeshua, it was possible in retrospect for several Roman writers to make but the barest reference to it, of such little importance did they regard it. In his work, The Messiah Yeshua and John the Baptist, Robert Eisler mentions two pagan Roman writers of the second century, Celsus and Sossianus Hierocles, who observed about Yeshua that he was "it bandit" and rebel chieftain who had threatened Rome in Judea. Such a view was in line with the official Roman stand taken in several instances of other Jewish "bandits" during the first century. For in the guise of messiahs, those idealistic visionaries who both preceded and followed Yeshua, had organized uprisings in Judea against the tyranny of "Edom," i.e., Rome, as a prelude to the End of Days.

Inevitably, the rebellions were crushed in a general slaughter of their participants and their leaders-each of whom had, in turn, been hailed by his followers as "God's Anointed" and as "King of the Jews," and, consequently, as the future ruler of the righteous Kingdom of God-were publicly crucified in order to serve as a warning to the revolutionary-minded among the Jews.

The writings of the Roman historian Tacitus confirm that this was actually the attitude the Roman authorities had toward Yeshua and his messianic movement. Although Tacitus was a bitter opponent of the Jews, nevertheless, what he wrote about the execution of Yeshua in the Annals (c. 115 C.E.). He stated: "Christus, the founder of that name, was put to death as a criminal by Pontius Pilate, procurator of Judea in the reign, of Tiberius." His crime, said Tacitus, was that he had led a conspiratorial band of criminals who were "opposed to all mankind." But oddly enough, when the famous apologist for Gentile Christianity, Justin Martyr, was berating the Jews for their wickedness only a few years later-merely echoing the opinions and sentiments of the Synoptic Gospels of Mark, Matthew, and Luke, and of the Acts and Epistles of Paul of Tarsus-he told them: "This very Son of God ... was crucified under Pontius Pilate by your [Jewish] nation."

The fateful phrase "under Pontius Pilate" entered into the Apostles' Creed. The difference in implications between the two little words "under" and "by" altered irrevocably the destiny of the Jewish people for nineteen centuries, for by means of them, Rome and Pontius Pilate were declared innocent of the murder of Yeshua, and the Jews were forever-more branded as fratricides and God-killers.

That Pilate should have been treated so tenderly in the Gospels is indicative of how history is often written (or rewritten) from the writer's own bias, perhaps to promote some special vested interest-in this particular instance, to convert the pagan Romans to Christianity. Every other contemporary historical reference to Pilate refutes the Gospels' picture of his "fairness" and remarkable judicious restraint. King Agrippa I of Judea had formally complained to the Emperor Caligula in Rome that the procurator he had sent to Judea was "inflexible, merciless and obstinate." Philo of Alexandria, who was a man of the world as well as a Platonic philosopher and rabbi, and who had met Pilate personally, wrote of him that he was rotten with "corruption, violence, robbery . . . oppression, illegal executions, and never-ending most grievous cruelty."

Yet this was the noble, patrician Roman contrasted-to Pilate's advantage, of course-in the Gospels with the sly, demoniacal, clamoring mob of Jews in Jerusalem. In fact, as time moved on, Pilate's moral stature grew perceptibly; he was heaped by the religions leaders of the early Church with virtues unsuspected. The Church Father Tertullian (c. 160 c. 230), although he did not deny that Pilate was a pagan, nevertheless called him "a Christian in his own convictions"! Origen (d. c. 253), another famous patristic writer, went even farther; he called him a believer: "Pilate confessed that Yeshua was the Christ [Messiah]."

Seemingly, the sole aim of this gratuitous "conversion" of the Roman despot was to associate him directly and in a favorable light with Yeshua, demonstrating the existence between the two of a sympathetic bond and thereby, by reflection, lending eminent respectability and prestige to Christianity, which was then engaged in the highly competitive missionary field for Roman converts.

Perhaps the greatest single catastrophe that ever befell a nation was the one experienced by the Jewish people in consequence of the inflammatory account given in the Gospels about the trial and crucifixion of Yeshua.

Answer for yourself: Was the account true?

Much of it has the tragic ring of truth, but there are also elements of verifiable distortion, fantasy, and reconstruction in it, no doubt introduced by the overzealous evangelists to heighten the drama of the events they described as well as to serve the propaganda goals of Gentile Christianity.

Principally, the intention of the gospel writers was to disassociate Yeshua from the Jews. This they tried to do by demonstrating in their scriptural texts (in Greek) that not only had Yeshua not been hostile to the rule of Rome-witness the statement in Mark 12:17: "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's"-but that he had been savagely set upon by the Jews, a people, it should be remembered, whom the Roman master-race hated heartily. The Jews were hated because they had been consistently a thorn in the imperial side: They were constantly seething with social unrest and repeatedly rising in armed revolt against Rome tinder the leadership of such firebrand zealot "messiahs" as Judas the Galilean, his grandson Menachem, Theudas, Benjamin the Egyptian, and the most tragic of all Judean 'messiahs" after Yeshua-Simon Bar Kochba.

Answer for yourself: What was the crime that Yeshua committed to merit crucifixion?

Viewing it in historic perspective, from the Roman point of view, it is quite evident that he was charged by Pontius Pilate, the procurator of Judea, with the identical crime that had been charged against all the other captured "bandits": with sedition. He was accused of attempting an armed uprising as "King of the Jews." The historian Tacitus indicates that Yeshua was believed by the Roman authorities to have been the leader of a conspiratorial band. But actually, Yeshua had not planned any rebellion at all. While other messianic leaders before him (such as Judas the Galilean) and also after him (Bar Kochba) were fiery actionists, Yeshua was, on the contrary, the most pacific and gentlest of quietists. An extreme non-resistance to evil seems to have been even more of a dominant principle with him than it was with Mahatma Ghandi. Yeshua preached: "Whosoever smiteth thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." As an Essene, this was a natural attitude for him to take.

But the hard-headed Romans decided to leave nothing to chance. If subversion was being planned by Yeshua and his followers-and past experience with messianic leaders (zealots) could lead them to no other supposition-then it would be an act of foresight on their part to nip the conspiracy in the bud in the most decisive and prompt manner. So they crucified Yeshua in order to make an example of him-to warn any other would-be "King of the Jews" what end he could expect. The Romans did not at all seem to consider what was the actual implication of that august title; they did not understand that it referred to the Messiah. This can be seen in the "regal" crown of thorns and the derisive sign Pontius Pilate ordered nailed to the cross over the tormented and broken body of the crucified Yeshua: JESUS NAZORAEUS REX JUDAEORUM ("Yeshua of Nazareth King of the Jews"). That's what the procurator thought of Yeshua and that's what he thought of the Jews!

The Gospels, in their treatment of this epic drama, wonderfully written with a simple eloquence and an emotionalism that is genuinely stirring, placed an entirely different emphasis and motivation on its events and the personalities involved. In the Gospel of Matthew (Chapter 27), it was the chief priests and elders of the Jews who "took counsel against Yeshua to put him to death. And when they had bound him, they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor . . ."

As for the High Priest, Caiaphas, and other high Jewish officials who were said to have delivered Yeshua to Pontius Pilate for trial with the expectation that he would be condemned to death, they were aristocratic Sadducees (and collaborationists of the Romans). As such, they must have been ready at all times to be the "running dogs"-the collaborationists-of the master-race and to do the will of the procurator, even if it was to the hurt of their own people.

"And Yeshua stood before the governor: and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Yeshua said unto him, Thou Sayest."

So Yeshua stood self-condemned; he was destined for a cross on Golgotha. Pontius Pilate, the symbol and instrument in Judea of the omnipotent power of the Emperor Tiberius, even had he wanted to, had no choice but to execute him as a potential rebel against Rome. Every "King of the Jews" before had been crucified by the Romans as a seditionist.

But the Gospels willed it differently. In them it was Pilate who was moved to admiration by the noble humility of Yeshua and had no desire to crucify him. It was the custom, the Gospels infer, that during the festival of Passover (no such custom on Passover was ever known or recorded in Jewish literary sources) the procurator graciously would pardon a prisoner for whose life the people would ask. It so happened that "a notable prisoner, called Barabbas" was held in custody at that time. Addressing himself to the multitude, and giving it a broad hint and an even broader opportunity to save the life of Yeshua, Pilate said to them: "Whether (whichever] of the twain will ye that I release unto you?" And the people answered-"Barabbas!" "Pilate said unto them, What shall I do then with Yeshua which is called Christ? They all say unto him, Let him be crucified. And the governor said, Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying, Let him be crucified."

When the "saintly" Pilate saw that there was nothing he could do to soften the bard-hearted mob clamoring for Yeshua's death, he took water and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, "I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it. Then answered all the people, and said, His blood be on us, and on our children."

Actually, point out some New Testament scholars, it would be absurd and unrealistic to believe that there was the slightest possibility that the arrogant and despotic Roman procurator, Pontius Pilate, would for one moment have considered delegating his own supreme judicial powers to the Jews, whom he despised and distrusted, especially in a case in which the charge was sedition with conspiracy to revolt.

Answer for yourself: After all, they stress, was it not the Jews with whom he was constantly struggling?

Answer for yourself: Where would be the sense then of allowing these very Jews (in a howling mob) to pass sentence on an alleged "bandit" leader?

Yet all four narratives of the evangelists-the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John-described in an emotionally inflammable setting, bear down inexorably on one premeditated conclusion: that it was not Pilate but the Jews who, in a frenzy of hatred for Yeshua, were responsible for his agony and death on the cross. The diabolical image of the Jews-frightening, cunning, and cruel, as they are collectively depicted-stimulated the imaginative genius of Christian art during the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. The foremost painters and sculptors portrayed the heart-rending scenes along the Via Dolorosa: Yeshua being scourged, "the Jews" abusing and leering villainously at him as he dragged his cross to Golgotha, the "Hills of Skulls," and gloating vengefully as they beheld him, banging shattered, bleeding, and still, nailed to the cross of his martyrdom.

To the Christian who is enlightened and is also knowledgeable about the principles of the Jewish religion and of its moral values, institutions, and practices, such a depiction of the Jews must seem either an absurd libel or a vast distortion. And one need hardly go into the historical record: Christian mobs, howling their hatred for Jews and led by priests holding aloft the cross of the crucified Yeshua to "inspire" them, who had preached love and forgiveness, descended murderously upon helpless Jews everywhere in Christendom. For one Jew-Yeshua-uncounted millions of his fellow Jews had to pay with their lives in a perpetual Jewish Golgotha.

In his monumental work, Mission and Expansion of Christianity, Adolf von Harnack, a prominent leader of liberal German theology, declared with an obvious feeling of regret and contrition: Truly, such an injustice as that done by the Gentile Church to Judaism is almost unprecedented in the annals of history. The Gentile Church stripped it of everything; she took away its sacred Book; herself a transformed Judaism, she cut off all connection with the parent religion. The daughter first robbed her mother, then repudiated her.

The question often asked by thoughtful Christians is: What do the Jews themselves think about the trial and crucifixion of Yeshua

Answer for yourself: Do they consider it just?

When Moses Mendelssohn (Germany, 1729-86), the philosopher and initiator of the Jewish Enlightenment (Haskalah), was asked the question by the Swiss Protestant theologian, Johann Kaspar Lavater, he replied with an evasion: "How do I know what just or unjust judgments were pronounced seventeen or eighteen hundred years ago by my ancestors?" Especially, he added, since it was not even reasonable to expect that he accept responsibility for the trials and sentences issued by the Prussian law courts in his own day.
Whatever the thoughts and feelings of the great majority of Jews toward the Crucifixion-an act that caused unhealing wounds on their souls and maids and countless generations of suffering and humiliation-the astonishing observation has been made that, although they are, understandably, bitter, they seem to bear no rancor or any desire to "avenge " the terrible wrongs their people experienced because of it. In this attitude of most Jews-which is in the gentle spirit of Yeshua himself-can perhaps be seen a vindication of Israel from the libels the Gospel writers wrote against their fore-fathers.

It should not pass unnoticed that, indicative of the average Jew's desire to let bygones be bygones and to seek fraternal relationships with all Christians of good-will, was the declaration made by the Jewish philosopher-rabbi Maimonides (Spain, 1135-1204), who himself was a victim of bitter persecution at the hands of Mohammedans, in his celebrated code, Mishneh-Torah: "The teachings of the man of Nazareth [i.e., Yeshua] and of the man of Ishmael [i.e., Mohammed] who arose after him, help to bring to perfection all mankind, so that they may serve God with one consent. For in that the whole world is full of the words of the Messiah, of the words of the Torah and the Commandments. These words have spread to the ends of the earth, even if many deny their binding character at the present day."

Shalom.

THE HISTORICAL JESUS...OR THE CHRIST OF FAITH....WHICH IS REAL?

In the Western world, Christians imagine Jesus as tall, probably with blond hair and beard, blue eyes, and wearing a white robe and an other-worldly expression. Almost certainly, he was short by modern standards and dark-skinned. His black beard was long and untrimmed. He undoubtedly wore earlocks, the peyot that are displayed today not only by the ultra-Orthodox but were once worn by all Jews as a matter of course. It is legitimate to infer this from the fact that Yemenite Jews, who had been separated from the mainstream of Judaism for many centuries, turned out to be wearing the earlocks when they were brought to Israel in 1948. The practice of cutting the rest of the hair close in order to emphasize the earlocks is modern and is not followed by the Yemenites. The New Testament is silent on the point, which was doubtlessly taken for granted at the time. We know from the Gospels that he wore fringes on his garments like other Jews. Like other Jews, he wore tefillin (called "phylacteries" in the Gospels) when he prayed formally, and perhaps at other times, and he took it for granted that others would do the same. He objected only when they were ostentatious in wearing them in public, as some did in his day. He observed the feasts and fasts, and he must have gone to the ritual bath on appropriate occasions to purify himself (before each Sabbath and before celebration of festivals and feasts; totaling at least 59 baptisms or immersions a year), for we know from archaeological findings that the ritual bath (mikvah) was in common use in Jesus' time. He said the customary blessings when he drank wine (KIDDUSH) and when he ate bread (ha-motzi). He washed his hands whenever he sat down to eat (considered a type of immersion), thought apparently his disciples sometimes neglected to do so, without being reproved by him.

He personally obeyed all the commandments, ethical and ritual, and took part in the sacrificial worship of the Temple when he was in Jerusalem. Like the prophets in whose tradition he stood, he objected to these things (ethical and ritual obedience to Torah) only when they were done mechanically, without the intention toward God that made them valid, and without the social morality that God demanded above all.

Jesus was a faithful and observant Jew, according to the halachah, the interpretation of the Torah, accepted in his day. He did not regard the Jewish Law itself as mechanical and ritualistic, or those who kept it carefully as spiritually decadent. He love the Torah and observed it with the deepest faithfulness and spiritual dedication. He lived by it until his last breath.

The "real" Historical Jewish Jesus was in no way like the gentle "Gentile Christian Jesus," seen always as a meek and non-offensive teacher as portrayed in the Christian tradition. While he advocated the transcendence of anger to the point of loving enemies, he evidently did not always avoid it himself (take for instance the cleaning of the Temple). His criticism of all religious phoniness is as direct and even brutal as anything to be found in religious history. In this, he was the toughest of teachers. Yet his compassion for sinners is rightly regarded as remarkable, and it is this that marked him out as the bearer of a distinctive message concerning divine compassion.

If this message aroused opposition, and it seems that it did, it was not because it was un-Jewish. It was not. Rather, Jesus' convictions concerning the compassion of God for sinners and the way human beings should imitate it went even beyond what some of the devout of his day had been able to imagine of God. And if Jesus was scathing in his criticism of religious phoniness, it was not because he was opposed to Judaism, or regarded it as intrinsically defective, but because he wanted the Torah to be fulfilled by everyone as completely and perfectly as possible, from the heart.

His personal name was Yeshua, in the Aramaic he spoke, or Yehoshua in Hebrew, a very common name usually translated as Joshua. We get the form Jesus from the Greek rendering of the Aramaic name Yeshua, which comes out as Iesous, which is Jesus in Latin and also in English. His parents were Yossef and Mariam, or Miriam. He had brothers called Yaakov (James), Yoset, Shimon (Simon), and Yehudah (Judah). He also had sisters, but their names were not remembered.

Jesus was probably born a few years before the date usually reckoned as the beginning of the Common or Christian era, during the reign of Herod the Great (4 B.C.E.). Unfortunately, we have no reliable means of ascertaining the exact date. The methods usually employed depend on the birth stories in Matthew & Luke, which have many obviously legendary elements, and in any case do not agree with each other (check it out for yourself). He died during the rule of the Roman governor, or Perfect, Pontius Pilatus, which lasted from 26 to 36 C.E. It seems certain that the Romans executed him because they regarded him as an insurgent, on account of his reputation as a claimant to the title of Messiah, whether or not he actually made the claim. The Gospels do tell a story of growing conflict between Jesus and his fellow Jews, ending in a religious trial before the highest and most solemn court of his people, which condemns him for blasphemy on account of a claim to be the Messiah and hands him over to the Romans for execution. This is the basis of the ancient and long-standing belief that the Jews killed Christ.

Answer for yourself: Is this depiction of events in the New Testament truthful? Did the Jews kill Christ (Messiah)?

There are many stories in the Gospels that suggest that they did, but upon close examination seem exceedingly improbable. The Jews did not kill Jesus because they had no reason to do so. He was not guilty of any religious offense regardless of what is written in the New Testament. Much contained in the New Testament is artifically created "fiction" to separate Jesus from Judaism so that Jesus can be made to look as if he is rejecting his faith and his faith is rejecting him; such was necessary to present Jesus as the author of a new religion that will take the place of Biblical Judaism. This was very necessary if Rome was to succeed in her bid to replace Ethical Monotheism with adaptations of sun-worship with which she was deeply involved. Jesus was for Rome a new sun-godman and was marketed as such to the Gentile world. It worked!

Back to the trail for an instant. It is in the highest degree improbable that such a trial before the Sanhedrin as we read of in the Gospels of Mark and Matthew ever took place. What we read in the Gospels about the trial of Jesus is the product of later Christian imagination, and it reflects Christian, not Jewish, views of the nature of the Messiah.

It was not the Jews but the Romans who killed Christ. They did it for their own political reasons; evidently, the Romans did believe him to be a claimant to the title of "The Messiah", although he made no such claim (such as promise to be the Messiah who would liberate Israel from Roman bondage). No doubt, the Romans correctly understood that from their own point of view a Messiah must be a rebel and an insurgent, since he is expected to deliver the Jewish people from pagan domination. In any case, enough people thought Jesus was the Messiah (both Jewish and Romans) to constitute a political danger to Roman rule. No one should any longer imagine that it was the Jews who were the Christ-killers.

We cannot reconstruct the order of the events in Yeshua's life from the Gospels, because the writers of the Gospels did not know what it was themselves, as was already recognized in the second century. Nevertheless, it is possible to discover the kind of person Jesus was and what he stood for, by a careful comparison of the gospel stories about him with what we know of the religious environment in which he lived.

To imagine Jesus in a thoroughly Jewish way is very difficult even for Jews, most of whom have been conditioned to think of him as some kind of Christian. Jesus was not and never would be a Christian or adhere to traditional Christian doctrines of today. For Jesus to believe the Christian doctrine over Apostolic doctrine of the first century would be out-right sin in many instances. For Christians, it takes real effort to see and understand Jesus within the Judaism of his time. The degree of effort required reveals the anti-Jewish prejudice with which all Christians have been inflicted, including those who do not think they have such prejudices.

DID JESUS FOUND CHRISTIANITY?

Even as recently at the late 1970's, a justly celebrated New Testament scholar entitled one of his books The Founder of Christianity. Like almost everyone else at the time, he assumed that Jesus had been its founder. But can we really imagine the Jewish Jesus founding Christianity? This is the first assumption we have to call in question. How could this authentic and faithful Jew, living according to the halachah, have thought of founding a new religion in opposition to the one he loved and lived? To do so would have been absurd, not to mention sin!

The Prophets of the Bible were very critical of the Jews of their day, much more critical in fact than the Gospels represent Jesus as being, but they never dreamed of founding a new religion. They envisaged a national repentance from all the sins they reviled, followed by divine forgiveness and the full restoration of Israel to its status as God's beloved people. Could it have been otherwise with Jesus?

Nevertheless, no new religion was founded in the name of any of the biblical prophets, and it is a fact that a new religion did grow out of Judaism in the first century. It was called Christianity. The name of Christianity comes from the title Christ (Christos, the Greek form of the Hebrew word meshiach, our word Messiah), but not from Jesus' personal name. By the time the movement received the name by which it has ever since been known he was already most often referred to simply as Christ, Messiah. But there was no doubt which Messiah was meant.

There were also other first-century messianic claimants. No large-scale religious movement emanated from their careers, however. In the case of Christianity, its early leaders acted "in the name of Jesus of Nazareth," whom they proclaimed as Messiah, or Christ. Were they justified in invoking his name to legitimate their action in spreading a new religion? The very name of Christianity shows that in its earliest days it was understood by everyone to be inseparable from the belief that Jesus was the Messiah (Christ).

Jesus could not have founded Christianity. The new religion that emerged from the events of the life and death of Jesus contained too many divergent movements to have been the product of a single creative mind. At any rate, if Jesus had intended to found a new religion, he did not succeed in doing so in any coherent form. Much more probably, he had no intention of doing so. The "real" Jewish Jesus is not likely to have founded the movements that collectively constituted early Christianity.

Historians used to suppose that early Christianity was united in the legacy left by Jesus; only later did disunity arise, as new and unorthodox interpretations of the tradition developed. We now think it was otherwise. Early Christianity moved in several divergent directions, and it was not possible to unify them by appealing to the authoritative teaching of a founder.

Only in the second century did it begin to be unified around a form of Gentile Christianity, as a result of strenuous efforts by some of its leaders, most of them associated with the Church of Rome. The effort was never completely successful, and in later centuries new forms of disunity set in. But Christianity never again became as diverse as it had originally been.

If we look back to the state of the Christian movement at the end of the first century and the beginning of the second, we find amazing variety and diversity. Scholars usually group Christianity into three main tendencies, only one of which is at all familiar to us today.

This is Gentile Christianity, sometimes called by historians Early Catholicism, since it represents the earliest form of the Catholic church of history. It is the ancestor of all modern forms. But alongside it were two other movements, equally popular at the time, and in some places certainly more so, but not destined to survive. It would not have been obvious to an observer in the year 100 that early Catholicism, at that time largely a religion of urban slaves, and the underprivileged, was the movement of the future.

One of these competing movements was Gnosticism, which has come into public attention recently as a result of new discoveries. Another, now lesser-known movement was composed of Christian Jews, remaining faithful to their Jewish heritage, while adding to it a belief in Jesus as the Messiah. Scholars refer to the various movements that attempted to remain faithful to Christianity's original basis in Judaism as Jewish Christianity.

Obviously, there were sharp disagreements between these movements. Gentile and Jewish Christianity soon parted company. In the second century, the Gentile or early Catholic church fought a sharp, and in the end, largely successful battle to rid itself of Gnosticism and to put down the independent Gnostic communities. At the same time, it stigmatized as "heretical" all those groups that still held on to Jewish observance. In other words Jewish Christianity was considered as heretical by Early Gentile Catholicism.

GENTILE CHRISTIANITY

Christianity began with the preaching of the earliest Apostles of Christ, all of whom were Jewish. It made its appeal to Jews, and as a movement it differed from other forms of Judaism only in its belief that Jesus was the Messiah. Soon its members began to preach to Gentiles and met with success, creating a distinct branch (Gentile) of their movement. Before long, its leadership was assumed by Paul, the great Apostle to the Gentiles. As the name the historians give it indicates, its members were Gentiles, and following the teaching of Paul, they did not consider conversion to Judaism a possible option. Obedience to the Torah as the Word of God was too much for the majority of them, let alone circumcision; thus when given the opportunity of all it's privileges without the responsibilities, they majority readily accepted. Such was a big mistake and would later cause the irrevocable severing of the Jews from the Gentiles as the people of God.

The Gentile community interpreted Paul's writings as meaning that Judaism was seriously defective, considering that the new faith had superseded Judaism in the plan of God. In other words, Sinai, Moses, etc., was not sufficient because God had made a mistake giving them His teaching, but all would be corrected by rescinding the Torah with Grace. Gentile Christianity soon came to think that the Jews had been rejected by God and lost their place as his chosen people, because of their rejection of their Messiah (read Hosea again). They erroneously regarded those Jewish Christians who attempted to continue their membership amidst the Jewish people as neither Jews nor Christians, and they fought other Gentile Christians who wanted to retain within the later Catholic church customs practiced by Jesus and the early Jewish-Gentile Church such as keeping the festivals of Passover, Pentecost, First-Fruits, Rosh HaShannah, Yom Kippur, and Sukkot. The Catholic church's substitution of pagan holidays for Jewish and Biblical holy days was blatant Idolatry and broke the first Two Commandments.

Gentile Christianity differed from the earliest form of the new faith in more than one important way as detailed above. From the beginning Gentile Christianity had rejected the Torah, together with its commandments constituting the human side of the covenant with God. At the same time, it had radically reinterpreted the Jewish Bible (the book that Jesus said that in the Law and the Prophets it was written of him), reading it as a complex web of prophecy of Christ (Messiah) & a presenting it as a systematic slander of Jews and Judaism.

Gentile Christianity soon developed beliefs concerning the role of Jesus that differed greatly from those of the earliest Christians (Jewish as well as Early Gentile Christianity). Later Gentile Christians (following the first century) believed that Jesus had brought forgiveness to individual sinners through his death, and they came to see him also as a cosmic redeemer, irrespective of the role or repentance in the Bible. These beliefs were largely based on the teachings of Paul, who had begun the systematic adaptation of an originally Jewish message to a Gentile audience. He, like them, mush have been influenced by ideas drawn from the surrounding culture and environment which had paganism as its core.

The earliest Christians (first century Jewish believers) themselves, had not thought of Jesus' death in this way. Jesus' death was something that required explanation in the light of their overriding belief that he was the Messiah; on the face of things it was incompatible with it, since it was not part of the destiny of the expected Messiah to be put to death. They believed, however, that with the resurrection of Jesus the general resurrection of all the dead had begun. Perhaps they also saw his death as a martyrdom (the death of a righteous man "tzeddek" atoned for the sins of Israel). They would not have regarded Jesus' suffering on the cross as a unique way of obtaining forgiveness for their sins, since (like Jesus himself) they knew that forgiveness was already freely available within the existing covenants to repentant sinners. The changes introduced by Gentile Christianity were therefore of major consequence, a fact masked from modern people due to their lack of understanding and study of the events of the first century. Does it not sound preposterous to believe that Gentile pagans, once accepting the Messiah, are better interpreters of the Jewish Bible than the Jewish scholars and sages, since they had never seen it before, let alone studied it for thousands of years as had the Hebrews? Salvation is of the Jews, was of the Jews, and will always be of the Jews.

Gentile Christianity gained further momentum at a period near the end of the first century, when the original expectation of the Jewish originators of the new movement, that Christ would very shortly return and do all that had been traditionally expected of the Messiah (which was not done by Jesus in his first coming), had died down. Instead of a literal return of Messiah Yeshua, they came to understand his Parousia as a spiritual coming or presence in 70 C.E. with the destruction of the Temple and the deliverance of the Messianic community of Jerusalem before the annihilation of the Jews by the Romans.

Jesus had preached the imminence of the kingdom, or kingship, of God. After his death, his followers preached the arrival of the messianic age under his auspices. All the earliest Christians, whatever their other differences, were united in the ardent belief that the end of history had come, that it had only a few months or years to run before being utterly transformed into a new age. Such an age began after the destruction of the Temple in 70 C.E. as "the age of the Gentiles."

The Jewish Christians did not think of themselves as originators and shapers of a new religion but as those upon whom the duty had fallen of announcing this new age to their fellow Jews, in the name of Jesus. But Jesus did not physically return, and as the years passed, it became impossible to sustain the original tension of anticipation of his physical coming. Gradually, the new movement settled down into history to await the judgment of 70 C.E.

The expectation of a new age was too fundamental an element in the original Jewish heritage of the Church to be simply discarded by Gentile Christianity. It had to be retained in some form. In its original form, it meant very little to Gentiles, who had not learned to share the Jewish expectation that God would assert his sovereignty over a rebellious world and deliver his own people. And it did not seem that the expectation would not be fulfilled very soon, in any case.

The expectation of a new age, called eschatology by scholars, was reinterpreted by the Gentile church, now assuming the shape of a new religion. The original contrast between the present age and the new age to come, already dawning in the life of the Christian movement, became transformed into a contrast between the natural and the supernatural. Such a contrast was much easier to understand for pagans, especially the philosophically educated.

Now the Gentile Church thought of itself as privileged to be the bearer of a new supernatural life of grace, stemming from the incarnation of God in Christ, a divine-human life to which the sacraments of the church gave entrance. The Church could then contrast itself with Judaism, which lacked this supernatural element of grace, stemming from God incarnate. Thus, a Jewish contrast between two historical ages in time became transformed into a Greek contrast between two metaphysical levels, this material world and an invisible, spiritual one.

The new Gentile Christianity became greatly assimilated to the Graeco-Roman culture in which it lived, as it rethought the whole Jewish heritage of Christianity, stemming from the Bible, in the terms of Greek philosophy. Soon the theology of the early Catholic Church would be expressed exclusively in Greek philosophical language, even when it was translated into Latin, and the simpler and more concrete language of the Jewish Bible reserved for popular preaching and devotion.

Greek philosophy was often monotheistic in its theology and ethical in its teaching about personal conduct, but it was pagan in origin and had no natural affinity with Jewish ways of thinking and acting. Gentile Christianity felt much more at home with this kind of pagan philosophy than with the Jewish heritage mediated to them through the original Christian preachers (Jewish), and through the Jewish Bible that had been bequeathed to them as the foundation of their faith. The Jewish Bible in Greek translation was for a long time their only Scripture, but they read and interpreted it in ways Jews would not have done.

The reinterpretation of Jewish eschatology into Greek metaphysical terms led to extremely important changes in the pattern of religion by which the church lived. So effective and sweeping were these changes that it is now hard to imagine Christianity without them. Gentile Christianity, now developing into Early Catholicism, changed the whole pattern of religious life by its introduction of the sacramental system, to become the core of later Catholic Christianity. The sacraments are rituals (significantly called "mysteries" by Greek Christianity) believed to have a supernatural effect on the believing participant.

Like Jews themselves, which indeed they were, the earliest Christians knew nothing of sacraments. They did, of course, possess rites and rituals, especially immersion (mikvah) an the breaking of bread (ha-Motzi associated with Sabbath services), soon to be understood in a sacramental sense. Ideas that may have been the precursors of sacramental theology can be found as early as the writing of Paul. However, the rites which would become sacraments for the Gentile church were originally understood in a Jewish way. Indeed, Paul may have been the one responsible for transforming them into something Gentiles could understand and respond to, in the light of their experience of the pagan mystery religions of their own culture. In other words they paganized Judaism and called it Catholic Christianity.

Greek ways of thinking in a Gentile church led to radical reinterpretation of rites originally understood with a Jewish frame of thought. It is most likely true that, as many historians have supposed, the model for the transformation was the Hellenistic mystery religions. These promised the initiate a new life through mysterious rituals of death and rebirth. Instead of understanding the words of Jesus that a man must be "born again" in their Jewish context, they removed them from association with renewal and enhancement of one's relationship with God through the mikvah immersion bath, and translated the meaning to a mystical, heavenly experience patterned after the pagan mystery religions. Being "born again" was a Jewish concept that pre-dated John chapter 3 and was not created by Jesus. God gave the concept as far back as the Garden of Eden and we see Adam was the first to be "born-again". Due to erroneous Gentile Christian teaching we have lost much of the truth God had given to his people, and we must diligently study to recover that truth for our generation.

The Jewish rites of incorporation into the community, circumcision and immersion, are not comparable in meaning to Christian baptism as it came to be understood by the Catholic church, and later by the Protestant church. They more closely resemble naturalization to citizenship of a new country. The earliest Christians must certainly have interpreted the "breaking of bread" as comparable to the Jewish common meals of religious significance, such as the meals taken together on the Sabbath (called the Lord's supper), or the Passover Seder.

Gentile Christians soon came to think of these rites as having a supernatural effect. They were supposed to transform the believer invisibly, bringing about spiritual effects humanly impossible to accomplish through the identification of the believer with Christ. Membership in a sacramental church meant participation in a supernatural or divine-human life of grace, sharing in fact the divine-human life of Christ.

The center of this transformation of Jewish into Greek, or in fact pagan, ways of thinking was the new Greek doctrine of Christ, now thought of as fully divine. From the second century on, theologians became centrally interested in the relationship of Christ to God and preoccupied with questions about the divine nature. This is not a typically Jewish concern, since Jews regard the divine nature as beyond human comprehension, and suspect attempts to explain it as idolatrous.

Now the developing Gentile Christian myth presented a problem for monotheists. Many questions remained to be answered.

Answer for yourself: How could two persons be divine? Yet Gentile Christians were convinced that their redemption had been the work of no one less than God. It was now axiomatic to them that Christ was nothing less than divine. Indeed, it was his human nature, originally taken for granted, that now became problematic.

The model on which the theological solution was arrived at was Platonic and Stoic. The Greek philosophers of these schools had already though of a Logos, or creative Word, the pattern on which the whole universe had been created, its immanent rationality or logic. Since the New Testament had described Christ as the Word of God, it was not difficult to identify this Word with the Word or Logos already spoken of in Greek philosophy. Have you ever asked yourself if Jehovah (YHVH) wanted to share with the Jewish people a Platonic concept from Greek philosophy? Does not sound right does it? The author of the Fourth Gospel had already done so in his prologue. Would John, a Jew, familiar with Jewish religion, write a letter to Jewish believers and use Greek concepts let along continually say "which being interpreted mean" as if Jewish concepts would not be common knowledge to a Jewish audience? Thus the theologians came to teach that God had created the world through his Logos, Christ, and had then redeemed it through him also. The Word or Logos was divine, but in a derivative sense.

In the second century, we find the theologians of the Gentile church thinking of Christ primarily as the Word, or Logos, of God, and even as a "second God". The latter term was too risky and threatening to the monotheism to which the church intended to adhere, and it was soon abandoned. Eventually, though not until the fourth century, the complex theology of the Trinity, which also incorporated the Holy Spirit on the same level of divinity, was worked out. Such a Trinitarian ideas goes completely against Jesus and his declaration of the Greatest Commandment in Mark 12, where he states..."Hear of Israel, I Am the Lord God, I am One".

Eventually this transformed Gentile church became the state religion of the Roman Empire, dominating the world in which Jews had to live. Now there arose a remarkable synthesis between Graeco-Roman culture of classical antiquity and the beliefs of the Christian movement, already transformed by the impact upon them of Greek and pagan ways of thinking. The Catholic church of history, including its Eastern wing that later became the Orthodox church, was the bearer of the synthesis into the Middle Ages. This classical Christian civilization is in turn the basis of modern culture.

From the pagan world from which they had come, Gentile Christians had inherited many prejudices against the Jews, and these prejudices played in to the anti-Jewish reading of Paul to create a very anti-Jewish outlook in the Gentile church from early times. Christian antisemitism is not the same thing as pagan antisemitism, though they are often thought to be continuous with one another. The destructive energy of Christian antisemitism is inconceivable without the myth that the Jews killed Christ, a myth absent from pagan anti-Jewish calumnies, many of which were also leveled against the early Christians. Nevertheless, there was little or nothing in the form of Christianity that these Gentiles were receiving to rid them of their preconceived attitudes of hostility and contempt toward Jews, or to cause them to read Paul's writing otherwise than as confirmation and intensification of these existing attitudes.

Gentile Christianity saw itself as a new and superior religion, intended for Gentiles, and adapted to their situation. It is not surprising that very soon theologians were arguing that the Jewish Bible should be discarded, and no longer incorporated in the Christian Scriptures. Looking back, it is in fact astonishing that it was not discarded in the second century by Gentile Christianity. The reason it was not discarded was its grounding Judaism, which was necessary to give Christianity a pedigree deriving from an ancient past that people of that day thought a religion ought to have. And of course it was already basic to Christian faith that Jesus had been the Jewish Messiah and that he had died on the cross and thus become the Savior of the world as a result of the rejection and hostility of the Jewish people. Such ideas, un-Jewish as they are, would have been unintelligible without the Bible as their background.

Because Gentile, or Early Catholic, Christianity has had this immense influence on the culture in which we all live today, Jews, Christians, and secularists alike, it is hard to imagine other forms of early Christianity except in this image. Yet, other forms did exist, and at the turn of the first and second centuries they were formidable rivals to Gentile Christianity. In a following newsletter, we will look in depth at Jewish Christianity and Gnosticism, which vied with Gentile Christianity for authority in the Second century. One only has to look at the parallels between the Egyptian "Horus Story" and the later "Jesus Story" to come to see this enigma more clearly. Shalom!

DO YOU HAVE "THE FAITH OF JESUS" OR "FAITH IN JESUS"? #1

I remember it well. I had just finished my last final exam at Southwestern Theological Seminary in Ft. Worth, Texas. It was May, 1988 and I was "bewildered" at my 3 years of intense study where I obtained a Masters in Divinity. I had just spent 3 years of the most in-depth study imaginable of my Christian Faith and I had learned not one thing about the "Jewish Jesus" of my Bible. I had taken, for example Systematic Theology and learned in-depth the logical categorization of Biblical truths in my New Testament by tracing the various Christian "dogmas" and "doctrines" through the Christian Scriptures as a whole and then organizing them by doctrine. After 3 years I knew for certain what the good Baptist folks believed about the Bible. But nowhere in this "Christian Belief" did I find any mention of "Jesus the Jew" and what he believed "as a Jew" and I all the while knew certainly that Judaism does not accept the Christian revelation of the "Christian Jesus". For the life of me I could not understand "why" at that time in my life; it seemed so simple to me growing up reading my Bible. Devoid of any perspective of the "Jewish Jesus" after 3 years of intense study I recalled that prior to my entering Seminary that I read only one book entitled Understanding The Difficult Words of Jesus written by Roy Blizzard and David Bivin. I recalled how upset I became, page after page, as these Hebrew and Aramaic scholars showed me that so much of what I read and had heard preached from my New Testament was in error when the original Greek and Hebrew words and concepts were consulted and sought out and them compared to the "literal" and "historical" reading of the Bible in English. I was shocked beyond belief knowing that although I was reading my Bible in English that I did not have the "words" of this Jesus nor understood the original concepts that really laid behind what he taught and said let alone the many English words of my Bible. In fact it appeared to me after Seminary that I had a "Replacement Religion" since little if anything "Jewish" was mentioned or taught at all while I was there. Well, after 3 years in Seminary I was no further along in the pursuit of this "hidden Spiritual Truth" that is in this "mind of the Jewish Christ" because Seminary never addressed such things. I was only made a "better Baptist". But this "Jesus" is a Jew and not a Christian I kept telling myself and this only provoked my continued personal study for the answers to the questions that Seminary never provided. I recall setting there and talking to God on a park bench my last day at Seminary and this is what I said: "If Jesus were setting on my left, what does he believe that I have not been taught here; and if setting on my right, what does a Jew like Jesus not believe that I have been taught here"? I confessed to God that I simply did not know but made a promise to find out. I wanted the "mind of Christ" and a old book read with much passion 3 years earlier reminded me constantly that I did not have it! That was basically 20 years ago and God has been faithful to lead me to the answers of those questions that I posed to God on that Seminary park bench and He has done so without a doubt. That is one major reason why I no longer continue in my full-time Pastorate in my Dallas "mega" Church and why Bet Emet Ministries was birthed.

If you are reading this article and you are a typical Christian your experience most likely parallels mine. We both grew up being told, upon reading our Bibles "literally" and "historically", to have "Faith in Jesus"; that by "believing in Jesus" we obtain "Eternal Life" and possess right standing with God. Our security with God is obtained by by "believing" that Jesus Christ is both true God (the second Person of the Trinity) and true man (the Incarnate Son of God). Furthermore our "Salvation" and "Eternal Life" is likewise secured by "believing" the "literal" and "historical" great events surrounding Jesus Christ's life and ministry; that God sent His Son, born of a virgin, attested by miracles and by a sinless life, to bear the full penalty for humanity's sin. We are told that we are "saved" by "believing" that a physical and "literal" and "historical" Jesus Christ suffered and died in the place of sinners, thus satisfying the Father's just wrath against human sin, and effecting true reconciliation between God and mankind for those who have faith in these "redeeming deeds" and only "believe". We are told to "believe" in the physical scarifying death of Jesus on the cross which is the prophesied fulfillment of the atoning death of Christ-Messiah in which both God's love and God's justice are fully manifested and available to only those who "believe". We are told that the physical death of Jesus was an atoning death for those who "believe" in his death, burial, and glorious physical bodily resurrection from the death that culminated with his ascension into Heaven. We are told to "believe in Jesus" and his physical resurrection from the dead in which He conquered sin, death, and all the powers of Satan. We are told to "believe" that the physical resurrection of Jesus is God's historical affirmation and vindication of Jesus Christ's unique identity, mission, and message. We are told to "believe" that the righteousness of Jesus Christ in perfectly fulfilling the law of God is graciously credited to all who "believe" and have "faith in Jesus"; his identity and his works for mankind. It is "faith in Jesus" that obtains for the "believer" the imputed righteousness of Christ. Justification is strictly a work of God's grace, apprehended through "faith in Jesus" alone. We are told that redemption is solely a work of God's grace, received exclusively through "faith in Jesus Christ", and never by works of human merit. We are also told to "believe" that He will physically return in glory to resurrect and judge all mankind. Lastly we are taught to "believe" that "faith in Jesus Christ' is the only way of salvation and that there is no other way for mankind to "be saved" and "no man cometh to the Father" other than through "faith in Jesus. Let us sum it all up with this:

"For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God. (I Jn 5:13 13)

The above satisfactorily describes the normal "faith in Jesus" as taught generally by the vast majority of Christian Churches based upon a "literal" and "historical" reading and interpretation of the New Testament Scriptures. My focus now shifts to make the reader think thoughts that he has never possibly thought before; the real gift of a teacher. Let us concern ourselves now looking at Jesus while considering "the Faith of Jesus". Jesus, also known as Jesus of Nazareth, is the central figure of Christianity. He is commonly referred to as Jesus Christ, where "Christ" is a title derived from the Greek "christós", meaning the "Anointed One", which corresponds to the Hebrew-derived "Messiah". The name "Jesus" is an Anglicization of the Greek "Iesous", itself believed to be a transliteration of the Hebrew "Yehoshua" or Aramaic "Yeshua", meaning "YHWH is salvation".

It was after Seminary that I became interested in thinking about the differences between "faith in Jesus" and the "faith of Jesus". I was full of more questions than answers. I was staggered at the thought of how a community rooted in the life and teachings of a this Jesus of Nazareth, a Jew, who brought his message to other Jews (the disciples, those who heard him teach during his lifetime, the apostle Paul) developed into a community conspicuous for not living by Jewish law and indeed defined by its hostility to Judaism! This problem bears much thought by the "thinking believer" and "truth-seeker" as well as intense study to fathom the hidden answers to this question.

My life after Seminary and during my Pastorate years was consumed by scholarly reading trying to find acceptable answers to these troubling questions like the one posed above. I became acquainted with the best religious scholars, both Gentiles and Jews who have in the last two hundred years, written on the "Jesus Story". One of the most highly recognized scholars, E. P. Sanders of Duke University, is one of the leading contemporary scholars of ancient Judaism and Christian origins. He is well known for his work on what is known as "the quest for the historical Jesus." This "quest for the historical Jesus" is distinctly modern because it is based, as Sanders points out, on the thesis that not every statement or action the Gospels attributed to Jesus is attributed accurately. This leads to the further assumption that it is possible through exhaustive scholarly study to distinguish between what the man Jesus actually taught and did, and those teachings and actions incorrectly attributed to him by later writers.

Anti-Judaism enters the picture, however, when scholars apply their own values to judge a man who lived two thousand years ago. Since most "historical Jesus" scholars are Christian, they want a Jesus who is in line with their own values and beliefs, and often wind up concluding that what they find compatible and agreeable with their present Christian Faith represents the "true Jesus of history", while what they don't like is attributable to the "Jewish context" in which Jesus lived and taught. And that context, of course, was Palestinian Judaism in the late Second Temple Era. They would rather have "Faith in Jesus" than the "Faith of Jesus" which was Jewish; a Judaism I must remind the reader which all "non-Jews" could find a home, both in "conversion" as well as "non-conversion" as "Godfearers".

Scholars who try to distance Jesus Christ from Jewish historical context and in so doing many Christian writers portray the Jewish Christ as opposed to the Judaism of his time, or as an "anti-Jewish Jew." This distancing move then exposes the scholar to charges that he or she is himself or herself anti-Jewish. E. P. Sanders argues that not every accusation of "anti-Judaism" hurled at a particular scholar is necessarily correct. While a particular scholar may well be critical of aspects of Jesus' society, that does not always mean that he or she is anti-Jewish. He or she may simply be "anti-ancient," since the aspects of Jewish life that are often criticized (rituals, purity, apocalyptic eschatology) were common in the ancient world and by no means exclusively Jewish. At the same time, Sanders convincingly demonstrates that the Jesus Christ depicted in the New Testament was by no means opposed to the Jewish religion, though he may well have been critical of some of the Jewish leaders of his day.

Quietly these last twenty years or so there has been a revolution in Pauline studies. A "paradigm shift" has taken place in much of the scholarly world, a shift that stands the old view of Paul on its head. The new scholarship attempts to replace our picture of Paul as "the father of Christian anti-Judaism, the author of rejection-replacement theology, who claimed that God has rejected his people Israel and replaced them with a new people, the Christians." The dilemma that has bothered Paul's readers for centuries has up until recently been unsolvable but no more; given that Paul teaches that God has rejected the Jews and their religion, how do we account for a number of pro-Jewish passages in Paul's letters?

- For his insistence that God has not rejected his people (Rom. 11:1)?
- For his statement that "all Israel will be saved (Rom. 11:26-noting that Paul says 'will be saved' and not 'will come to recognize Christ')?"

Many of the seeming problems in Paul disappear when one strips away subsequent assumptions about what Paul "really" means and allows Paul's words to speak for themselves. Let us notice clearly that Paul is not speaking about Jews outside "the Jesus Christ-Messiah movement" at all. The argument is not about what Jews ought to do, but rather what Gentiles need to do: Should they adopt bits and pieces of Jewish observance in a haphazard and random way or in a more purpositive way? The "issue" for the "non-Jew" was never about "not" submitting to Jewish instruction and teaching about God, but rather as to "how much" of Judaism and its Biblical Revelation of God was to be imposed upon the "non-Jew" as "necessary" and which seemed at the same time "good to the Spirit of God".

Acts 15:19-21 19 Wherefore my (James) sentence is, that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles are turned to God: 20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood. 21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day. (KJV)

Here we find James, the leader of the Jerusalem "Messianic moment" and Jerusalem Messianic Synagogue/Church, declaring that the "non-Jews" and Gentiles follow the Divine instructions in the Torah and the Hebrew Scriptures pertaining to them that were written by Moses and the later Prophets. The reference to "in every city" encompasses the known world "outside" of Israel and involves Asia, Minor, and especially Antioch from which the later Gentile Churches would spread all over Asia, Minor and beyond. What is important to note at this most early time in history is that the injunction is sent with supreme authority from Jerusalem and the Mother Synagogue/Church headed by James as the "pattern" for all later Gentile evangelism and religious instruction. Due to the importance of Antioch as a major center in the ancient Roman Empire, many of the missionary efforts commanded by Jerusalem were launched from that city. In the early centuries of the Church's history, it was natural that the Church sojourning in Antioch would come to be traditionally regarded as one of the centers of world Christianity. It is also important at this time in our study to note that in Acts 11:23 the writer records that it was in that city that the disciples of the Jewish Christ were first called Christians; previous to this time period archeology and history records for us that the followers of the "Jewish Christ" were called "Chrestians" reflecting a more Metaphysical and Gnostic understanding of "the Christ"; not a "literal" and "historical" understanding as we have today. Note also again this further instruction for the "non-Jew":

Acts 15:28-30 28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us (the Jerusalem Messianic Synagogue/Church), to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; 29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well. 30 So when they were dismissed, they came to Antioch: and when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the epistle: (KJV)

It is not our purpose nor do we have time in this article to purse the hidden meanings under these 4 instructive headings for to do so would taken several in-depth articles; suffice to say that there is much more here than causally meets the eye upon cursory reading in English. As we get back on track with the purpose of this article please notice that "salvation" for the "non-Jew" came historically not having a "faith in Jesus" but rather to submitting to and observance of the Laws, Commandments, and Ordinance contained in the Hebrew Scriptures and the Jewish Torah which were contained in Biblical Judaism. The reader is strongly encourage to see that here, historically, we find the earliest example of Gentile evangelism and the message of the "Jewish Christ" as taken to the "non-Jews" of the world consisting of admonitions to observer those parts of the Jewish Scriptures that pertained to the "non-Jew"; more sussinctly said we find that the "non-Jews" of the world were instructed to follow those parts of the Jewish Faith pertaining to them and in so doing follow "the faith of Jesus"; not have a "faith in Jesus" as we have been so incorrectly told today by Rome's Bible which history again shows us is the "radical reinterpretation" and "addition" to the earlier Gnostic "First New Testament" of Marcion given the world some 30 years earlier.

Again, please notice there is not one instruction in any of the teachings from the Jerusalem Synagogue/Church for anyone to have "faith in Jesus"; that should strike the reader and "truth-seeker" as very problematic in light of how successive theology has been molded around this "Jewish Jesus" over the last 2,000 years by Rome and their creation of our "Second New Testament"; a collection of religions writings which under the exhaustive study of modern scholarship these last two hundred years has been shown to be highly unreliable and untrustworthy as to both doctrine and history. At the heart of this "literal" and "historical" unreliability of the New Testament, for instance, lies the problem of the numerous verbatim parallels found in the narrative about Jesus in the Gospels and Epistles of the New Testament when contrasted and compared to other parallels to ancient Mystery Religions since ancient Egypt on down through history until the emergence of the "Jesus Story" which is a composite "clone" and "synthesis" of all previous others. To approach these accounts of the New Testament Jesus with a "literal" and "historical" interpretation from prior Christian indoctrination while unaware of such parallels that exist between our "Jesus Story" and the other "Christ stories" of the ancient nations is one thing; but to approach this same "Jesus Story" with the same "literal" and "historical" interpretation once seeing these undeniable facts concerning the parallels and identical "stories", "events", and "sayings" that are shared between the New Testament Jesus and all the other "Krst/Christs" as taken from the ancient religions and Comparative Religious study is another. At first this might be alarming to say the least to the typical Christian but it need not be when you obtain the missing "keys" to properly understand and interpret the "Jesus Story" as it has been cherished and told from over 13,000 years before Rome's "radical reinterpretation" of it during the 2nd through the 5th century. We find upon study that our "Jesus Story" can be found repeated in the Spiritual allegories and Spiritual myths of Osiris, Horus, Dionysus, Attis, Orpheus, Hercules, Apollo, Greenman, Mithra, etc. This is a fact that the earliest of the Church Fathers always knew. Let me show you.

Eusebius, in his Church History, tells us that Justin, in his Dialogue with Trypho, says "there exists not a people, civilized or semi-civilized, who have not offered up prayers in the name of a crucified Savior to the Father and Creator of all things" (Hist. Eccl. lib i. ch. iv). Now let us listen to Augustine.

That which is known as the Christian religion existed among the ancients, and never did not exist; from the beginning of the human race until ...the true religion, which already existed began to be called Christianity. (Retractt. I, xiii,* cited by Dr. Alvin Boyd Kuhn in his Shadow of The Third Century , Elizabeth N.J.: Academy Press, 1949, p.3).

You should wonder what this "True Religion" actually consisted of given the fact that we inherited a "radical reinterpretation" of it at the hands of Rome during the 2nd through the 5th century, the same time for the writing and re-editing of their Second New Testament where the beautiful Mystical and Metaphysical Spiritual Allegories of the Descent of the Soul and Christ Mind into "matter" and the whole of humanity was tragically raped of its true meaning by Rome's antisemitism and repeated "literalization", "historicization" and limitation of the Christ to but one person of their own making; our Jesus of Nazareth as depicted in the New Testament as a "historical reality".

The reader must now take serious note of the fact that contained in the "sayings of this Jesus" and this "Jewish Christ" in our New Testament is the precious "Logia" and the "Wisdom Sayings of the Christ" cherished by Spiritualized humanity since the beginning of recorded time as far back as ancient Egypt and mankind's first every Bible; the Egyptian Book of the Dead. Every nation has had its "Christs" which expressed to humanity through each nation's culture and religion, century after century, the "Mind of God" to mankind concerning the incarnation of the Soul and its progressive Spiritual evolution and perfection. Judaism is no different here; it has its own "Christ" which spoke through Moses and the Prophets as did ever major world religion who heard God's voice through their Avatars. We find this same "Divine Message" to mankind concerning the Soul as far back as we go and in every major world religion without exception.

Such knowledge coupled with Judaism's denial of the New Testament Jesus not being their longed-for Messiah since the true and unadulterated, unforged, and uncorrupted Hebrew Scriptures have not been fulfilled, Scriptures not contained in our forged and purposefully mistranslated Roman Bibles, brings pause to the mind of the Christian as to what to do with our inherited "Jesus Story". It should be obvious now that "faith in Jesus" and Rome's theologies surrounding him are in great suspicion since possessing the knowledge mentioned in this article. This should give a "believer in Jesus" and "truth-seeker" all the more reason to look deeper at his "Jesus Story" than ever before; it did me. Only in this way when I committed myself to serious study to find the "keys" that unlock my "Jesus Story" did the answers finally come over the years. No longer could I have "faith in Jesus" as Rome had led me to believe was necessary for my salvation; it was clearer than ever that like the early Jerusalem Synagogue/Church that I needed to be a "follower" of the Jewish Christ and have "the faith of Jesus" as expressed through Judaism. Little did I know way back then that in my studies of Judaism that I would find the "motherload"; besides the steps for the Spiritual perfection of my Soul, I would find the unbroken links to the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of antiquity and see Biblical Judaism as the legacy of the great ancient Egyptian Religion that set the Spiritual Mark for mankind and yet does today!

But as simple as it sounds it is not; for we meet two different Pauls in the New Testament as our studies advance; a
"Romanized" Paul and the true Gnostic Paul. Discerning the differences between these two different Pauls and their conflicting theologies is possible only when the reader becomes familiar with and possess sufficient knowledge of Gnosticism, the ancient Egyptian Religion and Astro-theology as did the ancients who gave us these Scriptures in the first place. We make the fatal mistake over and over again in reading these thousands of years old Scriptures that the ancient wrote their Scriptures "literally"; they did not. Spiritual ideas were cloaked behind symbol, myth, allegory, ciphers, etc. Unless we approach our Bibles armed with these facts then we have no hope of ever interpreting them correctly and understanding their true message and bringing its relevance to our lives.

So we have settled one thing so far; we must be focused not so much as having "faith in Jesus" which we read so often in Rome's Second New Testament but having living in our lives the "faith of Jesus" or "the faith of the Jewish Christ" as expressed to the Gentile world as was done in the first century by the Jerusalem Synagogue/Church. It is important to note that true Paul is not arguing that Jews should not observe the Torah in the New Testament, he is not maintaining that the Torah and Laws of God are ineffective as a means of sanctification and salvation of the Soul; rather they are the manner for its Self-unfoldment into the "stature and fullness" of Christ. The true Paul is not saying that God has rejected the Jews; rather, the true Paul is arguing that God has now, through "the faith of Jesus", the Jewish Faith, which has always provided a seat for the "non-Jew" at God's table, provided a path to salvation for Gentiles without the requirement of "full conversion". Now, in spite of various sects of Judaism who saw otherwise, God has always grafted "into Israel" the "non-Jew" and joined him with the Jewish people in God's economy of salvation through faith in God and obedience to His Laws and Commandments. It is only in Biblical Judaism that the "non-Jew" finds his Covenants with God; not the replacement religion of Rome and their self-created Christian religion which is the anthesis of Biblical Judaism!

The prime elements of his message were: bullet a call for personal repentance and realignment of behavior which would lead to the creation of the Kingdom of God, a new social and religious order on earth. bullet a call to fully love God with all your resources. bullet a call to love your neighbors, including your enemies, and to take no aggressive acts against those that oppress you. bullet a new interpretation of Jewish law which gave priority to one's responsibility to God and to one's fellow man, while downgrading the relative importance of ritual and ceremony.

Many Christians suffer from what I call "double vision" when they behold the Jesus of our New Testament. When he is referred to as "Jesus," they can vaguely envision him as a Jew who practiced Judaism all the days of his life and who never intended to start a "new religion". We see this clearly in the New Testament where this Jesus confirms his commitment to God's Laws and Torah:

Matt 5:17-19 17 Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. 18 For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. 19 Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven. (KJV)

We read the words "fulfill" and immediately think of "fulfilled prophecy" but the word carried a completely different meaning in the Greek. The word in Greek is "pleroo" and one of its meanings is "to preach". If we read the text again this Jewish Christ tells us that he has not come to "destroy" the Law but to "preach it". Roy Blizzard, the Hebrew Scholar at the University of Texas, in Austin, Texas, who wrote that amazing little book entitled "Understanding the Difficult Words of Jesus" showed me that one of the meanings of the word "fulfilled", when taken back beyond the Greek into the Hebrew culture means "to interpret correctly". Therefore the task of the "Jewish Christ" was to "interpret the Laws and Torah of God correctly; this was his mission and message". Amazing! I never heard that ever taught in my Christian Church who prides itself at "not being under the Law" and that "Christ is the end of the Law" as read in the English of my Bible. Again, not looking beyond the English words of our Christian Bibles so of ten throws us a curve and we strike-out never gleaning the true meaning of the words and the message before us! The word "end" in the Greek as used in this verse what states "Christ is the end of the Law" is "telos" which means "the eternal aim or purpose"; not "the cessation" as in "ended" which we most like would think only reading this passage in the English. Again we miss the mark of proper interpretation of what we read; this Jewish Christ teaches us that Christlikeness is the "eternal aim and purpose of the Law" since the Torah has always been understood at the "teacher of the Soul" in Judaism. But as we all know Christianity prides itself at not being under this eternal aim and purpose of God which is found in obeying God's Torah and Laws. I could go on but now you know why I asked those questions having seen enough "Swiss cheese Christian theology" in Seminary which is "full of holes" because a "thinking believer" cannot help see such irregularities and contradictions not only in these Christian texts and history when he studies but has the desire to want the Truth at all costs. I wanted the truth and realized that as much as I loved being in Seminary for those 3 yeas that I did not have it when I left there for the last time. My promise to God that last day was that I was going to find it!

I you take a second you should notice that Christians almost never call Jesus by his Hebrew name "Yeshua", or "Jesus of Nazareth," or "the Nazarene," the way Jews do. They almost always refer to him as "our Lord Jesus" or as "Jesus Christ". I hope you are seated because although I did not know it back then in 1988, my later studies into the ancient Egyptian Religion will find the equivalent name for "Jesus Christ" carved in ancient Egyptian stone as seen in the Egyptian hieroglyphics as far back as thousands of years before the time of the New Testament. A "thinking believer", finding just this one piece of evidence which easily can be found when doing serious study into the "Jewish Roots" of Christianity surely is not naive enough to believer that this ancient Egyptian expression is prophetic of a Jewish Rabbi some 5,000 years later or more. At the very heart of such evidence lies the crucial question of the "literal" and "historical" interpretation of "Jesus Christ" as we have come to know it and receive in through the hands of Rome. This "Jesus Christ" certainly meant something to the ancient Egyptian but not what it has come to mean to us today when we think of "Jesus Christ" as limited to the first century; we have so "lost much in the translation" over the numerous centuries because the concept of the "Krst/Christ" has been so altered and adulterated by men with religious agendas down through history. We have to wait until our studies advance quite a bit to find these types of answers to such questions because our focus here is only contrasting the "faith of Jesus" as expressed through Biblical Judaism against the Christian idea of "faith in Jesus" which is expressed through the Christian Faith. Jesus, as depicted in the New Testament, may have been Jewish, but by deifying of Jesus in "non-Jewish" terms Christians have in essence this "Jewish Christ-Messiah" out of his strictly Jewish context and distorted the real truths, teachings, and message of this "Jewish Christ" or, better said, the "Jewish Messiah". Let us not forget that the Hebrew equivalent to the Greek "Christ" is the term "Messiah".

A related Christian problem is the inability to see "Jesus the Jew" and his message without also seeing him as the "Divine Christ" the Jews had "rejected" and yet today "reject" some 2,000 years later. This begins with the earliest documents of the Christian Church and its sacred "Scripture," the New Testament but actually has its roots all the way back in the Essene's "reinterpretation" of the promised Messiah to the Jews as found in such Old Testament Scriptures like then ones found in the book of Daniel and elsewhere. It is in these texts where we find the promised human Messiah altered by these Essenes through erroneous and creative interpretation into a supposed coming Super-Messiah and "literal Godman". This was done in Alexandria, Egypt, with the Essene's translation of the Hebrew Prophets into Greek. Let is be said the Rabbis of Jerusalem only translated the first 5 books of the Torah when asked to by the custodian of the great Alexandria Library, but the rest of the Hebrew Scriptures and their translation into Greek were done at the hands of the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt, who were most familiar with the Osiris Myth, the "original allegorical Godman". To compound the issue, modern scholarship has maintained for over two hundred years that none of these New Testament Scriptural writers were contemporaries of this Jesus in the time period given for his life. You might find that hard to believe but it can proven that the majority of the New Testament documents came from "non-Jewish" hands and not from Jewish writers, let alone the supposed apostles. So much for "inspiration of Apostolic authority."

Things like this, when known, are very problematic for us when we look at the New Testament and try to discern the truth about the "Jesus Christ". Given the anti-Semitism of the era in which the New Testament was written one should approach the New Testament with a heavy dose of skepticism a much which is said in it carries a heavy emphasis of anti-Semitism and anti-Judaism in the texts we read. It truly is an amazing thing to find "anti-Semitic" Jews who are touted to be the supposed writers of such New Testament documents. As with the Old Testament, we just don't know who wrote most of the New Testament but countless errors as seen in geography, historical accuracy, and the depiction of the Jewish Faith along with glaring errors concerning the Temple and its working are a wake-up call to the reader of the New Testament that someone other than a Jew is writing these documents; a person totally unaware and unfamiliar with the Jewish culture and religion. These abundant mistakes are of such an nature quite often than we would not expect a five year old Jewish child could be capable of making such glaring errors. Here we are introduced to our first indications that someone other than a Jew is writing these texts about a "Jewish Jesus". Basically what we find is that we have a "Gentile perspective" of Judaism and this "Jewish Jesus" given us in our New Testaments and we never know it. But without such competent knowledge in Judaism and Biblical history then these things escape the casual Christian reader and they pass unnoticed. Church tradition has assigned these writings, take the Gospels and most of the Epistles for example, to certain authors, all of whom were supposedly important figures in Jesus' life or the early days of the faith. What we fail to take not of when looking at the possible identities of these writers is that what is later written in taken from "oral tradition" only. It was important for the emerging Gentile Church to believe these designated Jewish associates of Jesus and other Jewish authors wrote the works which will be attributed to them, since their eminence and supposed closeness to Jesus lent the writings a supreme authority. That is what is so deceptive; we approach these New Testament writings with the mistaken idea that the writers are Jewish and therefore by default all that is expressed in them is the typical expression of the Jewish Faith; but serious study will show you that the New Testament is anti-Jewish propaganda at best and is so in many "key" theological places which are cleverly crafted to lead the reader to look to Rome and not Jerusalem for Spiritual nourishment and direction for his Soul. But since we don't have the original signatures, none can be verified except through internal textual clues. The first generation of Christians who accepted the "Jesus Story", like they who before them who had the similar story as seen in the Spiritual allegories of Osiris and Mithra, didn't see any need for a permanent written record of the sayings and stories of this "Christ Jesus" as expressed in their own culture and religion. Oral tradition had served them well. To the writers of the New Testament Jesus' return and the restoration of the Kingdom of God on Earth were believed imminent as originally taught in the "oral tradition" so no great need was shown to preserving stories if the world was about to end. Stories were simply passed along orally, primarily as a means of preaching and convincing outsiders who were already aware of the soon coming of the Age of Pisces which was to replace the Age of Aries. The "end of the Age", or the "end of the world" as incorrectly translated in the Gospel of Mattew, was upon the world in that day and time. Again, unknown to most Christians, with each changing of the Age in symphony with the Precession of the Equinoxes, there was always a "reinterpretation" of the symbols surrounding God's "Krst/Christ". We find this in every nation as far back as we can go in the study of archeology, astronomy, and Comparative Religion. But as the first generation began to die off and hopes for the "literal" and "historical" Second Coming of "the Christ" dimmed with the arrival of the Age of Pisces, there was a need to preserve the words and teachings of this "Jewish Christ-Messiah" as expressed through the Jewish Faith as well as his deeds for later posterity. Quite a few collections of stories about the "Jewish Christ-Messiah" circulated in the early Church, among them The Gospel of Thomas, The Gospel of Mary, and the Secret Book of John. Some of these gave very different and in some cases conflicting accounts of the gospels to which we are most familiar today and, most importantly, of Jesus' alleged "resurrection". Due to the oral traditions and their diverseness in different geographical localities some came over time to argue for the "physical resurrection" of "the Christ", with the mantle of leadership falling on those who had experienced it firsthand: the supposed apostles and followers of "the Christ-Messiah" of Judaism. Others, and the majority early on who called themselves "Chrestians", not to be confused with the later "Christians" of Rome's invention, said the resurrection of "the Christ" had always been and will always be a Spiritual and Metaphysical event that was termed by the ancients "being Born Again". In fact the Age of Pisces, the "two fish", revealed to man that he is to have "two births"; one natural in "water" and one by "Spirit". In the Zodiac if we look at the sign of the two fish in Pisces and gaze 6 signs away or "across" from it we find the alternate sign of the Virgin, Virgo, symbolic of the "first birth" in "water" which is to be followed by a second "Spiritual birth of man" into a higher Spiritual Consciousness symbolized by the two fish of Pisces. This birth in "Pisces" was the birth "of the Christ" in humanity to which all mankind was shown by the Creator above their heads in God's Bible in the Heavens and Sky. We see this Divine Concept of the "birth of Christ" in mankind symbolized not only in the Heavens and Sky but in the Gnostic Paul's admonition to all:

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

Notice if you will this "resurrection from the dead" was something to be experienced while one was yet alive in his body; this is the true "Born Again" and the "birth of the Divine Christ Mind" in humanity and the Spiritual experience of which we read that is so tragically misunderstood and interpreted by Christianity the last 1,800 years. Central to the ancient Spiritual Wisdom is the concept of the Divine Spark or seed buried within each person. It was the purpose of the ancient mysteries to bring to life this Divine Spark so that it would illuminate life on this earth. This Divine Spark was symbolized by various figures at different times and in different places. Their names were Horus, Orpheus, Dionysus, Mithra, Krishna, Adonis, Tammuz, Hercules and lastly Jesus. They were all "pagan" Christs. The philosophers of the ancient world knew that these figures were symbolic for mankind's Divine Nature which is "awakened" from a pure animal-like existence, and not historical men. Over time as the Gnostic Chrestians, both Jewish and Gentile, fell into the minority with the rise of Roman "literalism" of the ancient Spiritual Mysteries and the Gnostic understanding of the Gnostic Paul's "Born Again" resurrection from the "Spiritually Dead while one yet lives" was termed a "heresy" by Rome and persecuted to the ends of the Earth. We must understand why; such a powerful Spiritual dogma which, if understood correctly as the ancient Spiritual Wisdom had always taught, would have led humanity away from the doors of the emerging Gentile Roman Church and their "literalism" and "limitation of the Christ to but one person whose only access again was through the doors of the Roman Church and their Sacraments, into the Synagogues of Judaism found throughout the known world and Asia, Minor. Understand it is in Biblical Judaism and God's Torah that we find the path for self-perfection of the Soul of humanity through obedience and training of the Soul in the Torah which "recreates" the Soul of mankind into the "fullness and stature" of "the Christ"; this again is the "Second Birth" modeled for the whole of humanity in the Constellation Pisces. It was a new Age, it was the time for the fulfillment of the Prophet Isaiah when he said of Israel in Isa. 42:6:

6 I the LORD have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a blight of the Gentiles;

It is through Biblical Judaism, the legacy of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of the ancients, as found in ancient Egypt, that these higher Spiritual Truths, teachings, and message that elevates the incarnated Soul of mankind are to be found; not in the later "Replacement Religion" of Rome and their limitation of it to but one person through their false "literalization" and "historicization" of it. As Elaine Pagels points out in The Gnostic Gospel, this personation of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and its interpretation, an interpretation that was 180 degrees different when contrasted between Biblical Judaism and the later Roman Christian interpretation of it, was no trivial matter. The decision on which interpretation was "correct" was central to the future of the emerging Gentile Roman Church.

Irenaeus, the bishop of Lyons in 180 AD, decided that the validity of any work had to be judged by whether it was "apostolic." In other words, Rome had to make their "reinterpretation" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom appear to carry the authority of the "Jewish Christ-Messiah". Thus, their "radical reinterpretation" of both the Spiritual Dogmas as found in Biblical Judaism as well as the ancient Spiritual Wisdom that preceded it, had to carry Jewish "authority" and it was found in attaching to this Roman "radical reinterpretation" and "literalization" and "historicization" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom the supposed Jewish names of followers and Apostles . Thus names of supposed Jewish apostles were attached to the 4 Gospels in the presentation of Irenaeus' "Second" New Testament which was basically a re-working of and "literalization" and "historicization" of the prior Gnostic New Testament given the world by Marcion in 150 A.D. But, as Elaine Pagels goes on to say, regardless of whether the names given to the Gospels are those of the actual authors or merely reflect a claim to apostolic authority, "we know virtually nothing about the persons who wrote the Gospels."

The writers of these New Testament documents neither witnessed the events they described nor did they personally hear a historical Jesus say the words they quoted. The fact alone again tells us that they were basically written from circulating oral traditions and circulated teachings of "the Christ" which had been handed down for thousands of years. These "sayings of the Krst/Christ", which is called the "Logia", were synthesized and harmonized for unity by "non-Jewish" hands. Christians are not aware that this "logia" and "sayings of the Krst/Christ" can be traced almost vertabim as far back as Horus in ancient Egypt because all the "pagan Christ" so often "said the same things" and "taught the same things" to the Souls of mankind. That is why our "literal" and "historical" account of our "Jesus Story" can be found repeated verbatum since the beginning of recorded time. The identity of these "Pagan Christ" are not important; but their message to the Souls of mankind is of utmost importance for the incarnated Souls passing through is present physical existence; a message that is yet preserved in Biblical Judaism but devoid in our contemporary Chritiantiy today. Gerald Massey, in Gerald Massey's Lectures, states on page 49: "It is the commonly accepted orthodox belief that Christianity originated with the life, miracles, sayings, and teachings; the birth, death, resurrection, and ascension of an historic Jesus the Christ at the commencement of our era, called Christian; whereas, the origins were manifold, but mostly concealed. It is impossible to determine anything fundamental by an appeal to the documents which, alone out of a hundred Gospels, were made Canonical. And when Eusebius recorded his memorable boast that he had virtually made "all square" for the Christians, it was an ominous announcement of what had been done to keep out of sight the mythical and mystical rootage of historic Christianity". These two words,"mythical" and "mystical", are the "keys" that opens Truth for the Christian Church and their received tradition concering our "Jesus Christ". In summary, we know from history that the story of "the Christ", which we find today under different names and in different nations down through recorded time, had been told as early as ancient Egypt and was repeated orally down through history from nation to nation. Each nation had their "Christ Story". Those who taught and preached it relied on their memories. Their eagerness to exalt "the Krst/Christ", their strong convictions, and their reliance upon their memory cause them to exaggeate and embellish the story down through time. They passed their exaggerations and embellishments to others, who kept repeating them. (Andrew D. Benson, The True Origins of Christianity and the Bible, Prudential Publishing House, 1997, p. 253). Over time, these "mythical" and "mystical" understandings of "the Krst/Christ", cherished by the ancients, was debased in the days of Rome and their anti-Judaic "reinterpreation" of the "indwelling Christ" and applied to this ancient Spiritual Wisdom at the point of a sword was an unmoveable "literal" and "historical" interpreation of this "same story" and we have likewise been conditioned to approch this same "Christ Story" in our Bibles today with the same mistaken hermeneutic.

These "Divine allegories" of the "Krst/Christ/Messiah" in mankind come from the Spiritual allegoires of ancinet Egypt and the core of their "personified Sun-worship" and "astral-worsip". However unlike the ancient nations this Divine concept of the "Descent of the Soul and Krst/Christ/Messiah" which was always undertood to be Spiritual allegory of mankind's true Nature was "literalized" under the influences of the Essenes first during the inter-Testament period and later further "literalized" and "historized" under the later influence of Rome. It is important to note that the Gospel of John is Gnostic to its core and something else is totally meant in the Gospel of John than a "literal" and "historical" understanding of "the Christ" that is not portrayed in the other Synoptic Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke. Lost in all of this "literalization" and "historiczation" of the Jewish Christ is the teachings of the ancient Wisdom Religions and ancient Divine Spiritual Wisdom that comes from the mind of the "Jewish Christ". The discovery of the Mystic Christ in you is truly being "Born from Above". This knowledge is of the utmost importance to human vicotry over the lower self. It was said: "Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born, If He be not born in thee thy Soul is still forlorn" (William Kingsland, Anthology of Mystical And Mystical Philosphy, Kessenger Publications, p.45).

Moving on, the distinguised scholar E. P. Sanders says it's fairly clear Paul was unaware of the four Gospels, and the authors of the Gospels didn't know of Paul's letters. Thus this late writing of and selection of 4 Gospels, the first quote from any of them found no earlier from a Gospel which is called by "name" than around 200 A.D. in any Church Father's writings, is very telling and attests to their very late writing no matter what "Church tradition" maintains and would have you believe. This late date removes any possiblity of eyewitness testimony of a historical "Jesus Christ" let alone apostolic authorship. Besides the delay in writing the story down, the autographs are missing. There are no autographhs of any New Testament book. According to the Greek New Testament, the earliest New Testament manuscript is one small fragment (Papyrus 52, a fragment of manuscript 2 1/2 by 3 1/2 inches, which contains John 17:37-38 which was found in Egypt). The next earliest fragment dates from sometime in the 2nd century and then we have 4 manuscripts from around 200 A.D. and two others from around the last 2nd or early 3rd century. This late dating for these writings not only betrays the identiy of the authors of the New Testament as "non-Apostolic" and exposes such writers as not "eyewitnesses" but also explains why so much anit-Jewish propaganda is put into the mouth of both the "Romanized Paul" as well as even Jesus in the New Testament when any Jew knows that Judaism never taught nor believed much that comes from the mouth of this depiction of this "Romanized corpus" let alone some of the sayings from the mouth of this Jesus. The Four Gospels which have traditionally been regarded as the very oldest of the writings, are now almost universally understood by scholars to have actually been written long after the time of Paul, or several generations after the time given for Jesus's death and by "non-Jews" no less! In fact no quote for a "gospel" can be found in any Christian writers' legacy until 200 A.D.! This is food for great concern! Had these Gospels existed earlier and not only oral traditions and the "Logia" and "Sayings" of "the Christ" from antiquity then we surely should have expected to find their reference in the writngs of early Church Fathers but we don't! Devoid from all these early prolific writings by Gentiles are any reference to the Gospels "by name". We should surely have expected their refernce by the early Apologist Justin Martyr and other earlier Christian writers like Ignatius but again find none; all testify that it is "oral traditions" that are referenced by the eaerliest Christian writers and not written Gospels.

Although the Gospels sound as if they are contemporary eyewitness accounts, the 7 authentic Epistles of Paul were actually written closer to the time given for this Jesus than were the Gospels. First of all, I should say that none of the four canonical Gospels names its own author, none of them claim to be eywitness accounts or even to have spoken to eyewitness of Jesus. All are written in the third person and none of the authors tell us anything about themselves. All of the traditional ascriptions of authorship come from basically 2nd century traditions. As stated, this explains partly why we find anti-Judiac and anti-Semitic characterizations of Biblical Judaism and other such treatments throughout the Gospels. It can be summed us thusly; the Gospels were written and selected for anti-Jewish and anti-Judaic persuasion when presented to the Gentile readers of Asia, Minor. The Gospels were not written as biographies of Jesus and they tell us practially nothing about whom this Jesus was and what he did before proclaimed as the Jewish Messiah (ibid). The aim of the Gospel writers was not an objective complete historical report but selective accounts whose purpose was to support and justify Rome's claims about their "re-interpretation" of the "Christ Story" both "literally" and "historically". They were written to motivate and persuade the readers: "But these things are written, that you might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God" (John 20:31 KJV). Here we see clearly that the writer of the Gospel of John writes propaganda, not history (ibid).

Even more problematic, as Oxford scholar Geza Vermes has clearly demonstrated, is the fact that in his lifetime, Jesus himself was most vague and evasive whenever asked whether he was indeed the Jewish Messiah. It was only after his death, in the post-Easter Church, that first our "Romanized Paul", and then much later the writers of the Gospels publicly proclaimed Jesus as the Jewish Messiah, and then developed their emerging new religion on the basis of their own perceptions of Jesus from oral traditions which can easily be shown to have more in common with personified Sun-worship and ancient Mystery Religions and their "Saviors/Christs" of the Gentile nations than Biblical Judaism. Understand that we have in our "Jesus Story" the ancient Spiritual Wisdom found not only in the teachings of the Gnostic Paul but in the teachings of the "Jewish Christ" as well. Problematic for us at first is the parallels to the anicnet's personified Sun-Gods and Goddesses but once we understand that they never viewed them as "literal" or "historica" but only as "personifications" of Spiritual Concepts then our probles vanish into thin air. Both the "mythical" and "mystical" incarnating "Krst/Christ" was always imaged by the ancients as personifications of the Descent of the Universal and Divine Mind into humanity's material incarnation. This was always the Divine Spiritual Truth behind the ancient Spiritual Myths and our "Jesus Story" is, when finally undertood and interpreted correctly "allegorically" and "Spiritually", no different. Important for us to learn is that the Divine Truth that can be found in the New Testament comes more from the "red" than the "black" of our Bibles; the only exception is when one become knowledgeable enought to discern the ancient Spiritual Wisdom concerning the Soul in the "black" of our Bible from the later Roman forgery and "reinterpreation" of it which cleerly lies in the "black" of our Bibles as well. Once your study comes to such a degree that you can spot true Biblical Judaism from the false presentation of it when reading your Bible, then you are coming very close to discerning as well the legacy of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom from Rome's later "radical reinterpretation" of it.

This skills, when mastered, are very problematic to the "literal" and "historical" understanding and interpreation of our "Jesus Story". When you possess enought knowledge of Comparative Religions and Gnosticism you begin to see the repetition of our "Jesus Story" over and over again down through thousands of years of human history beginning as far back as from ancient Egypt onward and then you see it the "world-over". Never was this "same Christ Story" ever to be understood by either the "tellers" or "recipients" as a "historical" or "literal" reality; it was purely Metaphysical relating to the indwelling Nature of man. Completely lost in this post-Easter understanding of the "Jewish Christ-Messiah" is his human birth and lineage as tied to a human being; namely, King David and in its place we find the emphasis linking him with being God Himself! Understand that when properly interpreted these parallels with the ancient's personified Sun-worship, gods and goddesses as found in the ancient Mystery Religons, is not a bad thing at all; it fact when the Gospels are examined and interpreted using the "keys" of allegorical and mystical interpretation as were used in interpreting the ancinet Divine Mysteries and Mysery Religions which all recount over and over the same "Jesus Story" from nation to nation for thousands and thousands of years, then we have no problem at all since both describe the Metaphysical Descent of the Soul and Krst/Christ and its Spiritual evolution and progressive perfection within an incarnated humanity. The "Christ story" has always been centered on the progressive Spiritual maturation of the Soul in Earthly experience. Key to this "understanding" is the "message of the indwelling Christ" fashioned in such a way to lead the evolving Soul of mankind to self-perfection by being trained to obey the Laws of God and His Cosmos. God's Troah is first written in the Heavens and Sky before it was written in the ancient Egyptian Religion and later in Judaism. The "message" of God and His Laws are paramount to one's self-perfection and obtainment to the "fullness and stature" of "the Christ"; a Christ who is known "within" and not "without".

It is only when we rigidly hold to a dogmatic "literal" and "historical" interpretation whereby this "Christ" is "limited" to but one person do we run into trouble with our interpretative analysis of the Gospels and our "Jesus Story". Such an approach to Scripture absolutely robs us of our True Being and Nature and incarnational purpose. Again, when understood properly, the "literal" and "historical" understanding and approach to our New Testament might be severely problematic in many places but the "historical" understanding of many of the teachings of this New Testament Jesus reflect path for the Soul's perfection which we find in the "Jewish Religion" verbatium; it is when we find put into the mouth of this Jewish Jesus and this "Romanized Paul" anti-Semitic and anti-Judaic teachings that we have irreconcileable historical problems since the whole of the New Testament reports itself as being the Divine Revelation of God through the Israel and the Jewish Religion. Anti-Judaic theology and anti-Semitism has no place in such a supposed "Divine Revelation" imparted to Israel for the Gentile world of its day. That being so then when we find "anti-Judaism" and "anti-Semitism" in the New Testament then the "thinking believer" has found examples of Textual forgery bolstering Roman Orthodoxy at the expense of the Divine Truths contained within the Jewish Faith. This simply was not the historical case owning to the fact that the Divine "Jewish Christ" expressed the Mind of God through the Jewish Culture, Moses, and the Prophets and the entirety of the Jewish Religion; itself called a "light unto the Gentiles" by Isaiah the Prophet. Let us read it again:

Isa 42:6 6 I the LORD have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles; (KJV)

Let us concede for a moment that all of these records were not mere "hindsight" or a rewriting of Jewish religious history as a later generation of Gentile Christians saw it, but were based upon authentic oral traditions which remained faithful to the truth of past events, or of older teachings. Regardless of when or by whom they were written, what forcibly confronts a careful student of the Bible is the fact that both of them fail to deal fully with the "Jewish Christ", the model for humanity. Paul tells us very little about the life of Jesus as a human being, and so he is hardly a good source in trying to uncover the Jewishisness of Jesus. From Paul we find only two references to what Jesus taught and both are "one" liners. From Paul we know only that the Christ was crucified; that, as Paul believed, he was resurrected; that Jesus had a brother named James; and that Jesus taught that divorce was prohibited. It may be a little premature but the "crucifixion" of "the Christ and Divine Mind" of the Creator had always been taught by the ancient Spiritual Mystery Relgions as but a symbol for the "incarnation" of God as Divine Mind into "matter" and "material incarnation" as seen in humanity. This "incarnation" of the Divine into "matter" was termed a "death of God" allegorically by the ancient Spiritual Wisdom. This brings a whole new meaning to "crucifixion" as we saw likewise in the term "born again"; terms again which were later borrowed by emerging Gentile Christianity and "reinterpreted" for theological agendas that promoted the Roman Church. This "crucifixion" of Divne Mind as "the Christ" before the foundation of the world was taught in the ancient Widsom as the passing of Divine Mind in its "fall into matter" as the passing through various planes of existecne; all of which involved the "crossing" or "cross-ing" of planes of "Spiritual" and "material" existences. Thus we see that the true Paul who only mentions but two teachings of "the Christ" is Gnostic to the core; we must wait for Rome's "radical reinterpreation" of the true Gnostic Paul and his 7 authentic Epistles to find the historical references to Jesus' human historical existence which is also expressed in the two conflicting geanologies which were later added to the Roman New Testament sometime around 180 A.D. As a basic architect of this new theology or as the later "Romanized Paul" became, this "Romanized Paul", not the Gnostic Paul, has become the real founder of Christianity which so opposes Judaism and the ancinet Spiritual Wisdom contained in it yet even to this day!

A careful search of the Four Gospels reveals how difficult it is to separate the human Jesus from the Divine Christ, even when studying these Christian sources which proclaim to be eye-witness accounts of his life, which they are not. If one reads only the Synoptic Gospels one comes away with a human "messiah" of Judaism and that is what Judaism has always taught. You need to take note of this very important statement. The true Messiah of the Hebrew Scriptures was never to be a "Superman" as he has become with Church tradition and Rome's "radical reinterpreation" of the Jewish Messiah. But if one reads the Gospel of John you see the Essene's godman concept that began as "Spiritual allegory" with the Prophets but under Essene influence was later "literalized" and was changed into a "literal expectation of a coming super-Messiah" to counter the threat of Gentile persecutions; especially the awseome power of Rome's legions. The invincible power of Rome, greater than any nation before them, surely needed a Super-Savior to be adequate to vanquish them. Thus the need to build the hope of the people by "reinterpreting" Scriptures that origially applied to a "human deliverer" but under "reinterpretation" became a "Super-Savior".

It is way past time that we look at and recover as much of this Divine Truth as possible.

Of course other Gentile nations will fall prey to these later "literalized" and "historicized" ideas concerning the "literalized" and "historical" Jewish Messiah which will later be taught by Rome but understand that the New Testament presents two completely different views of this Jesus. Unless I knew better I would think that he had two personalities and needed psychoterapeutic drugs. Two of these Gospels, Mark and John, do not even discuss or describe his human birth or boyhood. Instead, they present us with a mature Jesus from the "get go". This, by the way, is the way that the Gnostic New Testament first described the "descending Christ" into humanity as the Bishop of the pervioulsy descended Soul into "matter". Despite many differences and contradictions among the Four Gospels concerning certain events in Jesus' life, all of them have one overriding interest in common: the events of his final week on Earth, which center on his impending death, yet these again are full of contradictions. This is problematic to the "thinking believer" that men, full of the Holy Spirit, cannot relate Divine Truth under the "anointing of God". Concerning these events, there is some confusion: the trial and crucifixion, in John, take place on the day prior to Passover; in the other three Gospels, these events occur on the first day of Passover. The resurrected Jesus, in Matthew, appears in Galilee; Luke identifies the location somewhere else altogether in Emmaus, near Jerusalem. Mark does not contain an account of the reappearance of the resurrected Jesus at all. Such discrepancies are so numerous in the New Testament and conflicts among the passages abound to the discriminating reader; we will look at individual examples when we get to the website of forged Scriptures. These discrepancies and problems are so vast that no one article could begin to touch them but you need to be advised that they exist and do so abundantly.

Answer for yourself: What does this say for our cherished doctrines of inerrancy and infallibility, let alone the "literal" approach to interpreting our "Jesus Story"? What do all of these contradictions say for the authority for such documents as we have taught to interpret them as building blocks for one's life as we travel the road to eternity? What does such discrpencies say for our understaning of our New Testament Jesus, his identity, his nature, his true Being? What do these host of irregularies say for a "literal" or "historical" approach to the "Jesus Story"? What again does it say for the "teachings and sayings of the Jewish Christ"? Are they by any chance repeated in Biblical Judaism long before the time for this Jesus of Nazareth? Finding them, then how much more important are they since coorborated by earlier teachings in Biblical Judasim as the way for the Spiritual maturation of the Souls of mankind? Could it be that, especially in light that our "Jesus Story" can be found repeated verbatium over and over in the ancient Divinie Spiritual Wisdom of the ancinet, that another interpreation as to the "identity" and "nature of the Jewish Christ" is warranted and needed other than that imposed upon the same story as taught by the ancinets by Rome; namely a different apporach to its proper understanding than the normal "literal" and "historical" approach which we have been given? You will have to answer that for yourself but there are answers for these difficulties to which we look next.

THE DEJUDIAZING OF THE JEWISH CHRIST-MESSIAH IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

Infinitely more significant than these textual irregularities and inconsistencies is the fact that not only later generations of Christian theologians but the New Testament writers themselves seem much less interested in the Jewish ordinances, traditions, message and of Jesus than they are in explaining why they regard him as their "literal" and "historical" supernatural Messiah. They seem to forget that Israel and the Jews are the hope and light for the nations; even themselves. There is good historical reason for this. At first, these documents are made to look as if the writers, presumably Jewish, were addressing only their own fellow Jews, urging them to accept Jesus as the foretold Jewish Messiah. In putting Jesus forth in this manner to their own people, it was of little importance to convince them that he was actually one of them; that was taken for granted. When one begins a critical study of these documents, however, the internal evidences alone in each of the 4 Gospels betrays non-Jewish authorship because errors and mistakes are common which any 5 year old Jewish child would not make let alone the Holy Spirit if He were behind such writings. Again, this is something quite disturbing when you see these things!

The Jewish people were already aware that the message of the "Jewish Christ" was basically the same Spiritual message ennumerated by the many prophets which had provoked Israel to Godliness: God, Torah, repentance, and Israel. The "Jewish Christ" was bringing the warning that the coming of the Kingdom of God was near along with judgment to those who will not repent. Jesus knew what the Christian Church today does not; namely, the Kingdom of Heaven would not come nor Israel's Messiah and King be revealed unless Israel merited the Kingdom of God as God's Royal Priesthood for the world. The spiritual climate of Israel was such that they would miss their visitation and the Messiah would not be revealed "literally" and "historically" and the true Hebrew Scriptures and prophecies not fulfilled which are found in the Jewish Tanakh and not the later forged translations of them in the Greek OldTestament and later English translations of both the Old and New Testaments of our Christian Bibles. The "Jewish Christ" taught nothing new to the Jewish people which cannot be found either in the Tanakh or Mystical Judaism.

THE FALSIFICATION OF THE CHRISTIAN'S BIBLES...BOTH OLD TESTAMENTS AND NEW TESTAMENTS

There is another problem that the Christian Church fails to understand at this point in the presentation of Jesus as the Jewish Messiah in the New Testament; namely, every Jew over the age of 5 years old knew fully well that the true Messianic Prophecies as found in the Hebrew Scriptures were not fulfilled before, during, or after Jesus' death. This made the selling of Jesus as Israel's Messiah hard if not possible for the Jew and does so today. This fact escapes the contemporary Christian because his "Christianized Bible" is full of false fulfillments that were created by purposeful mistranslation, purposeful misquotation, and lifting passages out of context, in order to present this Jesus of Rome's making in their New Testament as the Messiah to the Gentile world. This, I hope you know, is presented in such a way that any grace connected to "believeing in Jesus" is obtained ONLY through the doors of the Roman Church and its Sacraments. We must remember that the Gentiles of the world never knew what the true Hebrew Scriptures really said since they could not read the Hebrew. That means they were totally ignorant concerning the Jewish Messiah and what the Hebrew Scriptures said about him. They only got Rome's side of the story; unfortunately for billions of people the wrong story. These poor people knew no better and nether does 95 % of Christians today since they have never dreamed that their Bibles could be forged and are fraudulent in very important "key" theological places dealing with Jesus.

It was extremely vital to writers of these New Testament documents to persuade others that this "Romanized" recharacterization of the Jewish Messiah as Jesus was indeed a "supernatural" Messiah and "Godman" since they were already familiar with the "gnosis" of the ancient Spiritual Mysteries that man was a "evolving god in an animal body" and they he possessed the "mind of a god which had fallen into "matter". Truly man is the Temple of the Holy Spirit; a "work in progress". This Spiritual concept of the indwelling Krst/Christ (the word Messiah is the same term as Christ in Hebrew) was applied to the whole of the human race but when "limited" to but one person by Rome when they "literalized" and "historicized" this "Godman" Metaphysial idea instead of allegorically applying this cosmic truth to the whole of humanity then mankind lost his "incarnational purpose"; namely, to evolve himself into the "fullness and stature of the Christ mind" in his incarnational experience. Mankind, aided by the Bishop of his Soul, the "indwelling Christ", was to be his own "savior". Let us not forget that conservative Biblical Judaism taught a human Messiah and not a Superman; it will be only the Essenes and later the Romans when they adopt the earliest expressions of Chrestianity/Christianity who will incorretly change the Divine Spiritual allegories of man's True Being into but "one literalized" person thereby robbing the whole of humanity of its True Being. One must look to the Essenes for this abbaranet belief; a form of Judasm that was extinguised and destroyed in the destruction of the Jewish Temple but which would live on in the apocalyticism of the newly emerging Gentile Christianity. This explains why it is that this aspect of Jesus' Divinity, rather than the message of the "Jewish Christ", as expressed through Israel and Judaism for the whole of humanity, unfortunately became the central concern & message of the New Testament authors or at least those who re-edited the prior Gnosic New Testament documents at a later date and chose to "literalilze" the ancient "Godman" theology which was always an allegory and was never meant to be interpreted "literally" down through all recorded history. This Essenic theology from these apostate Egyptian Hellenized Jews became the theology of the later Christocentric Gentile Churches of history. Again, this was very easy to accomplish for Rome for not only were the earliest Gentile Church Fathers taught by the Essenes in Alexandria, Egypt, but they, as basically Sun-worshipers themselves, already had their peronified and allegorical dying godmen and the expected Jewish Messiah was just made into but "another" one to fit the "pattern". The "only" difference is that instead of being a Divine Myth and Spiritual Allegory it was espoused by the Essenes first and later by Rome that the Sacred Scriptures were to be interpred "literally" and "historically"; they never were by the ancinets and never could be since they were purely Metaphysical to their very core. The true Hebrew Scriptures never taught the "literal" godman idea as confined to but one person; instead it was applied to all of humanity. But when these Hebrew texts were were altered in such ways by the Essenes in 200 B.C.E. then the Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures would now read differently than the prior Hebrew originals and since then the Greek Old Testament is made to be the carrier of this "literalized" godman idea and this Greek translation became the foundation for every Christian Old Testament that would come later (even the Latin of the Catholic Church would be influenced by it). As if that is not bad enough every quote in the New Testament is taken from these corrupted Greek forged texts. This means that many of the concepts espoused as "Messianic" in our Bibles are in reality the fruit of "literalized" sun-worship and have been applied to the New Testament Jesus which was always understood under different names and identieis in the ancient Spiritual Wisdom "allegorially" and "mystically" and few know this has occurred in their Bible without sufficient study and comparison of the Hebrew Scriptures with the later Greek Old Testament purposeful mistranslations and their later further adulteration in our New Tesament quotes.

Let us look at one example where a human messiah becomes a "godman" in the New Testament quote of a forged Greek translation of a Hebrew Scriptures. Very well known is the distinction between the Masoretic text on Psalms 40:6 and the socalled LXX or Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptues.

First the Hebrew Scriptures (note it is verse 7 in the Hebrew, verse 6, chapter 39, in the Christian translations):

6 ¶ (40:7) Sacrifice and meal-offering Thou hast no delight in;mine ears hast Thou opened; burnt-offering and sin-offering hast Thou not required.

Here we see that God had opened David's ears and mind to His Torah and "teaching" and sacrifice and sin-offering was not required of God, but obedience to His Word.

When this same verse is translated into the Greek we find in the Septuagint, the LXX:

Psalm 39 (40):6 LXX: Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared for me....

Here is a terrible mistranslation tended to bolster the "literalized" concept of the "godman" by the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt. This will be picked up upon by Rome in their New Testament quote of the Greek and not the Hebrew. This we find in false Messianic prophecy as found in Hebrews 10:5 (KJB):

Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me:

Here very plainly is the forgery of the Hebrew Scriptures as first misquoted on purpose in the Greek and later English Bibles; both Old and New Testament.

The true Jewish Scriptures never taught the "literal" godman, but when they were altered in such ways by the Essenes in 200 B.C.E. then the Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures would now read differently than the prior Hebrew originals and since then the Greek Old Testament is made to be the carrier of this "literalized" godman idea and this Greek translation became the foundation for every Christian Old Testament that would come later (even the Latin of the Catholic Church would be influenced by it). As if that is not bad enough every quote in the New Testament is taken from these corrupted Greek forged texts. This means that many of the concepts espoused as "Messianic" are in reality the fruit of "literalized" Sun-worship and have been applied to Jesus and few know this has occurred.

Later, when it appeared that the Jewish community would not accept the "divine" Jesus as its Messiah, not only because such ideas were totally foreign to normative Biblical Judaism and their Sacred Scriptures when interpreted correctly, but the prophecies went without fulfillment and the Temple was destroyed and Israel scattered. The time-frame for the coming of the Hebrew Messiah was, according to the Hebrew of Daniel chatper 9 and the Seventy Weeks, had come and gone. Few Christians read Hebrew and it is there we find the "conditional" promise made by God through the Prohets that Israel's coming Messiah was conditional on them "meriting" their Messiah. Israel was weighed in the balance and found wanting. After the Jew's rejection of this "non-fulfilling Messiah, and after the Jew's rejection of this "divine Jesus" as a Messiah and a "literal Godman" instead of a human messiah anointed of God, then this "neo-pagan Christian message" was presented principally to the Gentiles, to whom the Jewish Bible, Jewish life, and traditions were alien, and in many ways too rigorous. To stress the Jewishness of Jesus to a Jewish audience was totally irrelevant and even counterproductive considering the difficulties listed above. We fail to know that the Jewish people "knew" their Scritpture and could quote them verbatum yet the New Testametn often make is appear as is they were "slow" and "dumb"; nothing could be further from the truth if one has ever studied Judaism. The Jewishness of Jewish fared little better when presenting him to the Gentile pagans as such Jewishness implied for them not only an ethical monotheism but ethical and ceremonial rituals containing Jewish religious teaching as given by God, which ironically, were given to not only the Jews but Gentiles as well as seen if one undertakes a serious study of the Torah and the Tanakh. Obedience and repentance has never been a popular message. It is not today as well! Easy believeism is the fruit of the corruption of the Christian's Bible as we literally are presented with a "get out of jail free" gospel which is just "another Gospel" of which we are warned to avoid.

So not only the message of Jesus was changed but the ideas concerning the Jewish Messiah were altered in the selling of Jesus to the Gentile world as another in a long line of dying sun-godmen; only this time it was presented "literally" and "historically" and in a much different way from all its predecessors since Osiris and Horus who were only understood and interpreted as Spiritual allegories depicing the Descent, birth, life, death and rebirth of the Soul.

So instead of living the real message of Jesus the world is full of "believers" in the theology created around the false identity of the Jewish Christ. Because of this the Kingdom of Heaven is postponed and will continually be until the Divine Spiritual Truth is restored and there is a wholesale repentance within Christendom, not only concerning their idolatrous beliefs associated with the worship of some supposed "literal Godman" but concering our conduct and behavior as well since much that is sanctioned and taught by Christian Churches today is defined as sinful behavior in the Torah. But not knowing the Law and the Torah this remains unknown to most Christians.

THE SUBORDINATION OF THE RELIGION OF JESUS TO FAITH "IN" JESUS

So upon examination of the evidence we find that the non-Jewish New Testament authors subordinated the "religion of Jesus" (Sinai religion-Torah-Judaism) to their new religion-in-the-making; the "religion about the identity of Jesus", which was centered not so much on the message of the "Jewish Christ"and his message and teachings (which it should have been) as upon the "literalization" and "historization" of his mystical death and resurrection as emphaized by the "Romanized Paul" and not the "Gnostic Paul" which never mentions a human Jesus or a human Jewish Messiah. Rome takes the "resurrection from the dead", a Spiritual awakening of one to the indwelling Mysical Christ within him, an event that is to occur during the life of a child of God, and "radically reinterprets" it and moves it beyond the biological death of the body and mankind has lost the very purpose of his incarnation in such an tragic misprepresentation of this most important Spiritual quicking of man's Soul. This mind you was a cardinal doctrine of the ancinet Spiritual Wisdom and was taught by the Gnostic Paul as seen in the passage:

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

This "Christ" of the Gnostic Paul was the Mystical Christ of humanity; the original Krst/Christ taught as far back as ancient Egypt when it was personified as "Horus" as was the same Gnostic Christ of the first century when personified as our "Jesus". The indwelling and incarnating "Christ within" humanity has always been and will always be the only Savior of humanity. Here we encounter the same problem again; that which was always meant to be "Spiritual allegory" was again "radically reinterpeted" and passed off to the unsuspecting as if "literal" and "historical".

What the vast majority of Christians fail to realize is that the "Romanzied Paul's Jesus Story" has more in common with the ancient Divine Mysteries and gods and goddesses of Comparative Religious study than he does with Biblical Judaism and the Torah. But one must be educated in comparative religion to see and understand the above comment.

This "Pauline Jesus" would later become crystallized as we have come to understand as "Pauline Christology", wherein all of life and creation are centered in the belief in the crucified and risen Christ. This unfortunately became the "official" salvation message of the post-Constantinian church of 325 A.D. Pauline Christology, and those who preached or accepted it, transformed the "religion of Jesus" into the "religion about Jesus"; no longer God's "anointed" messenger (anointed=messiah) which allegorially dies in falling into incarnation in "matter" and the flesh of humanity, but the "literal" and "historicize" Christ who died to bring salvation to the whole world through his church.

We can now understand, as we so often see in the "Romanized Paul's" writings, the Jewish ethical and religious teachings, traditions, and ordinances, as contained in the Torah, its laws, and the Hebrew prophets, were viewed as transcended, replaced, outdated, even overturned, by this new "literalized" and "historicized" concept of the atoning death of Christ on a wooden cross. The Mystical crucifixon and fall of the DivineMind of God in its "fall into matter" has tagically lost its true meaning and now was relegated to a limited death of one man on a wooden cross.

Answer for yourself: Once one understands how these New Testament documents were created and the origin for many of their religious concepts, one has to ask if God, the God of the Jewish Scriptures, agrees with what is said in certain places in the New Testament concerning Jesus...does he?

If you have never had the opportunity to study an unbiased look at the New Testament let alone its canonization and want to study this at a later day the link provided will give you such an opportunity.

THE ROMANIZED PAUL'S MESSAGE AND JESUS' MESSAGE CONFLICT

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Jesus taught a completely different Gospel for salvation than the one that the "Romanized Paul" taught? Have you ever noticed that? In a few minutes two other articles will be available to contrast these opposing "salvation theologies" for you to see for yourself.

Answerfor yourself: But did Jesus say that not one jot or tittle would ever pass away from God's Word (Matt. 5:17)?

Answer for yourself: Who is right about such changes in the Eternal Word of God; the "Romanized Paul" or the Jewish Christ as expressed through Israel and Biblical Judaism? Since these two different "gospels" contradict and conflict with each other in the "method" and "means" to obtain salvation then one thing is certain and that is only one is correct! Which one?

Answer for yourself: If you find out that the salvation message of the "Jewish Christ" as expressed through Judaism is correct then the next biggest question to tackle is if as a Chrsitain you have lived your life as a "true follower of Jesus" or as a "follower of the Romanized Paul".

The "identity" of Jesus had become in Christian thought more important than what he stood for or the message taugth by the Jewish Christ. In such a situation the Jewishness of Jesus and his religion which was a model for all mankind was expressly rendered insignificant, as if it had never been a part of man's awakening to his Spiritual self. This explains why Jesus, in Western countries, has been portrayed by artist and sculptors as if he were an Anglo-Saxon; and in other regions of the world as if he had lived and grown up in their own specific country as well. In bringing Jesus to the world the vast majority of Christian churches have all but denied the Jewish heritage, culture, and expression of the Jewish Christ-Messiah. To make this "Christ" accessible to everyone, he could no longer belong to one people in particular (Israel). The emerging Gentile Church and Constantine, for example, viewed the Jewishness of the Jewish Christ as an impediment that had to be removed if Rome was ever to eclipse Israel as the "light to the nations".

Thus, while Gentile Christianity borrowed the idea of Messiah from Biblical Judaism, the pagans, whom they especially sought to convert to Christianity, were not taught about Jesus the Jew, nor his message of salvation, only his deity and "literal" resurrection as the road to salvation. There is nothing new in this "revelation" at all; you only have to read about Osiris and Egyptian religion to see these same religious ideas, but unlike our "Jesus Story" the resurrection of Osiris was never meant to be understood "liteally" and "historically"; only Spiritually and Metaphysically as regarding the Souls of mankind awakened to higher Spiritual truth and their True Being as evolving "minds of God" and "evolving Christ" themselves.

This was done because the non-Jews of the world already had such prior beliefs concerning their solar-godmen and had to give nothing up to accept another godman. To teach the Jewish way of life would have ensured great difficulty in building a following since conversion and circumcision was a stumbling block to most Gentile males. As stated, this presentation of Jesus as a sun-godman was not hard to do because familiar concepts tied to their pagan gods to which they were already familiar were "transformed" in a Jewish example of their gods. This "compromise" was an effective teaching tool and "bridge" used by this "Romanized Paul" and his theology to reach the non-Jews and "soften" the acclimation of the Jewish faith to the non-Jews to which the concept of "Law" seemed foreign. So instead of Attis, for example, the concepts of Attis were attributed to Jesus. In reality Jesus became just another godman in the non-Jew's pantheon since the "Jesus Story" was modeled, from beginning to end, after all that came before him.

Most pagan converts to Christianity joined this universal religion of salvation because it offered each of them as individuals life everlasting. Its promises of eternal bliss for those who "ONLY BELIEVED" in its Savior and it became hugely attractive to the multitudes of Gentiles because little commitment was needed let alone repentance or adherence to the Laws of Moses and the Torah, let alone the Laws of Noah. These non-Jews were "saved" by simple mental ascent to a religious doctrine concerning someone's identity and supposed "literal" sacrifice on their part regardless of how they lived their lives because another had died for them. Again, dear ones, this is not a new teaching among the Gentile world since the same religious concepts originated with sun-worship thousands of years before the time for Jesus. The only requirement was to "believe in Jesus" to have eternal life. Missing from this "easy believeism" is the required Ethical Monothesism so characteristic of Judaism. Along with this concept was the partaking in the "supper of their god" whereby believers took the "blood" and "body" of their god, thus rendering them like their gods; immortal. These Gentiles have been eating their "gods" for thousands of years before Jesus; again nothing new. Instead of a symbolic act symbolizing that Divinity of the Cosmos has been "internalized" within humanity Rome changed the meaning of the ancient Wisdom and its "eucharist" and "literalized" the eating of the God thus bordering upon cannabalism. The Passover was turned into Christian Communion and we lose the message again of Jesus as found in the Passover. The bread become the body of their god miraculously and they drink his very essence (his blood). This is pagan to the core; you just don't know of this because of your lack of study into the ancient Spiritual Wisdom Religons which teach the same "Christ Stories" and only have this New Testament present this same idea as if God gave it to the "believers in Jesus" as a "new" and "unique" Divine Revelation. Nothing could be further from the truth! Along the same line few if any Christian Churches keep the Biblical festivals. Easter has replaced the Passover for Christianity just like the "Metaphysical Christ" within every child of God has been replaced by the "Christ of faith;" just like communion has replaced the Passover as well.

These Gentile religious concepts are totally foreign to Judaism and had been for over 4000 years!

Answer for yourself: Is it not strange that we never find in the New Testament passages that show us that Jesus ever taught such doctrines for eternal life like the ones we find from the pen of the "Romanized Paul"? Can you find one instance where Jesus told anyone to believe in his death, burial, and resurrection for eternal life? If you want to see what Jesus taught for Eternal Life try Matt. 19!

Take time right now to read Matt. 19:16-30 and Mark 12:28-34. You should see that Jesus' teachings contradicts the salvation messages taught by most churches today...of only "believe" in Jesus!

Over time we find added to the salvation message of Jesus such things added as:

- the acknowledgment of his death,
- burial,
- and resurrection,
- as well as the virgin birth
- and incarnation

as necessary elements for salvation. Belief in a set of "literalized" and "historicized" theological doctrines began to replace and would finally replace the religion as taught by the Jewish Christ; which was one of faith in the One God of Israel & repentance and obedience to the Laws of God according to the revelation of this One God as found in the Torah with its ethical and ceremonial commandments imposed on followers of God, both Jew and "non-Jew", as their Covenant stipulations and responsibilities to be in right standing with God!

In summary the prophet Micah gives us a thumb nail sketch of the way to eternal life when he said in Mic. 6:8

"He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

Today Christianity is full of pastors and teachers which advocate, not explicitly but implicitly, the doctrine that conversion to Christ or belief in Christ involves "no spiritual commitment whatsoever". Those who hold this view of the gospel teach that Scripture promises salvation to anyone who simply believes the "facts" about Christ's identity as taught by Paul and who claims the gift of eternal life. There need be no real turning from sin, no resulting change in life-style, no commitment to God or the message of the Bible; not even a willingness to submit to the teachings and message of Jesus. Obedience to the Laws of God are not necessary as we are no longer under such things. Those things, they say, amount to human works, which corrupt grace and have nothing to do with faith.

HOGWASH! I DARE ANYONE TO READ THE TORAH AND THE PROPHETS AND NOT SEE FOR YOURSELF WHAT GOD'S REAL MESSAGE OF SALVATION IS...IT IS NOT THE MESSAGE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH TODAY...GOD DOES NOT CHANGE...MEN DO A DEFICIENT DOCTRINE OF SALVATION...

The fallout of such thinking and Christian teaching is a deficient doctrine of salvation. It is justification without sanctification, and its impact on the church, as well as the world, has been catastrophic. The churches of today are populated with people who have bought into a system that encourages shallow and ineffectual faith. The majority of those sitting under such teachings are barren of any verifiable fruit in their lives. Most churches are dead institutions with little impact upon the world let alone their neighborhoods! Just pick up the newspaper and look at the headlines of this "supposed Christian nation" and you should ask yourself: "Where is the fruit of Christianity" on our streets of our nation? Jesus told us that we will know by the fruit. America prides itself on being a "Christian" nation but look at the fruit of this country typified by an "easy believeism" without personal and ethical responsibilites. In fact, we cannot build our prisons fast enought for the fruit of this pernisious theology espoused by Christianity today.

if you have the honesty and courage to do so you will see that something is wrong with the message of the Christian Church that has produced such a sorry state in our country full of "Christians."

If you teach the wrong message you get the wrong results!

The Jewish Christ gave this sobering warning: "Not every one who says to Me, 'Lord, Lord,' will enter the kingdom of heaven; but he who (believes or does?) does the will of my Father who is in heaven" (notice the promise is not to those who just believe in Jesus). Many will save to me on that day, 'Lord, Lord, did we not prophesy in your name, and in your name cast out demons, and in your name perform many miracles?' And then I will declare to them, 'I never knew you; depart from me, you who practice iniquity (lawlessness)" (Matthew 7:21-22). Practicing lawlessness is the same as practicing TORAHLESSNESS.

Just consider ONE aspect of the "faith of Jesus"; namely obedience to the festival structure God gave Israel. I have already demonstrated to you repeatedly in prior articles that celebration of the festivals of the Lord was not optional to the Jew as well as the Gentile God-Fearers who repented of his sin and became a part of the Israel of God. It was the pattern. There are many others to consider as well...beginning with proper obedience of the church to the Tithe for example.

2 Thess. 3:6 records Paul's command to the followers of Jesus :

"Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us."

Answer for yourself: What "traditions" could Paul have been bringing to these Gentiles in Thessalonica in Greece?

Within these traditions that Paul refers that was being brought to these Gentiles (who were turning from idols to serve the living God) was not to be more Greek philosophy or theology; he was to bring them the religion of Jesus (Biblical Judaism) which was centered in the "faith of Jesus" and not a "faith in Jesus." Paul did not always do a good job here sorry to say...but that is a whole other can of worms when we deal with the real Paul of history and not the false picture painted of him in this "one book" we call the Christian Bible.

When we continue steadfastly in the Apostle's doctrines of Acts 2:42 we continue in the faith "of" Jesus, not a faith "in" Jesus.

Faith "in" Jesus would come later by those who would take Paul's writings and build a world religion on them. They would create in Jesus' name a new religion that would eventually end up completely separated from Jesus' faith and beliefs. And the world yet today does not know or even care to know that such a Gentile creationism is not any different from what they already believed as pagan Gentiles; namely, that they were "IN OSIRIS," or "in" their god whom they consumed in their Eucharists as they ate the body of their god and drank his blood. Little has changed.

Answer for yourself: Are you, as a follower of Jesus, practicing a Torah observant life-style as Jesus would have you do? Does you church and Pastor teach this or is his gospel that of Paul?

Answer for yourself: Are you a "true follower" of Jesus and could you, after reading this article, consider yourself a "true follower of Jesus" as seen in the pages of the New Testament or can you begin to see that you have been led astray? Are you open to honest inquiry into the subject?

Answer for yourself: Is your church teaching you to sanctify the Sabbath as did believing Gentiles in the first century, or is your church substituting Sunday (Sun Worship Day) for the Sabbath?

Answer for yourself: Did you celebrate the festival of Passover this year or did you substitute the paganized cultic ritual of Ishtar (Easter) in place of it without full understanding of what you did? Or does your communion take its place?

Answer for yourself: Didn't God say that the Passover is to be celebrated forever?

Answer for yourself: Or will you be participating in the sanctification of a day set aside for fertility rites and fornication rituals as you celebrate EASTER this year as well as the other pagan feast days that have been adopted by the church?

Answer for yourself: Do you not know that to do so and observe Isthar day (Easter) is idolatry?

That is violation of the First Commandment! Remember Jesus said "depart from me" to those who thought they would be accepted by Jesus. They felt they were accepted. They had been taught by their leader that they were accepted. They had been reassured by their religious leaders. BUT THEY WERE NOT ACCEPTED!

Jesus was not speaking about an isolated group of fringe followers. There will be "MANY" on that day who will stand before God, stunned to learn they are not included in God's kingdom. I fear that multitudes who fill church pews in the mainstream of the evangelical movement will be among those turned away because they did not do the will of the Father. They have followed the "evolved Catholic theology of a Romanized Paul" by the anti-Semitic early Gentile Church and are guilty today of having a "faith in Jesus" instead of obeying "the faith of Jesus."

Answer for yourself: Are you willing to risk it?

You have been conditioned to believe that because you recited a prayer, signed on a dotted line, walked an aisle, had an emotional experience, were slain in the spirit, spoke in tongues, or had some other experience, you are saved and should never question your salvation. Scripture encourages us to examine ourselves to determine if we are in the faith (2 Cor. 13:5).

Answer for yourself: Why the need to examine if it were not possible to be deceived?

Notice that the New Testament, even though it contains errors, also contains truth. In the Gospels, one can find the Jewish "pattern" whereby non-Jewish believers are to be taught to follow the faith of Jesus and be united with the Jews in the Israel of God. The Great Commission teaches that the non-Jews are to be "taught to observe those things commanded by Jesus".

Answer for yourself: Can you ever find Jesus in the Gospels ever commanding the teachings of Paul be taught or teaching the same message of salvation the way Paul does in his literature? [THINK]

One must go the the Pauline literature to find where one is taught to have faith in Jesus for salvation. One only need to see where Paul, himself a Gentile convert, came up with that belief...try Tarsus...these doctrine were taught there where Paul grew up! Coincidence?

Peter wrote, "give diligence to make your calling and election sure" (2 Pet 1:10). It is right to examine your lives and evaluate the fruit you bear, for "each tree is known by its own fruit" (Luke 6:44).

The Bible teaches clearly that the evidence of God's work in a life is the inevitable fruit of a transformed behavior (1 John 3:10). But just a change in religious routine or behavior, if it does not conform to the truths in God's Word, is worthless, or at best compromised. One erroneous religious practice is not better than another. Our worship is tainted and God is not loved properly. Such is not to be desired; either knowingly or unknowingly.

Answer for yourself: Has your behavior, practices, and beliefs changed since encountering the Hebraic understanding of the Jesus of the first century as well as his Gentile followers? Have you ever investigated the Jewish Jesus for yourself?

Answer for yourself: Does your life pattern the the life-style of a follower of the religion of Jesus whereby you observe the Sabbath, keep the Seven Biblical Festivals, Tithe correctly, etc.,?

Remember that faith that does not result in righteous living is dead and cannot save (James 2:14-17). Professing Christians utterly lacking the fruit of true righteousness that comes through obedience (not another Gospel of "grace only" as preached by most churches today) will find no biblical basis for assurance they are saved (1 John 2:4).

Real salvation is an ongoing process as much as it is a past event. It is the work of God through which you are "conformed to the image of his son" (Rom. 8:29; 13:11). It is past time to find out the truth about the historical Jesus.

Notice we are to pattern our lives around Jesus, and how he lived, not have a "mental religious belief system in agreement with some established Pauline or Gentile Catholic theology concerning his identity as they perceived it over 1800 years ago".

Answer for yourself: Have you looked lately to see how Jesus lived and worshipped? Are you attempting to do the same?

Genuine assurance comes from seeing the Holy Spirit's transforming work in one's life, not from clinging to the memory of some experience or your church's teachings when you discover they are incorrect. Jesus would have you repent of your incorrect beliefs and adopt his. God, in his love, changes lives when one comes to him in Jesus' name, or in Mohammed's name, or even others. Such is the love of God for His children. It is time we love Him back in the ways He commanded, and when shown the ways we have been taught are in error, then repentance is the order of the day.

Answer for yourself: Are you certain that what your church has taught you is not in error in many places? Have you looked or do you have the courage to do so? Do you even know what these "ways" are, or have you assumed that because you are moved with emotion in church that you cannot be in error? Better look again! God desires our emotions be tied to truth and not falsehoods.

Since beginning these teachings, I have shared with you about biblical giving where 1/3 of your Tithe should go to the teaching Levite and priest, 1/3 to the poor, and 1/3 to yourself in order for your and your family to celebrate and observe not only the weekly Sabbath was the Seven Festivals of the LORD as well. This is just one example among many where the Christian Churches have made grave mistakes and taught you to do the same. Such disobedience in how the tithe is used by the church is sin!

Answer for yourself: How has this message affected you?

Answer for yourself: Are you still supporting churches that do not teach you the truth of God's Word as held sacred by Jesus and taught by him from his Bible that was not corrupted as ours has as I have shown you?

One only need look at these three sites and study them in detail to see this full story unfold for yourself:

http://bennoah1.freewebsites.com

http://geocities.com/faithofyeshua

http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com

Answer for yourself: Is your church revealing to you the real Jesus of the Scriptures and how can you know without your personal study?

Answer for yourself: Shouldn't you support only those who are teaching the uncompromising truths of God's Word?

The question is "not who is your pastor, but who is your teacher?

Answer for yourself: Were you aware of what the Word of God says concerning how the tithe is to be used or have you assumed the way your church does it is correct? Once you learn the truth will you repent of the errors of your giving, or now will you?

Answer for yourself: Have you taken the grace of God to excuse yourself from correctly or giving at all?

Answer for yourself: Having seen, in our other websites, what a true believing Gentile believed and practiced in the first century, have you began to seek God about you and your family sanctifying the Sabbath?

Answer for yourself: How can you not begin to sanctify the Sabbath, or tithe correctly, once you have come to the truth?

Answer for yourself: Have you prayed about your commitment to celebrating the Festivals of the Lord instead of the pagan rites given to you by contemporary Christianity?

Remember Paul's admonition to depart from brothers teaching not the traditions of the faith of Jesus. It is a shame that we have this admonition but it seems he, or his epistles accomplish just the opposite.

This is not a religious game! This is not something I do because I have nothing else to do. God has called me to seek out the "faith once delivered to the saints" and deliver it once again (reawakening to the Hebraic roots of the Christian faith is currently occurring around the world)! This really began with the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls and will continue until God comes again to gather His elect. Not all of Israel is Israel! I am obedient to the commands of the Lord to the best of my ability in my life have repented when I discovered I have been mistaken in my religious beliefs and practices. Study can show this to you beyond any doubt. The question is what you decide to study and unbiased sources are available.

Answer for yourself: Have you? Will you?

It truly disturbs me that after having taught many for the last couple of years that the ears of many saints seem to be dull to these warnings.

Answer for yourself: Where are the questions that should come from these teachings?

Answer for yourself: Are you hearing the message?

Answer for yourself: How can we refute what Biblical history, culture, and language can show you about the errors taught by the churches today? Have you looked into this for yourself?

Answer for yourself: Is your church and Pastor attempting to adhere to the original faith of Jesus or has contemporary Gentile Christianity taken it's place?

Answer for yourself: Do you really care? I assure you God does!

Please read 2 Thess. 3:6 again. It is written to you. You should fall on your knees and thank God in heaven for revealing to you that you have been participating in idolatry and didn't know it. Now you do.

Answer for yourself: What is your response?

Let me quote Paul, "This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk (most churches today), in the vanity of their minds, having their understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their hearts: who being past feeling" I pray you are not past feeling! (Eph. 4:17-19).

Let us be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive" (Eph. 4:14). You have been deceived long enough.

Answer for yourself: The big question: "do you really want to be like Jesus?"

Help us get this message out. Please consider supporting the spread of the faith of Jesus as Bet Emet attempts to preach faith, obedience, and repentance to a world that knows not the faith once given to the saints, nor that that the time is short before the judgment of God. Help us take the real Jesus and his message to the world.

JESUS THE JEW...THE FOUNDER OF A GENTILE RELIGION CALLED CHRISTIANITY? BETTER THINK AGAIN

In the Western world, Christians generally imagine Jesus as tall, probably with blond hair and beard, blue eyes, and wearing a white robe and an other-worldly expression. Almost certainly, he was short by modern standards and dark-skinned. His black beard was long and untrimmed. He undoubtedly wore earlocks, the peyot that are displayed today only by the ultra-Orthodox but were once worn by all Jews as a matter of course. We know from the Gospels that he wore fringes on his garments like other Jews. Like other Jews, he wore tefillin (called "phylacteries" in the Gospels) when he prayed formally, and perhaps at other times, and took it for granted that others would do the same: he objected only when they were ostentatious in wearing them in public, as some did in his day. He observed the feasts and fasts, and he must have gone to the ritual bath on appropriate occasions to purify himself, as they did, for we know from archaeological findings that the ritual bath was in common use in Jesus' time. He said the customary blessings when he drank wine and when he ate bread. He`washed his hands whenever he sat down to eat, though apparently his disciples sometimes neglected to do so, without being reproved by him.

He personally obeyed all the commandments, ethical and ritual, and took part in the sacrificial worship of the Temple when he was in Jerusalem. Like the prophets in whose tradition he stood, he objected to these things only when they were done mechanically, without the intention toward God that made them valid, and without the social morality that God demanded above all.

Jesus was a faithful and observant Jew, according to the halachah, the interpretation of the Torah, accepted in his day. He did not regard the Jewish Law itself as mechanical and ritualistic, or those who kept it carefully as spiritually decadent. He loved the Torah and observed it with the deepest faithfulness and spiritual dedication. He lived by it until his last breath.

Jesus was in no way like the gentle Jesus, meek and mild, of much Christian tradition. While he counseled the transcendence of anger to the point of loving enemies, he evidently did not always avoid it himself. His criticism of all religious phoniness is as direct and even brutal as anything to be found in religious history. In this regard he was the toughest of teachers. Yet his compassion for sinners is rightly regarded as remarkable, and it is this that marked him out as the bearer of a distinctive message concerning divine compassion.

If this message aroused opposition, and it seems that it did, it was not because it was un-Jewish. It was not. Rather, Jesus' convictions concerning the compassion of God for sinners and the way human beings should imitate it went even beyond what some of the devout of his day had been able to imagine of God. And if Jesus was scathing in his criticism of religious phoniness, it was not because he was opposed to Judaism, or regarded it as intrinsically defective, but because he wanted the Torah to be fulfilled by everyone as completely and perfectly as possible, from the heart.

His personal name was Yeshua, in the Aramaic he spoke, or Yehoshua in Hebrew, a very common name usually translated as Joshua. We get the form Jesus from the Greek rendering of his Aramaic name Yeshua, which comes out as Iesous, which is Jesus in Latin and also in English. His parents were Yossef and Mariam, or Miriam. He had brothers called Yaakov (James), Yoset, Shimon (Simon), and Yehudah (Judah). He also had sisters, but their names were not remembered.

In Jewish tradition preserved in the Talmud, which (in spite of medieval Christian attempts at censorship) does contain a few indirect references to him, Jesus is not referred to as the son of Joseph. Of course Jews did not believe in the Christian legend of the virgin birth of Jesus, but in that case we should have expected that he would be referred to as the son of his supposed father, Joseph. He is actually called in these references Yeshua ben Pantera, Jesus son of Pantera. In these earliest sources there is no explanation for the name, but later Jewish tradition took it to mean that Jews remembered that he had not been the son of Joseph but the offspring of a rape or seduction of Mary by a Roman soldier named Pantera.

Christian writers formerly believed that Pantera was not a Roman name but a corruption of parthenos, the Greek word for "virgin." They explained the references to ben Pantera as Jewish attempts to discredit the Christian doctrine of the virgin birth of Jesus. A Roman inscription bearing a memorial to a soldier of the same name has actually been discovered in Europe. This explanation will therefore no longer hold up. The tradition that preserved the name Pantera for Jesus' father in all probability has nothing to do with the stories of the virgin birth, and may even be older than them.

A recent writer has suggested that the gospel writers also knew of this persistent tradition, and that the birth stories in Matthew and Luke are intended to show that whatever his human origins, Jesus was born by the will of God in order to fulfill the purpose of God in bringing salvation to the world. The language of the Gospels when they tell the story of Jesus' birth is usually interpreted through the spectacles of later Greek theology. If instead we read them in a Jewish way, we can discover that they do not say that Mary was a virgin when Jesus was born, or that his conception was supernatural, in the sense that later Christians understood it. Even if Jesus was actually conceived as the son of a Roman soldier, especially as a result of rape or seduction, that would not make him illegitimate by Jewish law, since he was born of a Jewish mother and not as the offspring of adultery or of a prohibited marriage.

Jesus was probably born a few years before the date usually reckoned as the beginning of the Common or Christian era, during the reign of Herod the Great. Unfortunately, we have no reliable means of ascertaining the exact date. The methods usually employed depend on the birth stories in Matthew and Luke, which have many obviously legendary elements, and in any case do not agree with each other. He died during the rule of the Roman governor, or Prefect, Pontius Pilatus, which lasted from 26 to 36 C.E. It seems certain that the Romans executed him because they regarded him as an insurgent, on account of his reputation as a claimant to the title of Messiah, whether or not he actually made the claim.

We cannot reconstruct the order of events in his life from the Gospels, because the writers of the Gospels did not know what it was themselves, as was already recognized in the second century. Nevertheless, it is possible to discover the kind of person Jesus was and what he stood for, by a careful comparison of the gospel stories about him with what we now know of the religious environment in which he lived. In other words to find the Real Jesus our search must begin within Judaism and working forward through his life. Any attempt to start with anti-Semitic Christianity, per se, and work backwards, is flawed and will ultimately produce a distortion of the Jewish Jesus.

To imagine Jesus in a thoroughly Jewish way is very difficult even for Jews, most of whom have also been conditioned to think of him as some kind of Christian. For Christians, it takes real effort in light of the effective brain-washing by the church Sunday after Sunday. The degree of effort required reveals the anti-Jewish prejudice with which all Christians have been infected, including those who do not think they have any such prejudices. This is the kind of effort you will need as you move from Jesus, through the origins and early development of Christianity, to its medieval glory and triumph, which was also a time of terror and death for Jews, and on into modern times.

To illustrate my point let me refer to a well-known and authoritative manual of Christian doctrine, used as a textbook in many colleges, which has no section at all devoted to the Jews, or to what Christian theologians have said about them (Hubert Cunliffe Jones with Benjamin Drewery, eds., A History of Christian Doctrine (Edinburgh: T. and T. Clark, 1978). I used this book in my Seminary training. There has been a kind of conspiracy, conscious or unconscious, to render the Jews invisible, because any recognition or study of Biblical Judaism, the religion of Jesus, is easily seen as a major corrective to Gentile Christianity as it exists today. Yet, they have been there all along, living their life in obedience to the commandments they have received from God, and the Jews' presence, acknowledged or ignored, has been a challenge to Christianity and its claim to be the true people of God.

Answer for yourself: Is it surprising that they have also been hated?

Even as recently as the late 1970s, a justly celebrated New Testament scholar entitled one of his books The Founder of Christianity (C.H. Dodd, The Founder of Christianity (London: Collins, 1971; New York: Macmillan, 1970). Like almost everyone else at the time, he assumed that Jesus had been its founder.

Answer for yourself: But can we really imagine the Jewish Jesus founding Christianity?

Answer for yourself: Is not this the very first assumption we have to call in question?

Answer for yourself: How could this authentic and faithful Jew, living according to the halachah, have thought of founding a new religion in opposition to the one he loved and lived by?

The Prophets of the Bible were very critical of the Jews of their day, much more critical in fact than the Gospels represent Jesus as being, but they never dreamed of founding a new religion. They envisaged a national repentance from all the sins they excoriated, followed by divine forgiveness and the full restoration of Israel to its status as God's beloved people.

Answer for yourself: Could it have been otherwise with Jesus?

Nevertheless, no new religion was founded in the name of any of the biblical prophets, and it is a fact that a new religion did grow out of Judaism in the first century. It was called Christianity. The name of Christianity, of course, comes from the title Christ (Christos, the Greek form of the Hebrew word meshiach, our word Messiah), but not from Jesus' personal name; by the time the movement received the name by which it has ever since been known he was already most often referred to simply as Christ, Messiah. But there was no doubt which Messiah was meant.

There were also other first-century messianic claimants. No large-scale religious movement emanated from their careers, however. We shall have to consider why the history of Christianity turned out so differently from theirs. In the case of Christianity, its early leaders acted "in the name of Jesus of Nazareth," whom they proclaimed as Messiah, or Christ.

Answer for yourself: Were they justified in invoking his name to legitimate their actions in spreading a new religion?

This must be our first question.

Answer for yourself: Can we really believe, having read the stories in the Gospels, that Jesus was so condemnatory of the religion of his day that he actually rejected it and was understood by his fellow Jews to have done so?

The Gospels do tell a story of growing conflict between Jesus and his fellow Jews, ending in a religious trial before the highest and most solemn court of his people, which condemns him for blasphemy on account of a claim to be the Messiah and hands him over to the Romans for execution. This is the basis of the ancient and long-standing belief that the Jews killed Christ.

Answer for yourself: But did the Jews kill Christ?

With just a little study you will discover that the stories in the Gospels that suggest they did are exceedingly improbable. The Jews did not kill Jesus because they had no reason to do so. He was not guilty of any religious offense. It is in the highest degree improbable that such a trial before the Sanhedrin as we read of in the Gospels of Mark and Matthew ever took place. What we read in the Gospels about the trial of Jesus is the product of later Christian imagination, and it reflects Christian, not Jewish, views of the nature of the Messiah.

It was not the Jews but the Romans who killed Christ. They did it for their own political reasons; evidently, the Romans did believe him to be a claimant to the title of Messiah, although he himself made no such claim. No doubt, they correctly understood that from their own point of view a Messiah must be a rebel and an insurgent, since he is expected to deliver the Jewish people from pagan domination. In any case, enough people thought Jesus was the Messiah to constitute a political danger to Roman rule. No one should any longer imagine that it was the Jews who were the Christ-killers.

If Jesus did not claim to be the Messiah and was not rejected, still less killed, by his own people, there is little reason left for believing he could have founded Christianity.

Christianity has always been based on the belief that Jesus was the Messiah of the Jews, rejected by his own people. If that central belief is without foundation and must now be abandoned, it becomes much harder to discover anything Jesus said or did that could have led to the development of Christianity from his own work.

In view of these findings, to be justified more fully in future articles, we should now make it our working assumption that Jesus did not found Christianity, unless and until we find overwhelming evidence that he did. In fact, there is no such evidence.

JEWISH CHRISTIANITY & THE MESSAGE OF JESUS TO US TODAY

The first Christians were all Jews, like Jesus himself. There is no doubt at all that Christianity originated as a Jewish movement, and in its earliest stages it did not look beyond Judaism. Its members thought and lived in wholly Jewish ways, and they explained even the novel aspects of the new movement by reference to the most authoritative of Jewish sources, the Bible itself.

When historians speak of "Jewish Christianity", they do not usually refer to the very earliest form of the Church, Jewish though it undoubtedly still was. They mean a group that developed a separate identity later, partly in reaction against the abandonment of the Torah by Gentile Christianity. It is natural to suppose that from the first there must have been some among them who, perhaps like Paul in the period that he remained outside the movement, had doubts about the propriety of bringing converts into the people of God without the proper rites of conversion.

Later, after Paul himself joined the movement, taking the leadership of its mission to the Gentiles, a substantial Gentile wing grew up, composed of persons who had not been formally converted to Judaism and who did not observe the Torah. There was at the same time another group opposed to this development which now began to constitute a party or faction within the church. This pro-Torah Gentile faction within the Church strenuously opposed what Paul was doing, on grounds that must seem perfectly reasonable from a Jewish point of view.

Answer for yourself: If the messianic age was already unrolling, and the Gentiles were being brought into the covenant in accordance with prophecy, why should they not join the covenant people and enter the messianic time along with it?

Paul's actions must have seemed to them reckless and without any basis in Jewish faith or in the authority of the Torah. That is why today we yet can find numerous accounts of those in the earliest Church that opposed Paul and his message. Bet Emet has undergone rigorous research into these areas and have valuable information and articles dealing with these areas. If you would like more information at to the Paul problem in the early church request by email and we will send them to you.

On the other hand, another group of no less observant Jews, led by James, the brother of Jesus, were apparently willing to go along with Paul's activities in bringing a Torah-free message to the Gentiles, so long as there was a clear distinction between a Gentile mission on Paul's lines and the original mission to the Jewish people. Gentiles, then, were not to be expected to follow the Torah, but Jews were to be encouraged to continue to do so. Those we now think of as distinctively Jewish Christians were therefore only one wing of a larger group of Christian Jews, all of whom continued to observe the Torah while believing in Jesus as the Messiah.

After twenty centuries of Gentile Christianity, it is natural for us to identify Christianity with non-Judaism and invariably with some degree of anti-Judaism. The existence of an early Christian group that continued to observe the Torah, even though it eventually became unimportant and died out, is an important fact.

For the typical Christian the next statement must be understood. On the other hand, we must recognize that it was only possible to maintain belief in the messiahship of Jesus by supposing that the Jewish community as a whole was in very serious error in its interpretation of the Bible, since it was unwilling to recognize that a crucified insurgent could be regarded as the King Messiah, whose destiny according to everyone else's expectation, as conditioned by the prophetic Jewish Scriptures, was to redeem the people from foreign domination and bring in universal peace and righteousness. Jesus had done nothing of this.

From the second generation on, it seems more correct to think of Jewish Christianity simply as the community of those believers in Christ who observed the Torah and fully accepted the authority of the Jewish Scriptures, whether or not they had been born Jews. This group of Jewish Christians, who were the disciples of Jesus, was distinguished in particular by its practice of making proper proselytes to Judaism of its Gentile converts. It was these people who endeavored to fulfill the Great Commission mandated by Jesus, and notice that they understood it to mean the bringing of the Gentile to Biblical Judaism and not to a Torah-less Christianity as proposed by the Romanized Paul of Rome's creation!

The beliefs of these Jewish Christians are not easy to determine with clarity and precision. They produced Gospels of their own, some of which have survived in fragments quoted by ancient Christian writers. It was believed in the ancient church that they used an original Aramaic version of the Gospel of Matthew. However, the extant fragments of Jewish-Christian gospels do not support this view, and it is not certain if there ever was such a version of Matthew.

In fact, one of the Jewish-Christian gospels (known as the Gospel of the Nazarenes) seems to have been an Aramaic translation back from the Greek Gospel of Matthew, with annotations, additions, and expansions. It seems to have contained the whole of the Matthew we have, including the birth stories.

Another Jewish-Christian gospel, that of the group known as the Ebionites, was written in Greek. The Ebionites gave their name to Jewish Christianity at large for many writers in the early Church. It was supposed that they had been founded by someone called Ebion. In fact, the word is Hebrew for "poor," and Paul refers to the Jerusalem church by this name. Perhaps they wished to designate themselves as the poor whom Jesus had called blessed. Their beliefs apparently did differ from those of the Gentile church.

Their gospel appears to have been drawn from Matthew and Luke, and it may also have used Mark as a source. It omitted the birth stories. In this gospel the Spirit enters Jesus at his baptism. Like some other Jewish Christians, the authors of this gospel rejected the sacrificial worship of the Temple, attributing the rejection to Jesus himself. A third such gospel, called the Gospel of the Hebrews, of Egyptian provenance. was apparently somewhat more Gnostic or esoteric in character, a fact that may account for its preservation in Egypt, where esoteric Christianity especially flourished.

Something can also be inferred of the beliefs of Jewish Christians from symbols and other artifacts that archaeologists have found. It is clear that they all continued to observe the Torah. Beyond that, it is not easy to generalize. Some groups may have believed in the virgin birth and even the divinity of Jesus. Others certainly did not believe in either.

The later Jewish Christian groups regarded Paul very unfavorably, as a traitor to Judaism (if indeed he had been a born Jew at all) and a perverter of the original message of Jesus. Sometimes their opposition was expressed in disguised ways, in view of the power of the Pauline church. They seem to have been doubtful of Paul's own claim to be a highly educated Jew, trained in the schools of the Pharisees. For them, unlike the Gentile churches, Paul was a disaster for the movement springing from Jesus and his preaching to his fellow Jews. Nevertheless, in due course they too found themselves separated from the main body of the Jewish people by their loyal retention of the belief in Jesus' messianic destiny, now apparently conclusively refuted (in Jewish eyes) by his failure to return to earth and act as the expected Messiah.

Some of the Jewish Christians were certainly involved in esoteric beliefs and ascetical practices, which in themselves tended to separate them from the main body of Judaism. It seems possible that some of them identified Jesus with beings believed in by esoteric groups, such as a great archangel, or even a primordial semi-divine Man, the Adam Kadmon.

If so, the dangers to monotheism the Rabbis saw in esoteric Judaism may have contributed to their rejection of Jewish Christianity. Judaism was tolerant of differences in theology, but much less so of differences in observance. We do not know of ways in which Jewish Christians diverged from their fellow Jews in observance, and there was nothing to warrant excommunication and ostracism in a belief in an unorthodox Messiah, so long as no one thought of him as divine. This is the very error of the Gentile Church today!

There does seem reason to believe that the later movements scholars call Gnosticism originated within esoteric Judaism, and that some forms of Jewish Christianity had very close links with it. The ascetic and esoteric wings of Jewish Christianity must have found a ready association with Jewish esoteric beliefs and practices, or even have originated within such groups. The earlier view of scholars that Gnosticism originated in an extreme Hellenization of Christianity now seems untenable. The traces of Judaism in the Gnostic documents now accessible to us are too many and too pervasive.

Jewish Christianity, at first vigorous, gradually died out, probably because of isolation both from the dynamic development of Gentile Christianity, and from the nourishment of association with the main body of the Jewish people. It was strongly contested from the second century on by developing Catholic Christianity, eager to close the ranks against all forms of heresy. It survived longer outside the Empire than within it, and its eastern forms remained actively missionary.

By the time of the Constantinian revolution, Jewish Christianity was largely a spent force. Nevertheless, it seems to have survived long enough in outlying areas to have influenced the perception of Christianity in the Quran. Muslim Christology is identical with that of some esoteric Jewish Christian groups, and it differs from that of the Catholic church. Muhammad must have known Jewish Christians and their traditions in his earlier years.

As the expectation of Jesus' imminent return died down, since it failed to take place, it would have been natural for Jewish Christianity to go the way of other failed messianic movements, and to be reabsorbed into the main body of Judaism. There have been such movements, both before and after Jesus. Once everyone could see that the supposed Messiah was not going to deliver the people and bring in a new era, belief in him was abandoned with greater or less reluctance, and his followers returned to the main body of the Jewish people. Sooner or later, the new movements fizzled out. However, it is not altogether clear why this did not happen in the case of Christianity.

The main reason seems to have been a feature unique to this particular messianic movement: its appeal to Gentiles and its success among them.

Answer for yourself: Were the links with other forms of Christianity now stronger than the links to the Jewish people, in spite of the failure of the distinctive messianic expectations of the group?

Answer for yourself: Was the belief in a suffering Messiah, not shared by other messianic groups, powerful enough as an interpretation of the tragedies of history to survive refutation of the positive aspects of his messianic vocation?

Answer for yourself: Or was the way barred from the Jewish side?

Answer for yourself: Had the measures taken by the Rabbis against unorthodox forms of Judaism, of which Jewish Christianity was one, been so successful that there was now no way back for disillusioned believers in the messiahship of the crucified?

Whatever the reason, by this time Christianity had ceased to be a movement within Judaism and was regarded by its adherents and detractors alike as a new religion. The new religion continued to have an observant Jewish wing, but its members were no longer regarded as Jews by other Jews. Their association with Gentile Christians who were clearly anti-Jewish may have been sufficient to cancel their Jewish credentials in the eyes of the Jewish authorities.

In fact, both Catholic Christianity and Judaism thought of them as neither Christians nor Jews. Although it may now seem to us that it might have been otherwise, the movement had no historical future, and in all probability it cannot now be revived. Certainly the present-day Hebrew Christians, or "Jews for Jesus," are not Jewish Christians in the ancient sense. Their beliefs are those of evangelical fundamentalism, even if they continue to observe Jewish customs: they hold firmly to beliefs that all Jews must regard as dangerously close to idolatry.

YOU CAN'T UNDERSTAND CHRISTIANITY CORRECTLY WITHOUT AN UNDERSTANDING OF THE JUDAISM OF JESUS

Answer for yourself: Who Was Jesus?

"Jesus was the son of the covenant and behaved as an ardently religious, practicing Jew."

Henry Daniel-Rops, the distinguished French Catholic scholar who was responsible for this particular quotation, also made it clear why no Christian can truly understand his own religion unless he also understands the Judaism which we are shown to be practiced by the Jesus of the New Testament.

Henry Daniel-Rops wrote:

When he began his ministry, in what context did he do so, and who were his helpers, his collaborators? The physical context was that of the Jewish land, that Palestine which he practically never left in all his many journeys. his disciples, the twelve apostles, were all Jews, most of them peasants and fishermen from Galilee: their names alone show this— Simon, John, Jude and Judas, Levi, who was to be Matthew, and the others. When he spoke, his style was so impregnated with the Jewish manner of expression that the rhythms, the balanced repetitions and alliterations of Hebrew poetry are to be felt even in the Greek of the gospels, just as in his parables we are aware of the same manner of thought as that which produced the midrash [the Rabbinic literature] of Israel....But it was not only by birth, breeding, manner of life, friendship and means of expression that Jesus, as a man, was a Jew and so wholly a Jew.... he was also a Jew in that he recognized that his people had a particular mission and a destiny entirely of their own. he, like all his countrymen, was a son of the covenant (Henry Daniel-Rops, Daily Life in Palestine in the Time of Christ (London: Weidenfeld, 1962), pp. 481-483).

Answer for yourself: If a modern Christian scholar can say these things about Jesus, words which some of his Jewish counterparts can also endors, why has it been so difficult, and often almost impossible, for other Christians to see things this way, too?

This question leads us to a cluster of Christian problems.

CHRISTIANITY AND IDOLATRY

Many Christians suffer from what I call "double vision" when they behold the Jesus of the New Testament. When the central character of the New Testament is referred to as "Jesus," they can vaguely envision him as a Jew. But to avoid any confusion, they almost never call him simply Jesus, or "Jesus of Nazareth," or "the Nazarene," the way Jews do. They almost always refer to him as "our Lord Jesus," or as "Jesus Christ". Jesus, the man, is depicted as a Jew in the New Testament, however, but by deifying him Christians have in essence read him out of his strictly Jewish context.

Michael Wyschogrod, a contemporary Jewish theologian, has noted the following:

"[Among] those difficult issues which most distinctly separate Judaism from Christianity . . . none is more significant than the problem of Christology, the evaluation of the person of Jesus as an equal person of the triune God. For the Jew, this raises the ultimate danger of idolatry, of the deification of a human being. It must be clearly understood that this is a far more serious issue than the question of whether Jesus was the messiah" (Michael Wyschogrod, "A New Stage in Jewish-Christian Dialogue," Judaism, Summer, 1982, pp. 361-62).

JEWISH REJECTION OF THE GENTILE'S CHRISTIANIZED "CHRIST"

A related Christian problem is the inability to see Jesus the Jew without also seeing him as the divine Christ the Jews had "rejected." This begins with the earliest documents of the Church: its sacred scripture, the New Testament. To compound the issue, none of these scriptural writers were contemporaries of Jesus. The documents carrying their names are a far cry from those who originally wrote them. The writers of the New Testament neither witnessed the events they described nor did they personally hear Jesus say the words they quoted. The Four Gospels—Matthew, Mark, Luke and John—which have traditionally been regarded as the very oldest of the writings, are now almost universally understood by scholars to have actually been written after the time of Paul, or several generations after Jesus died. Although the Gospels sound as if they are contemporary eyewitness accounts, the Epistles of Paul were actually written closer to the time given for the live of Jesus than were the Gospels. And even they were not written during the time the New Testament designates for his lifetime. Adolph Julicher states on page 469 of his An Introduction To The New Testament: "A large part of the New Testament writings is the work of two generations after the death of all the apostles." My personal studies over the last twenty years as proven such insight to be more than correct. Even more enigmatic, as Oxford don Geza Vermes has clearly demonstrated, is the fact that in his lifetime, Jesus himself was most vague and evasive whenever asked whether he was indeed the Jewish Messiah. It was only after his death that first Paul, and then later, the writers of the Gospels, publicly proclaimed Jesus as messiah, and then developed their Christianity on the basis of their own perceptions of Jesus (Geza Vermes, Jesus The Jew (London: Collins, 1973); see especially pp. 58-69).

GENTILE CHRISTIANITY IS NOT CONCERNED ABOUT "JESUS" THE MAN

Let us, however, concede for a moment that all of these records were not mere "hindsight" or a re-writing of Jewish religious history as a later generation of Gentile Christians saw it, but were based upon authentic oral traditions which remained faithful to the truth of past events, or of older teachings. And understand that is a stretch as it is given the fact that there exits no credible or unforged evidence for the life of Jesus of Nazareth. When Chrisians try to find evidence for the historical Jesus they look to Josephus and a quote concerning the supposed existence of Jesus. Here is the paragraph that currently appears in The Antiquities of the Jews, written by Josephus around 95 C.E.: "Now, there was about this time, Jesus, a wise man, if it be lawful to call him a man, for he was a doer of wonderful works--a teacher of such men as receive the truth with pleasure. He drew over to him both many of the Jews, and many of the Gentiles. He was [the] Christ; and when Pilate, at the suggestion of the principal men amongst us, had condemned him to the cross, those that loved him at the first did not forsake him, for he appeared to them alive again the third day, as the divine prophets had foretold these and ten thousand other wonderful things concerning him; and the tribe of Christians, so named for him are not extinct to this day." If this is the strongest and earliest extra-biblical evidence for the historical Jesus, then the scholarship is on the shakiest grounds. That passage from Josephus has been shown conclusively to be a forgery, and even conservative scholars admit it has been tampered with. But even were it historical, it dates from more than six decades after the supposed death of Jesus. Many scholars have largely discounted the Josephus paragaph as a later interpolation. The passage, although widely quoted by believers today, did not show up in the writings of Josephus until centuries after his death, at the beginning of the fourth century. Thoroughly dishonest church historian Eusebius is credited as the real author. The passage is grossly out of context, a clear hint that it was inserted at a later time. All scholars agree that Josephus, a Jew who never converted to Christianity and denounded all false messiahs of the Jews, strangley omits any treatise concering the Jesus as the supposed and hoped for Messiah of the Jews. Besides, not believeing the the Messiah of Judaism Josephus would not have called Jesus "the Christ" or "the truth," so such absurdities given the historical facts of Josesphus and his views of Jewish messianim reveals conclusively that the passage must have been doctored by a later Christian--evidence, by the way, that some early believers were in the habit of altering texts to the advantage of their theological agenda. The phrase "to this day" reveals it was written at a later time. Everyone agrees there was no "tribe of Christians" during the time of Josephus--Christianity did not get off the ground until the second century.

Irrespective of when these New Testament doctuments were actually written, what forcibly strikes an informed Gentile believer or a Jewish reader of the Epistles or the Gospels is the fact that both of them fail to deal fully with Jesus, the man. Paul tells us very little about the life of Jesus, and only mentions but two of the teachings that the later Christian Chruch put into his mouth in their New Testament so he is hardly a good source in trying to uncover the Jewish Jesus.

DEIFICATION OF A COSMIC CHRIST OR AN EARTHLY ANOINTED RABBI?

From Paul, or a later Pauline writer espousing a later belief attached to the Jesus, we know only that Jesus was crucified; that, as Paul supposedly believed, he was resurrected; that Jesus had a brother named James; and that Jesus taught that divorce was prohibited. As the basic molder of the new theology—indeed, as the real founder of Christianity—Paul was not interested in who Jesus was, but rather, in what he was: the divine, mystical redeeming savior of mankind, who now raised to immortality and is enthroned in Heaven above, in a glorified body, and whose Jewishness is only incidental to a larger universal cosmic mission. To Paul, the human career of Jesus was seen as merely an interval in the immortal life of a divine being.

A careful search of the Four Gospels reveals how difficult it is to separate the human from the divine Jesus, even when studying these Christian sources which purport to be eye-witness accounts of his life. Two of these, Mark and John, do not even discuss or describe his birth or boyhood. Instead, they present us with a mature Jesus. Despite certain differences and contradictions among the Four Gospels concerning certain events in Jesus' life, all of them have one overriding interest in common: the events of his final week on earth, which center on his impending death. Concerning even these events, there is some confusion: the trial and crucifixion, in John, take place on the day before Passover; in the other three Gospels, these events occur on the first day of Passover. The resurrected Jesus, in Matthew, appears in Galilee; Luke identifies the location somewhere else altogether—in Emmaus, near Jerusalem. Mark does not contain an account of the reappearance of the resurrected Jesus at all.

But these, as I see it, are mere quibbles. Infinitely more significant is the fact that not only later generations of Christian theologians but the New Testament writers themselves seem much less interested in the Jewish traditions of Jesus than they are in explaining why they regard him as their supernatural messiah.

There is good historical reason for this. At first, they were addressing only the Jews, urging them to accept Jesus as the foretold Jewish messiah. In putting Jesus forth in this manner to their own co-religionists, it was of little import to convince them that he was actually one of them; that was taken for granted. It was extremely vital, however, to persuade their fellow Jews that Jesus was indeed a supernatural messiah, and this explains why it is this aspect of Jesus, his divinity rather than his humanity, which became the central concern of the New Testament authors.

Martin Buber pointed out that this "process of deification" began with Paul, and continued with the Gospels, including John. He indicated that "the fundamental and persistent character of the messiah, as of one rising from humanity and clothed with power [the original Jewish view], was displaced by one substantially different: a heavenly being, who came down to the world, sojourned in it, left it, ascended to heaven and now enters upon the dominion of the world which originally belonged to him" (Martin Buber, Two Types of Faith (London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1951), p. 113).

Later, when it appeared that the Jewish community would continually reject, as Paul and others were teaching, a divine Jesus as its messiah, the Christian message was presented principally to the Gentiles, to whom Jewish life and traditions were alien, and in many ways too rigorous. Besides that they did not know the Jewish Scriptures nor what to look for in the coming of a messiah therefore they accepted without question what was taught to them, especially in light that much was molded to fit the pattern of their pagan gods. To stress the Jewishness of Jesus to a Jewish audience was clearly unnecessary. But to do so to a Gentile audience was totally irrelevant, perhaps even counterproductive—considering the difficulties pagans had in accepting monotheism, let alone the ethical and ritual "burdens" of Jewish religious teaching contained in obedience to commandments from God.

SUBORDINATION OF THE RELIGION OF JESUS TO THE NEW RELIGION ABOUT JESUS

So it was that New Testament authors subordinated the religion of Jesus to their new religion "in-the-making": the religion about Jesus, which was centered not so much on his life and teachings as upon his mystical death and resurrection. This is Christology, wherein all of life and creation are centered in the belief in the crucified and risen Christ. Christology, and those who preached or accepted it, transformed the "religion of Jesus" into "the religion about Jesus"—no longer the man, but the eternal Christ who died to bring salvation to the whole world through his church.

From that time forward, the Jewish ethical and religious teachings, as embodied in the Torah-law and the Hebrew prophets, were viewed as transcended, even overturned, by the atoning death of Christ. As Paul, or our "Romanized" Paul himself had put it, "if justification were through the law [Torah] then Christ died to no purpose" (Galatians 2:21).

Answer for yourself: Since when was justification not through keeping the Law?

What Jesus had become in Christian thought, Gentile Church Councils, and Gentile Christian theology, not who he was in historical Jewish though and reality, became paramount for the Gentile Church. In such a situation the Jewishness of Jesus was expressly rendered insignificant, as if it had never been. All of which helps to explain why Jesus, in Anglo-Saxon countries, has been portrayed by artists and sculptors as if he were an Anglo-Saxon; and in other regions of the world, too, visualized by different cultures—from the Orient to the Occident—as if he had lived and grown up in their own world. In bringing Jesus to the world by all manner of missionary means, the churches have all but denied his Jewish heritage. To make Christ accessible to everyone, he could no longer belong to one in particular. His Jewishness would serve as an impediment.

Answer for yourself: For if his own people did not accept him as messiah, why should any other people see him as their savior?

In practice, then, while the churches borrowed the idea of messiah from Judaism, the pagans, whom they especially sought to convert to Christianity, were not taught about Jesus the Jew or the revelation of God as filtered to man through the Jewish culture and the Jewish religion. And neither have you! To do so would probably have been too great a source of confusion. That is exactly what my Senior Pastor once told me when teaching a Sunday class entitled "Revelation Of A Jewish messiah". Such new and corrective information is seen as confusing, especially as it confronts and corrects the hundreds of lies taught as truths in Christianity today. When lies are taught as truth, and one interjects Biblical and Historical truth, confusion is to result. But this is necessary if we are ever to come to the truth. Many scholars believe that large numbers of converts to Christianity were drawn from those pagans who had first been attracted to Judaism. To preach the Jewishness of Jesus to these recent converts would have been counterproductive: it could have perhaps led some of them back to Judaism, not forward to Christianity; or at least this is the common belief held by most Christians. All roads lead to Biblical Judaism and not Rome, and the sooner you face this fact the better. Jesus is a Jew and not a Christian.

But the problem did not end there. In the years before Constantine the Great converted to Christianity (and with his conversion made the entire Roman Empire Christian in the fourth century, C.E.), pagans in the Empire saw active and spiritually vibrant synagogue communities all around them. To complicate things further, many of them, especially the more learned, were also attending Jewish services, either as converts, or as interested candidates for admission to the Jewish faith. Indeed, there were even many recent Christians who still admired Judaism and continued to engage in Jewish practices. You might say that they wished to live the Jewish religious life of their Christian Savior. Understandably, these "Judaizers," as the Church contemptuously called them, were not to be tolerated by the official Christian community that developed after the 2nd century.

It is at this point that the Christian problem becomes exacerbated. Most pagan converts to Christianity had joined a universal religion of salvation, one that offered each of them—as private persons—life everlasting. For these, even if Judaism had never existed, this new and glittering faith was powerful enough on its own. Its promises of eternal bliss for those who believed in its Savior were sufficient rewards in themselves. It was only because Jews still continued to survive, whether in the earlier days of Paul and the writers of the Gospels, or during the pre-Christian centuries of the Roman Empire, that church leaders could not fully avoid dealing with the Jewishness of Jesus. In their minds, however, Jesus the Jew could be viewed in only one way: as an eternal reminder of the error of Jews who refused to recognize him as the long-awaited messiah, prophesied by their own Hebrew prophets. But what they failed to recognize at this time is that the passages that they touted as "messianic" were purposeful forgeries of the Hebrew Scriptures that falsely made it appear as if Jesus was the fulfillment of Moses and the Prophets.

So we are forced back to our starting point: the only purpose Judaism served to Christians called upon to take the Jewishness of Jesus into serious account was to proclaim the good tidings that the "Christian messiah" had lived among them. But instead of seeing this positively, they used this inescapable fact as a theological weapon. Jewish rejection of him would always remain a stain; the "mark of Cain," the Bible's first murderer, would forever accompany them. The Jews, in the Christian's opinion, deserved their punishment: destruction of their Temple; exile and banishment from their own land; and wandering throughout the world forever. This argument would clearly help the rapidly expanding Church to dissuade would-be converts from joining this wretched people. Judaism was no longer even a rival claimant of the truth, but an accursed religion. The only way to come to God the Father was through his divine son, the Christ. And he was not to be found in the surpassed Synagogue, but only in the Church, his divine body. For as the Fathers of the Church taught, "outside the Church there is no salvation." In one fell swoop, they had done away with the need to deal with, or to appreciate, the Jewishness of Jesus. In 1948 the nation of Israel was re-established, and that all changed!

Leading Protestant ecumenists, like Bishop Stephen Neill, while devoutly hoping for Jewish-Christian dialogue often fail to take the autonomy and self-sufficiency of Judaism into account. "The Christian faith may learn much from other faiths," he writes, reaching out his hands in brotherly love. Half a sentence later, however, he takes it all back, without being aware of the full impact of his religious imperialism on his Jewish "brothers-in-dialogue". His complete sentence reads as follows: "The Christian faith may learn much from other faiths; but it is universal in its claims; in the end Christ must be acknowledged as Lord of all".

THE CHRISTIAN TEMPTATION

There are other well-intentioned Christian scholars who wish to achieve reconciliation between Christians and Jews despite the hostility of ages past. Far from seeing Jesus as the stumbling block that has set the two groups apart, they affirm the Christian need to understand his Jewishness, and they also go to great lengths to "prove" that nothing in the New Testament can be said to be explicitly anti-Jewish. One of these, the liberal Catholic scholar Gregory Baum, provides us with an interesting example of this "Christian problem."

In 1965, Baum wrote a lengthy book whose title asked the tell-tale question: "Is the New Testament Anti-Semitic?" He wrote then that The Christian Church of today facing Judaism cannot regard itself, as it [did] 1900 years ago, as the fulfillment and replacement of Jewish religion contemporary to it." To prove this, he earnestly set out to show that only a misreading of the New Testament would permit the conclusion that its writers were antagonistic to the Jewish people and religion. "The hard words," he then thought, "that biblical writers addressed to impenitent Jews of their day are God's message to the Christian Church, for the resistance to the Gospel of Jesus' contemporaries and Paul's audiences is today the temptation of the Christian believer. The temptation of the Synagogue then was to resist the Christ who made demands in the context of its traditional faith. This temptation today exists only in the Church" (Gregory Baum, Is the New Testament Anti-Semitic? (New York: Paulist Press: 1965), p.9). Whatever else Baum was saying about Christians today, he had still regarded the Jews of the time of Jesus as sinful and "impenitent" simply because they did not accept him as Christ. In 1965, Baum was still very far from offering Jews the hand of reconciliation because he, like others, still refused to understand that Jesus the Jew does not, and did not, stand between Jews and Christians as a great divide. It is Jesus molded into a Christian Gentile Christ, rather than a Jewish Rabbi, and the claims made in his name by the Gentile Church, which do.

Toward the end of that earlier work, Baum had fallen right back into the old Christian theological straitjacket, despite the preceding three hundred and more pages of closely reasoned hermeneutics which sought to deny any explicit anti-Jewishness in the New Testament. "Since the Christian creed," he wrote, his opposed to Jewish doctrine, since Christian faith is the antithesis of the religion of Law, since the Church of Christ regards herself as superseding the Synagogue, there is contained in Christianity a perpetual possibility that its radical opposition to Judaism may deteriorate into animosity and hate against the Jews. The intrinsic opposition to Judaism of the Christian faith can, of course, never be removed or mitigated, for we believe, what the Jews deny, that with Christ the messianic king has come and humanity has entered the last days initiating the kingdom of glory (Gregory Baum, Is the New Testament Anti-Semitic? (New York: Paulist Press: 1965), p. 329-330).

In fairness to Baum, it should be noted that even then he firmly believed that with "Christian love" the implicit "temptation" to anti-Jewishness contained in classical Christianity can, and should, be overcome. Yet he did not deny, for the reasons he had himself enumerated earlier, that there is a built-in "Christian temptation" to be hostile to Jews.

But Baum had a profound change of heart a few years later. He had obviously been grappling with his "Christian problem" ever since he had tried, with great effort, to prove that the New Testament was not responsible for anti-Jewish teachings. Finally, in 1974, he recanted and publicly confessed his radical change of mind. In his introduction to a noteworthy work by a fellow Catholic theologian, Rosemary Ruether, he explained why he was ready to deal with this serious question in a radically different fashion than before. he wrote there:

While I was bound to acknowledge that already the New Testament proclaimed the Christian message with a polemical edge against the religion of Israel, I refused to draw the consequences from this. I was still convinced that the anti-Jewish trends in Christianity were peripheral and accidental, not grounded in the New Testament itself but due to later development, and that it would consequently be fairly easy to purify the preachings of the Church from anti-Jewish bias. Since then, especially under the influence of Rosemary Ruether's writings, I have had to change my mind . . .

All attempts of Christian theologians to derive a more positive conclusion from Paul's teaching in Romans 9-11 (and I have done this as much as others) are grounded in wishful thinking. What Paul and the entire Christian tradition taught is unmistakably negative: the religion of Israel is now superseded, the Torah abrogated, the promises fulfilled in the Christian Church, the Jews struck with blindness, and whatever remains of the election to Israel rests as a burden upon them in the present age. If the Church wants to clear itself of the anti-Jewish trends built into its teaching, a few marginal correctives (as in the Vatican Declaration on the Jews of 1965) will not do. It must examine the very center of its proclamation and reinterpret the meaning of the gospel for our times . . . It was not until the holocaust of six million Jewish victims that some Christian theologians have been willing to face this question in a radical way (Introduction to Rosemary Ruether, Faith and Fratricide (New York: The Seabury Press, 1974), pp. 3-4; 6-7).

Here we have a supreme example of the way one leading Catholic thinker was moved to realize that key Church documents, in this case, its very own Scriptures, had served to impede the practice of Christian love and charity, at least as they had applied to Jews and Judaism. Indeed, we find here echoes of the hallowed prayer of Pope John XXIII: "Forgive us the curse which we unjustly laid upon the name of the Jews. Forgive us that, with our curse, we crucified Thee a second time." Baum and others like him have performed a major ecumenical service and advanced Christian self-understanding by their bold, giant steps.

Yet for all this new-found awareness on the part of a select few the larger problems unhappily still remain. Despite all the Christian "love" and "charity" Jews might some day receive, I would contend that Christianity is structured on a foundation that makes it "tempting" to nullify and even to try to abolish Judaism. The still-unresolved, twenty centuries long, Christian problem remains.

Answer for yourself: To the Christians I propose this question: As the early Gentile Christians altered the oral tradition, as well as the written manuscripts to reflect their theology of hatred toward the Jews, why don't we, as loving followers of a Jewish Rabbi named Jesus, amend our Christian doctrine and teachings in the New Testament to reflect true "Christian love"?

Answer for yourself: Why permit the Christian New Testament, a sin-prone communication to remain eternally vulnerable to historically conditioned, anti-Jewish corruptions?

Answer for yourself: Why not, as Roy Eckardt put it, choose between reconciliation and winning battles for the "true faith" of Christianity?

And I would add: you cannot have both.

Answer for yourself: How, indeed, did it come about that Christians were put into so awkward a position in the first place?

Answer for yourself: Put another way: what happened in the past to make it possible for Christians to take an original Jewish idea of messiah, and so radically alter it, that it was transformed into God incarnate in the divine person of Jesus the Christ?

It is time to let the simple facts of Jewish history speak for themselves. Shalom.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO JESUS AND HIS FAITH?

Answer for yourself: Why is "Christianity" divided up into over 2,000 competing denominations and sects?

Answer for yourself: Why do churches calling themselves "Christian" have so many differing beliefs and practices?

Answer for yourself: What happened to "THE" (one and only) faith once given to the saints when today we have over 2,000 different "flavors" to choose from?

Answer for yourself: What happened to the unity of the saints? Is God the Author of this incredible CONFUSION?

Answer for yourself: And what about you?

Have you ever really proved why you believe what you "believe"?

Answer for yourself: Or did you just grow up in "your" church, taking its doctrines and practices for granted--without deeply studying the Bible?

Answer for yourself: Did you like me accept everything you were told because a man you respected stood before you and told you "what was so?"

Answer for yourself: Could he have been wrong and you not know it?

Answer for yourself: Shouldn't you PROVE what you believe by the inspired Word of God?

Yeshua gives you this warning:

"For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.... For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; inasmuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect" (Matt. 24:5, 24 KJV).

Yeshua did not say that only a few would come in His name, but that many would come in his name--representing themselves as "Christian" preachers who proclaim Yeshua as the Christ--DECEIVING MANY! In other words, there was to be a mass deception based on the false teachings of the many who would claim to come "in Yeshua's name."

Frankly, it is easy for religious teachers to appropriate the Son of God's name as a cloak for their personal doctrines (just watch Christian television for a while), whether or not what they say has any relationship to Yeshua's life, teaching or message at all! Sadly most Christians are not even aware that is occurring because of their lack of knowledge and understanding of God's Word. That is why Paul commanded his Gentile audience:

"PROVE all things; hold fast that which is good" (1Thess. 5:21 KJV).

Each of you is responsible to check up on the preaching you hear or read (like this article), whatever the source. Don't make careless assumptions! Be sure you know what the Bible really says!

The Apostle Paul also admonishes,

"For if he who comes preaches another Yeshua whom we have not preached, or if you receive a different spirit which you have not received, or a different gospel, which you have not accepted, you may well put up with it" (2 Cor. 11:4).....[good advice!].

Answer for yourself: Would you put up with "another Yeshua"?

Answer for yourself: Could you have been deceived into believing a false Christ and a false message purported to have come from Christ?

Answer for yourself: What will you do when you find out you have?

THE REAL TEACHING OF YESHUA

Remember, the real Yeshua was a circumcised Jew. He met in the synagogue and kept the Sabbath day. He kept the Ten Commandments as a way of life:

If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. (John 15:10).

Answer for yourself: Was Yeshua's commandments the Law of Moses which His Father had given him? You bet!

He inspired Peter to write, "Christ ...leaving us an example, that you should follow His steps: 'Who committed no sin, nor was guile found in His mouth'" (1 Peter 2:21-22).

Paul instructed the Christians of his day,

"Imitate me, just as I also imitate Christ" (1 Cor. 11:1).

Without question in the Christian Church, Yeshua is our example--the light that God sent into the world to show us how we ought to live. He did that by modeling the Commandments of God daily before the people.

The real Yeshua said,

"Why do you call Me good? No one is good but One, that is, God. But if you want to enter into life, keep the commandments" (Matt. 19:17).

He continually made clear by his life and his teachings that the way into God's Kingdom was not only to believe on him but to believe his message and to OBEY the laws and ways of God and--through the Holy Spirit--to develop godly character.

The real Yeshua based His teaching squarely on the spiritual law of God, the Ten Commandments. In fact, he came to "magnify the law and make it honorable" (Is. 42:21). If you will study the Sermon on the Mount in Matthew 5, 6 and 7, you will find that Yeshua did just that. He magnified the Ten Commandments, making them even more binding because Christians are to keep them in the "spirit" or intent--NOT just the letter. So now Yeshua's true followers must not only avoid murder, they are not to even have a hateful or demeaning attitude toward any other humans (Matt. 5:21-22).

The real Yeshua did not sanction weak marital commitments or easy, no-fault divorces (Matt. 19:1-9). He taught that not only are we to avoid committing adultery, but that a man must not even lust after a woman! Real Christians must "LIVE by... every word of God" (Luke 4:4)....and that means the Laws of God!

WHICH HOLY DAYS DID YESHUA KEEP....WHOM WE ARE TO "IMITATE"....REMEMBER?

The biblical record states that Yeshua kept the biblical Sabbath and the biblical Holy Days [FESTIVALS] which God gave Israel. These are the days kept not only by Yeshua but also, according to the Greek New Testament, by his apostles for many decades after his death (Acts 2:1; 16:13; 17:1-2; 18:21).

Yet today it is only the few who follow the example of Yeshua and his apostles.

Answer for yourself: What happened? How did these biblical Holy Days get changed? You need to read Constantine's "Easter Letter" to see it for yourself! Request it and I will send it to you and then you will know for sure because Constantine "boasts" that he will have nothing in common with these "detestable Jews." He changed them!

Answer for yourself: Why do some say obedience to the Ten Commandments is not necessary for Christians today?

Answer for yourself: Why are divorces, broken homes and immorality skyrocketing in our so-called "Christian" nations?

Answer for yourself: Why have some of the greatest wars in human history been waged between the so-called "Christian" nations of Europe?

Notice the Apostle Paul's warning to the Ephesian elders near the end of his ministry.

"For I know this, that after my departure savage wolves will come in among you, not sparing the flock. Also from among yourselves men will rise up, speaking perverse things, to draw away the disciples after themselves. Therefore watch, and remember that for three years I did not cease to warn everyone night and day with tears" (Acts 20:29-31).

Writing near the end of the Apostolic Age, the Apostle Jude warned, "Beloved, while I was very diligent to write to you concerning our common salvation (inclusion with the salvation already offered the Jews), I found it necessary to write to you exhorting you to contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered to the saints. For certain men have crept in unnoticed, who long ago were marked out for this condemnation, ungodly men, who turn the grace of our God into licentiousness and deny the only Lord God and our Lord Yeshua Christ" (Jude 3-4).

IS YOUR FOCUS ON THE MAN OR THE MESSAGE OF THE MAN?

Slowly but surely, clever men--inspired by the Adversary--began to focus the minds of Christians increasingly on the person of Yeshua instead of his message. While doing this, they subtly modified and finally did away with the real message Yeshua brought from the Father.

Many prominent church historians acknowledge this. In his excellent handbook on church history, The Story of the Christian Church, Jesse Lyman Hurlbut states, "We name the last generation of the first century, from 68 to 100 A.D., 'The Age of Shadows," partly because the gloom of persecution was over the church; but more especially because of all periods in the history, it is the one about which we know the least. We have no longer the clear light of the Book of Acts to guide us; and no author of that age has filled the blank in the history. We would like to read the later work by such helpers of St. Paul as Timothy, Apollos and Titus, but all these and St. Paul's other friends drop out of the record at his death. For 50 years after St. Paul's life a curtain hangs over the church, through which we strive vainly to look; and when at last it rises, about 120 A.D. with the writings of the earliest church fathers, we find a church in many aspects very different from that in the days of St. Peter and St. Paul" (p. 41).

Answer for yourself: WHY was the church "VERY DIFFERENT" than when Peter and Paul were alive?

Answer for yourself: WHO gave its human leaders the authority to change basic doctrines and practices which were commanded to be continually taught by Yeshua in the Great Commission (teach them to observe those things I commanded you...remember they were his Father's Commandments)?

Mr. Hurlbut continues,

"As long as the church was mainly Jewish, the Hebrew Sabbath was kept; but as it became increasingly Gentile the first day gradually took the place of the seventh day" (p. 45).

"The forms and ceremonies of paganism gradually crept into the worship. Some of the old heathen feasts became church festivals with a change of name and of worship. About 405 A.D. images of saints and martyrs began to appear in the churches, at first as memorials, then in succession revered, adored, and worshipped" (p. 79).

How very clever these early false ministers were! First, the images were just "memorials." Then, after people adjusted to that little modification, the images were revered, then "adored," and finally "worshipped"!

Slowly, subtly, bit by bit, people were deceived by the word games of clever apostate strategists. The false teachers would tell the people, "We're not really changing anything. This is just a little upgrade, a clarification, just a different way of explaining the same things we have always believed."

The hapless sheep were led astray gradually--ever so gradually--as paganism took over the name of Christianity! People eventually came to accept the idea that all you had to do was believe on the name of Yeshua. These false religious leaders did not teach real repentance. There was no real counting the cost and dedication to obeying God's laws--to letting spirit of Yeshua as seen in his life and ministry live in you the same life he lived 1,900 years ago! Christians gradually accepted the teaching that the Ten Commandments were "nailed to the cross" (instead of that "part" of the Law which was against us..the curse for disobedience..read the passage again) or in some other manner done away. Strangely, they even began to venerate the cross itself--a horrifying object of torture and execution in the pagan Roman Empire!

The true message that God sent from heaven about the coming Kingdom of God, obeying God's laws, overcoming the self and preparing to rule with Messiah in the coming Kingdom--all this was slowly watered down and finally eradicated. Instead, a message was preached about the person of Yeshua --his "Christmas story" birth, his loving nature, his death on the cross--though cleverly omitting the fact that Yeshua personally lived the Ten Commandments and taught them as a way of life! These false preachers especially omitted teaching the Scripturally verifiable doctrine about the biblical Holy Days of God and the weekly Sabbath.

The people were left without any definite standard of behavior. They were told, "Accept Christ," "Love the Lord," "Love your neighbors" and other such generalities. But the specific way of life based on the Ten Commandments was cast aside. Therefore, gradually, people lost sight of the sinfulness of lying, cheating, stealing, committing adultery and even waging WAR on their fellow "Christian" nations as occurred in Europe. They simply didn't know what sin was!

The Bible says, "Sin is the transgression of the LAW" (1 John 3:4 KJV). If God's Law has passed away then it stands to reason that there is no more sin, but we know better than accept that. The Law is still in effect and should be our example in such things as worship, tithing, celebration of Festival days, and practical manifestations of our love for our fellow man. But the attention of "Christians" during the Dark Ages following the great apostasy became focused more and more on the worship of the virgin Mary, the veneration of idols and pleasing the local priest or bishop--whose word was often the "law."

Over the centuries, an entirely different approach to Christianity was foisted onto the people. "Another Yeshua"--as Paul warned about--was presented to the unsuspecting public.

"SOMETHING VASTLY DIFFERENT"

In his enlightening book, The Church's Debt to Heretics, Professor Rufus M. Jones tells us, "If by any chance Christ Himself had been taken by his later followers as the model and pattern of the new way, and a serious attempt had been made to set up his life and teaching as the standard and norm for the Church, Christianity would have been something vastly different from what it became. Then 'heresy' would have been as it is not now, deviation from his way, his teaching, his spirit, his kingdom.... What we may properly call "Galilean Christianity" had a short life, though there have been notable attempts to revive it and make it live again, and here and there spiritual prophets have insisted that anything else other than this simple Galilean religion is 'heresy'; but the main line of historic development has taken a different course and has marked the emphasis very differently" (pp. 15-16).

Answer for yourself: Isn't that a remarkable admission from a respected scholar of church history?

If Christianity had really followed Yeshua's life and teachings, then Christianity would have developed in a "VASTLY DIFFERENT" manner!

As Yeshua prophesied, many false teachers came in His own name (Matt. 24:5). They talked about Yeshua. They talked about "love." But they set forth a false Christ and a false message about His person--rather than faithfully preaching the message of the coming Kingdom of God, which the Father sent by Him.

Answer for yourself: The result?

CONFUSION AND DISUNITY REIGN

People are confused about true Christianity. Those who do believe in some form of Christianity are divided into hundreds and thousands of competing sects and denominations. Very few of them understand the original form of Christianity that Yeshua and his apostles taught and lived!

The "Christian" world is in a malaise. It is confused--and its moral system is impotent without the sure foundation of God's law. Secular forces are increasingly dictating the standards of conduct, whereas that used to be the prerogative of religious leaders.

We behold the spectacle of sexual perverts taking over more and more key posts in government, in education and even in some of the mainline churches! We behold the horrifying statistics about millions of unborn babies having their skulls crushed and being vacuumed out of their mothers' wombs! We have become numb to homosexual ministers who without shame dot the televisions of our country. We behold a society that is truly coming apart at the seams. We behold a society that will soon be directly PUNISHED by the Great God who gives life and breath to all.

Answer for yourself: Why?

Because our peoples have been deceived into believing in "another Yeshua." Because our people have lost contact with the true God and His revealed way of life.

As Yeshua said,

"Not everyone who says to Me, 'Lord, Lord,' shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of My Father in heaven. Many will say to Me in that day, 'Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Your name, cast out demons in Your name, and done many wonders in Your name?'

Please pay attention the this next verse and the Greek word used for "iniquity:"

And <2532> then <5119> will I profess <3670> (5692) unto them <846>, <3754> I never <3763> knew <1097> (5627) you <5209>: depart <672> (5720) from <575> me <1700>, ye that work <2038> (5740)iniquity <458>.

Let me say it another way:

And then I will declare to them, 'I never knew you; depart from Me, you who practice LAWLESSNESS'" (Matt. 7:21-23)!

The Greek word for iniquity is as follows:

BDB/Thayers # 458 458 anomia {an-om-ee'-ah} from 459; TDNT - 4:1085,646; n f AV - iniquity 12, unrighteousness 1, transgress the law + 4060 1, transgression of the law 1; 15

1. the condition of without law
2. because ignorant of it
3. because of violating it
4. contempt and violation of law, iniquity, wickedness

Let us look at the root word used:

BDB/Thayers # 459 459 anomos {an'-om-os} from 1 (as a negative particle) and 3551; TDNT - 4:1086,646; adj

AV - without law 4, transgressor 2, wicked 2, lawless 1, unlawful 1; 10

1. destitute of (the Mosaic) law
2. "of the Gentiles".....DID YOU NOTICE THE WORD INCLUDES GENTILES LIKE YOU AND ME??????
3. departing from the law, a violator of the law, lawless, wicked

Answer for yourself: Do you not see that Yeshua is referring also to Gentiles who are ignorant of and who are destitute of the Mosaic Law?

Answer for yourself: Are you a violator of the Mosaic Law in areas such as worship, observance of Biblical Festivals or do you practice your church's pagan holiday, and are you a violator in giving your tithe to organizations who are using the money in ways contrary to how God said it was to be used....as contained and delineated in His Laws?

WHAT YOU SHOULD DO HAVING SEEN THIS FOR YOURSELF?

If God has opened your mind thus far to what I am saying, then I urge you to begin a genuine STUDY of the Holy Bible. You may wish to begin reading carefully and thoughtfully through every word of the New Testament. Look key words up in their original language. Get a Strong's Concordance and a Thayer's Greek Lexicon. Get for yourself a Stone Edition Tanakh which is a more accurate translation of the Hebrew Scriptures than your Christian Bibles. If you need help call us at Bet Emet Ministries and we will teach you how to use the study aids available.

Study the books of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John--then the book of Acts.

Answer for yourself: What did Yeshua say one should do to inherit eternal life (Matt. 19:17)?

Answer for yourself: Did he say the Ten Commandments were done away or were not important anymore (Matt. 5:17-20)?

Answer for yourself: Didn't God inspire the beloved Apostle John to say at the very end of the Bible that the true saints will keep the commandments of God (Rev. 12:17; 14:12)?

Study with an open mind and find out what Yeshua said about Christianity! Then, pray fervently and ask God for genuine understanding.

The plain TRUTH is that God has let this world go its own way for these almost 6,000 years of recorded human history. He is allowing people--under the influence of the self and the Adversary--to do their own thing. We are writing the lessons of human experience in suffering of every kind.

The selfishness of men's hearts and their greed and hatred for the Law has got men and women so confused that they don't know which end is up.

Speaking directly of a spirit battle just a few years ahead of us now, God's Word says, "So the great dragon was cast out, that serpent of old, called the Devil and Satan, who deceives the WHOLE WORLD; he was cast to the earth, and his angels were cast out with him" (Rev. 12:9).

Answer for yourself: Could you be one who was deceived?

Answer for yourself: What could be more clear than that?

Again, through the Apostle Paul, God states,

"But even if our gospel is veiled, it is veiled to those who are perishing, whose minds the god of this age has blinded, who do not believe, lest the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine on them" (2 Cor. 4:3-4).

You need to cry out to God for true understanding...and that also means reading between the lines when reading Paul for often Paul teaches true Biblical faith and at other times makes great compromises toward it in reaching the non-Jews. But this becomes easy once you learn the faith of Yeshua in-depth and then read Paul. One major key to understanding you should prove to yourself is that Yeshua and the original apostles taught the full Truth.

Carnal men in various ecclesiastical denominations, churches, and councils have NO AUTHORITY from God to change that teaching and that way of life!

For instance, we read that Yeshua said,

"If you want to enter into life, keep the commandments" (Matt. 19:17).

Later, He said,

"I have kept My Father's commandments and abide in His love" (John 15:10).

And after his recorded resurrection Yeshua commissioned his disciples,

"Go therefore and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all things that I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the age. Amen" (Matt. 28:19-20).

Notice...Yeshua commanded them to teach others to OBSERVE THOSE THINGS THAT HE COMMANDED (remember his commandments were his Father's Commandments).

Answer for yourself: So the question you need to ask yourself is: "Who had the authority to CHANGE this direct command of Yeshua?"

Answer for yourself: Does your preacher have the right to preach something other than the truth as read and understood in the Bible (often only found when original languages are consulted)?

Answer for yourself: Who had authority to teach something else? Obviously, NO ONE.

Answer for yourself: Should you trust what your preacher or teacher says if they don't know Hebrew and Greek and are therefore unable to teach you the hidden meanings of words in the Bible which often are 180 contrary to what the English translation says? The ANSWER IS NO!!!!!!

Again, we read that Yeshua always kept the same seventh-day Sabbath that all the Jews were keeping (Luke 4:16). No church historian ever argues that point. Then we read that the Apostle Paul,

"as his custom was, went in to them, and for three Sabbaths reasoned with them from the Scriptures" (Acts 17:2).

Later, Paul

"reasoned in the synagogue every Sabbath, ...(Acts 18:4).

Still later, we find James--the presiding apostle of the Mother Church at Jerusalem--telling Paul some THIRTY YEARS after Yeshua' death....

"You see, brother, how many myriads of Jews there are who have believed, and they are all zealous for the law" (Acts 21:20).

Notice that Yeshua's church was still zealous for the Law over 30 years after his death

And we find Paul himself helping pay the expenses for some offerings to demonstrate that--in James's words--

"you yourself also walk orderly and keep the law" (v. 24).

Can you even imagine the outrage among the Jewish Christians that would have occurred if Paul--who was regarded as perhaps a little liberal on a minor sacrificial part of the law--was, in fact, advocating the ABOLITION of the Holy Sabbath day: one of the Ten Commandments, which God gave at Mt. Sinai and which Yeshua always taught and practiced! The UPROAR that would have occurred throughout the Jewish/Christian world would have made the Acts 15 discussion over circumcision seem like a cup of spilled milk in comparison!

THE EXAMPLE OF THE JERUSALEM CHURCH...DID THEY GET IT WRONG?

A vital clue to understanding the puzzle of a modern "Christianity," which directly contradicts the teachings and practices of Yeshua and the original apostles, is to study the way of life of the original Mother Church--the Church of God at Jerusalem.

Paul wrote the mainly Gentile church at Thessalonica (apply this to your church for you also are a Gentile church) :

"For you, brethren, became IMITATORS of the churches of God which are in Judea in Christ Yeshua" (1 Thess. 2:14).

Answer for yourself: Does your church imitate the Jewish doctrines and synagogues as they existed in Judea when this was written; for example in doctrines of atonement, repentance, salvation, tithing, sabbath, and Holy Days? Not hardly. Something tragic has happened to "the" faith once given to the saints and one only need look at the anti-Semitism of the early church fathers and the latter Catholic Church of Rome for the reasons! Nearly all church historians recognize that the earliest headquarters church was at Jerusalem--and that it set the pattern for the teaching and way of life for apostolic Christianity.

A respected and thoroughly researched history of this period is Edward Gibbon's monumental work, The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Writing of the apostolic and post-apostolic period, Gibbon states,

"The first fifteen bishops of Jerusalem were all circumcised Jews; and the congregation over which they presided united the law of Moses with the doctrine of Christ. It was natural that the primitive tradition of a church which was founded only 40 days after the death of Christ, and was governed almost as many years under the immediate inspection of his apostle, should be received as the standard of orthodoxy. The distant churches very frequently appealed to the authority of their venerable Parent" (vol. 1, p. 389).

DID THE WHOLE OF THE LAW APPLY TO THE NON-JEWISH BELIEVER?

I should point out here that "the law" which the early Gentile Christians observed was NOT the complete law of Moses. That is a mistaken idea foisted off on church historians by the misguided theologians of the Middle Ages. What the Gentile Christians did observe were those parts of the Mosaic Law which applied to them for much of it did not (the Laws of Noah). Basically it consisted of the Ten Commandments, which Yeshua had always taught and commanded--the spiritual law of Almighty God (Rom. 7:14) along with other Laws which previously made up the Noahide Laws from the Covenant of Noah. Along with this they were to practice Isa. 56 where, because they loved God, they would choose "those things that pleased God" and incorporate them into their life as well as both belief and practice. But because these early Christians observed the biblical Sabbath, many historians persist in calling it the "law of Moses" and try to lump it in with animal sacrifices. This is absolutely WRONG and it is deceptive!

But the knowledge that the early church kept God's law is everywhere. Will Durant, in The Story of Civilization, said,

"Most of the apostles, apparently spared in this persecution because they still observed the law, remained in Jerusalem with the Judaic Christians. While Peter carried the Gospel to the towns of Judea, James 'the Just,' 'the brother of the Lord,' became the head of the now reduced and impoverished church in Jerusalem. James practiced the Law in all its severity" (vol. 3, pp. 576-577).

It is clear that many historians recognize that even the early Gentile Christians observed the Sabbath, the biblical Holy Days and the obedient way of life taught by the original apostles

Answer for yourself: Who gave ANYONE authority to change all of this?

Speaking of the decades after the destruction of Jerusalem in 70 A.D., Will Durant writes,

"Therefore Judaic Christianity waned in number and power, and yielded the new religion to be transformed by the Greek mind.... Judaic Christianity survived for five centuries in a little group of Syriac Christians called Ebionim ('the poor'), who practiced Christian poverty and the full Jewish Law. At the end of the second century the Gentile Church condemned them as heretics" (vol. 3, p. 577).

The truth of the matter is that Apostolic Christianity was preserved by many little groups here and there--far beyond the end of the 2nd century. That is why the Apostle John was inspired to describe a remnant of the true Church at the END of this age as those "who keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Yeshua" (Rev. 12:17).

Answer for yourself: Will you be keeping the commandments of God which is the testimony of Yeshua when the Messiah comes?

Answer for yourself: Or will you continue to live in darkness and in ignorance of them, thus expecting the sure rebuke of Yeshua: depart from me ye who practice Lawlessness (not keep the Laws of Moses)?

He again identified God's true Church:

"Here is the patience of the saints; here are those who keep the commandments of God and the faith of Yeshua" (Rev. 14:12).

Oh, by the way, notice that we are to KEEP THE FAITH OF JESUS...not just have faith "in" Yeshua.

Answer for yourself: And what was Yeshua's faith: Gentile Christianity or Messianic Judaism? Biblical Messianic Judaism!

And at the very end of the New Testament, John was inspired to tell us,

"Blessed are those who do His (God's) commandments, that they may have the right to the tree of life, and may enter through the gates into the city" (Rev. 22:14).

Yeshua also said,

"Enter by the narrow gate; for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leads to destruction, and there are many who go in by it. Because narrow is the gate and difficult is the way which leads to life, and there are few who find it" (Matt. 7:13-14).

Answer for yourself: Some may ask, "Where is the remnant of that commandment-keeping Church today?"

The answer is looking you right in the face! Bet Emet Ministries, and other like us with this message, are continuing to teach that same way of life revealed in the New Testament. We are certainly the "little flock." But through these pages and other outreaches God is using us to proclaim to a potential audience numbering in the millions the true Gospel, which Christ and the apostles preached.

He is also using us to proclaim the end-time prophetic warnings, which God wants His people to receive. If you would like more information about the real Yeshua or about meeting with us as we "rightly divide" the Word of God, please write to us or call us. And if you are interested in a thorough historical account of where God's true Church has been all these years, write for past articles.

Yeshua said, "I will build My church, and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it" (Matt. 16:18). Though scattered and persecuted down through the centuries, that true Church still exists. True Apostolic Christianity is still being taught and practiced--and you have come in contact with it. Unfortunately it is not on every street corner or in every church today.

Answer for yourself: Will you ACT on the Truth that God is now revealing to you?

As startling as it might sound...the bottom line is this...

If you truly desire to be a follower of Yeshua you cannot be a Christian and hold to such teachings...

- the Law has passed away
- that we are under grace and not longer accountable for the Law (sorry Paul you missed it....http://paulproblem.faithweb.com)
- that the Festivals of the LORD have been replaced by pagan holidays to which Yeshua's name has been attached
- that the Sabbath has been changed to Sunday
- that Yeshua is part of a pagan trinity or godhead which has its origins in Babylonian religion and Egyptian religion, etc.

Let us study to show ourselves approved as we learn of the corruption of the New Testament and Paul's writings by the anti-Semitic Gentile Church of the early centuries. Shalom.

THE RELIGION OF JESUS AND HOW IT CHANGED AFTER THE FIRST CENTURY

Answer for yourself: What would you do if you awoke one morning to find that the world you "knew" had changed?

The family you once had now consisted of "strangers" of whom you don't know. The car you had bought was now a different make from a different manufacturer. The language you had previously spoken was now changed because everyone else spoke a different dialect. The country in which you lived even had changed. Boy, I bet you would be surprised for everything was changed and different from what you had in the beginning. I am sure this would be a real shock to your system.

WELL...THE FAITH INTENDED BY YESHUA FOR THE GENTILE WORLD HAS CHANGED ...AND I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW IT

Answer for yourself: What if you were to study and find out that the faith you now cherish and practice was only a distant "shadow" of what was originally given by God in the beginning of the Church?

Answer for yourself: What if you were to find for yourself that "the teachings and doctrines" taken in the Great Commission to the Gentile world was subsequently changed from what was originally given by Jesus?

Well, the same has happened to "the faith once given to the saints." The religion you practice as a "Christian" today is foreign from what the original church both cherished and practiced, let alone took to the nations of the world in the Great Commission. You may doubt such a broad statement, but if you have not studied or investigated the matter for yourself you are not qualified to judge, only learn and verify if what is said is correct linguistically, culturally, politically, religiously, and historically.

In order to inform you concerning the matter I have presented a list of question to which I will attempt to bring answers to better help your understanding of the corruption of the faith of Jesus.

Answer for yourself: What biblical evidence do we have that church teachings were changed from what was taught in the 1st Century?

Paul, in 2 Thess. 2:1-2, refers to letters being sent to church members that falsely claim to represent his teaching to the church. (This epistle is generally believed to have been written about AD 52.)

Luke, in Acts 20:25-30, records Paul's farewell address to the Ephesian church elders, in which he warns that there would be men within the Ephesian church who would change church teachings. The irony that most Christians fail to see due to their lack of study and knowledge concerning the "Pauline Problem," is that is was Paul who was ultimately changing the faith of Jesus and the teachings of the Jerusalem church.

Jude, who was the brother of Jesus, wrote about men within the church who had already changed church teachings, in verses 3 and 4 of his epistle. (This epistle is generally believed to have been written about AD 68.)

A TRUE PICTURE OF THE EARLY CHURCH

Answer for yourself: What are some of the typical beliefs of the early church as recorded in the New Testament?

- They believed in a traditional Jewish concept of God, referring to Him with Hebrew terminology. (Mark 14:36, Rom. 8:15, Gal. 4:6). This was an ethical monotheism and not a Trinitarianism.
- They believed in the traditional Jewish concept of man, his mortality and ultimate resurrection from the dead. (Acts 23:8, I Cor. 15:13-17).
- They believed that non-Jews who became Christians were grafted into a pre-existing Jewish relationship with God (not separate from Biblical Judaism), responsible for their own specific Covenant with HaShem and it's Laws which were understood as the particular covenant's stipulations that guaranteed right standing with God, and it was understood that the Gentiles could share with others what had already been made available to the Jews. (Rom. 11:13-22, Acts 11:18).
- They worshipped on the Jewish Sabbath (Saturday and not Sunday), as did the non-Jewish converts (Gentile believers like you and me) who were called "God-fearers". (Acts 10:22; 13:16,42-44; 17:2-4).
- They looked forward to the literal fulfillment of prophecies about the Messiah reigning in His kingdom on earth, as promised in the Jewish bible and not the corrupted LXX which would later replace and become the Old Testament of the Gentiles who departed from true Biblical Faith. (Acts 1:6, 2 Tim. 2:8-12; 4:1, 2 Pet. 3:2-4, Titus 2:12-13)
- "The earliest Christians were Jews, and in their new faith they found a continuity with the old. They remembered that their Lord himself said that his purpose was to fulfill, not to abolish the law and the prophets; and it was useless for heretics to deny this saying."
- "The Jewish Christians...continued to observe Sabbaths, circumcision, and other Jewish Feasts...From Irenaeus onwards (who also happened to write much of the NT in false names of both Apostles and Paul), Jewish Christianity is treated as a deviationist sect rather than as a form of Christianity with the best claims to continuity with the practice of the primitive Church."

There is an almost universal agreement among scholars in the field that the first Christians considered themselves well within the traditions of Judaism.

THE MAJOR INFLUENCES WHICH MOVED THE EARLY CHURCH AWAY FROM BIBLICAL FAITH

Four major causes of change were:

- Greek ideas about the nature of God and man.
- Roman anti-Jewish sentiments.
- Rejection of the seventh day Sabbath.
- Harmonizing the Old Testament with Greek philosophy.

I strongly suggest that as you read the following you ask yourself if you have not been swallowed up in such deception.

Answer for yourself: What was the nature of God, as understood by the first Christians?

The Jews and early Christians defined God by His actions, and how He related to man. They spoke of His being merciful, loving, faithful, etc. He was personal in that He related to people in a very personal way. He called Abraham His friend and refers to David as a man after His own heart. God was seen as a personal and intimate Father, "Abba". Though awesome, He was not a remote figure.

Answer for yourself: What was the contemporary Greek conception of the nature of God?

Greek thinkers attempted to define God by what He was, as opposed to the God of the Bible, who is defined there by what He does. Greek thinkers attempted to define the essence of God, rather than define Him by His character. This Greek god was the god of Plato. He was a non-corporeal, remote, and unapproachable being. And while he might not have the wrath of an angry God of the Old Testament, he also lacked the warmth and personality of that same God. This Greek or platonic god floated far above the affairs of man and he had no body, which differed from the biblical concept that man was made in His likeness.

Answer for yourself: Did Greek philosophy change the traditional Jewish beliefs among the early Christians?

"But the 'de-Judaization' of Christianity was not expressed only by the place accorded to Judaism by Christian theologians. A more subtle and more pervasive effect of this process is evident in the development of various Christian doctrines themselves. Among these, the doctrine of God and the doctrine of man bear marks of de-Judaization."

Answer for yourself: How did Plato's concept of God influence church teachings?

The influence of Plato on Clement of Alexandria, a well known Christian thinker of the late 2nd century, was so great that "Clement's doctrine of creation in some ways owed more to Plato than to Moses."

"The idea of the immortal and rational soul is part of the Greek inheritance in Christian doctrine."

Answer for yourself: What was the result of mixing Greek philosophy with the beliefs of the early church?

The gnostic heretic Marcion, of the 2nd century, stated that only Paul had transmitted the gospel correctly [what a joke!]. The original intent of both Jesus and Paul according to Marcion, had been to separate the concepts of law and gospel, and this effort had been thwarted by none other than the other apostles. He taught that the Epistle to the Galatians had been Paul's attack on the other apostles.

"This makes Marcion an important figure, not only in the history of the development of doctrine, but also in the history both of the text and the canon of the New Testament."

"Marcion.....listed 'contradictions' between the old and the new testaments to prove that the God of the Jews.....was quite different from God, the father of Jesus."

Answer for yourself: What role did Roman anti-Jewish sentiments play in changing Christian belief and practice?

"What was offensive about Christianity in the eyes of gentiles was what it had inherited from Judaism....Gentile converts to Christianity demanded a decision about just how much of the Jewish tradition they were obliged to retain...

"Virtually every major Christian writer of the first five centuries either composed a treatise in opposition to Judaism or made this issue a dominant theme in a treatise devoted to some other subject...

"The most important early heresies were not Jewish, but anti-Jewish in their inspiration."

Answer for yourself: How were Christians who continued in the beliefs of the early church seen by those who adopted the influence of Greek philosophy?

"The Jewish Christians.....continued to observe sabbaths, circumcision, and other Jewish Feasts. As this distressed many gentile Christians, they (the Jewish Christians) became a lonely unsupported group. From Irenaeus onwards, Jewish Christianity is treated as a deviationist sect rather than as a form of Christianity with the best claims to continuity with the practice of the primitive Church."

Answer for yourself: What contemporary writings of the period expressed anti-Jewish sentiments?

"The Epistle of Barnabas, an early 2nd century document, went so far as to condemn Jewish fasts, as not true fasts, and claimed that God had given to the Christians the testament that Moses broke....it claims that the true Sabbath was no longer the seventh day but the eighth. The Epistle of Barnabas.....claimed that the original tablets of the covenant of the Lord were shattered at Sinai and that Israel had never had an authentic covenant with God."

"Virtually every major Christian writer of the first five centuries either composed a treatise in opposition to Judaism or made this issue a dominant theme in a treatise devoted to some other subject..."

Answer for yourself: What was the Quarto-Deciman Controversy?

This name derives from the Latin word for fourteen, because Passover is on the 14th day of the first month of the Jewish calendar. There was an effort by a secession of Bishops of Rome to rid themselves of the observance of the Passover ceremony. Anicetus, who was bishop of Rome circa AD 155, tried, around the year AD 160, to outlaw the observance of Passover as a method of avoiding the charge of Judaizing Christianity. He ran into considerable opposition from Polycarp, bishop of Smyrna, a Christian leader of great age and esteem from Asia minor. Polycarp had studied under the apostle John in his youth and was well respected in the Christian community throughout the Roman Empire. Polycarp claimed to observe the Passover because it was taught to him by the Apostle John, who got it from Jesus Himself.

Answer for yourself: What happened to the practice of Passover observance?

By AD 180, both Anicetus and Polycarp had passed from the scene. Victor, the current Bishop of Rome, excommunicated all who insisted on keeping the Passover. He successfully suppressed the Passover observance, at least in the western part of the empire, and the pagan holiday of Easter was introduced into Rome.

Answer for yourself: What happened to the practice of Sabbath observance?

The diminution of the Sabbath appears to have coincided with the period of the two violent, bloody revolts by the Jewish nation against the Romans in AD 70 and AD 135. It was at that time that anti-Jewish feelings were especially high. It may be easily assumed that gentile Christians had little desire to be painted with the same brush of hatred and Roman approbation which colored their Jewish brethren. This may have been especially true during the AD 135 revolt when emperor Hardrian, outlawed and suppressed Jewish customs and practices. By the time of the council of Laodicea in AD 362, the Sabbath had gone from a commanded assembly, in the early Christian community, to a day which was forcefully condemned by church leaders: "Christians must not Judaize by resting on the Sabbath, but must work on that day."

Answer for yourself: Why was Greek philosophy introduced by Christian scholars?

Christianity, while being a product of the Old Testament and Judaic thought, existed in a Greek world. Greek thought supplied the intellectual foundation for the Roman Empire. It was Roman law and Roman might coupled with Greek thought and philosophy which characterized the 2nd century. Christian leaders in the second century supported the use of Greek philosophy because it provided the intellectual tools to answer questions that did not seem to be adequately answered in the Bible (such as the nature of God). But those same scholars expressed caution lest Christianity become a mere play-thing of Greek thought.

Answer for yourself: Why did many lay members of the church welcome the use of Greek philosophy by their church leaders?

Much of the Roman empire was virulently anti-Jewish, especially after the revolts in Judea of AD 70 and AD 135. Christianity was considered a mere schism of Judaism, such that animosity was visited upon Christian and Jew alike. Any effort to move Christianity away from its Judaic roots and its adherence to the Old Testament to a more acceptable and accepted philosophical stance was welcomed by many.

Answer for yourself: What answer was given by proponents of Greek philosophy to those who objected to its use to explain the scriptures?

It was argued that both John and Paul had used some motifs from Greek philosophy in their writings, and that this was the sanction for the wholesale application of Greek philosophy to scripture.

Clement of Alexandria went so far as to offer that just as the scriptures had been given the Jews, philosophy had been given to the Greeks in order to bring all to salvation.

Answer for yourself: What is a concrete example of how Greek philosophy was used to explain the Bible?

The idea of an immortal soul is not found in the Bible, but it is found throughout the writings of Plato and his students. Origen found a way to equate the stories of the resurrection in the Bible with the idea of an immortal soul and thus harmonize the non-biblical teaching of an immortal soul with the scripture.

Answer for yourself: Were there any dissenting voices regarding the use of Greek philosophy to interpret the Bible, during the 2nd Century?

Yes, Tertullian, another church writer of the second century sounded a clear warning of this dangerous tendency by crying to all who would hear: "What has Athens to do with Jerusalem? What concord is there between the Academy and the Church? What between heretics and Christians?" Tertullian, at the time he wrote this, clearly considered the mixing of the Bible with the alien element of Greek philosophy to be heretical.

Answer for yourself: Who was Justin Martyr?

Justin Martyr (100-165) was one of the first church fathers to champion the cause of Greek philosophy. He was a former philosophy student, much taken with the teachings of Plato and the first to suggest that Plato had read the writings of Moses and presumably expounded upon them in his own teachings. (No actual historical evidence suggests that this was true, but Justin's motives were not historical. They were motivated by the effort to have Greek philosophy accepted into the Christian community.) Justin Martyr also stated, concerning his own conversion to Christianity, "I confess that I both boast myself.....a Christian; not because the teachings of Plato are different from those of Christ, but because they are not in all respects similar as neither are those of others." Justin Martyr thereby set out to merge the two "philosophies" of Christ and Plato. The future of Christian thought lay with programs first announced by Justin Martyr, by which the Church would make common cause with Platonic metaphysics and Stoic ethics in an effort to make the transcendent god of Plato as the God of the Bible. Justin had taken into Christianity a quantity of Platonic and Stoic philosophy.....(which) raised the question to what extent the Christian church in Justin and his successors, affiliated the church to Greek learning and philosophy, and secondly to what extent this was a bad thing, for it changed the very character of the faith.

Answer for yourself: Who was Clement of Alexandria?

Clement of Alexandria (150-215) was one of the chief architects of the merging of Christianity with Greek philosophy. Clement was a brilliant and prolific writer who has been described in the following manner: "Clement has been represented as a thorough-going hellenizer, who trimmed the Christian faith to suit.....an alien philosophy. (He) therefore appealed to them (Greek Christians) by blending scripture and Homer." Clement said that Greek philosophy was to the Greeks what the Bible had been to the Jews, that is a guide to God. Clement was, like Justin, more than willing to blend a lot of Plato with a little Moses. Clement has been called "The connecting link" between Christianity and Greek thought.

Answer for yourself: Who was Origen?

Origen (185-254) was a former philosophy student and resident of Alexandria, Egypt. He was perhaps more brilliant and certainly more daring in his stretching of the boundaries of Christianity than were Justin and Clement. Origen began to look at the Bible as a philosopher would look at any other text. He used biblical text as a springboard from which to leap to higher and more spiritual meanings than might appear on the surface of the text. The entire Old Testament was therefore to be read, not as an historical record but as a kind of message in cipher, to be interpreted by those fit to do so. Origen thus turned all the Bible, and especially the old testament, into a document of symbolism not to be taken historically or at face value by the reader, but to be interpreted by the wise philosopher through platonic thought. Platonic thought did not so much replace the Bible; it simply became its interpreter!

CONCLUSION

Having understood the material presented concerning the origin of Gentile Christianity and its split from Jewish Christianity, it is time to return to "the faith once given to the saints." Whenever and wherever a group of Christians begin to discover the beauty and holiness of meeting together outside of man-made religious traditionalism, they will have a sparkling revival in their souls and an enthusiasm that cannot be abated. They will discover anew the realism and vitality of God's Holy Word and turn from every pollution of man's religious invention. Like the kings of Judah of old - Asa, Jehoshaphat, Hezekiah and Josiah - they will clean out of their lives the idolatry and paganism of our modern "high places." In addition they will reactivate for themselves the only efficient system that Almighty God has designed - which is the proper spiritual church life as exemplified in the pages of the Greek Scriptures as seen in the "God-fearers" within Messianic Judaism. Nor will they hesitate to implement proper disciplinary judgment, that of necessity, must accompany such profession of godliness (see 2 Chronicles 19:5-5 and 1 Corinthians 5:1-13). When this enthusiasm is truly heaven-inspired, unselfish and unprideful, there will once again be granted to them the privilege of functioning in a local congregation as God intended it.

HOW DID WE LOST THE FAITH OF JESUS...THE FAITH ONCE GIVEN TO THE SAINTS?

Scholars, historians, and sincere clerics agree that during the first 200 years following the deaths of the Apostles, drastic, un-scriptural changes came about within the early Assembly that would flourish down to our day. It was prophesied in the Bible. But the Bible also speaks of a "remnant" who will be adhering to the original, scriptural truths in these last days. Understand what happened, ...

and the urgent need today to return to the "faith which was once delivered to the saints" (Jude3)

"As the apostolic age comes to a close, the Church seems to pass through a dark tunnel. When it comes out at the other side, the original bond of unity, the clear Standards, and the love of [Yahweh] seem to have been replaced by an unsettling, institutionalized spirit of domination and by beliefs which are more Gnostic than Christian. What happened? We are now confronted with the possibility that the original identity and true definition of Christianity have become lost." --The Apostasy Of The Lost Century.

Answer for yourself: Has Gentile Christianity since the first century twisted much of the Bible's truth, thereby making itself guilty of teaching another gospel, another doctrine?

Answer for yourself: Can you explain why a movement identifying itself so closely with Jesus, a Jew, today teaches often doctrines opposite of what he taught?

Answer for yourself: Are you even aware that Gentile Christianity is guilty of changing the gospel of Yeshua?

THE PREACHING OF ANOTHER GOSPEL

Through much Bible and historical study, I as well as multitudes of others, have drawn conclusions that differed from what is routinely taught in nominal Christianity throughout our land.

Answer for yourself: Should we need a priest or minister to interpret for us what the Bible says?

Surely the Creator of this universe would not leave an instruction Book for man that humble, sincere, truth-seeking people could not properly understand! But one thing is different today. Living in the Western Hemisphere make rendering and interpreting a Hebrew book quite difficult without adequate preparation on our parts.

Answer for yourself: Is truth that leads to salvation so complicated that it can be grasped only by those with seminary degrees in Bible interpretation, and how do we explain the multitudes of diversity in doctrines that exist in more than 2 thousand different and competing Christian denominations?

THE TRANSLATORS OF OUR CHRISTIAN ENGLISH BIBLES HAVE BEEN LESS THAN TRUTHFUL DUE TO THEIR RELIGIOUS BIASES

With the help of today's concordances, lexicons, dictionaries, and other Bible study helps, we can come to a better understanding of many archaic words and renditions found in the King James Bible.

As we move closer to the end of the age, knowledge of the Bible's true message shall be increased, Daniel 12:4. At the same time there will be a restoring of original truth neglected through the centuries, Acts 3:21. We see this last-days movement to restore Biblical truth spear-headed in the restoration of the Hebraic Roots to the Gentile Christian church today.

Most of us with a little study can easily find a number of incongruities and even serious errors perpetuated by churchianity.

For example, the name "Jesus" appears in Acts 7:45 in the King James, which obviously refers to Joshua the son of Nun, the great Israelite general. Hebrews 4:8 is another place where Joshua-or more correctly Yeshua should appear in the King James Bible. The newer Bible versions recognize this error and have since changed the name to the Latinized "Joshua" in both Acts and Hebrews. These are definitive examples revealing that the name Yeshua (later altered to Joshua) was changed wholesale to "Jesus" by translators!

The average churchgoer has no idea what the word "Christ" means or where it came from. Bible dictionaries show that "Christ" derives from the Greek christos (Strong's Concordance Greek Dictionary No. 5547, from "chrio" meaning to anoint or rub with oil). It means anointed, as does the Hebrew meshiach.

Answer for yourself: Why would a Jewish rabbi, speaking Hebrew, be given the Greek title "Christ?"

Yeshua himself said our salvation is of the Jews (not Greeks, John 4:22). Acts 1:6-7 indicates that the Kingdom will be restored to Israel and not Rome or Athens. Yet English Bibles contain the Greek title "Christ."

Answer for yourself: Why was it not properly translated "Anointed"?

One would be more correct to refer to Yeshua by the Hebrew title "Messiah" rather than identifying him by a title that is "Greek" to most people today.

It does seem rather strange that the Greek title "Christos" is transliterated (that is, brought over into English with the same sound), yet the name of Yahweh and Yeshua are both translated by the English "Lord" in our New Testament. Too often in the King James Version the word "Lord" leaves us in doubt who is meant), Yahweh the Father or Yeshua (see Acts 2:34, Heb. 10:30 and many others). This contributes to the blurring of such major distinctions and created a "theology" that guarantees such a one who follows and believes these things are idolators!

STRANGE CUSTOMS AND PRACTICES

There is a grass roots religious or spiritual movement afoot around the world to free mankind from theshackles of pagan customs and beliefs. Bet Emet Ministries is one such ministry. This is true not only in the United States, but also in Europe and the Middle East. This spiritual revival seeks the old paths of truth by restoring the Hebrew Roots of Christianity.

The problem with mankind is simply one of human nature and sin. Yahweh clearly defines sin for us:

"Whosoever commits sin transgresses also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law." (1 John 3:4)

We cannot do things as we alone see fit, but are obligated to follow His instructions, living His way. He is the final Judge. When our lives are over and we are in the grave, Almighty Yahweh will be the One who matters. So we must please Him now, while we can.

As we near the end of the age it appears that Yahweh is moving to clear from the minds of sincere truth seekers the accumulated rubbish of pagan influence that has overwhelmed and saturated the faith once delivered unto the saints.

Religious error is evident everywhere, yet the majority attending weekly church services are ignorant of the subtle and pervasive influence of pagan customs. Christianity perpetuates the error instead of rejecting paganism and retracing its steps back to truth

ITS HARD TO TEACH OLD DOGS NEW TRICKS

It is no secret that the first Israelite Bishops and overseers were replaced at death by converts from paganism. Brumback's History Of The Church states on page 53,

"The Roman emperor, by the office of Pontifex Maximus, directed all religious affairs. When Christianity became the state religion, Constantine [ruling 306-337] assumed all of the authority in the church, which he had exercised as supreme director of paganism."

As more pagans were supposedly converted to faith "in" Yeshua the more difficult it was to resist the strong influence of pagan practices and customs they brought along with their new faith. Halley's Bible Handbook includes a section on church history entitled "Paganization of the Church," which aptly details what happened since the time of Constantine who was the first Christian emperor.

While Constantine did not make Christianity the state religion, he favored Christians in official appointments and positions. After his death, other Roman emperors favored Christianity above all else. Note Halley's comments:

"Emperor Theodosius, 378-395 CE, made Christianity the state Religion of the Roman Empire, and made Church Membership Compulsory. This was the Worst Calamity that has ever befallen the Church. The forced conversion filled the Churches with unregenerate people...

"But now the military spirit of Imperial Rome had entered the Church. The Church had conquered the Roman empire, but in reality the Roman Empire had conquered the Church, by making the Church into the image of the Roman Empire...

"The Imperial Church of the 4th and 5th centuries had become an entirely different institution from the persecuted Church of the first three centuries. In its ambition to Rule it lost and forgot the spirit of [Messiah].

"Worship, at first very simple, was developed into elaborate, stately, imposing ceremonies having all the outward splendor that had belonged to heathen temples...

There were mass conversion of the Barbarians. There is only one problem. There was little repentance and instruction, and they amounted to false conversions. The Gothes, Vandals and Huns who overthrew the Roman Empire accepted Christianity; but to a large extent their conversion was nominal; and this further filled the Church with pagan practices..." p. 867, Halley's Bible Handbook.

THE TRANSFORMATION OF JEWISH CHRISTIANITY INTO A GENTILE ABERRATION OF BIBLICAL TRUTH

Historians attest to the change that came over the early fledgling assemblies following the death of the Apostles, all of whom had been Jews. It is as if a curtain had come down upon their activities, and when it is raised a hundred years or so later, an entirely different situation is seen. Syncretism-the merging of pagan practices with Bible truth-is obvious everywhere. The heathens continued keeping their former pagan ways, but under a new name and with a slightly different meaning.

Man's desire to do things his way, rebelling against the commands of Yahweh, started back in the Garden with Adam and Eve. Rebellion continued, forcing Yahweh to intervene through the flood, the tower of Babel, and even while the Israelites were being fed manna and having Moses lead them to the Promised Land. Isaiah's opening chapter is a condemnation of His chosen people. Rebellion against Yahweh's law continues and is becoming even more evident today.

The point of Isaiah's rebuke and that of Yeshua reveals that the syncretism has continued throughout history. Carnal man has continued to inject his own thoughts and concepts in his worship and thus early on contaminated the True Worship of our pure and holy Creator Yahweh.

WE HAVE FAILED TO LEARN THE LESSONS OF HISTORY

Having come out of Egypt, and recalling that pagans worshipped a golden calf, Israel decided they would have a visible object that they could see, handle and touch to represent the invisible Yahweh, Exodus 32:4. The clear warning in Exodus 20:1-5 was that under no circumstances were they to follow the idolatrous practices of the pagans in the land they were to possess.

Israel's covenant was to follow the teachings of Moses and so be a light to the Gentile nations around them. The Gentile pagan nations were not to be a light to Israel. Israel's mission was to be a model nation and to lead others in the pure worship of Yahweh. This is clear from Isaiah 27:6: "He shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root: Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit."

Psalm 80:8-11 clearly shows that what Yahweh sought from Israel, His vineyard, did not become a fruit of righteousness. His people were soon removed from their favored and unique position among all peoples and sent into exile.

Answer for yourself: What happened?

Israel had become ensnared in the worship practices of the pagans about them. Instead of holding Yahweh's way of life-with its many blessings and security-as an example to the world, Israel took up pagan ways, turning their backs on pure worship given in the Bible.

When Israel finally went into the Promised Land, it was a new generation, a people that had seen the miracle of the daily manna being provided for them, and the presence of Yahweh in the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night.

This new generation of Israelites should have gotten the paganism of Egypt out of their system. They had among them Moses and the tabernacle with a functioning priesthood to keep them mindful of the goodness and bounty of Yahweh's providence. All of this to no avail.

After the death of Moses, Israel, instead of driving out the inhabitants to a man, tolerated the pagans, married them, absorbing their heathen worship and practices.

The pagan nations were still in the land at the time of David and Solomon and were a snare to them.

Eventually, the false religions of the world so corrupted the Chosen People that Yahweh divorced them spiritually

Answer for yourself: Is God the same yesterday, today, and forever?

Now pay attention to the next question.

Answer for yourself: If God who is the same yesterday, today, and forever, divorced His people and "cut them off" from Himself and commanded His people to divorce their Gentile wives because of the pagan worship practices that they brought into Israel, can God do any less with us who practice and observe pagan holidays in the Church and substitute pagan "sabbaths" for the Sabbaths of God? You better think deeply before you give a quick answer.

One only has to read Matt. 7: 18-21 to find that many will come to Yeshua thinking that they have done many wonderful works in "his name" only to hear "depart from me I never knew you..because you work and practice iniquity." What we fail to understand is that the Greek word for "iniquity" means those who are not submitted to or ignorant of the Laws of Moses, especially Gentiles. If we were not ignorant of such Laws we would see specifically that God has commanded how He is to be worshipped, and no where in these Laws and Commandments can we find the holidays observed in the Christian Church today, instead, we find the opposite….a complete calendar of Jewish Holy Days which by in large is neglected.

IF WE DO NOT LEARN FROM HISTORY IT REPEATS ITSELF

History repeated itself centuries later after Yeshua's death. The first disciples were all Israelites, as were the first bishops. Within the first hundred years, however, the "called-out ones" no longer were of the characteristic Hebrew flavor. Paganism had moved in and taken over.

Yeshua came to call us to repent and return to the pure religion of Yahweh, teaching us to follow His ways instead of carnal, human understanding. Historically we see that Christianity, when it departed from its Jewish Roots rejected the Hebrew religion, which led to a despising of the Mosaic Law given by Yahweh Himself to man (Rev. 22:14). Instead, Gentile Christianity tolerated and absorbed prior pagan customs and teachings in flagrant violation of Scripture.

The Oxford Illustrated History of Christianity, commenting on the widespread infusion of pagan influence, on page 84 states:

"The 'opaque' areas of experience, of institutions and daily living, if they had not disappeared by [Pope] Gregory's time had become absorbed into a Christian universe as translucent parts. In principle, there was nothing that could not be absorbed into the radically Christian world."

The religion of modern churchianity has absorbed many foreign doctrines that have no basis in the Bible, but are rooted in Mystery Pagan Religions*.

Answer for yourself: Could many today in the church be likened to the rebellious Israelites who took up whatever new worldly fad or liberal trend came upon the scene? You better believe it! Yahweh is completely out of their thoughts.

And even as they did not like to retain Yahweh in their knowledge, Yahweh gave them up to a reprobate mind [unfit to pass judgment], to do those things which are not convenient: being filled with all unrighteousness...who knowing the judgment of Yahweh, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them," Romans 1:28-29, 32

BAPTIZED WITHOUT REPENTANCE

Historians attest to the change that came over the early fledgling assemblies following the death of the Apostles. With the exception of Luke and Paul, all the New Testament apostles were Jews. They had grown up following Israelite customs, keeping the Saturday Sabbath, the annual Feast Days and hearing the Torah (Law) read to them each Sabbath. Yet, there are those who contend that these Jews were dyed-in-the-wool Christians and wrote the books of the New Testament in Greek no less! Current scholarship since the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls has proved this 1700 year Catholic tradition totally bogus.

Syncretism (the merging of paganism with Biblical truth) is obvious everywhere within the New Testament to those with such prior knowledge of both Judaism and pagan Gentile religions. The pagans continued keeping their pagan ways, but under a new name and with a slightly different meaning and much of this was written within the pages of our New Testaments and without prior knowledge one falls prey to such deception.

The Oxford History of Christianity, on page 85 states,

"Baptism turned a pagan into a Christian...What constituted a 'pagan' was a matter of definition by clerical authority; in practice it meant what evaded the bishop's control. Gregory the Great's decision that English converts to Christianity might continue to use their traditional places of worship provided they were sprinkled with holy water was a revolutionary extension of clerical tolerance, with momentous implications for later missionary activity."

All of this is to say the pagans were baptized, but returned to their former houses of idolatry and continued to worship as before. Only the name had been changed to gain larger numbers of converts to Christianity.

THE FACTS OF THE MATTER ARE QUITE DISTURBING

The following is taken from the book, The Jewish Christians of the Early Centuries of Christianity According to a New Source, written by Shlomo Pines. The Islamic historian reveals much about growing dissension between Jews and Christians shortly after Yeshua's time and the blending of pagan beliefs brought into Christianity by the growing number of gentile converts.

Pines makes revealing comments from his vantage point of an outside spectator, namely, as an observer of the history of the two distinct groups which emerged from Judaism-Christianity and Islam.

- First, there were Jewish Christians who adhered to the teachings of Moses. Beginning with the Apostles, the first converts to an understanding that Yeshua was the expected Messiah were from Judaism, especially from the synagogues where the Apostles went to preach.
- Later came the torrent of Gentile converts who are referred to simply as "Christians." While the Jewish Christians continued keeping of the law and the ways taught by Yeshua, those converts coming from non-Israelite nations became known as Gentile Christians (whom author Pines refers to only as "Christians"). These retained their many heathen doctrines, blending them into "Christianity."

Shlomo Pines writes of the early centuries of Christianity and states, "The original Gospel was regarded as written in Hebrew." He goes on to point out what history has verified, that the Gentile converts to the true Biblical Jewish Faith no longer used the Hebrew texts to bring about the conversion of many other nations. Because of the infusion of foreign doctrines by Christianity, the Gentile bishops and teachers avoided the Hebrew Scriptures, relying mostly on the Greek texts. Pines tells us why in this eye-opening statement:

"In their view, this was a deliberate policy on the part of the Christian leaders, who did not want to have their doctrines demolished by the scholars grounded in the Scriptures who were numerous among the Jews."

It is noteworthy that this Islamic writer is acutely aware of the many un-scriptural doctrines of early Gentile Christianity. Gentile Christians had abandoned the Commandments of the Old Testament (Torah) and substituted alien laws and heathen customs and practices.

Rather than evangelize the nations around them through the authentic Hebrew Scriptures, the Christian leaders from Gentile backgrounds avoided the Hebrew texts because so many of their "Christian" doctrines were nowhere found in the Bible.

Thus, they avoided any clash with those knowledgeable of the Hebrew Scriptures which condemned taking on any aspect of worship foreign to the Word of Yahweh. Author Pines contends that Emperor Constantine turned against the pagan philosophers and adds, "The philosophers' books were burnt and monks were lodged in their temples, which were transformed into churches (or monasteries)" p. 30.

UN-SCRIPTURAL TEACHINGS REPLACE GOD'S TRUTH

That pagan temples were turned into churches or monasteries explains the heathen derivation of the word "church" used in the King James and other Bibles. The Greek word "ekklesia" literally means "the called out ones," which carries the same meaning as the Hebrew "kahal." Ekklesia refers to a body of people, not a building. The word "church" is a poor translation of ekklesia. Church refers to the building coming to us through the Anglo-Saxon "circe." Circe was the Greek goddess who turned men into swine. In Scottish the word is "kirk," relating to the Hebrew "kikkar," meaning a circuit or disc-the sun! The ancient link to sun-worship (on Sun-day) is undeniable.

The following excerpts are taken from Pine's work:

- "The Romans and the Greeks had a feast called the Nativity of Time, which celebrated the return of the sun in January. They introduced into it various modifications and called it 'The Nativity of [Messiah]' or the Nativity. This feast was unknown at the time of [Yeshua] and of His companions.
- "The Jewish Christians...are not vegetarians and they do not reject certain portions of the Old Testament. Like the Jewish Christians of our texts, they are, as far as the observance of commandments is concerned, orthodox Jews...They thus carried on the old tradition of the first Christian community of Jerusalem..."

A footnote on page 39 reveals,

"Strecker points out that the Jewish Christian doctrine started out by being the Christian church doctrine and became a heresy only in the wars of historical evolution."

In other words, paganism and worldly doctrines infiltrated the early body of believers and corrupted it. As more pagan converts became "Christians," they flooded the church with their traditional practices that soon were "baptized" by the Christian clergy and absorbed as doctrine. This is how Sunday, New Year's, Xmas, Easter, Lent, Halloween, Valentine's Day, and much more crept into and became "holy-days" (holidays) of churchianity.

THE PARTING OF THE 2 WAYS

The early movement saw one group of Christians as rooted in the teachings of Jesus which still clung to Israelite laws. These converted Jews known as "Jewish-Christians" continued to meet in the synagogues of the Jews as did Paul, Acts 13:14; 15; 42; 14:1.

The other group, composed mostly of Gentile converts, took on Grecian culture and Hellenistic customs and were simply called "Christians." According to Pines, this latter group [Gentile converts] brought about "the abandonment and portrayal of what is regarded as true Christianity and its replacement by Greek notions and ways. It is the relation of a historic failure; victory rests with the agents of corruption," page 14.

In other words, the flood of pagan converts to Christianity soon overwhelmed the pristine truth as taught by Yeshua and the Apostles, and Christianity became tainted.

Christians today, many unknowingly, observe more pagan carry-overs than days plainly commanded in the Bible.

These popular days include Sunday (a day historically set aside in honor of the sun), Easter (the day honoring Astarte, alias Ishtar and Ostra, Chaldean Queen of Heaven) Xmas (midwinter solar-fertility celebration), Lent (40-day fast for Ostra), New Year's (near the midwinter solstice instead of the Biblical spring), Valentine's Day (Roman fertility celebration), Halloween (demonic observance), and many others.

There is no teaching or foundation for any of these "Christian holidays" anywhere in the Bible. They are the concepts and doctrines of men, firmly embedded in Christianity through centuries of tradition and practice.

Pines continues: "After Him [Yeshua] his disciples were with the Jews and the Children of Israel in the latter's synagogues and observed the prayers and the feasts of (the Jews) in the same place as the latter'" (page 41).

The early believers (referred to by Pines as "Jewish-Christians") continued on with the worship of Israel by observing the weekly Sabbath, the annual Holy Days, and heard the preaching of the Old Testament along with the prayers of the Jews. They continued meeting in the Jewish synagogues just as did Jesus and the Apostles.

A decided difference soon arose between the "Jewish Christians" and "Christianity" itself.

The true believers continued with the "Jewish" worship based on Yahweh's immutable law, while Christianity had amalgamated into its doctrines almost every foreign belief and practice necessary to accommodate the new convert. Accepting Christianity for the pagan was made easy. For him his old ways remained the same, only the name had been changed.

TRUE WORSHIPERS ALARMED BY SUCH CHANGES

The Jewish Christians were deeply concerned about the events that had corrupted many converts to the faith of Jesus through the Roman Caesars and the "Rominization" of Christianity," according to Pines.

"...Jewish Christian authors of our texts and presumably other members of their sect may have been the only people in the world-at the relatively late period (perhaps the fifth or sixth century) at which these texts were composed-who still deplored the split of Judaism and Christianity, two religions which should have remained one. They also deplored the fact that the Christians (or perhaps only most of them) no longer read the Gospels in Hebrew, the language of [Yeshua], and all the prophets. Quite clearly, these Jewish Christians believed that they preserved and continued (perhaps clandestinely) the traditions of the first not yet corrupted Christian community of Jerusalem founded by the immediate disciples of [Yeshua] who professed His religion, i.e...observed the Mosaic Commandments," p. 65.

Author Shlomo Pines summarizes the accounts of other historians who maintained that the early believers in Yeshua as the expected Messiah still observed the Sabbaths and the Annual Holy Days.

Paganism proceeded apace and soon overwhelmed Bible truth, replacing Scriptural customs and celebrations with paganized additions and substitutes.

HISTORY DOES NOT LIE...WELL NOT ALWAYS...UNLESS YOU ARE THE WINNERS OF HISTORY....LIKE ROME

While the comments of historian Pines are revealing, they are by no means unique. Many astute historians who are aware of the vast changes that took place from the time of the Yeshua until now corroborate what we have read.

Luther H. Martin's book Hellenistic Religions reads on pages 118-119,

"One of the first issues to be debated by Christians was whether they were a new religion... These early Jewish Christians understood Christianity in terms of its Jewish past and they continued their observance of Jewish ritual practices exemplified by dietary requirements and circumcision." Tracing the history of paganism, Martin writes, "...and by the second century, Christianity had assumed many of the forms and practices of the mystery cults" p. 162.

Brumback's History of the Church, referring to the beginning of the true Assembly at Pentecost in 31 C.E., reveals,

"In it practices that are common in the religious world today were not found," p. 19.

Author Brumback explains that the early church did not celebrate many of the holidays observed by most of churchianity today, which we have mentioned.

Then follows an explanation of the pagan source of Lent. "The word 'Lent' is derived from the old English word 'Lencten' which means spring. It was connected with a pagan feast that was celebrated in honor of the goddess 'Ostra,' the goddess of the east. The sacrifices to this deity were offered just about the time of the Passover and in this way it became associated with the believed resurrection of Jesus which followed the Jewish Passover.

"Not until the Council of Nice (325 C.E.) decreed that Easter should be kept on Sunday next after the full moon on or after the vernal equinox, was there a definite day for the observance of Easter. Here is the evidence that it has a human origin, as it was not known until after the fourth century just when Easter would be," p. 20.

Easter is not a Bible celebration. It is found in only one place in the King James, at Acts 12:4, a woeful mistranslation of the Greek Pascha, or the Passover.

Author Brumback goes on to explain in fuller detail a bit of Easter's history, adding,

"Certainly no such day is authorized by the teaching of the Apostles."

"What brought these changes about? Why did disciples submit to having these days set apart as special days for the church? The answer is found in the failure of those who were the people of [Yahweh] to know what [Elohim's] Word taught. Lack of this knowledge made it possible to introduce new doctrines and new practices into the teaching of the church. The apostasy of the church and the corruption of the [evangel] resulted from neglect of the church to study [Yahweh's] Word" p. 21.

THE FOUNDATIONS OF BIBLICAL TRUTH WAS LOST BY NEGLECT

Brumback continues on page 31,

"In the beginning the church was pure. The divine plan of the church as revealed in the New Testament was followed. Now the apostasy of which the apostles warned, began to develop."

"Ultimately Christianity overcame paganism and thousands of those who had once opposed the church now became identified with it, without understanding that such a step called for the reformation of life, separation from the world, and devotion to the cause of [Messiah]. Christianity in its purity was thus destroyed by paganism," p. 54.

Widespread neglect of the Old Testament meant that converts were not schooled in the Old Testament and were ignorant of Israelite background and the books of Moses. They simply accepted the Greek Septuagint as their source of Old Testament teaching, nor did they know anything about it's purposeful corruptions to pattern paganism, and knew little and understood even less of the Feasts and the deep meaning of the sacrificial laws. By and large the Gentile Christians detested the Jews and would have none of their teaching or understanding of the Torah.

The New Testament is built upon precepts and teachings of the Old. Paul was inspired to write that salvation is found in the Old Testament:

"And that from a child you have known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make you wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ" (2 Timothy 3:15).

The early Apostles based their teachings on the Old Testament to prove that Yeshua was the promised Messiah of Israel. Yeshua even mentioned that himself in Luke 24:44: "...that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the Law of Moses, and in the Prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me"...sadly we yet await the fulfillment of the true Messianic Prophecies so the identity of the Messiah yet remains unknown...that is until the true Messianic Prophecies are fulfilled!

In Luke 4:4 Yeshua said that man shall live by every word of Yahweh. He constantly referred to the Scriptures, the Old Testament, when answering matters concerning the law, divorce, and personal conduct (the New Testament was not yet in existence at this time! See Luke 24:27).

The last warning of the Bible is that man is not to add to the Bible or to take anything away, on pain of losing salvation, Revelation 22:18. "Scripture cannot be broken," John 10:35. Yeshua said, "Search the Scriptures," John 5:39.

Gentiles did not always comprehend the deep meaning of the Sabbaths and knew little of the Feast Days found in Leviticus 23. (The Bible calls them "Yahweh's Feasts," not "Jewish" Feasts. They detested the Jews and would have nothing to do with their practices, nor did they try to understand or study Hebrew. As a consequence of arrogantly ignoring the Old Testament basis of truth, Christianity generally still does not understand the foundation of Scripture.

"Now therefore you are...fellowcitizens with the saints...and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets [Old Testament], Yeshua Himself the chief cornerstone," Ephesians 2:19-20

IS THE BIBLE GREEK TO YOU

The influence of paganism is easily found in many historical sources. Charlton Larid's book, The Miracle of Language, reveals:

"The Church furthered Greek as well as Latin, the early Fathers of the church wrote Greek, and even as early as the seventh century Greek was being studied in England. Thus Greek words entered the English directly; they became Latin words which were borrowed directly; and they became Latin words which became French words which were borrowed directly" p. 90.

This custom of admitting Greek and Latin names wholesale into English Bibles resulted in replacing and disguising Hebrew names. These names supplanted the true, original names, making them surrogate hybrids with a Grecianized flavor.

Today the claim is made that the entire New Testament was written in Greek, which is disputed by reputable scholars who find an unmistakable Hebrew original underlying the Greek text.

Because early Christian translators were woefully ignorant of Hebrew, Greco-Latin names soon replaced the inspired Hebrew names. Even today the King James uses Esaias for Isaiah, Judas for Judah, Elias for Eliyah (Elijah), Urias for Uriah, Ozias for Uzziah, Josias for Josiah, Ezekias for Hezekiah, Idumea for Edom, Paul for Shaul, James for Ya'akov, Peter for Kefa, John for Yochanan, and many others.

The most holy of all words in the Bible, the sacred Name Yahweh, was replaced with kyrios and theos, which the King James renders Lord or God-outright substitutes.

Further enlightenment is given on page 118 of The Miracle of Language: "The Anglo-Saxon word for a general director was stigweard, the sty-ward, the man who looked after the pigpen, for an Anglo-Saxon capitalist was likely to have his stocks and bonds mostly in the form of razorbacks. We have reduced the word to steward. The boss himself was a hlafweard, a loafward, the man who looked after the bread. We cut that word to lord..."

Thus, we can see how the English Bible has reduced the sacred Name of our Creator Yahweh to "keeper of the loaf," or Lord! His holy Name Yahweh is now replaced with an inferior title.

In his History of the Church, Brumback answers the question how pagan ways and pagan days infiltrated the early church. He points out:

"The answer is found in the failure of those who were the people of [Yahweh] to know what [His] word taught. Lack of this knowledge made it possible to introduce new doctrines and new practices into the teaching and worship of the church. The apostasy of the church and the corruption of the gospel resulted from neglect of the church to study [Yahweh's] word."

"Pagans were accustomed to observe a feast to Proserpine with the burning of candles. To make the transition from pagan worship to Christian worship easy, the church in apostasy instituted on the same day a feast to the virgin Mary and burned tapers in her honor. Lactatius, a historian of the church, spoke of this practice as superstition, ridiculing those who lighted candles for [Yahweh], as if He lived in the dark.

"Here were changes that appeared in the teaching and worship of the church as it developed into an apostate institution. Holy water, the burning of incense, the observance of Lent and Easter...were connected with paganism. When the church dropped the guidance of [Yahweh's] word pagan ceremonies found their way into the church and they are today a part of that system of worship which grew out of the apostasy," page 21-22.

THE SUPREME SOURCE OF ERROR

The extent to which non-Biblical doctrines and error have become unquestionably accepted as fundamental truths directly from the Bible has alarmed sincere Bible students.

The Bible as originally given is indeed the pure Word of Yahweh. Man has translated the Scriptures into other languages while viewing the Bible through the eyeglass of human error. Such errors are accepted as the true teachings of God without further inquiry. Some are outright substitutions with no basis in the truth of the Scriptures.

The anti-Semitic and anti-Judaic Gentile Christian Church of the early centuries after Yeshua has twisted the minds of some who perhaps unknowingly have accepted error as truth and call truth error. Thus, the masses are led astray (Revelation 12:9). And this began a long time ago. To this sad situation I am glad to say that Yahweh also has His people who are standing fast in His truth and studying the Scriptures to prove whether these things be so.

The purpose of this study is to help us better comprehend the source of error so that we can separate truth from falsity. History shows that all pagan religion has its source in Nimrod's Babylon. The teachings of Babylon have dominated Egyptian as well as Greek and Roman religion.

Teachings right out of Babylon can be found in almost all religions of the world. These abominable doctrines have even undermined the true religion Yahweh gave mankind through Israel. With corrupted doctrines and error, ministers have continued to twist the Bible so that "truth" is no longer Bible truth.

SYNCRETISM: A DEADLY MIXTURE

The Bible when first given to mankind was inspired by Yahweh's Spirit. It was pure, holy and undefiled. Problems began when translations were made from one language to another. Our English Bible, for example, is taken primarily from the Latin. Which was translated from the Greek. Which was translated from the Hebrew, with much being lost along the way. It is like taking change from one pocket to place in another and losing some in the process. This is why it is our goal to return as closely as possible to the original languages.

Through what is known as syncretism, pagan doctrines are merged with Bible teachings and blindly accepted as if from Scripture. Thus, the pristine Truth of the Bible has been adulterated with paganism and unknowingly accepted.

On page 109, The Oxford Illustrated History of Christianity quotes Patrick Wormald on adaptations of Christianity,

"Christianity had been successfully assimilated by a warrior nobility, a nobility which had no intention of abandoning its culture or seriously changing its way of life, but which was willing to throw its traditions, customs, tastes, and loyalties into the articulation of the new faith."

While the expressed purpose of the church was to convert pagans and bring them into the fold of Christianity, in reality it was paganism that triumphed over churchianity. It was the church that absorbed and retained the pagan rituals, symbols, holidays, and precepts, but gave them a new name with a new meaning and a "Christian" understanding.

Meyers' Medieval And Modern History states on page 42, "Many of our religious ideas, festivals and ceremonies, as witness Easter, and Christmas may be traced back to an origin in the practice and belief of our heathen ancestors."

Thus, pagan converts felt right at home as they retained their worship of the sun on Sunday, observed the re-birth of the sun in December, and called it not "Sol Invictus," but "Christmas." It made for a painless conversion to "Christianity." So the unregenerate pagan was baptized and became a "Christian-but was still a pagan at heart.

Had Israel and churchianity not done what they respectively have done in corrupting of Truth and establishment of falsehood, anti-Biblical sentiment would not be what it is. The conflict between light and darkness is no new conflict. It has carried on ever since sin first entered the Garden of Eden.

Churchianity reads the Bible and sees no parallel between Israel's past dismal history and its own deplorable record.

Bible teaching rests upon learning from the examples of others (1Cor. 10). But what if man contends that he needs no examples? With our high-tech society and our sophistication and knowledge, along with our scientific thinking, modern man feels competent to find his way if only given money enough and sufficient time to follow whatever light is given. Man is convinced that he is quite sufficient unto himself, and given time will eventually work things out.

Israel was overwhelmed by the visible power of Yahweh at Sinai (Exodus 19 and 20). The thunderous voice and trumpet, the lightning, the smoking, the rumbling and quaking of the Mount itself was evidence enough. The vaunted ability of man was tested. Israel vowed they would be perfect in everything and be obedient. Yet, when they tried they obeyed in nothing. Israel was pardoned again and again, and each time they continued to transgress.

The Tabernacle (and later the Temple) was right in their midst with the visible priesthood actively carrying out Yahweh's instructions day by day. Instruction, warning, chastisement, and the evident presence of Yahweh in the pillar of cloud by day and pillar of fire by night were of no avail.

THE HOLY SPIRIT GIVEN TO MANKIND TO HELP HIM BECOME OBEDIENT

By himself, man lacks the ability and moral fiber to be holy. This is the primary lesson we are to learn here on earth, namely, that man's way is not Yahweh's way. We are to change our mind, the way we think, by having Yahweh's Spirit dominate our very being. "The carnal mind is enmity against Elohim: for it is not subject to the law of Elohim, neither indeed can be," Romans 8:7.

It is only through the workings of Yahweh's omnipotent Holy Spirit power, which now is available to us, that we can rise above this mundane world. This means obediently following the way of life given us throughout the Bible, for it is through obedience that we are given the Holy Spirit: "And we are his witnesses of these things; and [so is] also the Holy Spirit, whom Elohim has given to them that obey Him." (Acts 5:32)

By professing to be His worshipers, ancient Israel assumed they could obligate Yahweh to tolerate whatever whim their degenerate minds could devise. They mentioned His Name, but their hearts were far from obedience.

"Yea, you took up the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your deity Remphan, figures which you made to worship them: and I will carry you away beyond Babylon. Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, speaking unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen."* (Acts 7:43-44)

DOCTRINE AND THE COMMANDMENTS OF MEN

Giving only lip-service is not acceptable to a holy, just, and righteous Yahweh. It never was and never will be. Genuine obedience comes from a contrite heart. Yeshua himself said, "They worship Me (referring to YHVH) in vain; their teachings are but rules made by men," Mark 7:7, NIV. This is a direct quotation of Isaiah 29:13, condemning the city of David, Jerusalem, for their idolatry and wickedness.

Yeshua then castigates the Pharisees and teachers of the law with those same words when the Pharisees heap criticism upon His disciples who apparently paid too little attention to the tradition of the Pharisees and Jewish elders.

The point of Isaiah's rebuke and that of Yeshua reveals that the syncretism (mixing pagan concepts and customs with Bible teaching) has continued throughout history. Unconverted man injects his own thoughts and notions into his worship and continues to contaminate the pure worship of a holy Yahweh.

While we hear much of the error that has crept into the worship of our Creator, many have not studied deeply into the truth of the Bible and are oblivious and unschooled in what is actually taught as Bible doctrine. A growing movement of sincere Commandment keepers with faith in the Savior is prophesied to arise at the end of the age as we see in Revelation:

"Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of Yahweh, and the faith of Yeshua," Revelation 14:12.

LET US LOOK AT SOME EXAMPLES OF TRADITIONS OF MEN WHICH HAVE REPLACED THE WORD OF GOD

Few are aware of the many teachings abounding in nominal religion that are contrary to the Bible. I choose not to go in-depth in pointing out these errors, however here are a few simple examples, in which one or two verses of correction follow the erroneous teaching which sadly is accepted as if true today by the majority of Christians:

The Father, Son and Holy Spirit are three persons in one, and are equal.

"My Father is greater than I,"* John 14:28. Yeshua Himself acknowledged that the Father was greater. Paul said, "The head of Messiah is Yahweh," I Corinthians 11:3.

The Holy Spirit is the power, the force of Yahweh shared by the Son and is not a person--Ruach ha Kodesh.

We keep Sunday because that is the day the Son was resurrected, and that changed the Sabbath.

"There remains therefore a rest [Sabbatismos, Sabbath] for the people of Yahweh," Hebrews 4:9 (reference to verse 4). There is no Bible justification for changing the day of worship. Sunday-keeping stems from pagan sun worship. Yeshua did not rise Sunday morning, but at the end of the Sabbath, and said nothing about any change whatsoever in the weekly day of worship. Besides that, if you are aware of Hebraic reckoning of time you can easily see that Yeshua was resurrected on Saturday evening, before the dawning of a new day at 6 PM which would be Sunday. He was raised BEFORE Sunday on the Sabbath, a perfect picture of the eternal Sabbath given to mankind in the world to come.

The Son by His resurrection changed Sabbath to Sunday.

"And it shall come to pass, from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me, says Yahweh," Isaiah 66:23. This speaks of the future kingdom. The Saturday Sabbath has never been changed but is in effect now and will be observed in the Millennium.

The Son was put to death on Friday and arose Sunday morning.

"...in the midst of the week He shall cause the oblation and sacrifice to cease," Daniel 9:27. He was impaled on Wednesday (Wednesday in German is Mittwoch, midweek) and was in the grave three days and three nights. He rose from the grave before sunset on Saturday (Mat. 28:1- "end" is the Greek opse meaning "late on".

"For as Jonas [Jonah] was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth," Matthew 12:40. There is no way one can get three nights from Friday until Sunday morning.

The Son came to do away with His Father's law by nailing it to the cross.

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill," Matthew 5:17. He brought the law to its fullest intent and meaning; He did not destroy it, but lived it as an example for us, John 14:31. Besides the only "handwriting and ordinances" that were "against us" are those which we incur when we disobey, not obey; for the Torah (Law) was given to us as a patter for Godly life, that when obeyed brings God's blessings and not his curses. The death penalty for disobedience is the only thing in the Law which is against us is the only part of the Law that was against us and that only when we disobeyed. Repentance restored relationship then as well as now.

The Son cleansed all foods and now all animal flesh like pork and shellfish is good for food.

"They that sanctify themselves, and purify themselves in the gardens behind one tree in the midst, eating swine's flesh, and the abomination, and the mouse, shall be consumed together, says Yahweh," Isaiah 66:17. This is speaking of the end of the age and those eating swine's flesh will be consumed. Clean food laws are still in effect.

Man is born with an immortal soul

"[Yahweh] Who ONLY has immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man has seen, nor can see: to whom be honor and power everlasting," 1Timothy 6:16. We do not yet have immortality but are seeking it, "To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life," Romans 2:7. Why are we to seek for immortality if we already have it? Why a resurrection if we are already immortal and can't die? (1Thes. 4:16)

Not a Dead Soul Alive

The most blatant of all erroneous teachings fostered by churchianity is that man has an immortal soul, a teaching found in most pagan religions. That the soul upon death leaves the body and immediately goes to heaven or hell is not found in Scripture.

Many such errors are accepted as the true teachings of the Yeshua without any inquiry. Some are outright substitutions to the Bible and have no basis but lead to a corruption of the truth of the Word.

False teachers certainly have twisted the minds of some who perhaps unknowingly have accepted error as truth and call truth error. Thus, the flesh of man, in opposition to God (called Satan in Hebrew as the Yetzer HaRa..the evil inclination in man) "leads the whole world astray," Revelation 12:9.

The purpose of this study is to help us better comprehend the source of erroneous teaching so that we can sift out the truth. Scripture and history show that all pagan religion has its source in Nimrod's Babylon where religious lies have complete sway. The ways of Babylon have dominated Egyptian as well as Greek and Roman religion. Babylonian teaching can be found in almost all religions of the world. These abominable doctrines have even undermined the true religion Yahweh gave mankind through Israel. Yahweh calls Babylon the Mother of Harlots, who has corrupted the earth, Revelation 17-18.

MODERN BLIND GUIDES LEADING THE BLIND

Bible readers today follow the history of Israel and shake their heads in disbelief over the fickleness of the people of Yahweh who are led astray by heathen practices. They read of Israel's falling into pagan idolatry and marvel that Yahweh, full of mercy, always was ready to take Israel back when they repented.

But these same people today (Christians) do not see that they are doing the very same thing and following the same pattern of lawlessness. Today it is not the pagan worship and temples about us that lead people astray. Instead it is those of Gentile churchianity who are supposedly upholding and teaching Yahweh's Word who lead men away from Yahweh, 2 Peter 2.

They preach from the pulpit that Yahweh's law no longer applies to us. Law was only for ancient Israel; we are under grace, and not under the law, say those teaching a modern and up-to-date gospel of love, grace and forgiveness. Being obedient to the law of Yahweh is said to be bondage, and we are not under the bondage of the law, we are told.

According to them supposedly when the Messiah came to die for the sins of the world, he did away with the law. Now all we need is faith. "Faith alone!" was the rallying cry of the Reformation. But the Bible says that faith alone is meaningless! "Faith without works is dead," James 2:26. You see dear brother and sister, God is concerned how we worship, what days we set aside and make holy, and how we build His kingdom by giving our tithes and offerings. Any old way won't do. Just as Nadab and Abihu learned when they were smote dead by YHVH. Let us learn from their example lest we follow in the ways and be rejected by God when we die.

By twisting the Scriptures and choosing to emphasize certain portions over others, today's preachers strain hard to do away with the law. They especially despise two of the Ten Commandments.

The first tells them that the Sabbath is on Saturday, the seventh day. The second tells us to handle His Name with respect and reverence. Known as the Third and Fourth Commandments, these two "test" commandments show our complete obedience to Yahweh. They are among the first to be rejected by many people. Some ministers seem willing to move heaven and earth to get these two Commandments buried under faith, love, and grace!

Your Bible says that if you break one commandment you have broken them all. That is, unless you keep all Ten, you have fallen short of perfection. Yahweh expects His people to keep His Commandments, for all His Commandments are righteousness, Psalm 119:172.

We read in 1 John 5:3 that the love of Yahweh is the keeping of His Commandments.

He loves us in return when we keep His law, John 14:21.

Because many have been told from countless sermons that the Savior came essentially to bring a new religion, many simply repeat what they've heard without thoroughly checking their Bibles.

YAHWEH'S LAW WILL NEVER PASS AWAY

"We are a New Testament Church and emphasize the teachings of the Savior Who nailed the law to the cross," they say. Such a belief is absolute foolishness! Yeshua never said or even intimated that he came to do away with his Father's laws! He said just the opposite.

"My doctrine is not mine but His that sent Me," he said, John 7:16

"Think not I came to destroy the law and the prophets. I came not to destroy but to fulfill," Matthew 5:17

Some attempt to get around this verse by telling us that Yeshua did away with his Father's laws, fulfilling them completely-filled them up-and now has set them aside.

Actually, what he has done is fulfilled them with a greater depth of meaning than before. He shows us the fuller spiritual intent of Yahweh's laws. "Fulfill" is the Greek plerosai and means to conform to or accomplish. Notice how the Savior elaborated on one of the Ten Commandments:

"You have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery: But I say unto you, That whosoever looks on a woman to lust after her has committed adultery with her already in his heart." (Matt. 5:27-28).

Clearly, Yeshua was emphasizing that the keeping of the Commandments begins with proper and right attitudes, thoughts, desires, and goals. To entertain a wrong thought could well lead to committing the act-sin.

Furthermore, we read in the last book of the Bible that true believers will be keeping the Commandments of Yahweh when Yeshua returns to rule.

"And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the Commandments of Yahweh, and have the testimony of Yeshua," Rev. 12:17

Sadly, there is but a "remnant" of the seed of the true Israel. There is no large multitude following the way of the Bible today, but a "little flock," Luke 12:32. They are also known as the "saints." Don't look for a large group of people to make up the "Bride" at the end of the age. Consider the parable of the five wise and five foolish virgins. Only half of them went in to the marriage supper. The other half was locked out.

THE CHURCH THAT YESHUA PROMISED TO BUILD...DO YOU ATTEND THERE?

Answer for yourself: Do you belong to the church that Yeshua is building or to the one that man has been building over the ages of church history?

Answer for yourself: Has your church departed from the original intent of its founder, Yeshua Christ?

Answer for yourself: What was the original intent of Jesus for the church?

Answer for yourself: Does your church even know what the original intent that Yeshua had for his church?

These are interesting questions that must be answered.

After having been exposed to Greek and Hebrew I realized that it was very important to have the "correct" meaning for every word in the Bible. I pondered what the words of our Bible meant to the people who originally wrote or spoke them. Since I have always been an inquisitive person, I just had to look for the answers to the questions the Lord led me to. Some of you have gone along with me in my search for "truth" and we will continue until the "day of the Lord". The answers to the questions I pose to you are very important because the "answers" should determine the Standard by which we should live our lives and how our religious community governs itself. After several years of research I now know that what I had been taught by my "pastor" was simply not true or at least incomplete!

I have encountered many people who have told me that they wanted to know the truth. When they were told the truth and discovered that it differed, sometimes radically from their experience, they chose to ignore it because of the possible problems that it would cause at their church since it disagreed with their "church's teachings." Such is the matter of the current teaching.

The concept of the "church" is one that has been continually developing over many centuries and has seen little agreement as to the above questions concerning Yeshua's original intent for the church. Today there are numerous conflicts over the true meaning of what the "church" should be. To arrive at the true church as God would have it we must be bold in exposing myths to arrive at the truth. Repentance is the order of the day! The word "church" comes for the Old English word "kirke", meaning a "circle", especially a circle formed in pagan ritualistic worship! In almost every English translation of the Bible, the word "church" is used for the Green word "ekklesia". "Ekklesia" is made up of two words "ek" meaning "out of", and "klesis" meaning "a calling". Thus you can easily see that the church is to be understood as people "called out of something". What are we to be called out from? I Thess. 1:9 teaches us that Gentiles, like you and me, are "called out" of paganism in order to "turn to God from idols to serve the living and true God". Thus, in the English Bible, when we encounter the word "church", it should be translated "the called out" or "the called out ones". The word "church" does not just mean an "assembly" as it has come to mean in today's language and experience. When any of the New Testament writers used the word "church" they spoke of "The Ekklesia", a people called out of the world by God, to be holy unto Him in some specific way. God desired we be "holy" which means "sanctified, different, apart from the norm".

Answer for yourself: If we are to gather as a group of people to just eat together, have meetings together, or have services together, are we manifesting the intent of Yeshua when he called us out of our darkness into the light of God's will for our lives? Hardly not!

Answer for yourself: If such a simple and important foundational concept can be lost due to mis-translation, how much other truths have we lost along the 1900 years of church tradition?

The answer to this question will boggle your mind as it did mine as I searched for the truth of God's Word for my life. Too easily can the identity of what Yeshua desired to be built be transformed into a structure that Yeshua can barely recognize today.

Answer for yourself: Once you realize that Yeshua (the Hebrew name for Yeshua) never used the word "church" in the manner as you have come to understand and experience, the question must be asked: "what did he intend it to both be and do"?

The answer will come as we reexamine the tradition of the original "church" as it relates to the true people of God.

We must never forget that the Hebrew Scriptures were translated into the Greek for the Greek speaking Gentiles that were later to come to the faith in the One true God of Israel. The Septuagint is the "Tanakh", or the Jewish Old Testament, which was translated from the original Hebrew to Ancient Greek language by 70 rabbis before the New Testament era. By the time of Yeshua (Yeshua), the Septuagint was widely available for study throughout the Hellenistic (Greek speaking and influenced) world. Correct understanding of the Septuagint is very important because it interprets the Hebrew Scriptures and Hebrew concepts into the Greek language and serves as a linguistic bridge between the Old Testament, which was written in Hebrew, and the New Testament, much of which was originally written in Hebrew, and later translated into Greek for the Greek speaking Gentiles.

The form of the word "ekklesia" is found in the Septuagint. It is translated from the original Hebrew word "Miqra", which also means "called out". "Miqra" is used 22 times in the Old Testament. Surprisingly, in each case it refers to the holy convocation (gathering, assembly) of Israel, the people of God, as they hear and obey the call to attend a feast and festival celebration (Ex. 12:16). Understand, that before Yeshua came, the Jewish mind (the mind of Christ is a Jewish mind) understood that the "Miqra" and the "Ekklesia" are one-in-the same concept. When we translate from the Hebrew into the Greek the concepts should not change. Laws of Hermeneutics (interpretation) demand that each word, when translated, refer to the same concept identically, and in this case, the ones being called out are called our for a specific purpose; to celebrate the Feasts and Festivals of Israel! That should astound you!

Answer for yourself: When was the last time your Pastor told you that you gather together for the intent and purpose, as taught by Yeshua, to celebrate the Festivals of the Lord?

Answer for yourself: When was the last time you church celebrated Passover, Unleavened Bread, First Fruits, Pentecost, Rosh HaShanah, Festival of Trumpets, Day of Atonement, Tabernacles, let alone all the minor feasts? If this was the sole purpose for Yeshua calling believers out from Paganism, I wonder what Yeshua feels about the church today.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever tried to build a "house" without following the architect's plans? What would the finished product look like?

Answer for yourself: Would the architect (Yeshua) even recognize the "house" when it was completed?

Answer for yourself: What would the architect feel or say when confronted with his house that was a mis-representation of what his heart had intended all along?

Answer for yourself: Would Yeshua even recognize the intent behind all the hay, wood, and stubble that men have used during 1900 years of "church history" in building the house we see today?

Answer for yourself: Would Yeshua recognize the "church today" as the "Miqra" of God? No he would not!

One may reason that since church is from Ekklesia, and Ekklesia is from Miqra, and Miqra is the called out of Israel, that the church of today is the Israel of God.

Answer for yourself: Sounds good, but where is the original intent of the builder?

We are called out for the express purpose to celebrate the festivals of the Lord, not just to meet together to eat, have meetings to establish programs, to worship. All this is important, but is wasted energy if we fail to understand the original intent of the architect (Yeshua). Our purpose is to meet to celebrate the Festivals and Feasts of the Lord. Without obedience to the master builder, Yeshua, our purpose is man centered, and not God centered.

Answer for yourself: Will the church ever study and wake up to the reality that we find in God and His Word?

Some have, and many more will as we come to the truth of the words of the Bible.

Yeshua said "I will build my assembly of called out ones (Ekklesia) and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." (Matt. 16:18). For a real treat, look up the real word used for "hell" in this verse. You will be really surprised to find that "hades" does not mean "hell" as you have been told. Call me when you find out and lets discuss it. Now back to the matter at hand. The Lord called His people to attend His holy feasts. Those that attended the festivals and feasts are the true "Miqra" or "Ekklesia" of God. To do otherwise is a poor copy of the original plans of God. This is the Hebraic and Jewish concept which Yeshua meant when he said, "I will build My Ekklesia." Yeshua was stating that he was going to build a gathering of people called out to celebrate God's feasts. An assembly of people were to be formed who would celebrate the revelation of Messiah in the appointed feasts of Israel.

Answer for yourself: But that is not news to you, or is it?

Answer for yourself: What has prevented your church from teaching this to you before now?

God never intended that His Ekklesia was to be a group of people divorced from the Herbraic and Jewish concepts of Miqra. The Miqra, or called out one, are always people who are to be linked to Israel, not to the early Catholic Church Fathers, to Luther, or to Calvin, or to the Charismatic movement of today. We are grafted into Israel, and Israel is NOT grafted into the Protestant church of today!

God never intended to have a Gentile church separated from the Hebraic church. Remember the first church that Yeshua said he would build was a Hebraic church and it existed for thirty years before any Gentile was admitted into the membership! That should tell you something. God never had two separate people. The middle wall of partition is destroyed today. God wants to make one holy people. This holy (separate) people resides in Israel. Rabbi Shaul (Paul) said, that the gentiles who trust in Yeshua's message are grafted into the tree of Israel (Rom. 11:17). Once grafted in, they are all, Jews and non-Jews, called together to feast on the Lord as we participate in the Festivals of the Lord.

Only when the Jewish people, together with spiritual Jews (Gentile believers), accept the call to become one Israel, will God's Ekklesia and Miqra be realized. Then, and only then will the "gates of hell" not be able to prevail against it!

Answer for yourself: Let me ask you, have you not wondered why you have not gotten more out of you church experience than you have?

Let me say that we can begin by looking at the conspicuous absence in most churches of the Feasts of the Lord.

God never intended for Jews to convert to a Gentile "church", but the opposite; Gentiles converted into a Hebrew church! We have missed the mark 180 degrees! No wonder we go to church and leave asking "is that all there is"? No, there is lots more, but only when we restructure the church in the Hebraic fashion that God originally intended. Celebration of the festivals must be the focus of what the church is all about.

This truth has been hidden for centuries. Yeshua full well understood what he was saying in Matt. 16:18, it is us who have misunderstood. His audience that day were Jews who understood his message. It is we Gentiles who failed to understand. The original understanding has been lost to the Gentile church because of its blind traditions that make the Word of God of non effect. It is time for believing Gentiles to regain the original intention of the Word of God concerning Ekklesia and Miqra. This will only happen when you decide to love the Word of God more than your traditions, especially when you traditions conflicts with the Word of God.

Answer for yourself: Who is right, God or your denomination?

When they conflict, I will accept God's opinion over the church's every time. Let us never again claim we are the church if we do not accept Yeshua's definition of what the church is to both do and be.

Your response is desired. Study to show yourself approved!

JEWISH ORIGINS OF CHRISTIANITY &THE DE-JUDAIZING OF THE NEW TESTAMENT JESUS

Many ways were found by Paul and later Gentile-oriented founders of Christianity to disassociate Jesus from the Jews and his Jewish religion as far as possible and to bring their new religion into a closer alignment with such favored pagan religious doctrines and practices as were dominant in Greco-Roman antiquity. And even though the great majority of modern Christian believers are unaware of this fact, observes A. Powell Davies, the Protestant commentator on Paul's evangelical labors. ". . . he [the scholar] has known all along that historically, Christianity is not the religion founded by Jesus. . . ."

Without a doubt the most dramatic and drastic step taken by the Romanized Paul was to transform "Jesus the Messiah" which is a Jewish concept, into Jesus "the Son of God," which is a pagan manifestation of God that was by no means a mere figure of speech or symbolism but literally meant a pagan conception that was formulated in the famous Gospel declaration by John 3:16: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

While it is not within the province of this brief excursion into Christianity to examine critically its theological dogmas, nevertheless, it is of genuine pertinence to point out that if, with the exception of some small groups, Jews remained impervious to Christian apostolic allurement, it was entirely because they were undeviating believers in the Oneness and "the Onlyness" of God. The Pauline conception that God had a literal "son" was altogether shocking and unthinkable to them. The same conception was, however, entirely acceptable to Gentile pagans in the Hellenistic world, for they had been conditioned to accept such a notion by their own "ages-old religious beliefs and practices." In the mythology of the Greeks and the Romans, for divinity to have offspring by mating with a human being was commonplace. Zeus-Jupiter, the chief of the gods, was singled out for this extraordinary procreative activity with various daughters of the earth such as Leda, who became the mother of the heroes Castor and Pollux, and Europa (the daughter of a Phoenician king), who bore Minos; Apollo, who fathered Linus with Psamanthe, a virgin daughter of the king of Argos; Pluto, who loved Persephone, etc.

Ultimately, the apotheosizing of Jesus of Nazareth as "the only begotten Son of God" was accompanied by the explanation in the New Testament that God had sent the Holy Ghost down to earth to effect the Immaculate Conception of Mary, the virginal wife of Joseph. This dogma, held sacred by Christians, is reverently enunciated in the teaching of the Roman Catholic Church: "Christ, conceived of the Holy Ghost, was born of the Virgin Mary, who, by divine intervention, remained a virgin before, during, and after the conception and birth." The view shared by several Protestant denominations today is that Jesus was conceived in the womb of the Virgin Mary without a human father.

Historians of comparative religions have been marveling over the strong resemblance which exist between the Christian concept of the Holy Trinity-"the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost" and the pattern of divinity that prevailed in the Egyptian religion. It should be noted that one of the most fertile of missionary fields for the early Christian Church was Grecized Egypt, where more than one million Jews lived and where the process of theocrasia (a fusion of the identity of one god with another) had been vastly stimulated by Ptolemy 1, who had introduced (300 B.C.E.) a mixed Greek and Egyptian worship in the Serapeum temple in Alexandria.

The trinitarian arrangement of the deities in ancient Egypt seems to have been traditional. Referring to this design, Samuel Birch, keeper of Egyptian Antiquities in the British Museum during the middle of the nineteenth century, wrote:

"In the local worship of Egypt the deities were arranged in local triads; thus at Memphis, Putah, his wife Merienptah, and their son, Nefer Atum, formed a triad, to which was sometimes added the goddess Bast or Bubastis. At Abydos, the local triad was Osiris [the father], Isis [the mother], and Horus [the son], with [the additional deity] Nephthys, etc."

This divinity pattern appears even more arresting when it is taken into account that the Virgin Mary, too, was accorded an appropriately divine elevation alongside the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost of the Christian Trinity, thus duplicating the exact design made by the Egyptian triad, to which a lesser deity was usually added. It should be said, however, that the prestige of the mother of Jesus, far from being evaluated as "lesser," has loomed ever larger with the centuries, ultimately occupying, as in Roman Catholicism, the position of centrality with her son in Christianity. Actually, the identity of Jesus has been so blended with that of the Father as God as to make them appear the same.

Mary has been venerated, worshipped, and extolled as the Mater Dolorosa, the Mother of God, the Mother of the World, and the Queen of Heaven. Of no little associative significance, suggest some scholars, is the fact that also the Egyptian goddess Isis was hailed as the universal Mother and the Queen of Heaven, and her cult, which endured into the sixth century, was the most formidable rival that Christianity had to compete with for converts in Hellenistic Egypt. It has sometimes drawn the startled attention of students of Egyptian art that in many graphic and sculptural representations of Isis, she is shown holding maternally in her lap the divine child Horus; it immediately brings to mind the classic depiction of the Madonna and the child Jesus in Christian religious art.

It should be emphasized that there actually were two opposing movements within early Christianity following the crucifixion of Jesus: One was Gentile oriented, declaring itself to be "the true Israel" and the Jews "the false Israel." This was led by the brilliant Paul and this was the one that ultimately triumphed when Constantine imposed it as the state religion of the Roman Empire in the fourth century. The second was the Jewish-oriented movement in Judea that was piloted by Peter (the Elder of the Twelve Apostles) and James ("the Lord's brother"; i.e., literally the brother of Jesus); this, within a short time, disappeared due to the intense persecution by the Gentile Church. The several congregations of the Jewish-Christians, which were few in number, resisted every effort by Paul and Barnabas to de-Judaize Jesus. There are leading Christian scholars today who disbelieve that the Epistles of James and Peter, which are included in the New Testament, were actually written by them either in their entirety, or even at all, but for reasons not clearly definable, had been attributed to them in the canon which was closed early in the third century.

The early Christians of Judea who followed Peter and James could not, strictly speaking, be classified as Christians in the Pauline sense. They considered themselves to be Jews. They adhered faithfully to the Jewish religion, observed the Sabbath (on Saturday), kept all the festivals and fast days, circumcised their male infants, ate kosher food, and, like the Pharisees, fasted on Mondays and Thursdays. They prayed in Hebrew and devoted themselves to Torah study, and when, a generation or two later they no longer knew any Hebrew, they studied the Torah in Aquila's Greek translation. Their one sectarian deviation, which resulted in their ostracism as heretics (minim) from the main body of Jewry, was their fervent belief that Jesus was the authentic Messiah whom God the Father-the One God-had sent to redeem Israel, and that although he had died on the cross, he had risen from the grave and would reappear in a Second Coming, whenever God willed it. They completely disavowed the "Son of God" claim made for Jesus; they considered Paul an apostate and rejected his writings. The fact should not be minimized that, when the Jewish revolt against the tyranny of Rome broke out in 132

C.E. under the messianic banner of Bar Kochba, there were sectarian Jewish-Christians who also fought in the ranks.

While the Talmud refers to Christians (without attempting to make any distinction between the Jewish-Christians who adhered to the One God and the Gentile-Christians who worshipped the Trinity) as Notzrim (Notzri), it has not been conclusively established that this name was derived from Nazareth, the Galilean birthplace of Jesus. The early-fourth-century Christian writer Eusebius calls these Jewish-Christians in his Ecclesiastical History "Ebionites" (in Hebrew or Aramaic: Ebionim or Ebion, meaning "the Poor"; i.e., those dedicated to poverty). And Eusebius, like his contemporary, Origen, abuses them roundly for denying that Jesus was the Son of God.

During the reign of Trajan (98-117 C.E.), there were some Jewish-Christians who followed the leadership of one Elchasai. They had somewhat different variations in dogma, although they had much in common with the Ebionites in that they stood determinedly in opposition to Gentile Christianity. They too affirmed the existence of One God, and believed that Jesus was human, but a reincarnation of the Prophets of old into whom the Holy Spirit had entered, and that he was the Messiah who was predestined to lead Israel to salvation.

It should be carefully noted that the Judean-Christians, who identified themselves with the Jewish people and who clove to the religion of Israel until the first Nicene Council in 325 obtained their theological and inspirational sustenance from writings said to have been derived from the preaching of Peter (known in Greek as Kerygmata). They spurned the New Testament altogether, indicting those Christians "who have rejected Peter's teachings and have attached themselves to the frivolous teachings of the enemy [this was a reference to Gentile Christianity] which is contrary to the law [i.e., the Torah] ... the Law of God which Moses proclaimed, and to whose eternal duration Jesus attested when he said: `Heaven and earth shall pass away but not one jot or title shall pass away.' " Rejecting, too, the Pauline claim that Jesus was divine and "the Son of God," the Judean-Christians declared: "Only the God of the Scriptures should be called God. Nor is it lawful to think that there is any other, or to call any other by that name. And if anyone should dare do so, eternal punishment of soul is his."

In the light of these monotheist views, which presumably represent the Christian thinking of Peter and James, it cannot come as a surprise to read in the Koran (written in the seventh century) the crude but forthright rebuke by Mohammed, who was an uncompromising monotheist:

"O Jesus, son of Mary, hast thou said unto mankind, 'Take me and my mother as two gods beside God?"'

To the Mohammedans, the Prophet of Allah gave this counsel:

"Believe, therefore, in God and his Prophets, and say not there are three gods; forbear this, it will be better for you. God is but one God. Far be it from him that he should have a son!"

The theological detachment of Christianity from its Jewish parent seemed to become even more urgent as time went on. There were some Christians, like the sectarian Gnostics, who actively agitated for a complete divorcement from the Jewish religion. There was even, during the second century, a determined attempt made by a schismatic group of Gnostics (branded as heretics by the Church) under the leadership of Marcion, to eliminate the Jewish God from the faith, the Bible from sacred Christian literature, and all institutions and practices in the Church that could be attributable to Jews.

Even in modern times, there has been a sentiment in certain quarters to make Christianity free of Jewish influence. The late Dean W. R. Inge of Westminster, in a sermon he preached in August, 1950, before the Cambridge Conference of the Modern Churchmen's Union, posed this question to the clergy of the Anglican Church: "Do you agree with me that our services are terribly clogged with Judaism?" As indeed they are!

For "unclogging" Christian practice of its Jewish observances there was no want of eager theological hands in early times. Until the end of the second century, Easter, the festival which memorializes the resurrection of Christ, was invariably celebrated on the fourteenth of Nissan-the same day on which the Jewish festival of Passover falls. It took the energetic First Roman Synod, convoked by Pope Victor 1 (189198 C.E.) to order the Near Eastern bishops to refrain, under pain of severe penalties, from designating that day for the observance of Easter. The Corpus juris Civilis of the Emperor Justinian in sixth century also forbade it. But so persistent was the custom, that in 784, the Second Council of Nicea required of all new converts that they take this oath of abjuration: "We will not . . . celebrate the Passover, the Sabbath, or the other feast days connected with the Jewish religion."

The famous Church historian, Eusebius, noted that during the first three centuries of Christianity, the Jewish Sabbath was observed by the faithful together with "the Lord's Day."

It was this "Lord's Day" which was called such in honor of the pagan god Mithras (Myths of Ra) on Sunday. But upon the conversion of the Roman Emperor Constantine, the First Ecumenical Council of the Church, held in 325 in Nicea, abolished the observance of the Sabbath on Saturday and substituted for it the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath-the day of rest-for Christians. Despite their repudiation of the Jewish Sabbath, so strong was the power of custom and habit, that even on Sundays, well into the sixth century, Christians observed Jewish Sabbath laws against making a fire, cooking, working, riding, etc. So stated the Church Fathers.

The Church itself, in its very concept as a house of prayer, in many of its institutions [the congregation, the chanting of prayers, the singing of the Psalms, the reading of Scripture (Gospels), the antiphonal responses, the congregational "Amen!" and the preaching of a sermon based on a Scriptural text followed by its exposition] adopted existing liturgy from the service of the Synagogue.

In several of their traditional elements, the liturgical texts of the Church, too, were adapted from the Synagogue service in the form in which it existed during the first centuries of Christianity. Some of the same literary sources were drawn from by both; not infrequently, the identical phraseology was used. There could be no more monumental irony than that the congregational reading of the Ten Commandments, which formed a high point in the service of the Synagogue, was introduced into the Church service, and when the Rabbinic Sages during the second century were faced with this staggering development, in order to save the simpleminded and unwary from confusing the synagogue with the church, they promptly placed a ban on the public recitation of these central postulates of the Torah of Moses and ordered the Shema read instead!

Padre Martini, the eighteenth-century composer-musicologist, wrote in his Storia della Musica that it was to be expected that the Apostles of Jesus should have incorporated into the church service the synagogue melodies that they had known since earliest childhood.

Answer for yourself: Weren't those the songs that the Levites used to sing in the Temple in Jerusalem?

Actually, the Jewish musicologist, A. Z. Idelsohn, has been able to trace a number of melodies, still sung today in the synagogues of the Oriental Jews, which bear striking resemblances to the plain chant of the ancient church.

There is no question but that the Gregorian Chant, which is the most pervasive element in the musical service of Roman Catholicism and the Anglican Rite and which exerted such a profound influence on the development of European music, was also derived, as the musicologist Peter Wagner avers, from the "solo-psalmistry of the synagogue." Another authoritative opinion on this subject is given by the Catholic musicologist, Monsignor Dechevrens in his Plain Song:

"Gregorian Chant is the music of the Hebrews, and there is for the totality of the Roman Catholic melodies but one modal system, not that of the Greeks, but that of the Hebrews."

To devout Christians, the rite of the Eucharist (Greek, meaning "thanksgiving") is the most awesome and mystical manner of personal communion with Christ. To many of the liberal faithful, it is a symbolic act of personal identification with Jesus, but to most, especially to Catholics and Lutherans, it is meant to be taken in its literal sense. The Lutheran Church, for example, teaches: "Jesus said: `This is My Body' and `This is My Blood.' These statements should not be rejected, or explained as merely figurative. The Lutheran church teaches that the glorified Christ is able to be present with his Body and Blood, wherever the Lord's Supper is celebrated, and to give them in a real way which we cannot understand, along with the bread and wine as a pledge of our forgiveness." As the ethnologists explain: The Eucharist was conceived of as a rite of magical fellowship, or communion with God, by "eating with Him" and also, symbolically, "of Him."

Answer for yourself: What was "the Lord's Supper"?

It is said by many to have been the last meal that the disciples ate with Jesus before his impending arrest, trial, and Crucifixion. And from the clear-cut statements made in the Synoptic Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke, it actually was the Passover Seder home-service that has been celebrated for three thousand years in every Jewish home on Passover in commemoration of Israel's liberation from the Egyptian Bondage. The Seder's chief ritualistic symbols are the matzot (the unleavened bread which is, in the Eucharist, the wafer) and the arbah kosot (the four ritual cups of wine in the Passover). But in what strange manner this symbolic Passover food and drink was metamorphosed by Gentile-Christians into holy sacraments remains unknown.

Scholars of comparative religions have discovered that a strong similarity existed between the conception of the Eucharist and certain sacraments that were employed in the cult of the Persian sun-god Mithras, whose "Mysteries" enjoyed enormous popularity in the Greco-Roman world in the time of Paul of Tarsus. This strange resemblance must have perplexed many people. As if in answer to this bafflement, Justin Martyr, early in the second century, blamed it all on the magical foresight of evil spirits who, knowing that someday in the future Christians would consider this sacrament the holiest in their faith, had taught it centuries before to the idolators "out of memory, in the Mysteries and Initiations of Mithras. For in these likewise, a cup of wine, and bread, are set out with the addition of certain words, in the sacrifice or act of worship of the person about to be initiated." This explanation was given even greater prominence by the authoritative Church Father Tertullian in the third century: "The Devil, whose business it is to pervert the truth, mimics the exact circumstances of the Divine Sacraments in the Mysteries of Mithras. . . ."

It should serve as a historical footnote that the Church Fathers and priests of Mithras were in fierce opposition to each other until the fourth century, when the emperor Julian the Apostate made an unsuccessful attempt to overthrow Christianity as the state religion of Rome (it had been established as such by his uncle, Constantine) and tried to supplant it with Mithraism. According to Porphyry, the third-century moralistic-philosopher who was an opponent of Christianity, all the Mithraic writings were hunted down and destroyed by the triumphant Church, which fact explains why so very little is known today about the once popular and worldwide religion of Mithras.

Much has been written about the vicarious sacrifice of Jesus on the cross in atonement for all the sins of the world which had accumulated since Adam's Fall. The doctrine of "Original Sin" is one which Judaism does not share with Christianity, yet the very notion of atonement is central to Jewish ethical-religious belief; it is an affirmation of the perfectibility of mankind, which learns from its mistakes and corrects them by volitional acts of conscience. Martyrdom (not as atonement) on behalf of others has run a long and heroic course in Jewish history. It has been said that to suffer death deliberately as an atonement-sacrifice for others' sins is not a Jewish notion at all. "May my death be an atonement for all my sin!" This is the abbreviated form of the Viddui-the Jewish confession before death which is designed for the recitation of that dying person whose strength is fast ebbing, but the atonement petitioned is for one's own sins and not for anybody else's, inasmuch as Jews believe that each person is responsible only for his own actions. The Fourth Book of Maccabees recounts in elegiac cadence the martyrdom of Eleazar who, as he lay dying, pleaded with God: "Be merciful unto Thy people, and let our punishment be a satisfaction on their behalf. Make my blood their purification, and my soul to ransom their souls." But also the kind of atonement mentioned here is not the predetermined (by God) sacrifice of Jesus for the salvation of mankind in his ritual-drama of the Passion and Crucifixion.

Some scholars (among them the great ethnologist, James G. Fraser) have found a number of analogues in ancient religions for the Jesus-tragedy with similar themes of suffering, death, and resurrection. In the mystery-cult of Attis, that divinity of Phrygia (in Asia Minor) was the protagonist in an annual ritual-drama of sacrifice, death, and eternal renewal. He was tied to a tree in effigy, pierced with knives by the priests until "he bled to death," and then buried in the ground. But with the spring blossoming of the earth, Attis arose triumphantly from the dead, amidst the rejoicing of all mankind. If you desire comprehensive study into these important areas please look and read the articles on our other website: http://paganaizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com.

This redemption-theme through the self-sacrifice of a divinity is even more explicitly delineated in the ritual-drama of Osiris, the paramount divinity in the religion of Egypt. In order to atone with his death for the human race and thereby bring it to redemption, Osiris achieved incarnation in human form. It was said that he, like Jesus, had long foreseen the inevitability of his sacrifice, it being recorded in the Egyptian "scriptures" The Book of the Dead: "Osiris knows the day of his sacrifice." His death, by hate and treachery at the hands of the Evil One, Set, was followed by his miraculous resurrection, bringing with it happiness to the human race.

The sacrifice, death, and resurrection of the Greek god Adonis and of the Babylonian divinity Tammuz followed a similar pattern of the eternal renewal of life on the earth in the rites of spring. These and many other examples of "crucified sun-godmen," coupled with the complete absence of such doctrines in Biblical Judaism, are proof positive of the Gentile's inclusion of their prior "salvation doctrines" within the New Testament as these teachings were later applied to a Jewish Rabbi names Yeshua.

THE TRIAL AND CRUCIFIXION OF JESUS

Almost a hundred years after the crucifixion of Jesus, it was possible in retrospect for several Roman writers to make but the barest reference to it, of such little importance did they regard it. In his work, The Messiah Jesus and John the Baptist, Robert Eisler mentions two pagan Roman writers of the second century, Celsus and Sossianus Hierocles, who observed about Jesus that he was "it bandit" and rebel chieftain who had threatened Rome in Judea. Such a view was in line with the official Roman stand taken in several instances of other Jewish "bandits" during the first century. For in the guise of messiahs, those idealistic visionaries who both preceded and followed Jesus, had organized uprisings in Judea against the tyranny of "Edom," i.e., Rome, as a prelude to the End of Days.

Inevitably, the rebellions were crushed in a general slaughter of their participants and their leaders-each of whom had, in turn, been hailed by his followers as "God's Anointed" and as "King of the Jews," and, consequently, as the future ruler of the righteous Kingdom of God-were publicly crucified in order to serve as a warning to the revolutionary-minded among the Jews.

The writings of the Roman historian Tacitus confirm that this was actually the attitude the Roman authorities had toward Jesus and his messianic movement. Although Tacitus was a bitter opponent of the Jews, nevertheless, what he wrote about the execution of Jesus in the Annals (c. 115 C.E.). He stated: "Christus, the founder of that name, was put to death as a criminal by Pontius Pilate, procurator of Judea in the reign, of Tiberius." His crime, said Tacitus, was that he had led a conspiratorial band of criminals who were "opposed to all mankind." But oddly enough, when the famous apologist for Gentile Christianity, Justin Martyr, was berating the Jews for their wickedness only a few years later-merely echoing the opinions and sentiments of the Synoptic Gospels of Mark, Matthew, and Luke, and of the Acts and Epistles of Paul of Tarsus-he told them: "This very Son of God ... was crucified under Pontius Pilate by your [Jewish] nation."

The fateful phrase "under Pontius Pilate" entered into the Apostles' Creed. The difference in implications between the two little words "under" and "by" altered irrevocably the destiny of the Jewish people for nineteen centuries, for by means of them, Rome and Pontius Pilate were declared innocent of the murder of Jesus, and the Jews were forever-more branded as fratricides and God-killers.

That Pilate should have been treated so tenderly in the Gospels is indicative of how history is often written (or rewritten) from the writer's own bias, perhaps to promote some special vested interest-in this particular instance, to convert the pagan Romans to Christianity. Every other contemporary historical reference to Pilate refutes the Gospels' picture of his "fairness" and remarkable judicious restraint. King Agrippa I of Judea had formally complained to the Emperor Caligula in Rome that the procurator he had sent to Judea was "inflexible, merciless and obstinate." Philo of Alexandria, who was a man of the world as well as a Platonic philosopher and rabbi, and who had met Pilate personally, wrote of him that he was rotten with "corruption, violence, robbery . . . oppression, illegal executions, and never-ending most grievous cruelty."

Yet this was the noble, patrician Roman contrasted-to Pilate's advantage, of course-in the Gospels with the sly, demoniacal, clamoring mob of Jews in Jerusalem. In fact, as time moved on, Pilate's moral stature grew perceptibly; he was heaped by the religions leaders of the early Church with virtues unsuspected. The Church Father Tertullian (c. 160 c. 230), although he did not deny that Pilate was a pagan, nevertheless called him "a Christian in his own convictions"! Origen (d. c. 253), another famous patristic writer, went even farther; he called him a believer: "Pilate confessed that Jesus was the Christ [Messiah]."

Seemingly, the sole aim of this gratuitous "conversion" of the Roman despot was to associate him directly and in a favorable light with Jesus, demonstrating the existence between the two of a sympathetic bond and thereby, by reflection, lending eminent respectability and prestige to Christianity, which was then engaged in the highly competitive missionary field for Roman converts.

Perhaps the greatest single catastrophe that ever befell a nation was the one experienced by the Jewish people in consequence of the inflammatory account given in the Gospels about the trial and crucifixion of Jesus.

Answer for yourself: Was the account true?

Much of it has the tragic ring of truth, but there are also elements of verifiable distortion, fantasy, and reconstruction in it, no doubt introduced by the overzealous evangelists to heighten the drama of the events they described as well as to serve the propaganda goals of Gentile Christianity.

Principally, the intention of the gospel writers was to disassociate Jesus from the Jews. This they tried to do by demonstrating in their scriptural texts (in Greek) that not only had Jesus not been hostile to the rule of Rome-witness the statement in Mark 12:17: "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's"-but that he had been savagely set upon by the Jews, a people, it should be remembered, whom the Roman master-race hated heartily. The Jews were hated because they had been consistently a thorn in the imperial side: They were constantly seething with social unrest and repeatedly rising in armed revolt against Rome tinder the leadership of such firebrand zealot "messiahs" as Judas the Galilean, his grandson Menachem, Theudas, Benjamin the Egyptian, and the most tragic of all Judean 'messiahs" after Jesus-Simon Bar Kochba.

Answer for yourself: What was the crime that Jesus committed to merit crucifixion?

Viewing it in historic perspective, from the Roman point of view, it is quite evident that he was charged by Pontius Pilate, the procurator of Judea, with the identical crime that had been charged against all the other captured "bandits": with sedition. He was accused of attempting an armed uprising as "King of the Jews." The historian Tacitus indicates that Jesus was believed by the Roman authorities to have been the leader of a conspiratorial band. But actually, Jesus had not planned any rebellion at all. While other messianic leaders before him (such as Judas the Galilean) and also after him (Bar Kochba) were fiery actionists, Jesus was, on the contrary, the most pacific and gentlest of quietists. An extreme non-resistance to evil seems to have been even more of a dominant principle with him than it was with Mahatma Ghandi. Jesus preached: "Whosoever smiteth thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." As an Essene, this was a natural attitude for him to take.

But the hard-headed Romans decided to leave nothing to chance. If subversion was being planned by Jesus and his followers-and past experience with messianic leaders (zealots) could lead them to no other supposition-then it would be an act of foresight on their part to nip the conspiracy in the bud in the most decisive and prompt manner. So they crucified Jesus in order to make an example of him-to warn any other would-be "King of the Jews" what end he could expect. The Romans did not at all seem to consider what was the actual implication of that august title; they did not understand that it referred to the Messiah. This can be seen in the "regal" crown of thorns and the derisive sign Pontius Pilate ordered nailed to the cross over the tormented and broken body of the crucified Jesus: JESUS NAZORAEUS REX JUDAEORUM ("Jesus of Nazareth King of the Jews"). That's what the procurator thought of Jesus and that's what he thought of the Jews!

The Gospels, in their treatment of this epic drama, wonderfully written with a simple eloquence and an emotionalism that is genuinely stirring, placed an entirely different emphasis and motivation on its events and the personalities involved. In the Gospel of Matthew (Chapter 27), it was the chief priests and elders of the Jews who "took counsel against Jesus to put him to death. And when they had bound him, they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor . . ."

As for the High Priest, Caiaphas, and other high Jewish officials who were said to have delivered Jesus to Pontius Pilate for trial with the expectation that he would be condemned to death, they were aristocratic Sadducees (and collaborationists of the Romans). As such, they must have been ready at all times to be the "running dogs"-the collaborationists-of the master-race and to do the will of the procurator, even if it was to the hurt of their own people.

"And Jesus stood before the governor: and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Jesus said unto him, Thou Sayest."

So Jesus stood self-condemned; he was destined for a cross on Golgotha. Pontius Pilate, the symbol and instrument in Judea of the omnipotent power of the Emperor Tiberius, even had he wanted to, had no choice but to execute him as a potential rebel against Rome. Every "King of the Jews" before had been crucified by the Romans as a seditionist.

But the Gospels willed it differently. In them it was Pilate who was moved to admiration by the noble humility of Jesus and had no desire to crucify him. It was the custom, the Gospels infer, that during the festival of Passover (no such custom on Passover was ever known or recorded in Jewish literary sources) the procurator graciously would pardon a prisoner for whose life the people would ask. It so happened that "a notable prisoner, called Barabbas" was held in custody at that time. Addressing himself to the multitude, and giving it a broad hint and an even broader opportunity to save the life of Jesus, Pilate said to them: "Whether (whichever] of the twain will ye that I release unto you?" And the people answered-"Barabbas!" "Pilate said unto them, What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ? They all say unto him, Let him be crucified. And the governor said, Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying, Let him be crucified."

When the "saintly" Pilate saw that there was nothing he could do to soften the bard-hearted mob clamoring for Jesus' death, he took water and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, "I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it. Then answered all the people, and said, His blood be on us, and on our children."

Actually, point out some New Testament scholars, it would be absurd and unrealistic to believe that there was the slightest possibility that the arrogant and despotic Roman procurator, Pontius Pilate, would for one moment have considered delegating his own supreme judicial powers to the Jews, whom he despised and distrusted, especially in a case in which the charge was sedition with conspiracy to revolt.

Answer for yourself: After all, they stress, was it not the Jews with whom he was constantly struggling?

Answer for yourself: Where would be the sense then of allowing these very Jews (in a howling mob) to pass sentence on an alleged "bandit" leader?

Yet all four narratives of the supposed evangelists-the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John-described in an emotionally inflammable setting, bear down inexorably on one premeditated conclusion: that it was not Pilate but the Jews who, in a frenzy of hatred for Jesus, were responsible for his agony and death on the cross. The diabolical image of the Jews-frightening, cunning, and cruel, as they are collectively depicted-stimulated the imaginative genius of Christian art during the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. The foremost painters and sculptors portrayed the heart-rending scenes along the Via Dolorosa: Jesus being scourged, "the Jews" abusing and leering villainously at him as he dragged his cross to Golgotha, the "Hills of Skulls," and gloating vengefully as they beheld him, banging shattered, bleeding, and still, nailed to the cross of his martyrdom.

To the Christian who is enlightened and is also knowledgeable about the principles of the Jewish religion and of its moral values, institutions, and practices, such a depiction of the Jews must seem either an absurd libel or a vast distortion. And one need hardly go into the historical record: Christian mobs, howling their hatred for Jews and led by priests holding aloft the cross of the crucified Jesus to "inspire" them, who had preached love and forgiveness, descended murderously upon helpless Jews everywhere in Christendom. For one Jew-Jesus-uncounted millions of his fellow Jews had to pay with their lives in a perpetual Jewish Golgotha.

In his monumental work, Mission and Expansion of Christianity, Adolf von Harnack, a prominent leader of liberal German theology, declared with an obvious feeling of regret and contrition: Truly, such an injustice as that done by the Gentile Church to Judaism is almost unprecedented in the annals of history. The Gentile Church stripped it of everything; she took away its sacred Book; herself a transformed Judaism, she cut off all connection with the parent religion. The daughter first robbed her mother, then repudiated her.

Answer for yourself: The question often asked by thoughtful Christians is: What do the Jews themselves think about the trial and crucifixion of Jesus?

Answer for yourself: Do they consider it just?

When Moses Mendelssohn (Germany, 1729-86), the philosopher and initiator of the Jewish Enlightenment (Haskalah), was asked the question by the Swiss Protestant theologian, Johann Kaspar Lavater, he replied with an evasion: "How do I know what just or unjust judgments were pronounced seventeen or eighteen hundred years ago by my ancestors?" Especially, he added, since it was not even reasonable to expect that he accept responsibility for the trials and sentences issued by the Prussian law courts in his own day.

Whatever the thoughts and feelings of the great majority of Jews toward the Crucifixion-an act that caused unhealing wounds on their souls and maids and countless generations of suffering and humiliation-the astonishing observation has been made that, although they are, understandably, bitter, they seem to bear no rancor or any desire to "avenge " the terrible wrongs their people experienced because of it. In this attitude of most Jews-which is in the gentle spirit of Jesus himself-can perhaps be seen a vindication of Israel from the libels the Gospel writers wrote against their fore-fathers.

It should not pass unnoticed that, indicative of the average Jew's desire to let bygones be bygones and to seek fraternal relationships with all Christians of good-will, was the declaration made by the Jewish philosopher-rabbi Maimonides (Spain, 1135-1204), who himself was a victim of bitter persecution at the hands of Mohammedans, in his celebrated code, Mishneh-Torah:

"The teachings of the man of Nazareth [i.e., Jesus] and of the man of Ishmael [i.e., Mohammed] who arose after him, help to bring to perfection all mankind, so that they may serve God with one consent. For in that the whole world is full of the words of the Messiah, of the words of the Torah and the Commandments. These words have spread to the ends of the earth, even if many deny their binding character at the present day."

What a legacy we have been gifted to inherit and be partakers. I find it a terrible shame that so few Christians know the truth concerning their faith...."the faith once given to the saints"....Biblical Judaism [Jewish Christianity and not Gentile Christianity]. Shalom.

JESUS' TEACHINGS ON THE GENTILE'S SALVATION

The Noahide Commandments are the Commandments given by the Torah to the Gentiles (first given to Adam and later given to Noah), which according to rabbinic tradition and the First Church Council in Acts 15:17-19 and Acts 15:28-29 (which was headed up by James, the Lord's brother and head of the Jerusalem church) were given by God to Gentiles like Adam and Noah, that if obeyed, will be rewarded with eternal life! According to rabbinic teaching & Acts 15 (which Yeshua believed and would have agreed with himself), those Gentiles who observe these precepts are assured their share in the World to Come, regardless of what fanciful interpretations were later to be invented by both the Catholic & Protestant churches and most probably heard in your modern churches. Yeshua was and is a Jew. He never ascribed to Baptist, Methodist, Catholic, Assembly of God, Church of Christ, or Mormon church doctrine. He believed and taught the truth as received from his Father in Heaven.

The Christian must come to an understanding that the religion of Yeshua (Judaism) has always recognized two different religious codes:

1. the 613 Laws and precepts given to the Jews following their liberation from Egypt, and
2. the earlier Noahide system of legislation for all mankind.

DID YESHUA INTEND TO REPLACE OR ABOLISH JUDAISM AND START A NEW RELIGION?

The eighteenth century Talmudist Rabbi Jacob Emden wrote a letter that has been discovered which states:

"Yeshua never intended to abolish Judaism, but only to establish a new religion for the Gentiles based upon the ancient Noahide Commandments transmitted by Moses on Mount Sinai."

Let me say that Emden more correctly should have said "RE-ESTABLISH" for the Gentiles the religious foundations that had previously been given by God to the Gentiles since the Garden of Eden and Sinai. Emden stressed in his letter that Yeshua brought about a "double blessing" to the world, by strengthening the Torah of Moses and at the same time removing idolatry from the midst of the Gentiles. Unfortunately, Emden's thesis in the letter never gained a substantial following by fellow Jews. The most obvious reason would seem to be the frequent harsh statements made by Yeshua against the rabbis and Jews of his time (Matt. 23). This chapter in Matt. 23 has seldom been correctly interpreted by the Christian Church because the church, for the most part, lacks the facts & information concerning the historical, religious, and political background surrounding Yeshua's statements which are necessary to correctly understand such a chastisement of a particular "sect" within the Pharisees, and not the Pharisees as a whole! Yeshua was not condemning the Pharisee movement, for he was proud to be one, especially a Pharisee belonging to the School of Hillel. Yeshua was not replacing Judaism with Christianity!

Emden helps us understand the original intentions of Yeshua and Paul as he analyzes the beginnings of Christianity. According to the Jewish rabbi, Yeshua and his Apostles, which were later sent by Yeshua to the Gentiles acted entirely within the Halakhah (correct and accepted Jewish law) in re-creating and re-establishing the religion God had previously given to the Gentiles which was based on the Noahide Commandments (the basic seven Noahide Laws consist of prohibitions against idolatry, blasphemy, killing, stealing, sexual sins, eating the limb of a living animal (cruelty to animals), and the imperative to establish courts of justice). According to the Jewish Talmud and Tosefta, those Gentiles who observe these statutes are considered to be of the Hasidim (pious ones) of the Nations and merit a share in the World to Come. Even within the Alenu prayer which is prayed by Jews and "God-Fearers" every Sabbath, it states "May all inhabitants of the earth recognize and know....". This means the Gentiles. This prayer for Gentiles is another proof that the will of God is for Gentiles not to perish but have everlasting life. In the Mishnah (the Oral Law), in Pirke Avot 4.1 it states: "Every assembly that is for the sake of Heaven will in the end be established." Christian assemblies are for the sake of Heaven, yet I must sadly inform you that they have accepted "IN PART" the Noahide Commandments, but not totally! God had given them all to the Gentiles!

THE "FIRST" GREAT COMMISSION...NO...IT IS NOT WHAT YOU THINK

Yeshua and Paul were acquainted with th Essens authors and their Scrolls. Many passages in the New Testament bear striking similarity to the Scrolls (see my previous newsletter about Yeshua and the Secret of the Dead Sea Scrolls). A comprehensive overview of the writings and materials available to us today reveal the Essenes to have been extremely pious Jews who scrupulously followed the Torah (the instruction and teaching of God, more commonly called the "Law"), whereas Yeshua and Paul are by many portrayed incorrectly as having forsaken their Jewish origins and replaced the Torah with a new religion-Christianity. This never happened; at least not by Yeshua! At lease this is the general picture one is presented with; and one will not be able to see through it without diligent study. But this premise goes against Emden's letter. A Christian should know that the Talmud records for us that Moses commanded the Jews to spread the knowledge of the Noahide commandments to all mankind! Did you hear that? God commanded Moses to spread the knowledge of the Covenant with Noah and its requirements to all Gentiles in the world. Judaism acknowledges this "Gentile Covenant for Salvation" as from God since the time of Mount at Sinai. The questions we have to ask ourselves is this:

- Does history record for us such an ambitious attempt to bring the Noahide Laws to Gentiles, and if so, who was behind it and when did it occur?"
- Were the pious Essenes the ones who attempted such a mission to the Gentiles in the generation preceding Yeshua's birth?
- Did Yeshua and Paul, through their ministries, follow in the Essene's footsteps and try to bring to fruition what the Essenes began in the generation before their birth?
- Where do the Gentiles correctly fit into the teachings of Yeshua and Paul?

As Christians, we must constantly search for the correct interpretations of such an event if we are to correctly understand the Bible and it's message to the Gentile and his salvation.

WE NEED TO STUDY THE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH

A passage in the Jerusalem Talmud records for us:

"Menahem the Essene and 160 Essene disciples left the Jewish community"

(remember not all Essenes lived in & around the Dead Sea) "about 20 B.C. on a mission to the Gentiles to take the "world" the Noahide Covenant, thus assuring obedient and observant Gentiles a place in the World to Come."

This Menahem served as a vice-president of the Sanhedrin under the sage Hillel who was the Nassi (President of the Sanhedrin) some thirty years before Yeshua's birth. The Mishnah makes quite clear that Menahem subjected himself totally to Hillel's authority (who loved the Gentiles), thus establishing a link between the Essenes and Hillel (who was a conservative Pharisee). Also of importance is the link between the two camps (Essenes & Pharisees) in that they were both known as "Hasidim." Menahem the Essene left Hillel's Sanhedrin for his mission to the world and was then replaced by the sage Shammai (who did not like the Gentiles). Shammai succeeded him as vice-president, probably about 20 B.C., and the influences of Hillel began to be replaced with those of Shammai.

STILL MORE QUESTIONS THAT NEED ANSWERS

- Was Menahem forced out by Shammai and his followers?
- Did Hillel's disciples join Menahem in his mission to the Gentiles?
- Did later rabbis approve of Menahem's mission to the Gentiles?
- Did Shammai lend his support to the Gentile mission or did he discourage the Jews from being a light to Gentiles?
- In the time of Yeshua did the teachings of Hillel or Shammai have influence over the people of Israel and direct the course of the nation?
- Which of these two Pharisee schools supported Yeshua and which did Yeshua rebuke in Matt. 23?
- Was Yeshua against all the Pharisees?

THE STORMY RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN HILLEL AND SHAMMAI

The first disputes regarding the Oral law (that was passed down for some 1700 years from Moses at Sinai) took place at this time between the sages and students of Hillel and Shammai (beginning about 20 years prior to Yeshua's birth). Their respective schools (Bet Hillel and Bet Shammai) were to clash over 350 times on issues of the Oral Law during the next hundred years. Nor were these always minor disputes for even once the Zealots connected with Shammai massacred and killed many of the Pharisees. The issues between Bet Hillel and Bet Shammai went to the very core of what Judaism stood for (and what Yeshua stood for). One of the major areas of contention was Judaism's attitude toward salvation of the Gentiles.

Answer for yourself: What side would Yeshua agree with?

The Schools of Shammai and Hillel both accepted all of the commandments contained in the five "written" books of the Torah (Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy). But the written law of Moses is too brief to be applied to practical issues of everyday life, and it was accepted that God also gave an oral and more detailed tradition was originally given to Adam, then to Noah, and finally handed down to Moses at Sinai. The debates of Bet Hillel and Bet Shammai centered on this oral tradition.

This oral tradition was passed down by Moses and it was forbidden to be set to writing. It was this Oral Law that later caused controversy among the rabbis; especially Bet Shammai and Bet Hillel. Finally, out of fear it would be forgotten due to all the persecution of Judaism and the deaths of its leaders at the hands of Gentiles, the sages permitted it to be committed to writing. The first major works were the Mishnah (200 A.D.) and the Tosefta (4th century), followed by two Talmuds; the Babylonian Talmud and the Jerusalem Talmud (5th century). The Babylonian version is more popular than the Jerusalem Talmud. Also at this time, books of homilies known as Midrash began to appear. The two major commentaries to the Babylonian Talmud are those of Rashi and the Tosefta. Why did I mention these works? The Mishnah, Talmud and Tosefta are the works of primary interest and authority when researching the Jewish law and tradition that surrounded Yeshua and his teachings in the first century.

GOD CHOSE HILLEL'S INTERPRETATION FOR ALL TIME....A VOICE FROM HEAVEN

The School of Shammai came upon the Jewish scene 20 years before Yeshua's birth, and flourished for around 100 years. After the destruction of the Temple in 70 A.D., the seat of the Sanhedrin was relocated to Yavneh, where the Halachah (accepted interpretation of Jewish Law) of the School of Bet Hillel became once again the established Halachah (accepted interpretation for all issues of Jewish law). Also at this time it is recorded by the Rabbis that God, in a "bat kohl" spoke from Heaven and a Heavenly Voice was heard declaring the Law was to be from that time forward decided in favor of the interpretations of the School of Bet Hillel. Since that time all Jewry has accepted the teachings of Bet Hillel.

HOW COULD YESHUA REPLACE WHAT GOD APPROVED?

Now listen closely. Yeshua's debates with the Pharisees recorded in the New Testament were actually disputes with the Pharisees representing the School of Shammai and NOT the School of Hillel. Yeshua adopts the views of Hillel on "all" matters of halachah (interpretation) except on the matter of divorce, where he sides with the School of Shammai (strict interpretation). At the time of Yeshua the interpretations and teachings Bet Shammai were influencing Jewish life and institutions more than Hillel's, and it was this way for almost 100 years. Through Shammai's teachings Israel was "loosing her way." Hillel had died when Yeshua was 13-14 years old, and Hillel's influence in Israel was rapidly being replaced with the contemporary teachings of Shammai. Yeshua (who accepted and agreed with Hillel) and Shammai (and Shammai's many students) were to clash continually! The Shammai Pharisees (and not the Hillel Pharisees) were responsible for handing over Yeshua to the Chief Priest, and Sadducees and Romans for crucifixion, and this was a violation of Jewish Law. Couple this with the relationship the Shammaites had with the Sadducean Zealots in the priesthood, little wonder that the Chief Priests (Sadducees) capture Yeshua and hand him over to the Romans to be crucified. Notice that the Hillel Pharisees (whom the majority of the people supported and followed) had nothing to do with Yeshua's crucifixion (it was they who warned Yeshua to flee for his life in Luke 13:31). When you read Matt. 23 you cannot help but see Yeshua chastising the Pharisees; but what we fail to notice is that there were many sects within Phariseeism and Yeshua says "Pharisees who"....indicating that many were not to be included in his rebuke of the insincere Pharisees. Yeshua took odds with the Shammaite Pharisees, not the Hillel Pharisees!

The Christian Church's failure to understand this has led them to erroneously believe that Yeshua was rejecting his own religion rather than calling for repentance within it!

WE MUST UNDERSTANDING THE TIMES OF THE BIBLE IF WE ARE EVER TO GLEAN TRUTH

The Jewish people knew from ancient prophecy that their Temple in Jerusalem would be destroyed by the Gentiles (Dan. 9). Bet Hillel believed that reaching out to the Gentiles (since historically Israel had failed to be "a light unto the Gentiles" and had thereby violated the Second Tablet of the Law which carries the more severe punishment for its violation) was the correct approach to possibly avoiding the coming destruction. Hillel and his students maintained that righteous Gentiles merit salvation just as Jews do (Hillel, like Yeshua, accepted the teachings connected with the Laws of Noah), and it was their hope that a mission to the Gentiles could avert the destruction of their land and win God's approval, thus influencing God to repent of the destruction prophesied. Bet Shammai however looked down upon the Gentile world, holding that NOT even the most righteous Gentile could merit a share in the World to Come. Shammai believed the Gentiles deserved "hell" and no attempts should be made to alter their destiny. The Jewish people and their teachers have since declared Bet Shammai's views to be null and void, as did the Heavenly Voice toward the close of the first century (just the way God spoke at Yeshua's immersion). Shammai and the Bet Shammai were indeed the Pharisees and priests that Yeshua of Nazareth and Paul of Tarsus had to contend with within the pages of our Bibles, and not the Hillel Pharisees. Paul the Apostle's insistence that Gentiles be admitted into the early Messianic Jewish Church was based on Bet Hillel's position that righteous Gentiles merit salvation. Let us not forget that it is recorded that Paul had studied under Rabban Gamaliel the Elder, a grandson of Hillel where he received such instruction! Now you can better understand that the anti-Jewish passages contained in the New Testament were directed against the Shammaites, and not the Judaism which followed Bet Hillel, or even today which follows the instruction and interpretations of Hillel.

UNDERSTANDING YESHUA AND PAUL

Yeshua and his disciples, especially Paul, warned all men everywhere not to "destroy" the Torah of Israel. A Jew is not permitted to leave his Torah, for Paul wrote in his letter to the Galatians Chapter 5 (remember Galatians was written to Gentiles) "I, Paul, say to you that if you (writing to Gentiles) receive circumcision (along with immersion that makes you a Jew), the Messiah will do you no good at all" [the opportunity to become part of the Israel of God without circumcision will be be available to you since it will be through Yeshua's ministry that the Laws of Noah, which did not require circumcision, were to be taken to the non-Jewish world. I will deal with the meaning of that last phrase in more detail in a future newsletter. But for now, Paul goes on to say "You can take it from me that every man (Gentile) who receives circumcision [conversion] (whether a Jew by birth or a converted Gentile) is under obligation to keep the "entire" Torah" (613) [this is simply because when a non-Jew underwent circumcision he was making "full conversion" whereby he would be obligated for the whole 613 Commandments anyway]. Paul is teaching us that a Gentile (like you and me) who is immersed in repentance and who is circumcised [makes conversion] is obligated to keep the entire Torah! Did you hear that?

Answer for yourself: What about Paul and his teaching that the Law is passed away? It must now be obvious that Paul never intended for that to be your understanding; he never said that! Our problem is that we misinterpret the teachings of Paul not having a proper background necessary to understand correctly what he is saying. Let us begin with what happens when we are "Born-Again".

WHAT DID "BEING BORN AGAIN" MEAN TO YESHUA? THEN SHOULD I NOT AGREE WITH HIM? JOHN 3 AS YOU HAVE NEVER SEEN OR UNDERSTOOD IT BEFORE

Before going on we must address a very important question: What happens when I am Born-Again? In answering this we must deal with a very important issue that is often overlooked. When a Gentile turns from idols, repents, and accepts the faith of the One God of the Universe, he identifies with God. As Gentiles we identify with God through the one he sent to reveal Himself ; namely Yeshua and his ministry which brought the non-Jews of the world the knowledge of God, Torah, and Israel. Sadly, however, by the time Yeshua came knocking on your door he had been completely altered whereby he no longer was a Torah observant Jew, but rather came dressed like Zeus and Constantine. As Christians you were taught that you were buried into the likeness of Yeshua's death, and raised in newness of life through identification with God through the mikvah bath (water immersion). Christians call it baptism. A more correct understanding is that the non-Jewish believer in God (in the act of repentance and faith) literally stands at his own Sinai, is immersed and repents of sin and begins a new life with God as did his Gentile forefathers (the Egyptians are a type and shadow of Ephraim, the other house of Israel) and says, like the Jews of old did, "All that the Lord has spoken we will do" (Ex. 19:8). Notice that the Bible say "all" the people said it at Sinai (this included the mixed-multitude of Gentiles and Jews together)! Included in that group were a mixed multitude of Gentiles along with Jews/Semites that teaches us a very important lesson for our lives. At Sinai both Gentiles and Jews/Semites confessed adherence to the Covenant offered by God. God had previously instructed that they "wash their clothes", which is an idiom for immersion in water of their bodies (this was their Born-Again experience with the God of Israel). This might be startling to you but the concept in the Gospel of John, chapter three, concerning being "Born-Again" is not the invention of Yeshua. Being "Born-Again" is a Jewish concept that has existed since the Garden of Eden and Adam. Now hear this...this immersion and repentance from sin is to be repeated throughout one's life. Examples in scripture that the children of Israel were "Born-Again" repeatedly (immersed and attained a new-heightened status before they met with God) are before each Sabbath, each Feast and Festival, following repentance of sin, and for a lady, after her menses on a monthly basis before she could return to her husband's bed. Yeshua was immersed repeatedly in his life, yet the only one recorded for us is the one immersion the day before he observed the Yom Kippur Festival (Day of Atonement).

Being "Born-Again" is not a concept originated by the Gentile church. It is a Jewish concept!

Amazing! As the repentant person entered into the immersion bath (this "watery womb" and "watery tomb") he would then emerge as if "Born-Again" from a watery grave and a watery womb (with a re-newed status before God). He is then considered a new creation (2 Cor. 5:17)! If you were Jewish you would have been instructed correctly concerning the mechanics of Biblical Immersion (being Born-Again) since you were a child, and would not have to be like many Christian Gentiles who have not had the truth concerning such an important doctrine, not to mention is resultant responsibilities of obedience to Torah. It is startling that such a Jewish concept is considered the backbone of the Christian faith and the Christian fails to have the correct understanding regarding immersion and being Born-Again as Yeshua understood it. As believers we should have understood it correctly from the beginning, which we have not. A Gentile entered into the watery tomb and watery womb and emerged, no longer considered a Gentile, the old things have passed away (his condition of being a Gentile), behold God made all things new (he now is a part of Israel)! He was now considered a citizen of the Israel of God! Upon emerging from the watery tomb in which he was "Born-Again" he had the status of a Jew. He became Israel! He was considered as if he had always been Israel, for he had no past and it was forbidden to bring up his past for it was as if he had always been Israel.

ARE YOU TRULY GRAFTED INTO ISRAEL OR NOT?

The Gentile, after turning from idols and repentance (as a sign of his faith in the One God of Israel), and after following immersion in the Mikvah (baptism), was grafted into Israel as Paul would later tell us. The repentant Gentile believer chose God and His Torah. He chose to become "chosen". Since he is Israel, then these commandments given to "Israel" now apply to the Gentile Christian who considers himself a follower of Yeshua, his teachings, and His God. Is that your understanding? It was Yeshua's understanding and still is his today. The tragedy of the matter is that the Contemporary Christian Church has not studied to know who they are. They are included in the House of Ephraim; they are Israel. The Commandments of God as seen in the Torah are for them, not just the Jew born in the land!

LET US BE SURE WE UNDERSTAND EACH OTHER

A "Gentile" is a term signifying a non-Jew, who is NOT a "son of the covenant" and is only subject to the seven Noachide Laws. Once a Gentile came to the understanding of the one true God, he would turn from idols and worship the God of Israel. These were the "God fearers", who accepted certain basic Jewish obligations along with the Noachide precepts. According to this, idolatry, shedding of blood, and grave sexual sins were forbidden to Gentile believers. These were originally the Noachide precepts accepted also by the Synagogue on which the Gentiles were obliged. Let me remind you that we see in Acts 15 (at least 25 years after the death of Yeshua) the admonition for the Gentiles to adhere to Noachide Laws to be accepted in the believing community of Israel (it was James as leader of the Jerusalem church who referred back to the Noahide Laws in addressing the question of Gentile salvation). It is logical that the Apostolic Church of Jerusalem should accept the view of the Synagogue on the conditions which Gentiles needed to fulfill in order to be "saved "and accepted in the "family of Israel".It can be easily shown that the fulfillment of other commandments of Judaism were not prohibited to Gentiles. On the contrary, the Noachide precepts were only seen as the minimal condition for Gentiles to be recognized as "God-fearers". These were so understood by the uncircumcised "God-fearers" themselves, who were attracted to the Jewish way of life and accepted many Jewish commandments without becoming full proselytes (Sabbath, festivals, Tallith, etc). This was also the attitude of Gentile Christian "God-fearers", as may be seen from the Epistle to the Galatians; many of them wished to observe as many Jewish precepts as they could. It is evident that, while the leadership of the mother Church in Jerusalem decided to lay no burden upon the Gentile believers beyond the Noachide precepts, it did not object to their voluntarily observing more (Col. 2:16-17). Among the figures of the early Church who instructed Gentile Christians to observe more precepts than these essential "Noahide" ones was Peter, as we know from Paul's criticism of him for demanding that Gentiles live like Jews (Gal. 2:14). Rather than interpreting the apostolic decree of Gentiles adhering to the Laws of Noah as a minimum, Paul saw in the Noachide precepts the maximum obligations of Gentile Christians. Rather than Peter being incorrect, a more comprehensive understanding of the Bible reveals Paul to be incorrect.

GET IT CORRECT PAUL OR DON'T TEACH IT AT ALL

Paul remarks in a letter to the Corinthians (1 Cor. 7) that the circumcised (Jews or converted Gentiles) should not remove the marks of circumcision, nor should the uncircumcised (Gentiles become Jews) circumcise themselves. Wait a minute. Paul contradicts himself (like a lot of preachers today). In Galatians 5 he says "if you Gentiles get circumcised" and then he says "don't do it", can't he make up his mind?

Answer for yourself: In Acts 16 Paul circumcised his disciple Timothy. Timothy was not a Jew was he?

Answer for yourself: If he was a Gentile why bother, right?

This contradiction of Paul is very puzzling.

Answer for yourself: Sadly many have incorrectly interpreted Paul as teaching that circumcision was abandoned with the coming of Yeshua, but was it?

Acts 16 is over 20 years after Yeshua and Paul is still circumcising!

Answer for yourself: We have failed to understand properly, so what is the clear truth of the matter?

Yeshua and his Apostles did not wish to destroy the Torah (Law) from Israel, God forbid; for it is written so in Matthew 5:17, Yeshua having said, "Do not suppose that I have come to abolish the Torah. I did not come to abolish, but to fulfill. I tell you this: So long as heaven and earth endure (do they yet exist today?), not a letter, not a stroke, will disappear from the Torah (the Law) until it is achieved. If any man therefore sets aside even the least of the Torah's demands, and teaches others to do the same (the majority of Pastors who preach the contemporary Christian message), he will have the lowest place in the Kingdom of Heaven, whereas anyone who keeps the Torah, and teaches others so, will stand high in the Kingdom of Heaven."

Bet Emet Ministries teaches Gentile and Jewish commitment and observance to the Torah, not because we desire to be "high" in the Kingdom of God, but because we love God and His Word, and would never think of destroying it by misinterpreting it or failing to study to arrive at the correct meaning of these truths for the people of God today.

It is therefore exceedingly clear that Yeshua never dreamed of destroying the Torah as have the majority of churches today that carry his name but substitute "another Gospel" for the true Gospel of Christ.

WHAT TO DO WITH TIMOTHY?

Paul does not contradict himself because of his circumcision of Timothy, for the latter was the son of a Jewish mother, and a Gentile father (Acts 16), and Paul knew that the child of a Jewish mother is considered a "full Jew", even if the father should be a Gentile. Paul thus acted entirely in accordance with the Halakhah (interpretation of Jewish Law) by circumcising Timothy. This would be in line with his position, following the Jerusalem Council of Acts 15 in 50 A.D., that no longer will Gentile believers be required to "become fully converted Jews" to be accepted into Israel; that the Gentile believers could now remain as "God-Fearers" and be accepted fully by the Jews (1 Cor 7, Acts 15). Gentiles no longer had to "convert" to Judaism and become "fully Jewish" for inclusion with equal standing within the Israel of God. The Gentiles as "God-Fearers" were to also be accepted as grafted into Israel (as demonstrated by Cornelius in Acts 10 who was a "God-Fearer" and who had not yet been circumcised). It is important to note that as a "God-Fearer", Cornelius yet observed the Noahide Laws, honored the Sabbath, and ate kosher (proper killing, dressing and preparation of animals intended for food as well as the removal of all blood). The baptism of Cornelius into the Holy Spirit as had been the Jews earlier in Acts 2 during the Festival of Pentecost was the evidence needed to convince the Jerusalem church that the middle-wall of partition was being removed between Jews and "unclean Gentiles". From this we learn that obedience to the Noahide Laws, without circumcision (to remain only as a "God-Fearer" and not fully convert to Judaism), was no longer to be a barrier between the "unclean Gentiles" and the Jews.

For example, table fellowship at the Shabbat (Sabbath observance) and the Festivals could now be shared together! This was understood from Peter's vision in Acts 10 concerning "unclean foods" which the Lord cleansed (symbolic of cleansing of men, and not the animals designated as unclean in Leviticus). Shammai's "Eighteen Measures" (one of which commanded Jews not to eat or enter into the homes of Gentiles-remember Shammai hated Gentiles) was overturned by God with the revelation at Cornelius' home. God corrects Shammai and those that followed his teaching. Peter's vision of the unclean foods represented the "unclean Gentiles" which God had cleansed; the vision was not meant to tell Peter that God had cleansed the "unclean foods". Let us not confuse this issue.

HOW DOES GOD VIEW YOU TODAY KNOWING THIS?

Timothy had to be circumcised since he was Jewish (because his mother was Jewish) and, therefore, was required to observe all the commandments of the Torah (613). Gentiles who observe the Noahide Laws are forbidden to observe "ALL" the Torah like a Jew is required, unless they desire to be circumcised and identify totally with the Jew and his Torah (full-conversion); if so then they are no longer "God-Fearers" but have become full-fledged Jews and undertake all the 613 Commandments. Following Immersion into Israel the Gentile is no longer considered a "Gentile", he is now Jewish (either partly or completely depending upon circumcision). All who become circumcised (converted) following immersion are bound by all the commandments (613). Understanding the immersion process is crucial for the Christian; once you are immersed in faith and repentance, and you identify with Israel, you emerged from that watery womb and tomb as a Born-Again "God-Fearer" who is grafted into Israel. You became "Israel" and are a Spiritual Jew (regardless if you were aware of it or not). You are not considered a "partial-Jew" unless you are uncircumcised. If you are circumcised you are then considered a "Full-Jew"!

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that?

The majority of you set in your churches thinking you are "Christians" and God's Word says you are "Jewish" (children of Abraham) and are the Israel of God. You have not replaced Israel, you became a part of Israel. You are obligated to observe the Torah (that part of the Law that refers to you according to your Covenant stipulations) and, because of your lack of study, you have let your unlearned pastors and teachers tell you repeatedly that you are "under grace" and "not under Law." You are under both! I just showed you that a proper understanding of immersion and the teachings of Yeshua & Paul tell you otherwise. Now, let me ask you as a Christian an important question.

Answer for yourself: Who are you going to believe; your pastor or Yeshua and Paul?

Answer for yourself: With such an obligation to the "Christian" who now becomes aware that he is either "part-Jewish" or "fully-Jewish" (Judaism is not a race but a religion; the religion of Yeshua) what are you to do concerning the Commandments which are addressed to you requiring your obedience to the Shabbat (Sabbath), Pesach (Festival of the Passover), Hag HaMatzah (Festival of Unleavened Bread), HaBikkurim (First Fruits), Shavuot (Festival of Pentecost), Rosh HaShannah (Jewish New Year), Yom Teruah (Festival of Trumpets), Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), and Sukkot (Festival of Tabernacles)?

Surely you should want to begin to observe and keep them according to Scripture. Failure to do so is sin!

IS IT BEGINNING TO MAKE SENSE?

Christian scholars have assumed from certain passages in the Gospels that Yeshua wished to give a new Torah to take the place of the Torah of Moses. He could not do such a thing unless he sinned.

Answer for yourself: How could Yeshua have then said explicitly that he came only to fulfill it?

The truth of the matter is that Yeshua never came to abolish Judaism, but only to re-establish the religion for the Jews and the Lost Sheep of Israel (assimilated Gentiles from the captivity of Northern Israel). In the unique situation we find in the first century this referred from that time onward the faith that God had given them from the beginning-Noahidism! Nor was this religion new, but actually ancient; it being the observance of the Seven Commandments of Noah, which were forgotten purposefully by Shammai and his students in their bigotry toward the non-Jews. Such men and ideas were influencing the people of Israel in Yeshua's day; thus Yeshua came not for those who are well but those who need a physician and who are sick; sick with hatred for the Gentiles whom God loved and to whom He had called Israel to be a light unto to show them the Torah (the Noahide Laws). God had intended for the Gentiles to be redeemed all along. Yeshua came for the "lost sheep of the house of Israel"; who had lost their way and purpose for the truths that they had been entrusted with. These truths were not only for them, but the Gentiles as well. It is important to understand that as there were "people who were lost" in Israel, there were others like the Essene Menahem and the Hillel Pharisees who had not "lost their way" and needed little if any correction by Yeshua!

WHAT REALLY HAPPENED WITH THE GREAT COMMISSION?

Yeshua's Apostles, in fulfillment of the Great Commission of their master, established these Seven Commandments anew (Acts 15, Acts 21). However, those born as Jews (with Jewish mothers), or those Gentiles where were immersed and circumcised as "full-converts" to Judaism (Ex. 12:49; one law shall be to him that is home-born, and unto the stranger) are obligated to observe all 613 of the commandments of the Torah without exception.

Answer for yourself: Are you a circumcised Gentile Christian who has been immersed in Yeshua's name and "Born-Again" into Israel? Then that means you!

For the uncircumcised Gentile God reserved the Seven Commandments which they have always been obligated to be adhered to and fulfilled by non-Jewish believers. It is for that reason that they were forbidden pollution of idols, fornication, blood, and things strangled (Acts 15). Yeshua's Apostles also forbade them circumcision (to do so would mean full conversion) and the Sabbath observance (exactly like the Jews observed it). The mandatory observance by "God-Fearers" was similar, but not exactly alike the Jewish observance.

This may sound so different from what your traditional Christian message has been, but your Christian message is incorrect if it does not agree or line up with the Apostle's Doctrine. All of what I have shared with you is in accord with the law and custom of the Torah, as expounded by the Jewish sages, the true transmitters from Moses at Sinai, and understood by Yeshua of Nazareth in the first century (they sit in Moses' seat...listen to what they say). Our understanding today is incorrect if it violates the truths as Yeshua understood them. We do not know more about salvation than Yeshua. It was to the Hillel Pharisees Yeshua referred to in Matt. 23 who set in Moses' seat and to whom we are to listen for correct doctrine. We are not to follow the examples of any leaders if they do not line up with the Apostle's Doctrine of Acts 2:42. This teaching on immersion and conversion is Apostolic Doctrine as Yeshua taught his disciples, and any other interpretation other than his is NOT correct. We are not to follow any Pharisee's examples unless they live what they preach (that means the Pharisee Preachers of today who fail to teach and live the truth of Apostolic Doctrine)! Yeshua tells us not to follow them unless they agree with him! Good advice. This same admonition is given in Deut. 17:8 ff., where the authority to teach and lead the people were given to the religious leaders God put over the people of "Israel". These occupy Moses' seat.

IT IS TIME TO GET SERIOUS ABOUT WHAT WE LEARNED

Answer for yourself: Do the Baptists, Methodist, Catholics, Assemblies of God, or any other denomination or non-denomination occupy Moses' seat? No. The Catholic and Protestant denominations are far from being Jewish. Salvation is of the Jews according to Yeshua.

Answer for yourself: Do you dare tell him he made a mistake?

It was these Sages and Pharisees who said that it is forbidden to circumcise a Gentile who does not accept upon himself the yoke of "ALL" the Commandments. In America male babies are circumcised apart from the truths of God's Word (we are commanded to circumcise on the 8th day and no within the first 2-3 days of a newborn's life) and thus their circumcision would not apply. That means circumcision that does violate Scripture does not automatically make you a "full-fledged" Jew. You are still a "God-Fearer". Identification with Israel is by faith and free will. You must choose to stand at your personal Sinai and say to God "I will do all that you say".

Answer for yourself: Do you want to obey God? Do you want to honor His Name with your life?

Going to churches that teach error does not accomplish anything. It is bondage just like Egypt!

Answer for yourself: Have you ever been to Sinai? Will you ever go? Have you chosen to return to your Egypt of ignorance and false traditions and false religion that amount to idolatry?

The Sages likewise said that the Gentile is commanded NOT to "fully" observe the Sabbath as does the Jew (yet he is to remember and keep it). Acts 20:6 recounts for us the Gentile believers and how they were taught by Paul to remember and keep the Sabbath. It is here we find the Gentile Church keeping Jewish ordinances well over thirty years after Yeshua's death.

Answer for yourself: What would later change this pattern?

As far as the Gentiles ("God-Fearers") were concerned, they were not commanded to observe all the Torah (the 613 mitzvot). The Gentile "God-Fearers" did not have to accept all the 613 mitzvot and are not enjoined to observe all of the 613 commandments. However, it is completely different as far as Jews are concerned, for they became obligated to fulfill the Torah because God delivered them from the bondage of Egypt to be the people of His possession. Therefore they and their children became subject to it forever and so are those Gentiles who make full-conversions to Judaism.

LET US PUT IT ALL TOGETHER NOW

It should be easy to see that Yeshua and his Apostles never meant to abolish the Torah of Moses from one who is born a Jew. Likewise, did Paul write in his letter to the Corinthians (1 Cor 7) that each should adhere to the faith in which each was called. They therefore acted in accordance with the Torah by forbidding circumcision to Gentiles, according to Halakhah, as it is forbidden to one who does not accept the yoke of the commandments (all 613). They knew that is would be too difficult for the Gentiles to observe the Torah of Moses. Let us not forget that the Gentiles never had the Revelation of the Torah at Sinai, the Ark of the Covenant, the Tabernacle, the Two Tablets, the prophets, or the Temple & Tabernacle services as were given to Israel. The Gentile's only experience was that they were strangers from the Covenant promises of Israel, aliens for the commonwealth of God's people, without hope and without God in the world.

The rabbis thus took the Gentiles the revelation of God and instructed them not to be circumcised unless they wished to be fully converted to Judaism (this had no bearing upon immersion since it was required for "partial" as well as "full" conversion). It would suffice that the Gentiles observe the Seven Noahide Commandments, as commanded upon them through the Halakhah from Moses at Sinai. This was the minimum requirements for inclusion into Israel.

Rabbi Emden was correct; Yeshua brought a double kindness into the world. One the one hand, he strengthened the Torah of Moses majestically. Acts 24:20 states that many thousands of Jews were believers in Yeshua as Messiah in the first century and zealous for the Torah (Law); this was over 30 years after Yeshua's death and resurrection. The ministry of Yeshua helped return the "children of Israel back to their Fathers; the Patriarchs and their faith" and thus fulfill Malachi's prophecy.

On the other hand, Yeshua did much good for the Gentiles (provided they do not turn about his intent as they please, as some foolish ones have done because they did not fully understand the intent of the authors of the Gospels and epistles). Yeshua obligated his Apostles to fulfill the Great Commission by taking the Gentiles (as a minimum) the Seven Commandments of Noah so that they should not be as the beasts of the field and continue to live their lives as pagans and animals. He also bestowed upon them ethical ways, and in this respect he was much more stringent with them than the Torah of Moses. In is not necessary to impose upon Jews such extreme ethical practices, since they have been obligated to the yoke of Torah since Sinai. Israel took the oath at Sinai and are already trained in proper practice and nature of the Second Tablet of the Law (ethical monotheism and the horizontal relationships man-to-man). It would be for Paul to constantly correct, reprove, teach Apostolic Doctrine, and instruct the Gentiles in his travels since it was to his audience he would write "you are strangers from the Covenant promises, aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, without hope and without God in the world".

If Christians would study they would understand what I have detailed in this teaching. No longer would the Church erroneously teach to abolish the Torah of Moses and Yeshua. Such sin and foolishness would and should cease.

Because of these errant scholars, hatred has increased toward the Jews who are blameless of any guilt concerning Yeshua's death and proceed innocently to observe their Torah with all their heart (intellect), soul (dedication and commitment to action) and might (resources and property). The leaders of the Churches of Yeshua should study to learn correctly for themselves before they lead their people into sin and astray from the will of God for their lives. The Jew is the brother of the Christian. Ephraim (the grafted-in Gentile) and Judah make up Israel. As members of the Christian faith, how good and pleasant it might be if you would observe what was commanded to you by your first teachers, sent directly to you by Yeshua, with his message, and not the message that Roman anti-Semitism has created these last 2000 years.

RABBI HILLEL AND THE GENTILE'S SALVATION

Tradition records for us three heathen who appeared before the two leading rabbis of their time, Hillel and Shammai (both contemporaries of Yeshua in the first century) for the purpose of coming to the God of Israel through "conversion". The first potential convert was interested in accepting only the written law's authority, but not the oral tradition; the second, and most famous, asked to be taught the entire Torah (the main essence of the religion of Yeshua) while standing upon one foot, while the third aspired to become a convert so that he might attain the office of high priest. Shammai rebuffed them and drove them off with a "builder's measuring rod" harshly, while Hillel's gentleness and patient instruction won them over to the faith of Yeshua. Hillel and Shammai flourished during the era of the Second Temple, or end of first century B.C.E. and the beginning of first century C.E., and were contemporaries of Yeshua.

LET US TAKE A CLOSER LOOK...TO UNDERSTAND WHAT WE JUST READ....

Shammai's actions are rather baffling. He scolded the first heathen and had him removed from the premises whereas the latter two were repulsed with a "builder's measuring rod". Many have believed that Shammai was either in the building business or a carpenter by trade. This is all the more puzzling since one of Shammai's favorite teachings was (Avot 1:15) "to receive all men with a cheerful countenance." Was it generally his practice to use his building rod on those he disagreed with?

And Hillel's instruction to the famed second heathen defies comprehension. To his request to be taught the entire Torah while standing on one foot, Hillel replied, "What is hateful unto thee, do not do unto thy neighbor-this is the entire Torah; the rest is commentary." This negative metaphoric contraction of the 613 commandments of the Torah finds no counterpart in Talmudic literature. Two interpretations exist today: 1). God is referred to in scripture as "neighbor" or "friend," or 2) that the prohibitions of theft, adultery and "most commandments" of the Torah can be classified in this vein. Later commentators adopted the more literal view that Hillel was referring to the Golden Rule, love thy neighbor as thyself (Lev. 19:18), but his reference to it in a negative form was in order to incorporate certain halakhic principles into the teaching.

TWO TYPES OF "GRAFTING OF GENTILE BELIEVERS INTO ISRAEL" EXISTED IN ANCIENT TIMES...THE GER TZEDEK & GER TOSHAV....& THE LAWS OF NOAH

Gentiles were grafted into Israel as either a "Ger Tzedek" or a "Ger Toshav."

The Ger Tzedek accepted all 613 commandments of the Torah, and after circumcision and or ritual immersion, was recognized as a full Jew.

The Ger Toshav obligated himself only to the Seven Noahide Commandments, after which he was permitted to settle in the Land of Israel, and the Jewish community became liable to see to his economic well-being.

Judaism considers the Seven Noahide Commandments to be the cornerstones of all religion and civilization, having been incumbent upon the human race since the time of Adam. Judaism accepts the opinion today of Rabbi Hillel (a contemporary of Yeshua) that a non-Jew who accepts these Commandments as divinely ordained and practices them is considered one of the Hasidim (righteous ones) of the Nations, and merits a share in the World to Come. Judaism has always viewed other religions from the perspective of whether or not they conform to the Noahide Commandments.

According to Exodus 23:33, idolaters were not permitted to live in ancient Israel, lest they cause the people to sin. If a Gentile wished to settle there, he would appear before three learned men, accept the Noahide Laws, and would then be permitted to settle with the status of the Ger Toshav. Convert #2 sought this Ger Toshav status from Hillel. When he inquired to be taught the entire Torah while standing on one foot, he was not jesting; he was referring to the Seven Noahide Commandments, which can easily be imparted in a brief span of time (as one stands on one foot). Hillel's reply to "thy neighbor," was referring to the second party involved which was understood to represent God, one's fellow man, and the animal world as well. Hillel was actually offering a brief synopsis of the Noahide Commandments.

A CLOSER LOOK AT RABBI SHAMMAI AND HIS VIEWS ON GENTILE SALVATION

Rabbi Eliezer ben Hyrcranus, a leading sage of the first century A.D., was a member of the School of Shammai. He held the opinion, as did Shammai his teacher, that a Gentile who observes the Noahide Commandments does NOT merit a share in the World to Come. This was also the stance of the School of Shammai and was prevalent in Israel before the time of the death and resurrection of Yeshua. It would a direct result of Yeshua's ministry that this situation would change.

Unlike Shammai, Hillel and his students maintained that righteous Gentiles merit salvation just as Jews do (Hillel, like Yeshua, accepted the teachings connected with the Laws of Noah), and it was their hope that a mission to the Gentiles could avert the destruction of their land and win God's approval, thus influencing God to repent of the destruction prophesied in Daniel chapter nine (now you understand another reason for Hillel's and Yeshua's support for a Great Commission to take the Gentiles the Torah). Bet Shammai (the school of Shammai) however looked down upon the Gentile world, holding that NOT even the most righteous Gentiles could merit a share in the World to Come. Shammai believed the Gentiles deserved "eternal separation from God" and no attempts should be made to alter their destiny. The Jewish people and their teachers have since declared Bet Shammai's views to be null and void, as did the Heavenly Voice toward the close of the first century (just the way God spoke at Yeshua's immersion). Shammai and his students from the School of Bet Shammai were indeed the Pharisees and priests that Yeshua of Nazareth and Paul of Tarsus had to contend with within the pages of our Bibles, and not the Hillel Pharisees. Paul the Apostle's insistence that Gentiles be admitted into the early Messianic Jewish Church was based on Bet Hillel's (School of Hillel) position that righteous Gentiles merit salvation. Let us not forget that Paul had studied under Rabban Gamaliel the Elder, a grandson of Hillel where he received such instruction! Now you can better understand that the anti-Jewish passages contained in the New Testament were directed against the Shammaites, and not the Judaism which followed Bet Hillel, or even today which follows the instruction and interpretations of Hillel. Yeshua was closer to Bet Hillel positions than Bet Shammai's positions as recorded in the New Testament.

When each of these three heathen in our story requested Shammai to instruct them concerning the Noahide Commandments, Shammai would have advised each that a Ger Toshav, Ger Hashar or even an observant Noahide, received no reward in the afterlife. It was this figurative "measuring rod" (his erroneous interpretations of Torah which in this instance taught obedience without immortality) that repulsed the Gentile. The allusion to the tool is not to be taken literally. Shammai would use the same "measuring rod" on the third heathen, by advising him that a Ger Tzedek (a full-convert) had no rights to the high priesthood. Hillel gently pointed our that any Jew not born as a Kohen (descendent of Aaron) was similarly not entitled to the office.

In the case of the first convert, who expressed an interest in the written law only and not the Oral Law or tradition (a Sadduccean position-like the Christian church of today) was a blatant act of heresy. Therefore one can understand another reason that Shammai threw him out. Hillel's (who believed in the Oral Law as well) gentleness won him over.

The gratitude of the two Ger Tzedeks and the "one-footed" Ger Toshav to Hillel are expressed in the Talmud's concluding comment:

"Some time later the three met in one place; they said, Shammai's impatience sought to drive us from the world, but Hillel's gentleness brought us under the wings of the Shekhinah (Divine Presence)."

Thus we can conclude that the term "conversion" was to be understood as the transformation of a pagan into an observant Noahide who observed the Seven Laws of Noah as seen by James' insistence in Acts 15

A FIRST GREAT COMMISSION AND MISSION TO THE GENTILES BY THE HASIDIM

Moses obligated the Jews to spread the knowledge of the Noahide commandments to all mankind. A well known statement of Hillel states (Avot 1:12), "Be thou of the disciples of Aaron, one who loves peace, pursues peace, loves mankind, and draws them nigh to the Torah." Hillel was alluding in this quote to a movement to spread knowledge of the Noahide Commandments to all mankind (Gentile Torah). What better way could one show love for all mankind than to try to bring personal salvation to the Gentiles through faith and observance of the Noahide Laws? With that understanding it is not surprising that Hillel acts as he does with the three heathen men as he explains to each what the Torah expected of them as observant Noahides.

Yeshua exceeds Hillel in that he desires that his followers, as Hasidim of the Nations (righteous Gentiles), do even more than the required minimum (Laws of Noah). Such is seen in Yeshua's positive statement: "do unto others as you would have them do unto you," which when observed, goes far beyond the minimum observance of the Seven Laws of Noah. Hillel thus lays the halakhic groundwork for the salvation of all mankind, and Yeshua concurs. Historically such an outreach to the non-Jewish nations was undertaken by Hillel and various Essenes in 20 B.C.E. in hopes of adverting the destruction of the Temple as prophesied by Daniel.

THE "SECOND MISSION" TO THE GENTILES...THE GREAT COMMISSION OF MATTHEW 28

Yeshua would later command his Apostles to go into all the world and make disciples of all nations (the Gentiles). Inherent in this is the commandment for the Gentiles of all nations to adhere to the Laws of Noah as the basic minimum that God required for the gift of eternal life. It is in this message that a Gentile becomes a "God-Fearer", is immersed in Yeshua's name and identifies with his God, and is "Born-Again". He now is no longer a Gentile but is a "new-creation" and has become a citizen of the Israel of God. He has the option to later convert fully (circumcision) to the religion of Yeshua if he so desires.

Once a Gentile came to the understanding of the one true God, he would turn from idols and worship the God of Israel. Such Gentiles were the "God fearers", who accepted certain basic Biblical and Jewish obligations along with the Noachide precepts. According to this, idolatry, shedding of blood, and grave sexual sins were forbidden to Gentile believers. These were originally the Noachide precepts accepted also by the Synagogue on which the Gentiles were obliged. Let me remind you that we see in Acts 15 (at least 25 years after the death of Yeshua) the admonition for the Gentiles to adhere to Noachide Laws to be accepted in the believing community of Israel. James, the pastor of the Jerusalem Church, calls these Noachide Laws and Commandments "necessary" and mentions as well that they seemed good to the Messianic believers as well as the Holy Spirit in Acts 15. For me this puts Divine approval of the decision of the Church Council to impose these "necessary" things upon the non-Jews for acceptance into the Israel of God. It is logical that the Apostolic Church of Jerusalem should accept the view of the Synagogue on the conditions which Gentiles needed to fulfill in order to be saved. It can be easily shown that the fulfillment of other commandments of Judaism were not prohibited to Gentiles. On the contrary, the Noachide precepts were only seen as the minimum condition for Gentiles to be recognized as God-fearers. These were so understood by the God-fearers themselves, who were attracted to the Jewish way of life and accepted many Biblical and Jewish commandments without becoming full proselytes (Sabbath, festivals, etc). This was also the attitude of Christian "God-fearers", as may be seen from the Epistle to the Galatians; many of these Gentile believers wished to observe as many Jewish precepts as they could. It is evident that, while the leadership of the Mother Church decided to lay no burden upon the Gentile believers beyond the Noachide precepts, it did not object to their voluntarily observing more (Col. 2:16-17). Among the figures of the early Church who instructed Gentile Christians to observe more precepts than these essential ones was Peter, as we know from Paul's criticism of him for demanding that Gentiles live like Jews (Gal. 2:14). Rather than interpreting the apostolic decree as a minimum, Paul saw in the Noachide precepts the maximum obligations for Gentile Christians. Rather than Peter being incorrect, a more comprehensive understanding of the Bible reveals Paul to be incorrect (see Isa. 56 where God is pleased that the non-Jewish believer goes beyond the minimum).

SEPARATION IS INEVITABLE

The liberation of Gentile Christianity from the responsibility to the Biblical and Jewish commandments was a necessary step in order for Christianity to become a Gentile religion, separate from Judaism. It is impossible to know whether Paul was aware that by his "Gospel" he helped to achieve this aim in that he does not speak explicitly about the necessity of separating Christianity from its Jewish roots and he never says that this was his intention, but it is clear that in fact such was his historical role. Paul would later teach that the Jewish way of life in many aspects would had no validity for Christians, but the mother Church in Acts felt differently. For Christian "God-fearers" it was not easy to accept Paul's demand; the complete or partial rejection of Jewish precepts was for many Gentile Christian "God-Fearers" a painful operation. But if Christianity was to become a world religion it had to become "free from the Law". Only a Christian free from the law could separate himself from Judaism and embark upon a path that rejected the very tenants and foundations of Biblical Judaism; the religion of Yeshua.

FULL CONVERSION AND THE GER TZEDEK

With the rise of Christianity the teachers of Israel sought to distinguish between the heathens of the past and those Gentiles who were subject to religious values and morality. The very term "Ger Tzedek" (righteous gentile) stands for the gentile who turned from idols and made a sincere conversion to the faith of Yeshua in the first century. Such a person was respected and welcomed by the Jewish community. The "Ger Tzedek" submitted to circumcision, immersion, and brought a sacrifice to the temple. Upon completion of such, he was considered as "one born in the land." He had full status as a Jew.

PARTIAL CONVERSION AND THE GER HASHAR/GER TOSHAV

There are two other terms for righteous Gentiles: Ger Hashar, and Ger Toshav. In the Bible the Ger Hashar is seen as "the stranger in the gate", and the Ger Toshav was known as "the stranger in the land." These also accepted the faith of Israel (ethical monotheism) and were immersed, but withheld themselves from circumcision. Such "Righteous Gentiles" had a place in the world to come, and it was believed that in the age of the Messiah all Gentiles would come to recognize the one true God according to Zech 14:9.

LETS MAKE IT EASIER STILL SHALL WE?

Once the Ger Tzedek was accepted as a Jew, he was entitled to all the privileges that Jews born into the faith enjoyed. Such converts to Judaism were numerous before the rise of Christianity. Within Palestine and outside, wherever Jews came into contact with pagans, Judaism held a strong attraction. It was expected of the Gentile that given enough time, he would develop from the Ger Hashar to the Ger Tzedek (make a full conversion to Judaism). The later development of Christianity offered the attraction of monotheism and at the same time imposed fewer restrictions on its new adherents than did Judaism. Commencing with the fourth century, when Christianity became the official religion of the Roman Empire, Jews were restricted in their own worship and were no longer permitted to continue their missionary activity and we find the conversion of the Ger Hashar, Toshav and Tzedek dwindling. In spite of the peril to Jews and proselytes alike, we read throughout history of various instances where Christians joined the ranks of the oppressed Jews once they had been shown and taught the truth.

TRINITARIANSIM AND NOAHIDISM...WHAT IS THE TRUTH FOR THE CHRISTIAN?

Judaism ruled that Trinitarianism is not to be considered an idolatrous practice if adhered to by a Gentile, whereas it would be so if practiced by a Jew. The above opinion was rendered by R. Jacob Tam; an outstanding twelfth century Tosafist and grandson of Rashi. R. Tam expressed such a concept as within the idea of "Shittuf" (belief in God the Father, along with an additional deity). Such a belief is permitted to Gentiles (Christians) without them being considered idolaters by Jews and Judaism.

Traditional Christians believe in the divinity of Yeshua, and many have even sought to convert Jews to this belief. This is not allowed for a Jew as it constitutes gross idolatry before HaShem. Gentile Christianity needs not make Jews idolators by spreading their own corrupt theologies. In this regard we can find only two occasions where Yeshua is asking Jews to believe in him as the Son of God (notice I did not say as God the Father or God the Son):

- 1). When healing a blind man in John 9:35.
- 2). Before raising Lazarus from the dead in John 11:26.

A blind man was considered by the Talmud to be the equivalent of a dead person, and this had halakhic implications (a blind person was exempt from all the Commandments of the Torah). Thus he is exempt from the commandment requiring him to believe in only "one" God. It is believed that Yeshua is introducing an halakhic concept here, namely, that Shittuf (Trinitarianism) is permitted in order to save a Jewish life (both the blind man and Lazarus were considered dead, exempt from idolatry as understood by normal Judaism, and could now believe in Yeshua as God's Son for healing and life after death). For although the Talmud rules that a Jew must give his life rather than practice idolatry (murder and sexual immorality as well), Yeshua would have interpreted this to apply to actual idolatry (worship of sun, rocks, fertility cults, etc.), or at least a lesser form of it. Such a belief in a second deity is permitted to Gentiles in Judaism, despite the Noahide Laws and their ban on idolatry. The ban on idolatry in Noahidism accepts Shittuf (it allows the belief in Yeshua as God). Let me also note that the Messiah of God has a beginning and no end where as God has no beginning and no end. God created from Himself the Spirit of the Messiah before the foundation of the world to act as the redemptive aspect of God to man! This anointing has come upon many but on Yeshua I believe unlike any other.

At the same time we must remember that even some Christians do not interpret Yeshua's references to himself as the Son of God, as an allusion to his divinity or equality with the Father.

WHO WERE THE LOST SHEEP OF ISRAEL?

In Matthew 10:5 Yeshua informs us that he came to preach "only to the lost sheep of Israel." We can now understand that he wished his fellow Jews to accept Bet Hillel's view that Gentiles too merit salvation. Much Jewish suffering could have been avoided, including the Temple's destruction in the first century, had the Shammaites abandoned their hatred of the outside world and accepted Yeshua's message of love for God and your neighbor (the Gentile).

We can even see in Yeshua's statement to his disciples in Matt. 28:19 (the Great Commission), that following his death, they are to "make disciples of all the Nations (Gentiles).

In this we see Yeshua's love for the Gentile. Again Yeshua is negating the views of Bet Shammai (which had poisoned the people of Israel with hatred for the non-Jews (Gentiles) after Hillel's death), while actually confirming Bet Hillel's position that the Gentiles too merit that the message of salvation be given to them.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF EARLY CHRISTIANITY...A JEWISH FAITH

Such a restoration of the Early Church's Belief System as taught and handed down by Yeshua reveals to us what "true Christianity" is to be all about. Gentile converts to Yeshua's movement within Judaism were first taught the "Noahide Laws" which consisted of laws on idolatry, blasphemy, unchastity, bloodletting, robbery, eating the flesh of still-living animals, and courts of justice.

Every Gentile entering the Yeshua Movement was obligated to obey the Noahide Laws. In addition they adhered to the Ten Commandments. Besides remembering and keeping the Sabbath observance, they refraining from riotous living, they supported the Temple with the Temple 1/2 shekel tax (notice this is a "usage tax" and is not the tithe), and they observed and kept the Festivals of the Lord. They were not required to be circumcised, but they were required to observe the laws of Kosher and refrained from eating unclean foods in order to not become an obstacle that would prevent worshipping with the Jews and sharing Sabbath meals where they both partook of the Lord's Supper together, as well as share the Feasts and Festivals.

Answer for yourself: Has your church or Pastor taught you "THE" Faith Once Given To The Saints as I have shown you in this article?

Answer for yourself: If not, maybe you should look somewhere else where in truth the real message of Yeshua is being taught? Shalom.

THE HISTORICAL MEANING OF "BEING BORN AGAIN" AS CONTRASTED WITH WHAT CHRISTIANITY TEACHES TODAY: WHAT ARE WE TO BELIEVE? #1

- Answer for yourself: Are you "born again" according to what Jesus taught or according to what your Gentile Pastor teaches?
- Answer for yourself: Is there the remotest possibility that you might not be "born again" according to the Hebrew Scriptures and what it meant to Jesus, but "born" again according to Gentile theology?

Before you say "no way" you better get seated and read the whole of these two article for I promise you an eye opening experience if you do.

- Answer for yourself: Do you know the difference alluded to in the above two questions when the concept of "born again" is viewed in its Jewish context and later in its Gentile context?
- Answer for yourself: If we today in the Christian Church attach a different meaning to the Hebrew concept of "being born again" which is all together foreign and different from what it meant to Jesus when he spoke about it to Nicodemus, then what does Jesus think about our misinterpretation of such an important concept, or even more, what is the result of such a misunderstanding when we are judged in the world to come (Heaven)?

2 Cor 5:17 17 Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new. (KJV)

- Answer for yourself: Are you a "new creation" as taught by Paul, or are you just "another creature"?
- Answer for yourself: If you call yourself a "new creation" and your Pastor or those on TV call you a "new creature," does calling yourself a "new creature" make you one, and do you know what being "one" actually entails?
- Answer for yourself: Have you fulfilled the requirements in the Bible to actually be a "new creature" according to Paul in II Cor. 5:17, and do you know what they are?
- Answer for yourself: What are you to do when most of you find out that you have not been taught correctly about what is required to be a "new creation in Messiah?"

Those are thought-provoking questions to say the least. I know most of you who are reading this article are tempted to put it down and consider what I have asked you to consider as absolute folly. I can only plead with you to read these two articles in full, and understand for yourself what I discovered over fifteen years of in-depth Bible study which was never taught to me by the Christian Church or even Seminary.

In order to peak you curiosity to read this article in full, I will expose at this time the real meaning Paul intended his Gentile hearers to have when he taught them about being a "new creation in Christ." Let us examine the passage in II Cor. in detail from resources like a Christian Greek Lexicon.

2 Cor 5:17

Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new. (KJV)

First of all it is mandatory we understand correctly what the word "creature" means in the original language in which Paul spoke and later was recorded in Greek.

The Thayer's Greek Lexicon [a Christian book no less] defines "creature" in II Cor. 5:17 as follows: 2937 Strong's Numbers: ktisis- the act of founding, establishing, building, etc.

- a) the act of creating, creation
- b) creation, that is, a thing created; used of individual things, beings, a creature, a creation
 - 1) anything created
 - 2) after a rabbinical usage (by which a man converted from idolatry to Judaism was called)
 - 3) the sum or aggregate of things created
 - 4) an institution, an ordinance
- Answer for yourself: Don't you find it almost startling that the concept accompanying the idea of being " new creature" carries with the intended meaning of turning from idols and idolatry to Judaism and not a religion like Christianity which is full of idolatry and considers itself a replacement for Judaism?
- Answer for yourself: Don't you find it almost startling that the concept accompanying the idea of being " new creature" carries with the intended meaning of turning from idols and idolatry to Judaism where Biblical Feasts and Festivals are observed instead on pagan holidays to which the early Catholic Church attached the name of Jesus centuries ago?
- Answer for yourself: Don't you find it almost startling that the concept accompanying the idea of being " new creature" carries with the intended meaning of turning from idols and idolatry to Judaism where the Sabbath is both observed and remembered instead of replacing it with the day already set aside by the pagans for sun worship?
- Answer for yourself: If your church does not teach and model for you the correct interpretation of the Bible by promoting the interpretation of these Hebrew Scriptures from a Jewish perspective since it is a Hebrew document, then how comfortable should you feel considering your faith and the practice of your faith since it probably contains very little that is Jewish; especially in light that you most likely have been taught to reject the Sabbath and the Seven Biblical Festivals?
- Answer for yourself: If your church does not teach and model for you the correct interpretation of the Bible by promoting the correct interpretation of the Hebrew Scriptures from a Jewish perspective [especially since it is a Jewish book] then how comfortable should you feel considering your Gentile Christian faith and the practice of your faith when it finally dawns upon you that you have been following a religious belief system that deviates drastically from what Jesus believed?

WHERE WE MUST BEGIN TO UNDERSTAND CORRECTLY "BEING BORN AGAIN"

I guess I could just dive right in and tell you that we as Christians and followers of Jesus has completely misunderstood the Jewish concept of being "born again" but it would serve us well to first understand the historical context of such passages in order to fully appreciate the Jewish concept of being "born again" and the discourse between Nicodemus and Jesus as found in John chapter 3.

The Noahide Commandments are the Commandments given by the Torah (the Old Testament) to the Gentiles of the world (first given to Adam and later given to Noah), which according to Rabbinic tradition and the First Church Council in Acts 15:17-19 and Acts 15:28-29 (which was headed up by James, the Lord's brother and head of the Jerusalem church) were given by God to Gentiles like Adam and Noah. It is these commandments which if obeyed by the non-Jews of the world will be rewarded with eternal life! According to Rabbinic teaching & Acts 15 (which Jesus believed and taught himself along with his followers), those Gentiles who observe these precepts are assured their share in the World to Come, regardless of what fanciful interpretations were later to be invented by both the Catholic & Protestant churches and most probably heard in your modern churches today. Jesus was and is a Jew. He never ascribed to Baptist, Methodist, Catholic, Assembly of God, Church of Christ, or Mormon church doctrine. He believed and taught the truth as received from his Father in Heaven. The Christian must come to an understanding that the religion of Jesus (Biblical Judaism and not Rabbinic Judaism) has always recognized two different religious codes:

- 1) the 613 Laws and precepts given to the Jews following their liberation from Egypt [the Laws of Moses were added upon the existing Noahide revelation and commandments]
- 2) the earlier Noahide system of legislation for all mankind predated the Laws of Moses

DID JESUS INTEND TO REPLACE OR ABOLISH HIS RELIGION?

The eighteenth century Talmudist Rabbi Jacob Emden wrote a letter that has been discovered by archeologists which states: "Jesus (Yeshua) never intended to abolish Judaism, but only to establish a new religion for the Gentiles based upon the ancient Noahide Commandments transmitted by Moses on Mount Sinai." Let me say that Emden more correctly should have said "RE-ESTABLISH" for the Gentiles the religious foundations that had previously been given by God to the Gentiles since the Garden of Eden and later renewed at Sinai. Emden stressed in his letter that Jesus brought about a "double blessing" to the world, by strengthening the Torah of Moses and at the same time removing idolatry from the midst of the Gentiles. Unfortunately, Emden's thesis in the letter never gained a substantial following by fellow Jews. The most obvious reason would seem to be the frequent harsh statements made by Jesus against the rabbis and Jews of his time (Matt. 23). This chapter has seldom been correctly interpreted by the Christian Church because the church, for the most part, lacks the facts & information concerning the historical, religious, and political background surrounding Yeshua's statements which are necessary to correctly understand such a chastisement of a particular "sect" within the Pharisees, and not the Pharisees as a whole!Yeshua was not condemning the Pharisee movement, for he was proud to be one, especially a Pharisee belonging to the School of Hillel. Yeshua was not replacing Judaism with Christianity!

Emden helps us understand the original intentions of Yeshua and Paul as he analyzes the beginnings of Christianity. According to the Jewish rabbi, Yeshua and his Apostles, which were later sent by Yeshua to the Gentiles of the world, acted entirely within the Halakhah (correct and accepted Jewish law) in re-creating and re-establishing the religion God had previously given to the Gentiles which was based on the Noahide Commandments (the basic seven Noahide Laws consist of prohibitions against idolatry, blasphemy, killing, stealing, sexual sins, eating the limb of a living animal (cruelty to animals), and the imperative to establish courts of justice). According to the Jewish Talmud and Tosefta, those Gentiles who observe these statutes are considered to be of the Hasidim (pious ones) of the Nations and merit a share in the World to Come. Even within the Alenu prayer which is prayed by Jews and "God-Fearers" every Sabbath, it states "May all inhabitants of the earth recognize and know....". This means the Gentiles. This prayer for Gentiles is another proof that the will of God is for Gentiles not to perish but have everlasting life. In the Mishnah (the Oral Law), in Pirke Avot 4.1 it states: "Every assembly that is for the sake of Heaven will in the end be established." Christian assemblies are for the sake of Heaven, yet I must sadly inform you that they have accepted "IN PART" the Noahide Commandments, but not totally! God had given them all to the Gentiles and we are not told today about them in our Christian Churches!

THE FIRST GREAT COMMISSION…20 BC? YOU HAVE GOT TO BE KIDDING? NO; I AM NOT!

Yeshua and Paul were acquainted with the Essene authors and their Scrolls. Many passages in the New Testament bear striking similarity to the Scrolls (see my previous newsletter about Yeshua and the Secret of the Dead Sea Scrolls). A comprehensive overview of the writings and materials available to us today reveal the Essenes to have been extremely pious Jews who scrupulously followed the Torah (the instruction and teaching of God, more commonly called the "Law"), whereas Yeshua and Paul are by many portrayed incorrectly as having forsaken their Jewish origins and replaced the Torah with a new religion-Christianity. Such a study also reveals many problems with Essene theology but this is a study done elsewhere and is too extensive for this article. This portrayal of Yeshua forsaking his Jewish faith never happened; sadly I cannot say that for Paul [see Acts 21 where Paul was known to forsake Moses {commandments} and teach Jews to quit circumcising their children]! At lease this is the general picture one is presented with in the majority of churches today; and one will not be able to see through it without diligent study. But this premise goes against Emden's letter. A Christian should know that the Talmud records for us that Moses commanded the Jews to spread the knowledge of the Noahide commandments to all mankind!

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that?

God commanded Moses to spread the knowledge of the Covenant with Noah and its requirements to all Gentiles in the world. Judaism acknowledges this "Gentile Covenant for Salvation" as from God since the time of Mount at Sinai. The questions we have to ask ourselves is this:

- Answer for yourself: Does history record for us such an ambitious attempt to bring the Noahide Laws to Gentiles, and if so, who was behind it and when did it occur?"
- Answer for yourself: Were the pious Essenes the ones who attempted such a mission to the Gentiles in the generation preceding Yeshua's birth?
- Answer for yourself: Did Yeshua and Paul, through their ministries, follow in the Essene's footsteps and try to bring to fruition what the Essenes began in the generation before their birth?
- Answer for yourself: Where do the Gentiles correctly fit into the teachings of Jesus and Paul?

As Christians and followers of Yeshua, we must constantly search for the correct interpretations of such an event if we are to correctly understand the Bible and it's message to the Gentile and his salvation.

LET US LEARN FROM HISTORY

A passage in the Jerusalem Talmud records for us: "Menahem the Essene and 160 Essene disciples left the Jewish community" (remember not all Essenes lived in & around the Dead Sea) "about 20 B.C. on a mission to the Gentiles to take the "world" the Noahide Covenant, thus assuring obedient and observant Gentiles a place in the World to Come." This Menahem served as a vice-president of the Sanhedrin under the sage Hillel who was the Nassi (President of the Sanhedrin) some thirty years before Jesus' birth. The Mishnah makes quite clear that Menahem subjected himself totally to Hillel's authority (who loved the Gentiles), thus establishing a link between the Essenes and Hillel (who was a conservative Pharisee). Also of importance is the link between the two camps (Essenes & Pharisees) in that they were both known as "Hasidim." Menahem the Essene left Hillel's Sanhedrin for his mission to the world and was then replaced by the sage Shammai (who did not like the Gentiles). Shammai succeeded him as vice-president, probably about 20 B.C., and the influences of Hillel began to be replaced with those of Shammai [who was strongly anti-Gentile and deemed no Gentile worthy that the message of God's salvation be taken to them].

QUESTIONS NEEDING ANSWERS

- Answer for yourself: Was Menahem forced out by Shammai and his followers? Yes.
- Answer for yourself: Did Hillel's disciples join Menahem in his mission to the Gentiles? Yes.
- Answer for yourself: Did later rabbis approve of Menahem's mission to the Gentiles? Yes and No, depending on the particular school of Pharisees to which we refer.
- Answer for yourself: Did Shammai lend his support to the Gentile mission or did he discourage the Jews from being a light to Gentiles? He strongly discouraged it.

- Answer for yourself: In the time of Yeshua did the teachings of Hillel or Shammai have influence over the people of Israel and direct the course of the nation? Shammai was in ascendancy.
- Answer for yourself: Which of these two Pharisee schools supported Yeshua and which did Yeshua rebuke in Matt. 23? The School of Hillel supported Yeshua and the School of Shammai was rebuked by Yeshua.
- Answer for yourself: Was Yeshua against all the Pharisees? No, not at all, for he would say only two days before his death that the Pharisees (no longer the Sadducees) are the religious leaders of Israel, for from now on they sit in Moses' seat!

THE STORMY RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN HILLEL AND SHAMMAI

The first disputes regarding the Oral law (that was passed down for some 1700 years from Moses at Sinai) took place at this time between the sages and students of Hillel and Shammai (beginning about 20 years prior to Yeshua's birth). Their respective schools (Bet Hillel and Bet Shammai) were to clash over 350 times on issues of the Oral Law during the next hundred years. Nor were these always minor disputes for even once the Zealots connected with Shammai massacred and killed many of the Pharisees. The issues between Bet Hillel and Bet Shammai went to the very core of what Judaism stood for (and what Jesus stood for). One of the major areas of contention was Judaism's attitude toward salvation of the Gentiles.

Answer for yourself: What side would Yeshua agree with?

The Schools of Shammai and Hillel both accepted all of the commandments contained in the five "written" books of the Torah (Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy). But the written law of Moses is too brief to be applied to practical issues of everyday life, and it was accepted that God also gave an oral and more detailed tradition was originally given to Adam, then to Noah, and finally handed down to Moses at Sinai. The debates of Bet Hillel and Bet Shammai centered on this oral tradition.

This oral tradition was passed down by Moses and it was forbidden to be set to writing. It was this Oral Law that later caused controversy among the rabbis; especially Bet Shammai and Bet Hillel. Finally, out of fear it would be forgotten due to all the persecution of Judaism and the deaths of its leaders at the hands of Gentiles, the sages permitted it to be committed to writing. The first major works were the Mishnah (200 A.D.) and the Tosefta (4th century), followed by two Talmuds; the Babylonian Talmud and the Jerusalem Talmud (5th century). The Babylonian version is more popular than the Jerusalem Talmud. Also at this time, books of homilies known as Midrash began to appear. The two major commentaries to the Babylonian Talmud are those of Rashi and the Tosefta. Why did I mention these works? The Mishnah, Talmud and Tosefta are the works of primary interest and authority when researching the Jewish law and tradition that surrounded Jesus and his teachings in the first century.

GoD CHOSE HILLEL'S INTERPRETATION FOR ALL TIME..IT CAME THROUGH A VOICE FROM HEAVEN

The School of Shammai [anti-Gentiles] came upon the Jewish scene 20 years before Jesus' birth, and flourished for around 100 years. After the destruction of the Temple in 70 A.D., the seat of the Sanhedrin was relocated to Yavneh, where the Halakhah (accepted interpretation of Jewish Law) of the School of Bet Hillel became once again the established Halakhah (accepted interpretation for all issues of Jewish law). Also at this time, God spoke from Heaven and a Heavenly Voice was heard declaring the Law was to be from that time forward decided in favor of the interpretations of the School of Bet Hillel. Since that time all Jewry has accepted the teachings of Bet Hillel. But this was too late to save Israel from the judgment of God for violating the commandments of the Second Tablet of the Law....the Commandments affecting relationships between man and men [Jew/Jew; Jew/Gentile].

HOW COULD YESHUA REPLACE WHAT HIS FATHER APPROVED?

Now listen closely. Jesus' debates with the Pharisees recorded in the New Testament were actually disputes with the Pharisees representing the School of Shammai and NOT the School of Hillel. Every Christian needs to set down and thing hard upon what I just said; especially in light of the teaching of anti-Semitic Gentile Christianity that all Pharisees opposed Jesus. Such a teaching is simply not true and a tragic misrepresentation of history. Jesus adopts the views of Hillel and the School of Hillel on "all" matters of Halakhah (interpretation) except on the matter of divorce, where he sides with the School of Shammai (which held a more strict interpretation). At the time of Jesus the interpretations and teachings Bet Shammai were influencing Jewish life and institutions more than Hillel's, and it was this way for almost 100 years. Through Shammai's teachings Israel was "loosing her way." It would be primarily the influence of Shammai and his hatred of the non-Jew by which Israel will fail to "merit" the Kingdom of Heaven and her King and thawart the day of her visitation. The prophecies would not be fulfilled and the Messiah would not be revealed to a nation of Priests which hated those to whom she was called to go. Hillel had died when Jesus was 13-14 years old, and Hillel's influence in Israel was rapidly being replaced with the contemporary teachings of Shammai. Jesus (who accepted and agreed with Hillel) and Shammai (and Shammai's many students) were to clash continually! The Shammai Pharisees (and not the Hillel Pharisees) were responsible for handing over Jesus to the Chief Priest, and Sadducees and Romans for crucifixion, and this was a violation of Jewish Law. Couple this with the relationship the Shammaites had with the Sadducean Zealots in the priesthood, little wonder that the Chief Priests (Sadducees) capture Jesus and hand him over to the Romans to be crucified. Notice that the Hillel Pharisees (whom the majority of the people supported and followed) had nothing to do with Yeshua's crucifixion (it was they who warned Jesus to flee for his life in Luke 13:31). When you read Matt. 23 you cannot help but see Yeshua chastising the Pharisees; but what we fail to notice is that there were many sects under the umbrella of the Pharisees and Jesus says "Pharisees who"....indicating that many were not to be included in his rebuke of the insincere Pharisees. Yeshua took odds with the Shammaite Pharisees, not the Hillel Pharisees!

The Christian Church's failure to understand this has led them to erroneously believe that Jesus was rejecting his own religion by chastising the pharisees rather than calling for repentance within it by whose "who" had departed from God's will!

WE MUST UNDERSTAND THE TIMES AND THE TEXTS

Now let us learn something that Christianity has neve taught you.

The Jewish people knew from ancient prophecy that their Temple in Jerusalem would be destroyed by the Gentiles (Dan. 9 describes 490 yrs that are allotted to the Jewish people to either usher in the Messianic Kingdom or else suffer destruction). Bet Hillel believed that reaching out to the Gentiles (since historically Israel had failed to be "a light unto the Gentiles") was the correct approach to possibly avoiding the coming destruction. I cannot stress the importance of the above consideration in the minds of the Jews like Hillel in the times of Jesus. Hillel and his students [School of Hillel Pharisees] maintained that righteous Gentiles merit salvation just as Jews do (Hillel, like Yeshua, accepted the teachings connected with the Laws of Noah), and it was their hope that a mission to the Gentiles could avert the destruction of their land and win God's approval, thus influencing God to repent of the destruction prophesied. Bet Shammai however looked down upon the Gentile world, holding that NOT even the most righteous Gentile could merit a share in the World to Come. Shammai believed the Gentiles deserved "hell" and no attempts should be made to alter their destiny. The Jewish people and their teachers have since declared Bet Shammai's views to be null and void, as did the Heavenly Voice toward the close of the first century (just the way God spoke at Jesus' immersion). Shammai and the Bet Shammai were indeed the Pharisees and priests that Jesus of Nazareth and Paul of Tarsus had to contend with within the pages of our Bibles, and not the Hillel Pharisees. Paul the Apostle's insistence that Gentiles be admitted into the early Messianic Jewish Church was based on Bet Hillel's position that righteous Gentiles merit salvation. Let us not forget that Paul had studied under Rabban Gamaliel the Elder, a grandson of Hillel where he received such instruction! Now you can better understand that the anti-Jewish passages contained in the New Testament were directed against the Shammaites, and not the Judaism which followed Bet Hillel, or even today which follows the instruction and interpretations of Hillel.

UNDERSTANDING YESHUA'S MESSAGE

Yeshua and his disciples warned all men everywhere not to "destroy" the Torah of Israel. Understand that is Paul's theology early in his life; sadly we have letters later in his life that teach the opposite. It is not my wish to get into the "Paul Problem" in this article but let it suffice that the truth about Paul has not often found the light day; especially in light of Gentile tradition that as overtaken historical truth.

Answer for yourself: Did Paul change his religious beliefs during his life or did the Gentile church create theology and put it in Paul's mouth? You might be surprised at the answer to that question.

A Jew is not permitted to leave his Torah, for Paul wrote in his letter to the Galatians Chapter 5 (remember Galatians was written to Gentiles) "I, Paul, say to you that if you (writing to Gentiles) receive circumcision (along with immersion that makes you a Jew...ie., conversion), the Messiah will do you no good at all."

Answer for yourself: What did Paul mean by the above comment?

I will deal with the meaning of that last phrase in a future newsletter but the core of truth related to this statement by Paul is that the death of Yeshua caused a movement within a Gentile hating Judaism taking God and the Gentile's Covenant to the nations to the world; no longer was forced circumcision of the Gentile and full conversion the only option for the non-Jew to be taken the salvation of the Jews and fellowship with other Jews. Enforced circumcision was the tactic of the Shammai Pharisees to keep Gentiles apart from them. This is not love but rather hatred of the Gentiles. Acts 15 is the turning point on this. Paul goes on to say "You can take it from me that every man (Gentile) who receives circumcision [prior to Acts 15 circumcision was understood as necessary for the Gentile coming to God thereby converting to Judaism]. It was the belief of the early church that Yeshua was the Messiah and because of this belief and his death and expected return that James and the Jerusalem church repented of their bigotry toward the non-Jew and no longer could enforce circumcision upon the non-Jew as had been done previously. This major step by Jews occurs in Acts 15 and letters were written to strengthen the Gentile churches thereby enforcing this decision for all Gentiles (Acts 15 and 16). A Jew by birth of course was circumcised and is obligated to keep the "entire Torah" but a converted Gentile was also expected to be circumcised and immersed and likewise under obligation to keep the 'entire' Torah " (613). But this was to change with Acts 15 and the repentance of James and the Jerusalem Church in regards to enforced circumcision of the non-Jew. A "converted" Gentile was considered "Jewish" and obligated to keep the 613 mitzvoth as were other natural born Jews. Paul is teaching us that a Gentile (like you and me) who is immersed [traditional way of receiving non-Jews into faith with God] and who is circumcised [again part of the conversion process] is obligated to keep the entire Torah as if we were born a Jew! But since Yeshua's death lead to a movement within Judaism that repented of their stance toward non-Jews and no longer required circumcision of the non-Jew then to not take advantage of this nullifies the benefit of Yeshua's death and the movement that it produced. If one did not recognize this blessings [no longer required of a non-Jew to be converted to be accepted by God] that comes from the death of Yeshua then we better understand Paul's statement that Yeshua [believed to be the Messiah] profited them not at all.

- Answer for yourself: Did you hear that?
- Answer for yourself: What about Paul and his teaching that the Law is passed away?

It must now be obvious that Paul never intended for that to be your understanding; he never said that! Our problem is that we misinterpret the teachings of Paul not having a proper background necessary to understand correctly what he is saying. Let us begin with what happens when we are "Born-Again". Understand that Judaism was becoming divided in how to handle the non-Jew. The Jewish hatred for the Jews had enforced full conversion and circumcision on the male in hopes of it being a deterrent from having to deal with them since the Jews looked down on the non-Jew. But not all Jews did; as we just saw in Yeshua and the Pharisee School of Hillel. Judaism was torn within on what to do with the non-Jew. Previously being circumcised and then immersed meant full conversion. This was called "Being Born Again" in a Jewish context. This is not a Christian term; only stolen by them and given a new definition much later. But being "Born Again" has been wrenched from its Jewish context and given a meaning completely different from what it meant to Jesus/Yeshua. Now the question of enforcing circumcision as part of this process was being rethought by Jews who were repenting of their bigotry toward the Gentiles. Acts 15 again will be the pivotal point in this theological diversity and the Messianic branch of Hillel Phariseeism will change their ways. Yet at the same time the Shammai School will continue their repressive measures toward the non-Jew and sadly this will be the dominant stance for Israel and will ultimately lead to its destruction in 70 C.E.

More to follow in the concluding article where we will tackle the intricate meanings of being "Born Again." Shalom.

THE HISTORICAL MEANING OF "BEING BORN AGAIN" AS CONTRASTED WITH WHAT CHRISTIANITY TEACHES TODAY: WHAT ARE WE TO BELIEVE? #2

In the previous article we examined the condition of the no-Jew in relationship with Israel and it's responsibility to be a Priest to the nations. We saw historically that Israel had failed in such a mission. Yet at the same time we saw a small section of Judaism which understood Israel's failure to bring the non-Jew to God and had repented of such bigotry toward the non-Jew and had mobilized several movements and attempts to reach the non-Jewish world with the Laws of Noah and the Covenant of Noah that provided Eternal Life for the non-Jewish believer. We also saw how the doctrine of circumcision which had never been required of the non-Jew as used by the Jews as a deterrent to keep the non-Jew from interaction and fellowship with the Jews.

Answer for yourself: What was Judaism to do with the non-Jew and how would they be led to God? Would full conversion to Judaism which required circumcision and immersion be required or only immersion and what was the Jewish understanding of the SPIRITUAL DYNAMICS that accompanied such immersion?

You might now be aware of it at present but the answers to above questions have the potential to change you life.

Now let us continue where we left off in the first article.

WHAT DID THE CONCEPT OF "BEING BORN AGAIN" MEAN TO JESUS? SHOULD IT MEAN THE SAME TO ME?

Before going on we must provide the reader some background information about immersion and its connection to being "Born Again." We must at first understand that "Born Again" is a Jewish concept and not a Gentile concept, not a Baptist concept, not a Catholic concept, and not even a Christian concept. If you want to know what being "Born Again" means the way Jesus and Nicodemus used it in John 3 then you have to ask a Jew or a Jewish scholar. To do otherwise and seek the meaning from the Vatican or any Evangelistic ministry that is on our televisions guarantees you receive an anti-Semitic replacement religious doctrine devoid of Divine truth. I apologize for other Christian ministers who have failed to such sufficiently in order to learn what these very important concepts meant to Jesus before they begin to teach them; sadly doing it wrong.We can change the meaning of "Born Again" and its intricate involvement with immersion as applied to both Jews and non-Jews but in so doing we only deceive ourselves from what God intended it mean. We can alter religious doctrines all day long and believe me this has been done but down deep in your heart I would hope you would want to know what being "Born Again" meant to Jesus and understanding it as such. For the very life of me I cannot understand how anyone can call himself a Christian or a follower of Jesus/Yeshua and not want to believe like Jesus and accept what he believed about being "Born Again." Startling as it might sound the vast, vast majority of Christendom will tell you that they are "Born Again" never knowing what it really means. Even more tragically such a declaration by the vast majority of Christians make them out to be liars as the fruit of being "Born Again" in the context used by Jesus in John 3 is absolutely lacking in their lives. I will make this very plain in the forthcoming article. So this article will be one of the biggest challenges possibly in your religious life.

Answer for yourself: What did being "Born Again" mean to Jesus/Yeshua? What happens when one was "Born Again" according to its Biblical definition and not the later Gentile reinterpretation of it?

In answering this we must deal with a very important issue concerning how a man comes to God and what is involved in it. This spiritual dynamic is often over looked by Gentile advocates of the current teaching of "Born Again" adopted by Gentile Christianity which finds its origins in the false atonement connected with sun worship. If you think I am kidding then I challenge you with all that I can muster to read the following website and prove it wrong.

http://www.paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com

Now it is time for the truth concerning being "Born Again." Biblically speaking when a person, either a Jew or Gentile turns from idols, from sin, and repents, and prays and asks forgiveness, and makes restitution, or bring alms following his repentance, confession, and prayer then he has received forgiveness of his sin. This is known Biblically as atonement. This is what the historical Jesus understood concerning both his Jewish Scriptures and his faith of Biblical Judaism. Of course Gentile Christianity and its New Testament accepts an alternate atonement. Without study into the origin of this replacement atonement no one will ever know that it is reproduced sun worship applied to a Jew by Rome. Now it is given that such a one who repents, prays, confesses his sin and brings restitution and alms is one already introduced to the God of Israel. Usually of course this is a Jew. Unknown to most Christians is that a Jew was born into Covenant with God unlike Gentiles and was circumcised the 8th day of his life which was the "sign" of that Covenant. When a Jew became a son or daughter of the Covenant then they were immersed according to the teachings of the Tanakh. This was not a simple water dip as we are taught by Gentile Christianity. Something SPIRITUAL happened to the one immersed that was noticed by God but not by man. These immersions were called "BEING BORN AGAIN" each and every time they were done; it was NOT a one time event! The Rabbis understood that not all the Commandments from God were the same and one special group of Commandments were called "Hukkim" which was understood by the Rabbis as "commands from God that did not make human sense yet accomplished spiritual realities in the Heavens." Immersion is one such "Hukkim." This gets somewhat technical so I would like to paraphrase if I might. The Rabbis understood such an "Hukkim" concerning immersion as a "spiritual step toward the Throne of God in the Heavens." They understood to the rational mind such immersion would would seem to not have any affect on our "spiritual standing before God" but yet understood that it did. This was so important to the Rabbis that we understand the great number of immersion baths located outside the Temple for the worshippers would be immersed become attending "church" if you get my drift. They understood what we as Christians don't; namely that through immersions one was accomplishing something spiritual in their walk before God. Now understand that immersions such as these "Hukkim" were not done indiscriminately; but rather they were commanded at specific times.

- One was instructed to immerse following repentance from a sin where he was again "moving closer to God in the spirit realm."
- But more than that the Rabbis saw that the Tanakh commanded "being Born Again" through these immersions (mikveh) before one observes or celebrates the Sabbath and each of the Seven Biblical Festivals. These "mo'ed" are "appointed times" and "rehearsals" with God and special times with God. One prepares his heart and then "immerses" before sanctifying such "appointed times" with God because at these special times commanded by God one again is "moving closer to God in the spirit realm."
- A woman following her menses and her uncleanness since being tainted with blood was commanded to be "Born Again" through immersion before she could take her place again in the community and her husbands's bed.

As you can see the Rabbis understood such "immersions" and "mikvehs" as Commands by God that did not make rational sense yet God is God and God understands the need for these "immersions" be done by man whereby man was drawing closer to God in the Spirit realm. We find that only one "immersion" by Yeshua is recorded in the New Testament and that is the one right before Yom Kippur. Little wonder that a myriad of Jews had repented of their sins and had grouped themselves to be "immersed" like Yeshua before Yom Kippur. This was mandatory before one could observe or partake of Yom Kippur which was beginning at the dusk of the very day.

This explains the Jewish concept of being "Born Again" but does not explain it as applied to the non-Jew. This we will do now.

THE GENTILE AND BEING BORN AGAIN

The New Testament describes quite adequately the standing of the non-Jew with God:

Paul in writing to Gentiles states:

Eph 2:12 12 That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world: (KJV)

That is pretty bleak if you ask me. This is the Gentile's standing with God before he learns how to approach and be accepted with God. Israel we saw in the first article was hesitant in taking the non-Jew his Noahide Covenant and the ways by which he could be accepted with God. In fact we saw that Israel made it very difficult upon the non-Jew by enforcing circumcision upon a fully adult male in hopes that it served as a deterrent to keep them away from the Jewish people. We also mentioned that if a non-Jew desired to identify with the Jewish people and become a son of the Covenant as a Jew than he would be required to convert to Biblical Judaism through circumcision and immersion just like the Jew. This means that the non-Jew was being "Born Again" just like the Jew in his drawing closer to God following his repentance, prayer, confession, restitution, and alms which he was taught to bring according to the Tanakh.

This sticking issue if you remember was over "circumcision" or the "lack of circumcision" and the acceptance of such a one into the Israel of God by the Jewish people. We find a perfect example of a non-circumcised Godfearer in Cornelius in Acts 10.

When a Gentile was taught of God through the Jewish people and accepts the faith of the One God of the Universe, he identifies with God. As Gentile Christians and followers of Yeshua we likewise identify with God through the one He sent to reveal Himself; namely Yeshua (Jesus). It is through the name of Jesus we as non-Jews were instructed about the God of Jesus in the first place. The Gentile (in the act of repentance and faith) literally stands at his own Sinai, as did his Gentile forefathers (the Egyptians are a type and shadow of Ephraim, the other house of Israel) and says, like the Jews of old did, "All that the Lord has spoken we will do" (Ex. 19:8). Notice that the Bible say "all" the people said it at Sinai (this included the mixed-multitude of Gentiles and Jews together)! Included in that group were a mixed multitude of Gentiles along with Jews and this fact teaches us a very important lesson for our lives. At Sinai both Gentiles and Jews confessed adherence to the Covenant offered by God. God had previously instructed that they "wash their clothes."

Answer for yourself: Is there any special significance to this mixed multitude "washing their clothes?"

The Rabbis teach that "washing their clothes" is an idiom for immersion in water of their bodies. Here we see the example of both Jew and non-Jew experiencing the concept of "immersion" and being "Born Again" as taught by the Rabbis.

This again is the Hebrew "mikveh" where both Jew and Gentile were "drawing closer to God in the spirit realm."

Having turned from the false gods of Egypt and turning to the true God and Creator Moses was instructed to have both Jew and Gentile (Mixed Multitude) draw closer to God [be Born Again} in the Spirit through immersion. This was not forgiveness of sins since that was already accomplished through their repentance. Let us be clear on that and this was not their salvation as that was already accomplished by faith and their resultant actions based on their faith in the true God. This was more of a SANCTIFICATION of setting themselves apart unto God whereby they drew closer to God. Something that they did not understand was being accomplished through their immersion. The Rabbis call this "Hukkim."

The Rabbis teach that this is an illusion to both the Jews and non-Jews being Born-Again to the God of Israel. But again understand this was NOT a one time event but an experience to be repeated throughout their lives in their worship of God.

JOHN 3 AND BEING BORN AGAIN....WAS THIS NEWS TO ISRAEL?

This might be startling to you but the concept in the Gospel of John, chapter three, concerning being "Born-Again" is not the invention of Jesus. Being You have seen if you have read these two articles that "Born-Again" is a Jewish concept that has existed since the Garden of Eden and Adam. Now hear this...being "Born Again" is to be repeated throughout one's life....even your life as a Christian! A typical Jew was "Born Again" with each new encounter with God throughout his life. A Gentile convert had his "hello" experience with the God of Israel through immersion required in conversion [that was his first Born Again experience] but yet this experience of drawing near to God was expected to be repeated throughout his live by continually being "immersed" and "Born Again" after every repentance, before each observance of the Sabbath, before each observance of a Biblical Festival, and for the woman after her menses monthly.

Answer for yourself: Can we find in Scripture examples where righteous Jews were continually "Born Again?"

Examples in scripture where the children of Israel were "Born-Again" repeatedly (immersed and attained a new-heightened status before they met with God) are before each Sabbath, before each Feast and Festival, following repentance of sin, and for a lady, after her menses on a monthly basis before she could return to her husband's bed. This will be news to most but Yeshua was immersed repeatedly in his life. Yeshua, being a Torah observant Jew, was immersed before each Sabbath service and before each Biblical Festival each year. If you added it up you would find that Yeshua was immersed a minimum of 59 times a year. That being true we are misled in understanding this concept because recorded for us is just only one immersion of Yeshua in the New Testament and that one is the immersion the day before he observed the Yom Kippur. Yom Kippur is the Festival called the Day of Atonement and as I shared earlier every Torah observant Jew had to be immersed before he could participate in observance of Biblical Feasts and Festivals. Thus we would expect Yeshua to be immersed prior to Yom Kippur and we do in New Testament.

Sadly Christian scholars debate down through history with large volumes the reason for Yeshua's immersion; never stopping once to try to understand it from a Jewish perspective. I find their lack of insight and scholarship amazing and as an ordained Pastor and Seminary graduate I am ashamed of my fellow colleagues who know so little but profess so much.

Being "Born-Again" is not a concept originated by the Gentile church. It is a Jewish concept!

Amazing! As the repentant person entered into the immersion bath (a picture of a "watery womb" and "watery tomb") only to emerge as if "Born-Again" from a watery grave and a watery womb (with a renewed spiritual status before God). It was a new start for the believer. If he had sinned and repented God granted him a new status; a new start with God was his. This was perfectly symbolized through the rising from a figurative grave to life anew with God. This was again perfectly symbolized through the emergence from a watery womb to life anew with God. The pictures and symbols and metaphors which help explain this Spiritual advance with God are perfect once you understand that something supernatural happens between the believer and God in time of drawing closer with God. God knows it; He commanded it be done. We look at it without our Hebrew Roots and interpret it incorrectly and try to relegate it to a once in a life-time experience and attach a completely foreign meaning to it that God never intended. We not only have lost truth but the opportunities to draw closer to the God we say we love.

The Rabbis call this a "Hukkim" commandment; it does not make human sense but yet God requires it. The immersed one is then considered a new creation (2 Cor. 5:17) as he emerges from the water! Remember that this was also required of a Gentile convert coming to God for the first time. He was drawing close to God for the first time in his life through this Hukkim immersion. But immersion and being "Born Again" was not only to accompany repentance after one sinned or turned to God for the first time in one's life since being a non-Jew but was commanded all the time before one observes and celebrates a Biblical Holy Day or the Sabbath. Being "Born Again" was not a once in a life-time SALVATION EXPERIENCE because one believes some theology about Jesus as Paul would make it out to be in Romans 6; rather it dealt with sanctification and dedication to God which is to be repeated throughout one's life. At least that is what it meant to a Jew like Jesus. It many not have meant that to Paul, himself a Gentile convert that often departed from Jewish faith but that is whole other problem that bears your study. Also of note was that immersion and being "Born Again" applied to the non-Jew as he was immersed as part of his conversion to Judaism once he already had faith in God and had repented of his sin. This was in all the above cases a step toward God by the repentant Gentile. After his initial immersion it was then expected of him to be repeatedly immersed just like the Jew when he observed the Biblical Festivals and the Sabbath. In such a way we find the Gentile just like the Jew experiencing this drawing near to God.

Rom 10:12 12 For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. (KJV)

I wish everyone really believed the above verse. If you were Jewish you would have been instructed correctly concerning the mechanics of Biblical Immersion (being Born-Again) since you were a child, and would not be like many Christian Gentiles who have not had the truth taught them concerning such an important doctrine. It is startling that such a Jewish concept is considered the backbone of the Christian faith and the Christian fails to have the correct understanding regarding immersion and being Born-Again as Jesus understood it. As believers we should have understood it correctly from the beginning, which we have not. A Gentile entered into the watery tomb and watery womb and emerged, no longer considered a Gentile, the old things have passed away (his condition of being a Gentile estranged from God is over), behold God made all things new (he now is a part of the Israel of God just like the Jew)! He was now considered a citizen of the Israel of God!

Eph 2:12-13 12 That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world: 13 But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh ...(KJV)

Understand the non-Jews were brought nigh to God not only by the death (blood) of Jesus which began a movement out of a Gentile hating Judaism to them in the world whereby they were instructed in the Covenant of Noah [Acts 15.16] but were brought nigh unto God by faith and immersion whereby they "drew near to God in the Spirit realm" through this Hukkim Commandment called a mikveh!

Upon emerging from the watery tomb in which he was "Born-Again" he had the status of a Spiritual Jew...a child of God. He became Israel! He was considered as if he had always been Israel, for it was said by the Rabbis following conversion that it was if the non-Jew had no past and it was forbidden to bring up his past for it was as if he had always been Israel.

ARE YOU GRAFTED INTO ISRAEL OR NOT? OR DO YOU WANT TO REMAIN OUTSIDE THE ISRAEL OF GOD AS AN ANTISEMITIC CHRISTIAN?

The Gentile, after turning from idols and repentance (as a sign of his faith in the One God of Israel), and after following immersion in the Mikveh (baptism), was grafted into Israel as Paul would later tell us. The repentant Gentile believer chose God and His Torah. He chose to become "chosen". Since he is Israel, then the commandments given to "Israel" now apply to the Gentile "Christian" who looks to Yeshua, his teachings, and His God.

Answer for yourself: Is that your understanding? It should be!

It was Jesus' understanding and still is his today. The tragedy of the matter is that the Contemporary Christian Church has not studied to know who they are. They are included in the House of Ephraim; they are Israel. The Commandments of God as seen in the Torah are for them, not just the Jew born in the land!

LET'S MAKE SURE WE UNDERSTAND CORRECTLY

A "Gentile" is a term signifying a non-Jew, who is NOT a "son of the covenant" and is only subject to the seven Noahide Laws. Once a Gentile came to the understanding of the one true God, he would turn from idols and worship the God of Israel. These were the "God Fearers", who accepted certain basic Jewish obligations along with the Noahide precepts. This is more than Noahidism! People often misunderstand because my E-mail address is "bennoah1" but I am not a Noahide; I have gone beyond that and adopted Isa. 56 and consider myself a Godfearer like Cornelius in Acts 10. The Noahide movement stops short of a fuller dedication to God and that is not for me. According to the Laws of Noah idolatry, shedding of blood, and grave sexual sins were forbidden to Gentile believers. These were originally the Noahide precepts accepted also by the Synagogue on which the Gentiles were obliged. Let me remind you that we see in Acts 15 (at least 25 years after the death of Jesus) the admonition for the Gentiles to adhere to Noahide Laws to be accepted in the believing community of Israel (it was James as leader of the Jerusalem church who referred back to the Noahide Laws in addressing the question of Gentile salvation). But this was considered the "MINIMUM.". It is logical that the Apostolic Church of Jerusalem should accept the view of the Synagogue on the conditions which Gentiles needed to fulfill in order to be "saved" and "accepted" in the "family of Israel". It can be easily shown that the fulfillment of other commandments of Judaism were not prohibited to Gentiles or Noahides. On the contrary, the Noahide precepts were only seen as the minimal condition for Gentiles to be recognized as "God-Fearers". These were so understood by the uncircumcised "God-Fearers" themselves, who were attracted to the Jewish way of life and accepted many Jewish commandments without becoming full proselytes (Sabbath, festivals, Tallith, etc). Understand that it would be these Godfears who were also immersed before Sabbaths and Festivals like converts and Jews. This was also the attitude of Gentile Christian "God-Fearers", as may be seen from the Epistle to the Galatians; many of them wished to observe as many Jewish precepts as they could. It is evident that, while the leadership of the mother Church in Jerusalem decided to lay no burden upon the Gentile believers beyond the Noahide precepts, it did not object to their voluntarily observing more.

Acts 15:19-21 19 Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles are turned to God: 20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood. 21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day. (KJV)

It would be here that the non-Jews once having come to God would continue to grow spiritually and take upon themselves other Commandments over and beyond the minimum of the Laws of Noah. Needless to say this included repeated immersions and being "Born Again" before Sabbaths and Biblical Festivals.

Among the figures of the early Church who instructed Gentile Christians to observe more precepts than these essential "Noahide" ones was Peter, as we know from Paul's criticism of him for demanding that Gentiles live like Jews (Gal. 2:14). Rather than interpreting the apostolic decree of Gentiles adhering to the Laws of Noah as a minimum, Paul saw in the Noahide precepts the maximum obligations of Gentile Christians. They need not do or observe more according to Paul. Rather than Peter being incorrect, a more comprehensive understanding of the Bible reveals Paul to be incorrect; thus the biased view of the Gentile New Testament which it totally incorrect historically and Scripturally (regarding the Hebrew Scriptures).

Answer for yourself: Are you beginning to wonder how much less of God we have in our lives today because we were never taught correctly the concept of being Born Again by the anti-Semitic Gentile Church and have failed to draw nearer to God through these Hukkim Commandments most of our lives?

GET IT CORRECT PAUL OR DON'T TEACH IT AT ALL!

Paul remarks in a letter to the Corinthians (1 Cor. 7) that the circumcised (Jews or converted Gentiles) should not remove the marks of circumcision, nor should the uncircumcised (Gentiles become Jews) circumcise themselves. Wait a minute. Paul contradicts himself (like a lot of preachers today). In Galatians 5 he says "if you Gentiles get circumcised" and then he says "don't do it."

Answer for yourself: Can't Paul make up his his mind? Under the Laws of Noah Gentiles were never to be circumcised, and it was this ruling that was given to Paul in Acts 15 and 16 in letters which he and Barnabas and others were to take to the Gentile Churches in their journeys strengthening them.

Answer for yourself: But how could a Gentile be told to not remove the marks of circumcision if it was never required of him at all? This is something that was understood by God to be voluntary as seen in Abraham's circumcision; himself a non-Jew.

In Acts 16 Paul circumcised his disciple Timothy.

Answer for yourself: Timothy was not a Jew was he?

Answer for yourself: If he was a Gentile why bother, right?

This contradiction of Paul is very puzzling.

Answer for yourself: Sadly many have incorrectly interpreted Paul as teaching that circumcision was abandoned with the coming of Yeshua the Messiah, but was it? Acts 16 is over 20 years after Yeshua and Paul is still circumcising!

Answer for yourself: We have failed to understand properly, so what is the clear truth of the matter?

Yeshua and his Apostles did not wish to destroy the Torah (Law) from Israel, God forbid; for it is written so in Matthew 5:17, Jesus having said, "Do not suppose that I have come to abolish the Torah. I did not come to abolish, but to fulfill. I tell you this: So long as heaven and earth endure (do they yet exist today?), not a letter, not a stroke, will disappear from the Torah (the Law) until it is achieved. If any man therefore sets aside even the least of the Torah's demands, and teaches others to do the same (the majority of Pastors who preach the contemporary Christian message), he will have the lowest place in the Kingdom of Heaven, whereas anyone who keeps the Torah, and teaches others so, will stand high in the Kingdom of Heaven."

Bet Emet Ministries teaches Gentile and Jewish commitment and observance to the Torah, not because we desire to be "high" in the Kingdom of God, but because we love God and His Word, and would never think of destroying it by misinterpreting it or failing to study to arrive at the correct meaning of these truths for the people of God today.

It is therefore exceedingly clear that Jesus never dreamed of destroying the Torah or changing the meaning of being "Born Again" as have the majority of churches today that carry his name and substitute "another Gospel" for the true Gospel of Christ.

WHAT TO DO WITH TIMOTHY?

Paul does not contradict himself because of his circumcision of Timothy, for the latter was the son of a Jewish mother, and a Gentile father (Acts 16), and Paul knew that the child of a Jewish mother is considered a "full Jew", even if the father should be a Gentile. Paul thus acted entirely in accordance with the Halakah (interpretation of Jewish Law) by circumcising Timothy. This would be in line with his position, following the Jerusalem Council of Acts 15 in 50 A.D., that no longer will Gentile believers be required to "become fully converted Jews" to be accepted into Israel; that the Gentile believers could now remain as "God-Fearers" and be accepted fully by the Jews (1 Cor 7, Acts 15) without circumcision. But yet they might not have to be circumcised to convert but in their worship of the God of Israel they will be expected to observe the Hukkim immersions before the Sabbath and Festivals [being Born Again repeatedly]. Gentiles no longer had to "convert" to Judaism and become "fully Jewish" for inclusion with equal standing with Jews within the Israel of God. The Gentiles as "God-Fearers" were to also be accepted as grafted into Israel (as demonstrated by Cornelius in Acts 10 who was a "God-Fearer" and who had not yet been circumcised). It is important to note that as a "God-Fearer", Cornelius yet observed the Noahide Laws, honored the Sabbath, and ate kosher (proper killing, dressing and preparation of animals intended for food as well as the removal of all blood). The baptism of Cornelius into the Holy Spirit as had been the Jews earlier in Acts 2 during the Festival of Pentecost was the evidence needed to convince the Jerusalem church that the middle-wall of partition was being removed between Jews and "unclean Gentiles". Understand this "baptism" of the Spirit was a miracle of hearing for Cornelius, as had the various disciples from seventy different nations in Acts 2 understood Hebrew when spoken by Peter yet never knowing the language. This was a miracle of hearing and not "tongues" as taught incorrectly by Charismatic Christianity. It literally was a reverse of the Babel curse when all nations spoke different languages but understood them. This is what we find with Cornelius and Acts 2 in spite of the erroneous teaching of Charismatics. Cornelius could all of a sudden understand Peter yet spoke no Aramaic or Hebrew. From this experience with Cornelius in Acts 10 we learn that obedience to the Noahide Laws, without circumcision (to remain only as a "God-Fearer" and not fully convert to Judaism), was no longer to be a barrier between the "unclean Gentiles" and the Jews. This event will have a supreme impact in the Acts 15 council which is coming shortly. For example, table fellowship at the Shabbat (Sabbath observance) and the Festivals could now be shared together with the Jews without circumcision of the Gentile. This is what the death of Jesus accomplished; a new repentant understanding of the place of the non-Jew and his acceptance within the Israel of God by Jews previously blinded by their hatred of the Gentile. This was understood from Peter's vision in Acts 10 concerning "unclean foods" which the Lord cleansed (symbolic of cleansing of men [Gentiles], and not the animals designated as unclean in Leviticus). So many Christian commentators get this wrong.

Shammai's "Eighteen Measures" (one of which commanded Jews not to eat or enter into the homes of Gentiles-remember Shammai hated Gentiles) was overturned by God with the revelation at Cornelius' home. God never told a Jew that he could not enter into a Gentile's home or eat with a non-Jew; Shammai did. God corrects Shammai and those that followed his teaching. Peter's vision of the unclean foods represented the "unclean Gentiles" which God had cleansed; the vision was not meant to tell Peter that God had cleansed the "unclean foods". The message to the Jew is that no longer were they to treat the non-Jews like "dogs" and enforce circumcision upon them thereby keeping them away from God or only accepting them if they submitted to circumcision. Circumcision was to be no longer required for non-Jews to be accepted by Israel for God never required it of them; Israel was to no longer require this of them either. But immersion, another part of the conversion process understood as being "Born Again," was to continue. This was not to change since it accomplished something Spiritual in the Heavens. Let us not confuse this issue.

HOW DOES God LOOK AT YOU…A GENTILE CHRISTIAN BELIEVER TODAY?

Timothy had to be circumcised since he was Jewish (because his mother was Jewish) and, therefore, was required to observe all the commandments of the Torah (613). Gentiles who observe the Noahide Laws are forbidden to observe "ALL" the Torah like a Jew is required, unless they desire to be circumcised and identify totally with the Jew and his Torah (full-conversion); if so then they are no longer "God-Fearers" but have become full-fledged Jews and undertake all the 613 Commandments. Following Immersion into Israel the Gentile "Born Again" and is no longer considered a "Gentile", he is now Jewish (either partly or completely depending upon circumcision). All non-Jews who become circumcised following immersion are bound by ALL the commandments (613). Understand up front seldom if ever a Gentile male in the USA is circumcised on the 8th day as part of his faith or the faith of his parents according to the Bible. Let us understand as well that the immersion process is crucial for the Christian and he needs to understand it correctly as it applies to him. Once you as a Christian are immersed and identify with Israel, you emerged from that "watery womb" and a "watery tomb" as a Born-Again "God-Fearer" who is grafted into Israel without circumcision as part of any conversion process to Judaism. But yet you are immersed into the "Israel" of God and "drew close to God in a Spiritual way in the Spirit realm" and you never knew it. You are at that time considered by God as a Spiritual Jew regardless if you were aware of it or not or whether you Christian denomination or non-denomination recognizes this or not. Their doctrines cannot change the truth no matter what they think or believe. As a Gentile male who is immersed you are not considered a "partial-Jew" unless you are uncircumcised. If you are circumcised and immersed then you are yet considered a "partial-Jew" because your circumcision had no bearing upon you converting to Judaism. Of course in America circumcision is done without any spiritual significance whatsoever to the non-Jew and thereby cannot apply in any manner to a voluntary conversion to Judaism even though one is later immersed. That is why a Gentile today when he converts to Judaism still has his male member "pricked" to draw blood by the Rabbi in a token "circumcision" along with an immersion.

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that?

The majority of our readers most likely set in their churches thinking they are "Christians" and God's Word says that you are "Spiritually Jewish" (children of Abraham) and are the Israel of God. You have not replaced Israel no matter what your corrupt Christian Scriptures might fraudulently say; you became a part of Israel. Such doctrines are the fruit of Roman anti-Semitism. There is no such thing as a God ordained replacement religion even though Gentile Christianity might think in such an incorrect manner. You as a Gentile "Christian" are obligated to observe the Torah (that part of the Law that refers to you as a Godfearer and represents your Gentile Covenant before God), and sadly because of the great lack of true scholarship in Gentile Christianity you have let your unlearned pastors and teachers tell you repeatedly that you are "under grace" and "not under Law." You are under both; just examine your Covenant and you will quickly see this for yourself! I just showed you that a proper understanding of immersion and the teachings of Yeshua & Paul are in complete opposition to what Gentile Christianity believes "Born Again" means. This concept has been totally stripped from its Jewish context and given a totally different meaning that God never intended it have. Now, let me ask you as a Christian an important question.

Answer for yourself: Who are you going to believe; your pastor or Jesus? It is time to do some serious study into the origin of Gentile Christianity and contrast it with what the Jesus of history believed about God and the Hebrew Scriptures before they were altered by Rome to suit their own religious beliefs.

Answer for yourself: With such an obligation to the "Christian" who now becomes aware that he is either "part-Jewish" & "Spiritual Israel" (Judaism is not a race but a religion; the religion of Jesus) what are you to do concerning the Hebrew Scriptures which by example teach that the Gentile is expected to observe the Shabbat (Sabbath), Pesach (Festival of the Passover), Hag HaMatzah (Festival of Unleavened Bread), HaBikkurim (First Fruits), Shavuot (Festival of Pentecost), Rosh HaShannah (Jewish New Year), Yom Teruah (Festival of Trumpets), Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), and Sukkot (Festival of Tabernacles)? More than likely in your Christian Church you don't observe any of these and immersion is a one time event tied not to drawing closer to God at each of these appointed times with God but accepting that particular brand of belief and set of doctrines surrounding Jesus as espoused by what particular denomination or non-denomination you are involved in at present.

Surely if you love God and desire to obey Him more than your Gentile traditions then you should want to begin to observe and keep these Holy Days of YHWH according to Scripture because informed study will reveal that not only the Jews but the non-Jews kept these Biblical Holy days all through the Hebrew Scriptures. Not only that they kept the Biblical Sabbath and not the Roman day of the Sun is our custom today. Along with this goes the concept of continually drawing closer to God at each of these "appointed times" by continually being "Born Again" throughout our lives according to the teaching of the Rabbis and the Hebrew Scriptures that Jesus used and believed in with all his heart.

PLEASE TELL ME THAT IT IS BEGINNING TO MAKE SENSE

Christian scholars have assumed from certain passages in the Gospels that Jesus wished to give a new Torah to take the place of the Torah of Moses. He could not do so unless he sinned.

Answer for yourself: How could Jesus have then said explicitly that he came only to fulfill the Torah (Law). In Hebrew this carried the connotation of rightly interpreting the Torah and not just obeying it but obeying it properly. Yeshua never came to abolish Judaism, but came to re-establish the religion of Judaism not only for the Jews calling for repentance and return to obedience to the Scriptures but also included the same message for the Gentiles because within Judaism exists the faith that God had given the the non-Jew from the beginning-Noahidism! At the waters of Marrah Moses reiterated the Laws of Noah before he built upon them the additive Laws known today as the Laws of Noah. Noahidism is the foundation on which the Laws of Moses rests. Nor was this religion new, but actually ancient; it being the observance of the Seven Commandments of Noah, which were forgotten purposefully by Shammai and his students because of his hatred of the non-Jew. Such hatred of the non-Jew was influencing the people of Israel in Jesus' day; thus Jesus came not for those who are well but those who need a physician and who are sick; sick with hatred for the Gentiles whom God loved and to whom God had called Israel to be a light unto to show them the their own Torah-their Instruction in the Noahide Laws. Along with this was a call for Jews to return to God in repentance and this was necessary before they could be an effective witness to the nations; Israel could not give to the nations what she did not have...righteousness. God had intended for the Gentiles to be redeemed all along. Jesus came for the "lost sheep of the house of Israel"; who had lost their way and forgotten their responsibility as God's Royal Priesthood to the Gentile nations. Israel had been entrusted with Divine truth for the world and she was not sharing it. She was in danger of severe judgment if she failed to repent. These truths were not only for them, but the Gentiles as well. It is important to understand that as there were "people who were lost" in Israel, there were others like the Essene Menahem and the Hillel Pharisees who had not "lost their way" and needed little if any correction by Yeshua! That is why Yeshua said the "kingdom" had been taken from the Sadducees and given to the Pharisees [Hillel School] when he said the Pharisees set in Moses' seat:

Matt 23:2 2 Saying, The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat: (KJV)

The Greek word for "sit":

2523 kathizo- 1) to make to sit down to set, to appoint, to confer a kingdom upon one

Here we find that the rulership delegated by God to the Sadducees was stripped from them by God's representative as a spokesman for God and given to Hillel Pharisees which was the ONLY branch of Judaism that even attempted a Gentile outreach taking the Laws of Noah and the Covenant of Eternal Life to the Gentile world. Sadly the anti-Semitic Gentile New Testament blasphemes all Pharisees whereby one read and thinks that the only good Pharisee is a "dead" Pharisee. Such is the hatred spread by the New Testament; a Roman replacement religious document.

WHAT REALLY HAPPENED IN THE GREAT COMMISSION?

Jesus' Apostles, in fulfillment of the Great Commission of their master, established these Seven Commandments anew (Acts 15, Acts 16, Acts 21). However, those born as Jews (with Jewish mothers), or those Gentiles where were immersed [Born Again] and circumcised as "full-converts" to Judaism (Ex. 12:49; one law shall be to him that is home-born, and unto the stranger) are obligated to observe all 613 of the commandments of the Torah without exception. Notice if you will that the non-Jews partake of some of what the Jews were given but not all. But much was held in common by both and both Jew and Gentile keep the Sabbath, Festivals, and were "Born Again" repeatedly in their walk with God throughout their lives as this article has demonstrated beyond any doubt.

Answer for yourself: Are you a Gentile Christian [circumcised or non-circumcised] who has been immersed into the Israel of God through the ministry of Yeshua and his followers and "Born-Again" into Israel? Then that means you!

For the Gentile God reserved the Seven Noahide Commandments which they have always been obligated to fulfill. It is for that reason that they were forbidden pollution of idols, fornication, blood, and things strangled (Acts 15). Yeshua's Apostles, agreeing with the School of Hillel, would no longer enforce circumcision on the non-Jew for inclusion into the Israel of God (to do so would mean full conversion) and they would no longer enforce Sabbath observance (exactly like the Jews observed it) but teach it to the Gentile in a somewhat modified fashion. The mandatory observance of the Sabbath by "God-Fearers" was similar, but not exactly alike the Jewish observance.

This may sound so different from what your traditional Christian message has been, but your Christian message is incorrect if it does not agree or line up with the Apostle's Doctrine. I just taught it to you as it existed in the days of Jesus. All of what I have shared with you is in accord with the law and custom of the Torah, as expounded by the Jewish sages, the true transmitters from Moses at Sinai, and understood by Jesus of Nazareth in the first century (they Jews today are the legacy of the Pharisees that survived 70 C.E.; they sit in Moses' seat...listen to what they say).

Our Gentile Christianity and religious dogmas and understanding today is incorrect if it violates the truths as Jesus and the School of Hillel understood them. We do not know more about salvation than Jesus and the Jewish people and sages that agreed with him no matter what we think or have been taught by our Gentile authorities

It was to the Hillel Pharisees Jesus referred to in Matt. 23 who set in Moses' seat and to whom we are to listen for correct doctrine. No greater example need be given than the doctrine of being "Born Again." We are not to follow the examples of any leaders if they do not line up with the Apostle's Doctrine of Acts 2:42.

Answer for yourself: Has Rome and their New Testament correctly portrayed Apostolic doctrine and how do you know for sure if have never studied Biblical Judaism and made your own comparisons of religious dogmas between them?

This teaching on immersion, being "Born Again," and conversion of the Gentile along with the role of the Godfearer is Apostolic Doctrine as Yeshua understood it and as taught by his disciples, and any other interpretation other than this is NOT correct. We are not to follow any spiritual examples unless they live what they preach and unless that line up with Biblical truth that can be demonstrated from historical and linguistic study (that means the Pharisee Preachers of Christianity today who fail to teach and live the truth of Apostolic Doctrine! No greater "Pharisees" have ever lived than the anti-Semitic Gentile Church of the last 1800 years. Jesus tells us not to follow them unless they agree with him! Good advice. This same admonition is given in Deut. 17:8 ff., where the authority to teach and lead the people were given to the religious leaders God put over the people of "Israel". These occupy Moses' seat and it is time for the Christian Church to set at the feet of the Rabbis and learn truth for a change.

One of the reasons why Gentile Christianity refuses to learn from the Jewish sages and Rabbis and would rather repeat Gentile Religious dogmas which are incorrect without even knowing it because of that one passage in Romans 11 which teaches that Israel was blinded.

Rom 11:7 7 What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for; but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded (KJV)

This is all well and good UNTIL you find out that this passage was completely lacking from the original Romans until well after 180 A.D. when it miraculously appeared under the influence of Irenaeus which gave the world the 2nd New Testament in response to Marcion's 1st New Testament which Rome did not like. But even more the whole of Romans chapter 9, 10, and 11 cannot be shown to have existed before 180 A.D. again under Irenaeus' influence. So much for the Gentile Church's refusal to accept anything Jewish...like the correct understanding of being "Born Again."

IT IS WAY PAST TIME TO GET REAL

Answer for yourself: Do the Baptists, Methodist, Catholics, Assemblies of God, or any other denomination or non-denomination occupy Moses' seat? No. The Catholic and Protestant denominations are far from being Jewish and often very far from having truth. Salvation is of the Jews according to Yeshua an that will never change. Sadly such anti-Semitic doctrines created by Irenaeus has blinded the Gentile from truth; it is the Gentiles who are blinded to truth and not the Jews.

Answer for yourself: If by change the Jews were wrong then what does that do to Jesus and what he said concerning who is to take the reign of the Spiritual direction of Israel and the resultant responsibility for enlightening the Gentiles? Do you dare tell Jesus that he made a mistake and he should have said the Crystal Cathedral or TBN sit in Moses' seat?

It was these Sages and Pharisees who said that it is forbidden to circumcise a Gentile who does not accept upon himself the yoke of "ALL" the Commandments. In America male babies are circumcised apart from the truths of God's Word (we are commanded to circumcise on the 8th day and not within the first 2-3 days of a newborn's life or a year later as some do) and because of our failure to circumcise according to the Biblical example along with our failure to teach Biblical truth [take Born Again for an example] instead of anti-Semitic doctrines the Gentiles remain "aliens to the commonwealth of Israel." When a Gentile male is finally circumcised it has no connection to the Biblical injunction and therefore the doing so later coupled with a later immersion does not render him a "convert" to Judaism. The Gentile becomes a "God-Fearer" and not a convert. Identification with Israel is by faith and free will. You must choose to stand at your personal Sinai and say to God "I will do all that you say".

Answer for yourself: Do you want to obey God?

Answer for yourself: Do you want to honor His Name with your life?

Going to churches that teach error does not accomplish anything and your fellowship with darkness surely does not honor God when our worship of Him is in error and our religious beliefs as Gentile Christians are contradicted by Biblical faith.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever been to your personal Sinai and told God you will do all that He says?

Answer for yourself: Will you ever go?

Answer for yourself: Will you choose to return or remain in your Egypt of ignorance and false traditions and false religion that amount to idolatry instead of choosing the freedom of Spiritual truth when it is presented to you?

The Sages likewise said that the Gentile is commanded NOT to "fully" observe the Sabbath as does the Jew (yet he is to remember and keep it). Acts 20:6 recounts for us the Gentile believers and how they were taught by Paul to remember and keep the Sabbath. It is here we find the Gentile Church keeping Jewish ordinances well over thirty years after Yeshua's death. At one time the Gentile Church had such truths of which I speak; sadly today under Constantine's influence these truths are buried.

As far as the Gentiles ("God-Fearers") were concerned, they were NOT commanded to observe all the Torah (the 613 mitzvot). The Gentile "God-Fearers" did not have to accept all the 613 mitzvot and are not enjoined to observe all of the 613 commandments. However, it is completely different as far as Jews are concerned, for they became obligated to fulfill the Torah because God delivered them from the bondage of Egypt to be the people of His possession. Therefore they and their children became subject to it forever and so are those Gentiles who make full-conversions to Judaism.

LET'S SUM IT ALL UP

It should be easy to see that Jesus and his Apostles never meant to abolish the Torah of Moses from one who is born a Jew. Likewise, did Paul write in his letter to the Corinthians (1 Cor 7) that each should adhere to the faith in which each was called. This being the case after Jesus' death a moment began with Jesus' followers whereby they repented of their hatred of the non-Jew and began to earnestly take the Gentile nations Gods offer of Eternal Life as found in the Laws and Covenant of Noah. Unlike before the disciples of Yeshua/ Jesus forbid mandatory circumcision of the Gentiles before having anything to do with them. Yet they taught them correctly about being "Born Again."

The rabbis and teachers like Hillel and the Jerusalem Church [Acts 15/16] thus took the Gentiles the revelation of God and instructed them not to be circumcised unless they wished to be fully converted to Judaism (this had no bearing upon immersion since it was required for "partial" as well as "full" conversion). It would suffice that the Gentiles observe the Seven Noahide Commandments, as commanded upon them through the Halakhah from Moses at Sinai. This was the minimum requirements for inclusion into Israel.

Rabbi Emden was correct; Jesus brought a double kindness into the world.

- One the one hand, he strengthened the Torah of Moses majestically (Acts 24:20 states that many thousands of Jews were believers in Yeshua as Messiah and zealous for the Torah (Law); this was over 30 years after Yeshua's death and resurrection). The ministry of Jesus helped return the "children of Israel back to their Fathers; the Patriarchs and their faith" and thus fulfill Malachi's prophecy.
- On the other hand, Yeshua did much good for the Gentiles (provided they do not turn about his intent as they please, as some foolish ones have done because they did not fully understand the intent of the authors of the Gospels and epistles. Yeshua obligated his Apostles to fulfill the Great Commission by taking the Gentiles (as a minimum) the Seven Commandments of Noah so that they should not be as the beasts of the field and continue to live their lives as pagans and a little above animals. He also bestowed upon them ethical ways, and in this respect he was much more stringent with them than the Torah of Moses. In is not necessary to impose upon Jews such extreme ethical practices, since they have been obligated to the yoke of Torah since Sinai. Israel took the oath at Sinai and are already trained in proper practice and nature of the Second Tablet of the Law (ethical monotheism and the horizontal relationships man-to-man). It would be for Paul to constantly correct, reprove, teach Apostolic Doctrine, and instruct the Gentiles in his travels since it was to his audience he would write "you are strangers from the Covenant promises, aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, without hope and without God in the world".

If Christians would study they would understand what I have detailed in this teaching. No longer would the Church erroneously teach the cessation, abolition, or replacement of the Torah of Moses and Yeshua. Such sin and foolishness would and should cease.

Because of these errant Christian scholars, hatred has increased toward the Jews who are blameless of any guilt concerning Yeshua's death and proceed innocently to observe their Torah with all their heart (intellect), soul (dedication and commitment to action) and might (resources and property). The leaders of the Churches of Jesus Christ should study to learn correctly for themselves before they lead their people into sin and astray from the will of God for their lives and teach gross error in Jesus' name. This does anything but honor him. The Jew is the brother of the Christian. Ephraim (the grafted-in Gentile) and Judah make up Israel. As members of the Christian faith, how good and pleasant it might be if you would observe what was commanded to you by your first teachers, sent directly to you by Yeshua, with his message, and not the message that anti-Semitism has created these last 2000 years. The Christian Church is in desperate need of being "Born Again" into TRUTH that its historic Fathers rejected along with forging religious documents that have almost guaranteed to this day that such truth remain hidden from the Gentile. No greater example could be given than the corruption of what Jesus knew and taught concerning being "Born Again."

THE SECOND TRANSFIGURATION OF JESUS… WHICH JESUS ARE WE TO FOLLOW?

The historical Jesus is of interest for many reasons. Not least of these is his towering cultural significance in the nearly two thousand years since his death. No other figure in the history of the West has ever been accorded such extraordinary status. Within a few decades of his death, stories were told about his miraculous birth. By the end of the first century, he was extolled with the most exalted titles known within the religious tradition out of which he came: Son of God, one with the Father, the Word become flesh, the bread of life, the light of the world, the one who would come again as cosmic judge and Lord. Within a few centuries he had become Lord of the empire which had crucified him.

For over a thousand years thereafter, he dominated the culture of the West: its religion and devotion, its art, music, and architecture, its intellectual thought and ethical norms, even its politics. Our calendar affirms his life as a dividing point in world history. On historical grounds alone Jesus is the most important figure in Western (and perhaps human) history. Thus, simply as a matter of intellectual or historical curiosity, it is interesting to ask, "What was this towering cultural figure like as a historical person before his death?" Other questions naturally follow to those of keen perception:

Answer for yourself: Is the message attributed to Jesus by the Gentile church the authentic message preached by Jesus in the first century, or has it been modified and changed by unscrupulous men who followed?

Answer for yourself: If the Jesus' message was changed (and it was), to what should I focus my attention and my life if I am to imitate Jesus?

Answer for yourself: Is my life adhering to the ethical and moral teachings of Jesus or have I unwittingly allowed myself to follow another Gospel?

To these questions we must have the answers, for our very own position and reward in the world to come will be determined to the answers given to those questions.

For Christians, these questions are significant for an additional reason. Jesus is not simply a historical person, but considered by many to be the founder and central figure of their religion. Millions of Christians confess him each Sunday to be both Lord and Christ. Moreover, within the church, Christians talk about "following Jesus," about "the life of discipleship" (which means to follow after Jesus), and about "imitating Jesus."

Thus what Jesus was like as a historical figure would seem to be not only interesting but important, for what he was like, what his belief system consisted of, and what his priorities to life were provides the content of what following him means.

Answer for yourself: If we adhere to alternate belief systems that cause us to conduct ourselves differently than him, then how can we justify that we imitate Jesus or follow Jesus?

Simply, we cannot. Let me say it again for emphasis. It stands to reason that if our image, concept, and belief system concerning Jesus is incorrect, then our "following" and "imitating" Jesus is suspect, and quite possibly we have been led astray into disobedience instead of obedience by those who failed to discern the "real Jesus."

"No way" you say, then please read on.

Yet, despite the fact that "Jesus" is a household word, and despite his importance for the Christian life, what he was like as a historical figure before his death is not widely known, either in our culture or within the church itself. Instead, what he was like is seriously obscured by two dominant images of Jesus: the first dominates the POPULAR IMAGE OF JESUS within both the church and our culture, the second has dominated much of New Testament SCHOLARSHIP in this century. Both scholarship and popular traditions concerning Jesus have provided their own answers to the three central questions about the historical Jesus:

- His IDENTITY (who was he?)
- His MESSAGE (what was central to his proclamation or teaching?)
- His MISSION (what was his purpose, what did he himself hope to accomplish?).

Unfortunately the answers provided by BOTH the popular traditions about Jesus circulating in the churches as well as the dominant scholarly images hide rather than reveal what the "real" Jesus was truly like. In order to be able to see Jesus afresh, and truthfully correctly for the first time for many of us, we need to become aware of the images that obscure our vision.

THE POPULAR IMAGE OF YESHUA WITHIN THE CHURCH

The popular image is most familiar to Christian and non-Christian alike: the image of Jesus as a divine or semi-divine figure, whose purpose was to die for the sins of the world, and whose life and death open up the possibility of eternal life. This popular image of Jesus in the churches answers to the three questions of identity, purpose, and message. As the divinely begotten Son of God, he was sent into the world for the purpose of dying on the cross as a means of reconciliation between God and humankind, and his message consisted primarily of inviting his hearers to believe that what he said about himself and his role in salvation was true.

This popular image is widespread as attested by billboards and multiple evangelists which proclaim, "Jesus died for your sins," suggesting that this was his purpose in a nutshell. Much of Christian preaching takes the popular image for granted. The celebration of the major Christian festivals (Easter) in our culture reinforces the image. Likewise, Christmas, with wise men and shepherds and angels, a manger and a star and a virgin, tells the story of his wondrous birth and thus calls attention to his divine identity; Easter focuses on his triumph over death.

The popular image has its roots deep in the past, indeed in the language of the New Testament itself as well as multiple pagan accounts of gods miraculously coming to earth only to die and resurrect. Among the gospels, the popular image of Jesus finds its genesis in the Gospel of John, probably the most loved and familiar gospel. There Jesus speaks of his identity in the most exalted terms known in his culture, especially in the magnificent series of "I am" statements: "I am the light of the world," "I am the bread of life," "I am the resurrection and the life," "I am the way, the truth, and the life," "Before Abraham was, I am." The self-proclamation of his own identity in the "I am" statements is buttressed by other passages in John: "The Father is in me and I am in the Father," "He who has seen me has seen the Father," "I and the Father are one." In a single verse, the fourth gospel sums up Jesus' identity, purpose, message, and the proper response to him: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only Son, that whoever believes in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

The roots of the popular image also lie in the development of Christian theological thought and piety in the centuries following the composition of the New Testament. The creeds of the church express that development. The Apostles' Creed proclaims that Jesus was "God's only son our Lord, who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead and buried; on the third day he rose again from the dead; he ascended into heaven from which he shall come to judge the living and the dead." In the Nicene Creed, Jesus is spoken of as "the only begotten Son of God, begotten of his Father before all worlds, God of God, Light of Light, very God of very God, begotten, not made [that is, not created]; being of one substance with the Father." There, his purpose is described very simply, "Who for us men and for our salvation came down from heaven . . . and was crucified for us under Pontius Pilate."

Throughout the Middle Ages and into the modern period, this image of Jesus as divine savior and Lord dominated Western worship, thought, art, and devotion. Centuries of Christians have taken it for granted that this image depicts what he was like as a historical figure. No wonder this image is so deeply rooted in the Christian imagination, as well as in our culture generally. Christian and non-Christian alike share it; what separates them is not the image, but whether or not they believe the image to be true.

SADLY THE POPULAR IMAGE OF JESUS CANNOT STAND THE TEST OF SCRUTINY

The popular image, certainly, is widely accepted. Yet as an image of the historical Jesus-of what Jesus was like as a figure of history before his death-the popular image is not accurate. Indeed, it is seriously misleading. This statement, surprising though it is to many people (including the many unsuspecting within the church), is a bedrock conclusion of mainstream New Testament scholarship. It cannot be denied upon study and scrutiny of language, culture, and history.

Unknown to the majority within the church, "mainstream" biblical scholarship is the approach to Scripture taught in the seminaries of the mainstream churches in our country today. It is the product of using a historical method on the books of the New Testament, treating them as human documents rather than as divine documents guaranteed to be infallible by God. The reason being is that in depth study of the New Testament will result in discovery of fables, inaccuracies, as well as multiple contradictions that escape the attention of the casual reader of the Bible. Beginning in the seventeenth century and accelerating through the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, frank historical study and evaluation of the Bible is now the approach to Scripture taught in the theological schools of the majority of Christian churches (including, for example, Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, Methodists, United Church of Christ, Disciples of Christ, Episcopalians, the majority of Lutherans, and some Baptists). It is utterly foolish to our witness to claim infallibility and inerrancy in the light of conflicting facts and data which reveal otherwise. To do so you only deceive yourself as you have previously been deceived, as well as destroy any credibility to your message and witness.

The above conclusion flows out of the meticulous study of the New Testament documents over the past two centuries, most of it done by Christian scholars. Again this in unknown by the majority of those in the church. Of primary importance for the collapse of the inaccurate, yet popular image of Jesus in scholarly circles is the sharp contrast between the portraits of Jesus in John's gospel and the other three gospels (Matthew, Mark, and Luke), collectively known as the synoptic gospels (from the Greek root "seen together") because of their many similarities. John differs sufficiently that his gospel must be seen separately. If you will be honest with yourself, the portrait of Jesus in John differs substantially from that given in the Synoptic Gospels. Which one is the "real" Jesus? They cannot be the same man!

The contrast between the Jesus of the Synoptic Gospels and the Jesus of the Gospel of John was first developed by Johann Gottfried Herder in 1797. Through the influence of David Friedrich Strauss's two-volume Life of Jesus (1835) the dichotomy of the conflicting images of Jesus became one of the foundational conclusions of Jesus scholarship. The reason for preferring Mark to John as more historical is quite simple. It is easier to account for a theological development from a Jesus who did not explicitly proclaim himself or his identity (Mark) to a portrait in which his identity is explicitly proclaimed (John) as the very essence of his message.

Answer for yourself: The message of Jesus changed, or did it.

Answer for yourself: Who changed his message from Mark to John? Or have we been led to focus upon the wrong message?

Answer for yourself: Has the popular message of Jesus replaced the real message of Jesus?

Answer for yourself: Do you know the difference?

Answer for yourself: If Jesus did consistently proclaim his identity, as John reports, what motive could an early Christian author such Mark have had for saying that Jesus did not preach about who he was? There is none.

According to the Gospel of John Jesus spoke often and openly about his exalted identity and purpose. However, the synoptic Gospels contain a very different picture. According to Mark, still judged to the earliest gospel by most scholars, Jesus never proclaimed his exalted identity; it did not constitute part of his public teaching or preaching.

Chapter 10 of Mark records for us where Jesus was addressed as "Good Master." Familiarity with Judaism teaches us that this is a synonym for God Himself. Notice that only one verse attributed to Jesus address his identity out of a total of 52 verses in the chapter. It would seem to me that his identity was not of paramount importance to him, or deemed by him to be important to others by the lack of discourse concerning correcting the mistaken assumption by one who came running to him. Only one verse deals with who he feels he is, but notice he deals exclusively with what one must do...not what one must believe to inherit eternal life. The silence of Jesus about his own identity is matched by a corresponding silence on the part of the others who knew and followed him in Mark's narrative. This should strike you as remarkable as you have spent the majority of your Christian experience focusing on the identity of Jesus as the way to salvation instead of his belief system which is understood as beliefs that lead to proper conduct, behavior, and obedience that leads to salvation. Indeed, on only two occasions was there an exchange between Jesus and those he encountered regarding who he was. Both occasions were private, not public, and both were near the end of the ministry.

Answer for yourself: Does it again not seem strange to you that if our salvation is to be tied to believing a set of beliefs about Jesus for salvation, that he only reveals a little abut such and only to two people out of all mankind?

Answer for yourself: Have we missed the real purpose, mission, and message of Jesus?

The two occasions are reported in Mark 8:27-30 and 14:53-65. In the first instance, shortly before Jesus and his disciples began the final journey to Jerusalem, and in a setting where his disciples were alone with him, Peter said, "Thou art the Christ" (Mark 8:29; "Christ" is the Greek word for the Hebrew "Messiah," which means roughly "the anointed one of God"). This, the first time that any follower of Jesus in Mark called him by an exalted title, contrasts sharply with John 1:29-51, where already in John's opening chapter both John the Baptist and several of Jesus' disciples applied the grandest titles to Jesus: Lamb of God, Son of God, Messiah (Christ), King of Israel. Strikingly, Jesus responded to Peter's affirmation by ordering the disciples to say nothing about it to anyone (8:30), a restriction that was to last until after Easter (see Mark 9:9).

Thus in Mark, neither Jesus nor his disciples proclaimed Jesus' identify during the ministry.

The second occasion in Mark was at the secret hearing before the high priest the night before Jesus was executed; in response to the high priest's question, "Are you the Christ, the Son of the blessed?", Jesus said, "I am" (Mark 14:61-62). Noteworthy is the fact that the high priest virtually had to "drag" the statement out of Jesus, plus the fact that the Greek and Aramaic phrase behind "I am" can be translated either "I am" or "Am I?" It is interesting that both Matthew and Luke interpret Jesus' response as ambiguous (see Matthew 26:64 and Luke 22:67-68).

Regardless of how one interprets Jesus' response, the fact remains that Mark nowhere portrays Jesus proclaiming his identity as part of his message. It should be noted that the spirit world knows who Jesus was, even during his ministry; the voice "from heaven" at his baptism and transfiguration speaks of him as God's "beloved Son," and evil spirits recognize him as "Son of God' and "holy one of God." But it remains true there is no human proclamation of Jesus' identity in Mark's gospel, either by Jesus or others.

Throughout, Mark's gospel is dominated by "the Messianic secret"; though Mark clearly believed that Jesus was the Messiah, his Messiahship was a secret during the ministry. As difficult it is to admit by a Christian, in Mark the proclamation of Jesus' own identity and of the saving purpose of his death was not the message of Jesus. He did not proclaim himself.

When once this fundamental contrast between John and Mark was seen, a great historical "either/or" presented itself to scholars. Either the historical Jesus openly proclaimed his divine identity and saving purpose (John), or he did not (Mark). To put the issue most directly, Jesus could not consistently proclaim his identity and at the same time not do so.

Answer for yourself: Thus the question became, "Which image of Jesus is more likely to be like the historical Jesus, John's or Mark's?"

The nearly universal answer given by scholars was "Mark." With that answer, the popular image's basis as a historical image disappeared.

The image of Jesus as one who taught (as the essence of his message) that he was the Son of God who was to die for the sins of the world is not historically true.

The historical preference for Mark, with the implication that John is not very historical, is disturbing to some Christians. Indeed, it was to me when I first encountered it. John's gospel and the image of Jesus which derives from it seemed to be the core of what I as a Christian was supposed to believe.

Answer for yourself: But is this the correct image and the "real Jesus," or, is this a image of Jesus projected by the "Gentile church" which found its compromising belief system included in writings which later could be considered "Scripture" by the Catholic Church?

The first Bible verse I learned was the famous John 3:16: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son . . ." The notion that Jesus would not say that, and that he did not proclaim himself as a divine figure, is unsettling. Moreover, it seemed to invalidate John's gospel, implying that in many ways the Gospel of John was a "false" account of the ministry of Jesus.

In one sense, that is true; for the most part, John's Gospel cannot be used as an infallible source of information about the historical Jesus. But rather than invalidating John's gospel completely, that realization enables us to see more clearly what John's gospel truly is as it is immersed among accurate teachings of Jesus as well as teachings that were never a part of Jesus' message . John's Gospel, instead of being a picture of the historical Jesus, it is about the risen living Christ of Christian experience. John's gospel comes out of the experience of the Gentile Christian community in the decades after the resurrection as well as after the destruction of the Temple in 70 C.E.. In it, the historical traditions about Jesus are thoroughly transformed by the early Christians' ongoing experience of the risen Christ. John's gospel is the church's memory transfigured.

In their own experience (like today), these Christians knew the living Christ as the light of the world who brought them out of darkness, as the bread of life who nourished them with spiritual food, as the vine whose life coursed through them, and as the way and the truth which brought them to new life. And thus John portrayed Jesus as all of these: as light, bread, vine, the way and the truth, God's "Word" become flesh. The remarkable affirmations about Jesus in John's gospel are a powerful testimony to the reality and character of the resurrected, ascended, and living Christ. Rather than being the self-proclamation of Jesus, they flow out of the post-resurrection experience of the early church, and their truthfulness is testified to by the experience of Christians ever since. John's gospel is "the spiritual gospel," as was recognized already by the Christian writer Clement of Alexandria near the end of the second century; it speaks of the significance of Christ in the spiritual life of Christians.

What is true of John's gospel is true of the popular image in general.

Both John's Gospel and the popular image of Jesus are the product of projecting later Christian convictions, grounded in the experience of Christ through the centuries as a living divine reality, back into the period of the ministry itself.

The risen living Christ does possess the qualities of divinity; one with the Father, and therefore everywhere-present, all-powerful, and all-knowing. But though these statements are true about the risen Christ, they are not true about the historical Jesus. Clearly, Jesus as a figure of history was not "omnipresent," but was always in some particular place-in Nazareth, on the road, in Jerusalem, or elsewhere. Also, even though remarkable powers flowed through him, he was not "omnipotent," as even the gospels recognize. Neither should we suppose that he was "omniscient." As a first century Jew who learned what he knew in the context of his own culture and experience, presumably he shared many of the beliefs of his contemporaries, including beliefs about the world which we now think of as erroneous. The risen Christ, "seated at the right hand of God," does share all of the qualities of God. But the historical Jesus did not.

The projection of divine qualities back onto Jesus is very ancient. Not only can we see this to some extent in the New Testament itself, but it became especially prominent in what are known as the "apocryphal" gospels. The "apocryphal" gospels were gospels written by early Christians in the first few centuries of the church which did not make it into the New Testament. There Jesus as an infant is already portrayed as having superhuman knowledge and power. From his crib, he points at the animals and makes them talk; on his journey into Egypt as a baby, he saves his parents from a dragon by killing it; as a five year old, he makes clay birds and then turns them into real birds. Clearly, what is happening here is that the experiential knowledge that the risen Christ is divine is unreflectively projected back onto the human Jesus.

The tendency continues in the modern world. Some years back, a well-known evangelist suggested that Jesus would have been the world's greatest athlete, and speculated about how quickly he could have run the mile. Behind this somewhat strange suggestion is the notion that Jesus was a divine being with superhuman powers. But the portrait of Jesus as a divine "superhero" has nothing to do with historical reality. Indeed, to the extent that the popular image sees Jesus as a divine being who merely seemed to be human, the popular image is not only non-historical but also was declared to be heretical by the early church. The heresy is known as "docetism, " from the Greek word*dakeo,* which means "to appear" or "seem." Docetism is the notion that though Jesus appeared to be human, he was really God. Ironically, one of the earliest heresies is still thought and believed by many people, Christians and non-Christians alike. In fact, remarkable it has become not only the popular position attributed to Jesus, but considered to be the orthodox Christian position regardless that at one time it was considered heresy by those who lived closer to the real historical Jesus.

In short, the image of the historical Jesus as a divine or semi-divine being, who saw himself as the divine savior whose purpose was to die for the sins of the world, and whose message consisted of proclaiming that, is simply not historically true. Rather, it is the product of a blend produced by the early Gentile church-a blending of the Gentile's church's memory of Jesus with the church's beliefs about the risen Christ. The former was seen through the window provided by the latter. They remembered Jesus with the "eye of faith," that is, in the light of Easter and afterward.

The blend was both natural and legitimate. It is what happens when a religious community looks back on its founder in light of their ongoing experience of him; and it is legitimate in that it speaks of what Christ is in the Christian life. Moreover, the image has nurtured the lives of millions of Christians over the centuries. However, if what is wanted is a reasonably clear image of the historical Jesus, then one must use a historical method which seeks to separate out the church's later beliefs from the traditions about Jesus found in early Christian documents. If one wants historical answers to the questions of Jesus' identity, mission, and message, one must first set aside the answers given by the popular image.

All of this is old news to anybody who has attended seminary or divinity school in the mainstream churches. It is also familiar to most people who have taken a religion course in a nonsectarian college. Yet it is still news to many (and perhaps most) people in our culture and in the church. In part, this is simply because of the endurance which popular images possess. But it is also because mainstream biblical scholarship has not generated a persuasive alternative image of the historical Jesus. Instead, the image which has dominated New Testament scholarship throughout much of this century has made Jesus seem both strange and irrelevant.

THE DOMINANT SCHOLARLY IMAGE OF JESUS

The realization that the popular image is not historical, accurate, or truthful led to the "quest for the historical Jesus" in biblical scholarship. The beginning of the theological and historical movement known as the "quest for the historical Jesus" is typically dated in 1778 with the anonymous and posthumous publication of an essay by Hermann Samuel Reimarus (1694-1768). His work is yet available as "Concerning the Intention of Jesus and His Disciples" in H. Reimarus, Fragments, edited by C. H. Talbert and translated by R. S. Frank (Philadelphia: Fortress, 1970), 59-269. For a history of the quest up to 1900, Albert Schweitzer's The Quest of the Historical Jesus is the classic work.

Answer for yourself: If the historical Jesus did not proclaim himself as the Messiah and the Son of God, the divine savior who was to die for the sins of the world-if that was not his purpose and the content of his preaching and message-what then was he like, and what was his mission and message?

Though the quest in the twentieth century produced a wide diversity of answers to these questions, two traits emerged as dominant emphases in mainstream scholarship.

INCREASING HISTORICAL SKEPTICISM-CAN WE REALLY KNOW?

First, there was an increasing historical skepticism about whether we can know the answers to these questions with any degree of probability. To some extent, this skepticism flowed out of the increasingly meticulous study of the origins of the gospels, especially form criticism and redaction criticism.

This century's scholarship has made it clear that not only John but also the Synoptic Gospels reflect the experience and beliefs of the early church. Form criticism, emerging after World War I, studied the way the traditions about Jesus were shaped during the three or more decades that they circulated in oral form before being written down. Redaction criticism, developing largely after World War II, analyzed Matthew, Mark, and Luke as individual documents, as well as carefully comparing how each handled individual texts. Correctly treating the gospels as the products of particular authors writing for particular communities, redaction criticism focused attention upon the meaning intended by the, gospel writers themselves, and not upon the history behind the gospel.

Together with form criticism, redaction criticism has made it even more clear that every story and word of Jesus has been shaped by the eyes and hands of the early church. By making us more aware of the ways the gospel writers and the early Christians before them during the oral period shaped their material in accord with their own needs and purposes, form and redaction critics have also made us more aware of the difficulties involved in using gospel texts as sources of information about the historical Jesus.

The historical skepticism ignited by the careful study of the texts has been fueled by the multiplicity of diverse portraits of Jesus constructed by scholars, ranging from a fairly traditional understanding of Jesus as the servant and Son of God to Jesus as a political revolutionary, or as one who expected the immediate end of the world.

These widely divergent portraits, all claiming to be based on the use of an objective historical method, have reinforced the notion that we really cannot know much about Jesus at all, and the corollary notion that it is possible to construct almost any portrait of Jesus one wishes. Prudent scholars thus tended to avoid the quest for the historical Jesus and the middle portion of this century is commonly described in the history of scholarship as the period of "no quest."' All that we can know directly, it was affirmed by many of these scholars, is "the Christ proclaimed in the preaching (or kerygma) of the early church." Kerygma is a Greek word which means "preaching" and has become a technical term referring to the early church's post-Easter message about Jesus. It is often emphasized that the purpose of the gospels is essentially kerygmatic and non-historical, and whatever history they may contain has been thoroughly overlaid by the kerygma of the church. Scholars during the "no quest" period affirmed both the near impossibility as well as the theological unnecessity of trying to go behind the kerygma. Obtaining knowledge of the historical Jesus thus was seen as both exceedingly difficult and theologically irrelevant. They were wrong!

THE IMAGE ITSELF: YESHUA ...THE ESCHATOLOGICAL PROPHET

This strong mood of historical skepticism was accompanied by a near consensus concerning what little can (and cannot) be known about Jesus. Despite the diversity of portraits, there was considerable unanimity within the scholarly mainstream. This majority opinion of scholarship provides answers to the three questions of Jesus' identity, message, and mission together comprise an image of Jesus which became almost taken for granted in much of scholarship over the past sixty years.
Regarding Jesus' own sense of identity, the growing historical skepticism produced a consensus. Whether Jesus thought of himself as having any special exalted identity-as "Messiah" or "the Son of God"-we cannot know because of the very nature of the documents. When we do find such statements in the gospels (and they are few in our earliest sources), the careful historian (even if he or she is also a Christian) must suspect them as the post-resurrection perspective of Jesus' followers projected back into the ministry. They may well be theologically true-that is, statements which appropriately describe what Jesus had become in the life of the post-Easter church-but they may not be taken as historically accurate statements of what was said during the ministry itself. So also with the statements speaking of "dying for the sins of the world" as Jesus' purpose or intention. Thus the image of the historical Jesus as the divine savior who knew himself to be such, and whose mission was to complete that purpose, disappears. How Jesus thought of himself and his purpose must be inferred from his message, not from statements of other's perceptions to whom he was. His message reveals his mission.

According to the consensus, from such an examination of Jesus' message and mission we may surmise that he was an "eschatological prophet" or perhaps even "the eschatological prophet." The phrase needs some explanation. Eschatology is that branch of theology which concerns the "end time"-the end of the world, last judgment, and the dawning of the everlasting kingdom. An eschatological prophet is one who announces the end (Matt. 24). There is some evidence that some in the Jewish tradition near the time of Jesus anticipated such a prophet, "one like unto Moses" or perhaps even greater than Moses, who would appear immediately before the end of time. To say that Jesus was the eschatological prophet is to say that he saw himself as the prophet of the end who proclaimed the end of the world (age) in his own time and the urgency of repentance and obedience to the commands of God before it was too late. That was the core of his message and mission.

The consensus image of Jesus as "the" eschatological prophet was grounded in the claim that the "Kingdom of God" was at the center of Jesus' own message. So Mark describes Jesus' mission in his advance summary at the beginning of his gospel: "The Kingdom of God is at hand, therefore repent!" (Mark 1:15). These are the first words attributed to Jesus in Mark, his "inaugural address," and presumably Mark intends them as a shorthand summary of Jesus' message and mission. It is Mark's answer to the question, "What was the core of Jesus' proclamation?"

However, the consensus image also depends upon a particular interpretation of the phrase "Kingdom of God," namely that "Kingdom of God" is to be understood eschatologically as referring to the "final" Kingdom which would bring an end to earthly history as we know it, the "end of the world. "

This eschatological understanding of Jesus and of the Kingdom of God had its re-discovery primarily in the work of Albert Schweitzer (1875-1965) at the beginning of this century. He is most familiar to us as a world-famed medical missionary, Nobel prize recipient, and a modern "saint." But as a young man Schweitzer, prior to going to Africa, wrote two brilliant books that decisively shaped Jesus studies for the rest of the century.

Calling attention to element of crisis running throughout the gospels and the statement about the coming of the "Kingdom of God" and "the Son of man" who would bring all earthly history to a close, Schweitzer taught that Jesus expected these events in the immediate future and saw his death as playing a decisive role in bringing about the end. In Schweitzer's opinion Jesus was mistaken; the end did not come, and he died perhaps realizing his miscalculation for the new age did not materialize. For Schweitzer, however, the story of Jesus did not end there. Instead, Schweitzer spoke movingly of the spiritual Christ who still speaks to us, concluding his treatment of Jesus with what have been called the most famous words of twentieth-century theology: He comes to us as One unknown, without a name, as of old, by the lake-side, he came to those men who knew him not. He speaks to us the same word: "Follow thou me" and sets us to the tasks which he has to fulfill for our time. He commands. And to those who obey him, whether they be wise or simple, he will reveal himself in the toils, the conflicts, the sufferings which they shall pass through in his fellowship, and, as an ineffable mystery, they shall learn in their own experience who he is" (Quest. 403).

For Schweitzer, the living Christ called him to Africa, even though Schweitzer's understanding of the historical Jesus was of one who was profoundly misled by the eschatological beliefs of his day. For Schweitzer, the historical Jesus thus became theologically irrelevant; only the Christ who still speaks to us is relevant for theology.

This, I feel, is a tragic mistake on his part, for without the correct understanding of the historical Jesus' message and mission, it is far too easy for his message to be distorted today as a casual look at the diversity within the 2,000 different Christian denominations testify. Far too many have heard "Jesus speak" things that contradict his historical teachings; many of which also contradict and distort his mission.

Though Schweitzer's work initially created a sensation and strikes many as outlandish when they first hear of it, his image of Jesus as an eschatological prophet gradually became the consensus understanding among scholars. It is this image of Jesus that became the dominant image in German New Testament scholarship and, through the influential role played by German scholarship, in much of North American scholarship. It is found in the work of Rudolf Bultmann (1884-1976), arguably the most influential New Testament scholar throughout much of this century; in Gunther Borokamm's Jesus of Nazareth (New York: Harper, 1960; originally published in German in 1956), probably the most widely read scholarly book about Jesus written in the last thirty years; and, in various forms, in the work of such influential scholars as Joachim Jeremias, Werner Kummel, Hans Conzelmann, R. H. Fuller, and the early works of Norman Perrin.

To be sure scholars also recognized that Jesus spoke of the Kingdom as present and not only future, but the future imminent Kingdom continue to be emphasized. The image of Jesus as one who proclaimed the end of the world and the urgency of repentance remained. Jesus was one who expected the end of the world in his generation and called for men everywhere to repent in preparation for its coming.

Though the scholarly image of Jesus as eschatological prophet is known only in relatively narrow circles, it has had its effect upon the life of the church, primarily through the education provided to the clergy. In addition to learning that the popular image is not historical, students in the seminaries of mainstream churches over the past several decades have basically learned two things about Jesus: one, we cannot know much about him; and two, what we can know is a bit shocking and largely irrelevant to the life of the church. The image of Jesus as mistakenly expecting the end of the world in his own time and calling people to repent because the end was near does not lend itself well to Christian preaching and teaching. Never have I heard a preacher say in a sermon, "The text tells us that Jesus expected the end of the world in his time; he was wrong, but let's see what we can make of the text anyway."

As a consequence, among mainstream clergy there is often a strange silence about what Jesus was like as a historical figure. Christian preaching about Jesus is left to those who still think of the popular image as historical and who can therefore proclaim that image with confidence. When mainstream clergy do preach about Jesus, understandably they tend to emphasize the kerygma, the message of the early church ABOUT Jesus, and not Jesus himself. No wonder the popular image has remained so dominant, for Christians are typically not exposed to a persuasive and compelling alternative image.

What is known is an unhistorical image, believed by some, disbelieved by others. Thus the two dominant currents of twentieth-century scholarship on Jesus-historical skepticism and eschatological emphasis -have made the historical Jesus seem irrelevant. There is a widespread impression that what the historical Jesus was like is not only difficult to know but also of no theological consequence-that is, of no significance for us today, whether we are in the church or outside it. Schweitzer said so explicitly, and much of subsequent New Testament scholarship has essentially agreed: the historical Jesus is irrelevant.

There is some truth to this position.

Knowledge of the historical Jesus is not essential but very beneficial if obedience to his message is of importance to you and your family.

Being a Christian does not require having accurate historical information. Generations of Christians, taking the gospel portraits at "face value" as historical accounts, have had incorrect historical beliefs about Jesus that have done (without their knowledge) harm to their faith and piety.

In fact, failure to discern and correctly understand the historical Jesus, his historical mission, and his historical message have led multitudes of Christians to be deeply seated in idolatry, observe pagan religious festivals in Jesus' name, as well as robbing God in tithes and offerings all the while their clergy assures them that they are "right with God" if they believe and do as they are told by their church. For after all, Christianity does not concern itself with or consist primarily of having correct beliefs about the historical Jesus, but consists of having a relationship with the 'theology created" living Christ.

There is one major problem!

Due to a mistaken image, mission, and message of the historical Jesus and the acceptance of the erroneous popular image of Jesus...we fool and deceive ourselves if we believe we have a good relationship with Jesus and God if we (due to our misunderstanding) adhere to and practice a belief system contrary to what the historical Jesus both believed and followed. His message was one of repentance and love for God and man as exhibited through a life-style that modeled ethics and morals based upon the Laws of God. Failure to understand correctly the historical Jesus will guarantees you being led astray by your spiritual leaders who lack such knowledge and rely on their own inadequate understanding in presenting to you a mistaken image of the "real" Jesus and his message. Faith without works or mistaken works is dead.

Let me stress that what the historical Jesus was like is not irrelevant to the Christian faith, even if historical knowledge about him is not essential for salvation. Correct historical knowledge about Jesus is necessary for blessings and rewards both in this world and the world to come. But be not mistaken any longer. Historical knowledge about Jesus is necessary for understanding God's desired obedience and thereby attaining blessings from God. Because we lack such critical and necessary knowledge about the historical Jesus which modeled accepted belief and obedience as a model for all today, we who have accepted the popular image of Jesus and "faith only" have, in the lack of blessings, attributed and relegated to the blaming of Satan our lack of blessing. Sadly we fail to ask ourselves in the presence of unanswered prayer and the lack of blessings "is it I Lord?" Lacking such knowledge that would correct our belief system and our conduct, as well as our behavior, we are forced to designate Satan as our "scapegoat."

There are signs that the extreme historical skepticism that has marked most Jesus study in this century is abating. Though it is true that the gospels are not straightforward historical documents, and though it is true that every saying and story of Jesus has been shaped by the early church, we can in fact know as much about Jesus as we can about any figure in the ancient world. In some respects, the quest for the historical Jesus as a historical pursuit is no different from the quest for the historical Caesar. Though we know of these figures only in traditions preserved by their respective communities, we do not therefore conclude that we can know nothing about them. Our sources for the historical Jesus are at least as good. To be sure, there is more of a "theological overlay" in the sources about Jesus because of the early church's convictions regarding his ultimate stature, but this does not render historical knowledge impossible.

Though we cannot ever be certain that we have direct and exact quotations from Jesus, we can be relatively sure of the kinds of things he said, and of the main themes and thrust of his teaching. We can also be relatively sure of the kinds of things he did: healings, association with outcasts, the deliberate calling of twelve disciples, a mission directed to Israel, and a final purposeful journey to Jerusalem.

Likewise, we can be relatively certain of the kind of person he was: a charismatic who was a healer, sage, prophet, and revitalization movement founder. By incorporating all of this, and not preoccupying ourselves with the question of whether Jesus said exactly the particular words attributed to him, we can sketch a fairly full and historically defensible portrait of Jesus. It is to this portrait we turn to lead a more meaningful Biblical life-style.

Sages, known in all traditional cultures, are teachers; they are "the wise" who teach a way of life. Prophets know the "mind" or "will" of the other world and announce that to their people. Finally, a revitalization movement founder stands within a tradition and either calls it to return to some earlier form or to a radicalized form. Jesus, we shall see, was all of these.

By looking at the traditions about Jesus we will not only be able to see him with considerable clarity as a historical figure, but we will also be able to see his extraordinary relevance for both contemporary culture and the church.

This relevance comes from his message and not the message about him formulated by the Gentile church long after his death.

Jesus provides us with a way of seeing reality that is very different from and yet more comprehensive than the modern vision, and a model of being human at sharp variance from the modern model. The church's failure to recognize his true message [centered at obeying the Laws of God] and their blind acceptance of the "transformation" of his message [faith in Jesus instead of living the faith of Jesus] has led us to the sorry state of affairs we find today: the lack of miracles, the lack of prosperity, the failure and deceit of our spiritual leaders, etc.

When the message of Jesus was replaced by a message about him the church lost its power, its obedience and the fear of God

Thus Jesus has an intellectual as well as spiritual relevance. Indeed, he challenges much of what we take for granted. For Christians who seek to mold their lives of discipleship around what it means to follow Jesus, what Jesus was like when contrasted with the distorted image of him handed down by the Gentile church should be of more than a passing interest to those who wish to follow Jesus.

To follow Jesus means in some sense to be like him," to take seriously what he took seriously, to believe what he believed, to do those things which he did, and to renounce those things that are contrary to truth.

Answer for yourself: I challenge you to be truthful with yourself: are there things Jesus believed and taught that you don't [such as observance of Festivals, Sabbath, righteous giving to people instead of institutions], and if so...why?

Answer for yourself: If you believe things that Jesus' didn't...why do you? Finally, if Jesus believed, taught, and modeled things you don't...what stops you from changing?

This is the heart of the religion of Jesus...repentance.

Though this article is primarily a historical study, it is done with the recognition that the figure of Jesus has been significant to generations of Christians, and with the conviction that he is of continuing and indeed crucial importance to the life of both church and culture. With this conviction in mind, Bet Emet Ministry as well as other ministries like it seek to recover the vision of the "real" historical Jesus, a vision which can provide us with an alternative vision of life that is much more pleasing to God than one which accepts man-made traditions and leaves undone the very issues of a life pleasing to God that come only from accurate historical understanding of Jesus and his belief system. This involves literally "how" and "what" we worship as pertaining to Biblical Feast Days and Sabbaths as well as worship in our giving [correct Tithing]. We do not gain God's pleasure when we give erroneously by giving to churches which fail to allot your gifts to the specific places commanded by God in His Word. This is where we must begin before we go on to the deeper teachings of Jesus.

We must address the issues of the heart as manifested through correct conduct, attitude, and behavior; all the time realizing that if we contradict Jesus in our experience we are not pleasing to God.

For that reason, and that reason alone, it is of paramount interest we understand the "real" historical Jesus and his belief system and what it means to you today regardless of what you have been instructed by the traditions of your church or denomination. Jesus is the model and it is he to whom we are to identify with, and if your church or denomination blurs his image, you must seek to discover the only Jesus which you can securely put your faith and trust in...the historical Jesus...the Christ of history and not the Christ of faith created by an anti-Semitic Gentile church who rejected Judaism.

CAN YOU RECOGNIZE THE COUNTERFEIT JESUS FROM THE REAL JESUS?

Ironically, in the New Testament we are cautioned against many forces that can cause us to lose our focus or to be led astray. One such message in particular is interesting to note and the irony of the passage is that within the New Testament are conflicting pictures of Jesus. We are warned in 2nd Cor. 11:4 that if one were to come preaching to us another Jesus we might bear with him.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice what I underlined?

It does not say that if one were to come preaching another God but "another Jesus". This is a warning to reject any and all who come preaching or teaching "another Jesus" differing from the one preached by the apostles.

Answer for yourself: What did the historical apostles really teach about "Jesus" and can we find out what it is today by serious study or are we to simplistically believe everything in the New Testament about him, even when conflicts can be pointed out by knowledgeable people?

Answer for yourself: Do you know "the" Jesus preached by the Apostolic Church?

Answer for yourself: Could you recognize a "counterfeit Jesus" from the real historical Jesus?

Answer for yourself: How many books have you read and researched to determine what the real historical Jesus both believed and taught as situated in Second Temple Judaism as over against the contemporary Jesus as preached by the Gentile Christian Church today?

Let us take a quick look into the possibility that you might, without knowing, have received "another Jesus".

SUN GOD?

- His birthday has long been celebrated as being on or near December 25th.
- Many symbols and traditions used in the celebration of that holiday include wreaths, holly, caroling, evergreen (fir) trees, giving of gifts, yule logs etc.
- A festival was set at the onset of spring for the resurrection and renewal of spring life. The date for this festival was set by the phases of the moon.
- Symbols and traditions used in the celebration of this festival include rabbits (Hare), eggs, hot cross buns, new brightly colored clothing, sunrise services, 40 days of "Lent" etc.
- Observed the first day of the week as their holy day. This day was entitled "SUN" day by Constantine.

Answer for yourself: If your church leads you in such activities, or if you participate in them, then have you received "another Jesus"...whether you know it or not!

SON OF GOD?

- First of all you should know that there is a big difference between being a “son of God” as a Jew or believer and a “Son of God” as a Zeus. Understand the concept is determined by how you define “Son or son.” Most often when asked if I believe Jesus is the son of God the party asking the question always means capital “S” as in Son of God. Jesus was, like all God’s children, a son of God but not a Zeus.
- Again, back to the points in question. No celebration for Jesus' birth was known to take place in the early church. Jesus' birth is estimated to be in late Sept. or early Oct. by many.
- There was no biblical precedent set for celebrating his birth whether in use of symbols or in practice of traditions.
- Remembrance was made for Christ's death and resurrection but this usually coincided somewhat with Passover.
- The only symbols or traditions which have a biblical basis are those set forth by Jesus Christ. These include the bread and the wine as the Passover Seder. Jesus said "This do in remembrance of me". He referred to the Passover and not a substitute Christian communion as done today which has replaced the Passover for many.
- God's "Holy day" has always been the seventh day. That day is known today as Saturday. The apostles were known to have meetings on the first day of the week (in Greek it means "at the dawning of the day"). Let us not forget the Jews recognize that the day begins and ends at sundown when the "new day" dawns. Thus the early church met in homes at sundown of the Sabbath to observe the Havdalah Service in Biblical Judaism. But they knew and understood that the Sabbath was on the seventh day. This was God’s Sabbath, God’s appointed day of rest.

Answer for yourself: Could you recognize a "counterfeit Jesus" from the real historical Jesus?

Answer for yourself: In reality, have you been lead to follow a Catholic Jesus, a Protestant Jesus, or a Jewish Jesus?

HOW COME YOU HAVE NOT HEARD ABOUT THIS BEFORE?

Bet Emet Ministries believes in examining our "belief systems" to see if we are in "the faith." We, at Bet Emet, through educational newsletters and congregational assemblies attempts to examine our "religious belief system," our Bibles, concepts, doctrines, ancient meanings of biblical words, and the influence of ancient culture on the writers of the biblical text, and much more. After all, what are we to do one day when standing before the Judgment Seat and after confessing that we have prophesied in Jesus’ name, and in his name cast out demons and in his name done many wonderful works (we thought), and hear: "I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity?" This frightening example is to warn us that "many" will have a "religious belief system" that will guarantee their disqualification from entering the Kingdom of Heaven.

Answer for yourself: Is that you? Could that be You? Well that was once me without a doubt and thankfully in my search for God He allowed me to uncover the largest lie ever told…Gentile Christianity’s account of and depiction of Jesus as contained in the New Testament and it's oral traditions and preaching of him down through history.

Answer for yourself: How can you prevent yourself from awaking from the dead and finding that you are personally fulfilling Matt. 7:23 when you possibly might be told to "depart" by Yeshua; yet all the while thinking you were going to be accepted?

Don't you think you better start examining YOUR "belief system" while you still can?

We at Bet Emet Ministries have had to repent of many doctrines we had accepted which we were taught in good faith that could not stand the text of critical examination. The problem is that few do such critical examination of their faith, or even know how. God desires we have faith in "truth" and not faith in "error or lies." We must never forget that obedience is better than any sacrifice or gift we can give God. We, the family of Bet Emet Ministries, invite you to tell your friends that such an opportunity is available at Bet Emet. Shalom.

CAN WE BE A FOLLOWER OF JESUS AND NOT BE UNDER THE LAW?

For many reasons, there has been confusion among the saints concerning the laws of the Almighty God. Well-meaning people have been deceived and misled by denominations, preachers, priests and teachers and never know it. As the result, there are all sorts of wrong conclusions, misunderstanding, and widespread error in the assemblies and denominations concerning the laws of the Eternal Father.

Within churches, beginning many centuries ago, erroneous beliefs concerning "the law" were introduced. Churchgoers with excellent intentions have been cheated of sound understanding concerning the laws of God. In the present day, most who call themselves Christians give little or no thought to "the law" that is so often mentioned within their Scriptures. It can easily be shown that even in the New Testament that the Jerusalem Church and James it's Pastor, even as late at 55 C.E., were zealous for the Law which today we are taught is a "curse". Something is not right somewhere. Those scriptural passages that equate "the elect" with those who "keep the commandments of God" are generally read without any understanding, by the majority of people. The question is whether you want to be included in the "elect" and "remnant" of the God of Israel or not.

KEEPING THE COMMANDMENTS OF THE FATHER

Answer for yourself: Why is it that the Scriptures are filled with oft-repeated instructions to "keep My commandments," yet the average church-goer is unable to tell what those commandments are?

We find in the teachings of Jesus in the New Testament very plainly stated that in order to inherit a place in the Heavenly Kingdom, we must do much more than merely call him our "Lord". As it is written, he said that a person must also do "the will of [the] Father" (Matthew 7:21).

Answer for yourself: How can anyone read that passage (and others like it), with the intent of eventually reaching eternal Heavenly rest, without pausing to wonder, Just what is "the will of the Father"?

Answer for yourself: Can we honestly tell ourselves that we are followers of Jesus yet not be willing to keep and observe the commandments of the Father...such as the one concerning "where we are to Tithe", "observing the Festivals of the LORD", "keeping the Sabbath instead of Sunday", "refraining from idolatry", etc?

When the young man asked Jesus what he must do in order to "have eternal life," Jesus responded by telling him that in order to reach his spiritual goal he must "keep the commandments." (Matthew 19:16-17)

ARE WE "COMMANDMENT" CENTERED IN OUR LIVES?

Answer for yourself: Are we not compelled, then, to wonder which commandments?

Answer for yourself: Because of that answer which Jesus gave to the sincere young individual, should we not wonder whether we are "keeping the commandments"?

Truly, all of us who are sincerely seeking a Heavenly home must ponder whether we are obeying the "will / commandments of the Father."

"If ye love me, keep my commandments." (John 14:15)

"He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." (John 14:21)

"If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love." (John 15:10)

Answer for yourself: When we read words such as these, spoken by the Jewish Christ, how can we not wonder to which commandments he is referring?

"And hereby we do know that we know Him: (YHWH) if we keep His commandments. He that saith, I know Him (YHWH), and keepeth not His commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. But whoso keepeth His word (YHWH'S), in him verily is the love of God perfected; hereby we know that we are in Him." (1 John 2:3-5)

"For this is the love of God: that we keep His commandments." (1 John 5:3)

We must know what God's commandments are, and we must make the decision to obey them, in order to be called His friends. (John 15:14)

The end-times Church -- the assembly of the elect -- is described as those who "keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." (Revelation 12:17, 14:12)

Those whom God recognizes as outwardly displaying their love for God, "keep [His] commandments." And those who will not be permitted to inherit a place within the Heavenly Kingdom are those who failed to obey the "will of [the] Father." All who profess to know God and follow the teachings of the New Testament Jesus must be "keep[ing] the commandments," else he or she will be ashamed and find rejection at the day of judgement. It is to those who do not keep the commandments of God and likewise the same which were taught by Jesus are promised to hear said one day, "I never knew you. Depart from Me" (Matthew 7:23).

Obviously then, commandment-keeping is a basic part of Jesus' message.

Answer for yourself: Does your church teach that the Law is passed away and that we are no longer under the Law but under grace? If they do, you might want to rethink your church membership in light of the words of Jesus.

Answer for yourself: Who are you going to believe for your eternal life; Jesus or your Pastor?

THERE IS A YOKE....TO DIRECT YOU TO BLESSING AND ACCEPTANCE

Contrary to what so many have misunderstood or have been misled into believing, there is a "yoke" of commandments to which the believer must yield himself or herself. To be sure, the Father of our spirits is merciful, and gracious, and loving, and kind. However, none of those attributes is in any way opposite to requiring His children to obey His rules. Jesus told those who would follow him, "Take My yoke upon you." (Matthew 11:29)

Jesus never said, "Do whatever you please, and I'll be satisfied." In fact, he declared just the opposite!

Answer for yourself: Did he not say that those who serve him in their way, instead of his way, will not be accepted by him at the Last Day (Matthew 7:21)?

Answer for yourself: Are we not warned that those who substitute "the commandments of men" in place of his doctrine "worship God in vain" (Matthew 15:9; Mark 7:7)?

Obviously, there are commandments for Christians to follow, and there is a "burden" that we are expected to bear. The scriptures soothe and assure us, however, that, "His commandments are not grievous" (1 John 5:3). Jesus teaches that his "yoke is easy, and [his] burden is light" (Matthew 11:30). Remember with me that a yoke is not meant to be a heavy burden, but literally a collar around an animal's head to provide direction for the path the animal is to go. The same could be said for humans as well; the yoke and burden is not grievous for mankind, but a gift from God to us to help direct our paths, which in the end of our lives, will assure we have arrived at the desired destination. Think about that. Over the years in the church the Laws of God were continually represented as a "burdensome yoke". Sadly few knew from the pulpits what the function of such a yoke was or what it was intended.

Those who are called the "saints" are they who "keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus" (Revelation 12:17, 14:12). In Revelation 22:14, we read: "Blessed are they that do His (YHWH'S) commandments, that they may have right to the Tree of Life, and may enter in through the gates of the city [the Holy City descended from Heaven]."

Answer for yourself: Can any one who features himself or herself to be a Christian actually think it is acceptable to by-pass such plain declarations?

Answer for yourself: Once plain scriptural statements such as these are carefully pondered, how can anyone who sincerely seeks to inherit the Kingdom presume to think that he or she is exempt from commandment-keeping?

If so, then he or she does not comprehend the Scriptures . The question that should be eagerly asked is, "Which commandments must I strive to obey?" But, for all too many, there is no comprehension of the importance of yielding to Heavenly laws; therefore, for them, that question does not even arise.

MOST HAVE FAILED TO UNDERSTAND CORRECTLY

Every person who has the ability to read or to listen, but who does not comprehend the Scriptures fails to do so because of one of three basic reasons.

- Either the person does not want to understand
- He or she is not intended to understand
- He or she has been misled by errant and slothful pastors.

Admittedly, each of us has, to some degree, failed to correctly comprehend the Scriptures -- for one or more of the above reasons. The good news, however, is that the future of our understanding can be rather bright. But let us return to the reasons for failure to comprehend the importance of the eternal laws.

Firstly, there are those people who simply do not want to understand. Next within this category, there are those who are afraid to understand. Like the disciples, of whom it was written: "They understood not that saying, and were afraid to ask Him" (Mark 9:32). Understanding brings with it the added responsibility to make a decision -- to take some action, and to obey. Knowledge and understanding replace ignorance. When that happens, there remains no excuse (John 15:22). New, more clear understanding brings with it a change of perspective. Change is temporarily uncomfortable to us. As humans, we tend to like to stay as we are. Growth requires us to be in flux --off balance for the moment -- and obligates us to make decisions, and adjustments in our thinking and in our life-style.

The second reason why people do not comprehend is that it is not foreordained that they should understand. Jesus told His disciples, when asked why he spoke so often in parables: "Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, but to them it is not given. Therefore, I speak unto them in parables...lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should be converted, and I should heal them" (Matthew 13:10-15). Again, Jesus explained to His disciples: "Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of God, but to others in parables, that...they might not see, and...they might not understand." He explained that in the "parable of the sower": the seeds that fell by the way side "are they that hear; then cometh the devil, and taketh away the Word out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved." (Luke 8:10-12)

Following this theme, Paul wrote that "if the gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost; in whom the god of this world [Satan] hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel...should shine unto them" (2 Corinthians 4:3-4). While no one wants to think of himself or herself as being in this category, the undeniable fact is that the Scriptures testify that there are many citizens of the planet who are not chosen (from before the foundation of the world) to understand the Word.

Thirdly, we can misunderstand [not comprehend correctly] the Scriptures because of those who have taught us, and the culture in which we were raised. Pastors, preachers, teachers, and parents are all liable to perpetuate and pass on untruths. This usually occurs without any maliciousness on their part at all -- because they, themselves, were also deceived. In these instances, there is generally no active intent to lead anyone astray. However, misdirection may also occur because of fear of ridicule, or laziness on the part of pastors and teachers that results in their lack of sufficient study whereby these deeper things of God are discerned. There are multitudes of ministers who "[do] not...understand the law; and this because of the hardness of their hearts."

There are many pastors and preachers and church-school teachers who are like the "blind watchmen" mentioned in Isaiah 56. There are numerous others who are slothful watchmen, not lifting the voice of warning because of their own self interests, or because of fear of losing their salary as a paid hireling minister (Ezekiel 33:1-9; 2 Timothy 4:3; John 10:13). Many are the church leaders who frankly were not called, and not sent by the Father. As Paul asked, "How shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent?" (Romans 10:14-15). There are a multitude of ministers and spiritual teachers who are metaphorically described as "wells without water," actually unable to provide spiritual drink for their parishioners who thirst (2 Peter 2:16). These are they who are uninspired, and who lack the Spirit of Truth to guide them. They substitute man-made theology, popular "love" psychology, their own chosen "flavor" of political philosophy, and written speeches copied from the sermons of other men, in place of the gospel of the Kingdom. Emotionalism is what they substitute for righteousness. They preach on subjects such as liberal humanistic morality, self-esteem, and wealth-building, because they themselves know not the right way. These are they who "worship...in vain" because they "teach for doctrines the commandments of men" (Matthew 15:9).

WHEN DID THE LAW BEGIN?

The Scriptures do speak of more than one set of laws. Some of the laws were from the beginning; they are endless and eternal. Some laws were added at a later time. Others were commandments related to a covenant with a particular individual or family. Still others were laws upon which there was a time or circumstantial limit placed.

Answer for yourself: Do the Scriptures teach us that there was no law in effect before the exodus from Egypt? How ridiculous!

The Scriptures tell us just the opposite: that the law of God was given to man in Eden -- from the very beginning! And yet there are many who have been confused or misdirected into wrongly believing that "the law" is synonymous with everything that Moses spoke to the children of Israel, they mistakenly believe that before Moses, there was no law. Such thinking is completely wrong! Because sin is defined as the transgression of the law, then those who think that there was no law given to man before Sinai must erroneously conclude that there was no sin before Sinai!

At the first, Adam was told that he may not eat of the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil. The scripture tells us that, in some wonderful and mysterious way, within the fruit of that special tree was contained knowledge of right and wrong, of good and of evil. When Eve and Adam partook of it, their understanding "was opened," and they were ashamed of themselves. Elohim said "man is become as one of us, to know good and evil" (Genesis 3:22). As Paul wrote, the knowledge of sin comes through the law. (Romans 3:20) It is obvious, then, that the fruit of the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil contained within it, in some miraculous manner, the basic laws of right and wrong and of right conduct toward the Creator and fellow-man.

Stephen spoke of the ancient prophets and patriarchs having "received the law by the disposition of angels" (Acts 7:53). Paul also indicated that the law was "ordained by angels" (Galatians 3:19).

NO LAW, NO SIN

There was indeed a law given to those favored of Yahweh long before Sinai. If there had been no law, then there could have been no sin, and therefore, no punishment.

If there had been no law from the days of Adam and Eve, then, according to Paul's explanation (that where there is no law there is no transgression, and therefore no sin imputed), the Eternal Father would have been unjustified in rejecting Cain's offering.

Answer for yourself: How could Jehovah fairly have rejected Cain's efforts, if Cain had not had prior knowledge of the proper and acceptable way to present an offering? How could the Eternal Father go on to justly punish Cain for murdering his brother, if Cain had not known that there was a law against murder?

Answer for yourself: Was God justified or unjustified in rejecting and punishing Cain in these matters? He was justified, because He is "righteous in all His ways, and holy in all His works" (Psalm 145:17).

Answer for yourself: If there was no law from the beginning, how could any man have been considered "righteous"?

Yet the Scriptures declare that Noah was "righteous." (Genesis 7:1) He was, in fact, the only righteous man in his generation. The rest of the world was wicked.

Answer for yourself: How could a just God become angry enough with man to bring a devastating flood upon the earth, unless He expected man to have behaved otherwise?

Answer for yourself: And how could they have behaved otherwise (not sinned), unless they had been given a law, and a set of commandments to follow?

"Sin is not imputed when there is no law" (Romans 5:13).

Answer for yourself: The wicked are those who transgress the law (Psalm 119:53). How, then, could anyone in days of old be labeled as "wicked" if there had been no law before Sinai?

Yet the Sodomites "were wicked and sinners before the Lord continually" (Genesis 13:13).

Answer for yourself: Since, as Paul wrote, no sin is imputed where there is no law; and since, as David wrote, the Eternal Father is "righteous in all His ways," how could God have been justified in destroying Sodom and Gomorrah, if there had there been no law given in those days?

He couldn't!

Answer for yourself: How could Abraham have had a discussion with the Angel of the Lord concerning people who were righteous and people who were wicked if there had been no law (therefore, no definition of righteousness or wickedness) prior to Moses" day? He couldn"t have!

As we shall discover shortly, there are numerous passages of scripture that affirm to us that there was a law given to man from the very beginning. There was a law that began in Eden, and was given to the family of Adam.

MORE THAN ONE LAW HAS BEEN GIVEN

Before we proceed, we must recognize that there was more than one category of law that was given to the children of Israel through Moses. We have already begun to realize that there were the timeless "commandments of the covenant," as well as the temporary Levitical "law of performances and ordinances." However, there were also other laws -- laws that do not fit so easily into either category. These include the civil or political laws. Laws concerning property and inheritances. Laws of personal hygiene. Laws of retribution, laws governing the rights of the poor, and compensation for victims of crime. And there were other miscellaneous laws. Now this is an important concept. At least some of these laws seem to have been added following the sojourn at Sinai following the sin of the golden calf. Most of these laws were in some way conditional, and dependent upon conditions and circumstances. In this article, we will not attempt to deal with this category of conditional laws but I have on the website an article entitled "The Law That Was Added". I would hope you read this next.

The main focus of this article is to help us to discern the eternal laws -- the laws that were not conditional, or which were intended to be observed from beginning to ending. As we proceed, we do so reverently, not dogmatically, with the acknowledgment that the ways of our God are far above our understanding.

The commandments of an eternal nature are sometimes referred to as the "royal law" -- the law that had been given to man from the beginning. To be sure, that law was being re-stated at Sinai. Many of the laws that were being reiterated at Sinai were the same as the laws that had been given to Adam. The laws which Adam had received in the beginning were passed on from generation to generation among his righteous seed. The law that was given to Adam and his generations was preserved in the ark with Noah [as a type and shadow of the Ark of the Covenant].

The children of God were not ever left without a law. At Mount Sinai, the same law was uttered again by the voice of the great "I Am" directly to the Israelites, as part of the covenant He made with them. These precious and perfect laws had previously been known and observed by Jacob and his sons, when they had immigrated to Egypt. But, with the passing of many generations, and the bondage of slavery, the nation of Israel had lost sight of these laws during their hundreds of years of captivity.

WHAT ABOUT "THE LAW" THAT WAS ADDED AND NOT REITERATED?

To be sure, there was an added law. The apostle Paul said that the added law was given by Moses because of transgressions until the Seed [the Messiah] should come (Galatians 3:16-19). The added law was just that -- added.

Answer for yourself: Added to what?

Moses could not add something, unless something else had already existed. And certainly that which had existed from the beginning, could not be spoken of as having been added. Moses could not add to the Divine law that was revealed in the beginning to Adam, and which was known and obeyed by the patriarchs.

Answer for yourself: Then what was the law that was "added"?

While Israel was gathered at the foot of Mount Sinai, Yahweh added the laws of animal sacrifice for sin, associated ceremonial performances that involved a Levitical Priesthood and Tabernacle, & other related ordinances. Those laws, due to the sin of the golden calf, were given to Moses, and were inextricably linked to the Aaronic priesthood and the Tabernacle. "It was expedient that there should be a law given to the children of Israel, yea, even a very strict law -- for they were a stiff-necked people: quick to do iniquity, and slow to remember the Lord their God. Therefore, there was a law given them; yea, a law of performances and of ordinances, a law which they were to observe strictly from day to day, to keep them in remembrance of God, and their duty towards Him. Speaking of the law which consisted of "ordinances of divine service and a worldly sanctuary," we read that this consisted of "meats and drinks [offerings], and divers washings [purifications], and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the reformation [in Christ]." (Hebrews 9:10) This litany of ceremonial laws was utterly inseparable from the Aaronic priesthood. Christians make a fatal mistake in equating these "added" laws as conditional to the salvation of the Jewish People. Such is not the case for salvation has been available to all of mankind long before the golden calf and the "added law" involving the Tabernacle, animal sacrifices, and the Tabernacle. Think on this for a minute!

The Levitical priesthood existed only for the purpose of administering those outward ordinances. In fact, it was by the law that a man served in the Levitical priesthood.

As we close this article I will pose to you a crucial question.

NOW FOR THE BIGGEST QUESTION

Answer for yourself: Since the Tabernacle and Priesthood, along with the ceremonies and ordinances were "added" subsequent to the sin of the golden calf, how did a child of God procure atonement prior to the golden calf and what relation does that have to the Jewish people following the destruction of the Temple let alone for the Christian?

The same way mankind has always done. Read the Old Testament and notice how God provided forgiveness and how man received it. Interested or curious? I deal with this subject in detail on the website. Let us know your interest to study this topic for we have been given by God many answers long kept from the Christian community. Shalom.

DID JESUS ABOLISH THE LAW AND CREATE A NEW RELIGION FOR GENTILES CALLED "CHRISTIANITY"?

At the very beginning of the Gospels story we find that Jesus asserted that the law of Moses should be observed: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill" (Matt. 5:17 KJV). The Bibles teaches us that he was circumcised, as a sign of the Covenant between God and the children of Abraham. Mary was a faithful Jewish woman who performed the ritual of mikvah for cleansing of Jewish women. As an infant he was taken to Jerusalem and presented to the Lord God, with sacrifice offered according to the law and Torah of the Jews. As a youngster Jesus went to the Temple in Jerusalem, listened to the religious Jewish teachings, and asked questions about Judaism. As Jews do, he recited the blessing over bread and the Shema daily. Rituals by Temple priests and gifts given at the Temple altar were recognized as proper religious duties. Tithing and fasting were accepted Jewish functions by him. Jesus observed the Saturday Sabbath by attending synagogue, where he learned, taught, and read the Hebrew Scriptures. The synagogue was then, as now, a place of prayer as well as religious education. Pharisees and other men learned in Judaism went there regularly to speak and listen. Jesus spoke Aramaic, a Semitic language very similar to Hebrew, and knew the Hebrew Scriptures well. He taught daily in the Temple and also preached outdoors the Hebrew gospel of the Kingdom of God. Multitudes of people, all of them Jews, heard such teachings. The sanctity of the Jerusalem Temple was highly respected by Jesus, who believed it was a house of prayer for all. Of course, he was familiar with and participated in the Jewish holidays. Succoth and Passover are specially recorded.

Everything we have outlined above is found in the pages of the New Testament. All of this reveals to the awakened reader that Jesus as "the Christ" is depicted as a Jew who practiced normative Judaism. Now, let's look at the passages which present his Jewishness. While reading, ask this:— Why would Jesus be immersed in the laws and customs of Judaism if his alleged mission was to extinguish them and create a new and different religion as has happened in his name today?

- Mark 14:26 (Matthew 26:30), "And when they had sung (the Hallel) an hymn . . ."

WHAT DID WE JUST SEE FOR OURSELVES?

Not only did Jesus observe Judaism's laws, but the much maligned Pharisees are shown in the New Testament to have been valued dispensers of the word of God in Jesus's own estimation. Furthermore, Jesus had friends among the Pharisees as the Gospel of Luke attests. Christianity should place the Pharisees in the proper regard and end disparagement of this antisemitic characterization of them in the New Testament. Read here where we plainly see that the Pharisees even sought to save his life. In addition, many came to him to be healed.

- Matthew 23:1-3, "Then spake Jesus to the multitude, and to his disciples, Saying, The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat: All therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do . . ."
- Luke 13:31, "The same day there came certain of the Pharisees, saying unto him, Get thee out, and depart hence; for Herod will kill thee."
- Luke 5:17, ". . . as he was teaching. . . Pharisees. . . were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem: and the power of the Lord was present to heal them."
- Luke 7:36 (Luke 11:37), "And one of the Pharisees desired him that he would eat with him. And he went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat."
- Luke 14:1, ". . . he went into the house of one of the chief Pharisees to eat bread on the sabbath day . . ."

As a final observation here, it is interesting to note that Jesus is depicted as wearing the Jewish man's religious tzitzit garment. The wearing of this garment is a command by God in Numbers 15:38-39 reading,

". . . that they make them fringes on the borders of their garments. . . (to) remember all the commandments. . ." In Matthew 14:36 we infer Jesus is wearing this tzitzit garment as we read, "And (men) besought him that they might only touch the hem of his garment: . . ."

Answer for yourself: Now don't you think it rather preposterous to look at the life of this man and try to give validity to much which is preached in his name today; namely, that we are no longer under the mandate of observance of God's Laws because of the life and ministry of Jesus?

Answer for yourself: Does it not strike you rather strange that a man who patterned his life after scrupulously observing the Laws of God could be at the same time the reason for the passing away of such Laws? This should only make us think deeply about what we are reading which states otherwise and the origin for such dogmas which lie at the very foundation of the majority of Christianity's dogmas today. Could it be that there has been a concerted efforts many centuries ago to change the religion of Jesus into a religion that is found only within the doors of the Roman Church?

UNDERSTANDING THE LAW AS JESUS THE JEW DID

Much of our study will originate from within the Torah, or what Christians commonly refer to as the "Pentateuch." Strictly speaking, Torah refers to the first five books of the Bible, written by Moshe (Moses); however, over time the term "Torah" has generally taken on the connotation of referring to the entire First covenant (Old Testament). Tanakh (Ta-nack is how you pronounce it) is the more proper term for the Hebrew Bible (equivalent to the Christian Bible's Old Testament). This term is an acrostic formed from the Hebrew letters "taw" (t), "nun" (n), and "kaph" (k), which stand for the three main divisions of the Hebrew bible: the Torah (Law or Instructions), the Nevi'im (Prophets), and the Ketuvim (Writings).

Answer for yourself: Well, now we have an idea of where the Torah is found within the Bible, but if it is only one of three sections, how did it get a connotation of referring to the whole Bible?

Answer for yourself: Doesn't it mean "law?"

Actually, this is one of the most important points of our entire study: a proper understanding of the concept of "Torah." A better translation of this term would be "instruction." Torah represents the embodiment of what God would have us learn of Him. It comes from the Hebrew word "yarah" which is an archery term meaning "to shoot", or "to take aim" and conveys the concept of "pointing out" (as if by "aiming" the finger), "teaching", or "instructing." This can be verified by referencing the Strong's Exhaustive Concordance of the Bible (Hebrew glossary #8451, and then from there further referenced to #3384), and/or the Gesenius Hebrew-Chaldee Lexicon. (Both books may be ordered from Christian bookstores. They are necessary for your studies.)

Answer for yourself: So if it means "instruction", then how did it get translated "law?"

Good question. When Torah was translated from Hebrew into Greek in the Septuagint, the Greeks didn't have a word for "instruction" that quite matched the concepts embodied by Torah by the Hebrews so they used the closest Greek counterpart, the term "nomos," which means literally "to parcel out," with secondary meanings of "principle" and "law," or "regulation." From there, the Greek was translated into English using the "law" definition. Sadly enough, our Western mind-set has taken this term "law" quite literally and we have come to the erroneous conclusion that it refers to "legalistic regulations no longer in force." Even worse, this concept is propagated Sunday after Sunday in pulpits across the land and in the teachings of many of our seminaries. This error has led to another tragic misunderstanding: that the New Testament has superseded the Old Testament! Nothing could be further from the truth! The New Testament clarifies the Old (First) and expounds upon the teachings of God! As one wise theologian has said: "The Old Testament is the New Testament concealed, and the New Testament is the Old Testament revealed." God didn't change His mind in the middle of the story; He merely made more concrete (with the sending of the Messiah) some of the more abstract concepts of the Old Testament.

Needless to say, this is a complex subject and one that could easily fill several volumes. Let me share these scriptures with you to help:

Yeshua (Jesus) said:

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill."

"For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or tittle shall in no wise pass from the Torah, till all be fulfilled." Matt. 5:17-18

"And when they heard it, they glorified the Lord, and said unto Him, "Thou seest, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are which believe; and they are all zealous of the Torah (law)." Acts 21:20

Answer for yourself: Was the above passages spoken by James, the head of Jesus' church some thirty years after his death and resurrection?

Answer for yourself: Did James and Jesus' church feel that the "Law" was still in effect 30 years after the cross? Sure looks like they did according to this text!

Notice in the above reference to Acts 21:20:

- This is after the ascension.
- These are Jewish believers in Yeshua who are STILL zealous of the Torah. They haven't dropped the Torah and it's teachings! And, they are still in the Temple every day if you will read the whole section!
- "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness."* II Timothy 3:16

Notice also that at the time this was written, it referred only to the Old Testament; the New was not yet complete, nor codified.

Every reference made by Jesus and the apostles came from the Old Testament. As was pointed out above, the New was not yet written!

Jewish New Testament translation: "For the goal at which the Torah aims is the Messiah, who offers righteousness to everyone who trusts." Romans 10:4

Contrary to popular belief, there were not two methods of righteousness: law for the Old Testament saints and grace for the church. Salvation was, is, and always shall be by grace through faith. Even Avraham (Abraham), the Father of the Jewish people knew that:

"And he (Abraham) believed in the Lord; and he counted it to him for righteousness." Genesis 15:6

Faith or "confidence" in the Lord is the means of justification before God, and the Torah instructs us how to walk in this faith. How to raise our families, how to eat for our health, and how to know God is also explained.

GETTING FAMILIAR WITH THE TORAH (THE LAW)

As stated before, in Jewish tradition the word "Torah", which literally means "teaching," is often used to describe the entire gamut of Jewish religious learning. When so used, Torah refers not only to the Five Books of Moses but also to the Prophets, Holy Writings, Talmud, and Midrash-in fact, to all religious writings from earliest times to the present.

Basically, however, the term Torah applies to the Five Books of Moses, the first five books of the Bible. The word "Pentateuch", a Latin word derived from the Greek, meaning "five books," is commonly used to refer to these five books. Pentateuch corresponds to the Hebrew word "Chumash", meaning "five."

In addition to the five books that are collectively called the Torah, there are two other parts to the Bible: the Prophets (Neviim), which consists of twenty-one books, and the Holy Writings or Hagiographa (Ketuvim or Ketubim), which consists of thirteen books. This biblical triad is often referred to as the Tanach, a Hebrew acronym fashioned from the first letter of the Hebrew words Torah (Pentateuch), Neviim (Prophets), and Ketuvim (Holy Writings).

The following are the thirty-nine books of the Bible:

- The Torah: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers,Deuteronomy.
- The Prophets: Joshua, Judges, I Samuel, H Samuel, I Kings, 11 Kings, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi.
- The Holy Writings: Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Song of Songs, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther, Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, I Chronicles, H Chronicles.

According to an early talmudic method of counting the books of the Bible, the figure was set at twenty-four. This number was arrived at by counting the twelve Minor Prophets as one book (in Aramaic the group is called "Tray Asar", "twelve") and by counting each of the following as one book: First Samuel and Second Samuel, First Kings and Second Kings, First Chronicles and Second Chronicles, and Ezra and Nehemiah. (Thus, the thirty-nine count is reduced by fifteen.) The term often used to designate these books in classical literature is "Esrim V'arba'a".

THE CENTERPIECE OF BIBLICAL JUDAISM AND BIBLICAL FAITH

The Torah is the centerpiece to Jesus, of Judaism and the key to Jewish survival. Although not every Jew is familiar with the contents of the Torah or observes its commandments, all Jews recognize the centrality of the Torah in Jewish religious life and its function as the moral guide of the Jewish people. Not only that, but it is recognized as being the intended guide for all mankind.

The role played by the Torah in the lives of individual Jews varies considerably. Some Jews have studied the Torah sufficiently to appreciate its message: some have learned to read the Hebrew text some have learned to chant the unvocalized script of the Torah scroll. Some have been called to the Torah on Sabbaths or holidays and are able to recite the Torah blessings. Many Jews, perhaps the majority, however, have had minimal contact with the Torah. The same can be said for much of Christianity as well.

What made it possible for this relatively brief book to achieve such a high level of importance? How did one book come to be so revered that Jews in every century have been willing to sacrifice their lives rather than violate its teachings?

The answers to these questions may be found in the attitudes of the Rabbis of the Talmud and their successors toward the unique historical event generally referred to as "The Revelation," or "Mattan Torah," the giving of the Torah on Mount Sinai over three thousand years ago. The Torah it self describes the scene dramatically: Amidst thunder and lightning, a quaking mountain is engulfed by fire and clouds of smoke. Then the piercing sound of a shofar is heard as God appears atop Mount Sinai and reveals the Ten Commandments (and, according to tradition, the entire Torah) to Moses, who then transmits it to the people-at-large.

The Rabbis chose to embellish the scant text and thus add to the mystery surrounding the event. Rabbi Abahu, for example, notes that when the Torah was given, the world lapsed into silence. No one spoke. Total silence. Birds did not chirp fowl did not fly oxen did not low. Even the heavenly angelic choir that always serenaded God with "Holy, holy, holy . . ." lapsed into silence and withheld its never-ending praises of the Lord.

It was at this point, says Rabbi Abahu, that the intense stillness was suddenly pierced by a powerful, thunderous Voice proclaiming the first of the Ten Commandments: "I am the Lord your God!"

Other Rabbis proposed that the Torah was not intended for Israel alone but was to be the property of the entire world. Commenting on Exodus 20:15, "And all the people saw the Voices," one Rabbi asked, "Why is the plural, Voices, used in this verse when quite clearly the reference is to the Voice of God. The singular, Voice, should have been used."

Rabbi Yochanan explains that we are to understand from the plural usage that the one Voice, the Voice of God, divided itself into seven, and the seven grew and expanded and emerged as seventy Voices so that all seventy nations of the world would receive the message at the same time. To Rabbi Yochanan the Torah was a universal document, the heritage of all mankind.

Other Rabbis of the Talmud and Midrash present a scenario in which the Torah was offered to nation after nation. Each refused to accept the Torah when it became aware that the scroll's teachings were in conflict with the nation's lifestyle. Some could not countenance the ban against stealing others against murder still others objected to the prohibition against adultery. Such is a "salad-bar" spiritual relationship with God whereby we pick and choose to do only those things commanded by God which are deemned acceptable to us.

Not all Rabbis were convinced that the Torah was eagerly accepted by the Israelites either. In fact, said one Rabbi, God had to force the Torah upon them. In commenting on the verse "And they [the Israelites] stood at the foot of the mountain," Rabbi Avdimi bar Chama declared, "This verse teaches us that God lifted up the mountain and held it over the heads of the Israelites and said to them: 'you accept the Torah, fine and good if not, this place will be your burial site. You will be buried under this mountain."' In the end, tradition has it, the Israelites did accept the Torah willingly and eagerly, and when it was offered to them, they immediately said, "Naaseh ve-nishma [We will do and we will listen]." So anxious were they to accept the Torah that they agreed to observe its commandments even before they were aware of exactly what those commandments were. This is real faith in action.

The statement in Deuteronomy 33:4 that the Torah is "the inheritance of the Congregation of Jacob" became a widely accepted doctrine. The Torah became the legacy of the Jewish people. They took the Torah to their hearts. They loved it and guarded it. They studied it and taught it and interpreted it, passing on its teachings from generation to generation.

HOW THE TORAH SURVIVED

The Rabbis sought to insure that the sanctity of the Torah would be preserved. They did so by "building a fence [seyag] around it." This "fence" is constructed of laws and regulations designed to preserve the message of the Torah and safeguard its teachings by adding limits, whereby if followed, ensured that transgression of God's Laws would not happen. The Rabbis also sought to encourage respectful treatment of the Torah by mandating how each scroll was to be written, and by whom, and upon what kind of material. They also established regulations governing public readings: when the Torah should be read, how much of it should be read, and by whom. And they specified precisely how the Torah should be housed and how it should be dressed.

Perhaps the greatest factor contributing to the longevity of the Torah is the conscious effort made by great Jewish intellectuals to prevent it from becoming obsolete or irrelevant, as has happened to many famous documents of antiquity. In a perpetual search for new meaning, the Torah was constantly studied, analyzed, probed. Every sentence, every word, every letter was dissected and examined. Was a word missing in a sentence? Was a letter missing in a word? Was a word or a phrase repeated unduly? If so, what was the significance of this occurrence? Was there a hid den deeper meaning to the text?

According to some scholars, it was Ezra the Scribe, of the fifth century B.C.E., who initiated this analytical method of Bible study. They base this on the statement "Ezra had dedicated himself to study the Torah of the Lord so as to observe it and to teach laws and rules to Israel" (Ezra 7: 10). The word "study," say the scholars, implies that Ezra analyzed the Torah text in order to determine what the words were intended to teach.

Scholars of the next ten centuries, through the end of the talmudic period (fifth century C.E.), followed in the footsteps of Ezra. Through constant examination they extracted new meaning from old words and learned profound lessons from episodes that had hitherto been unexplored. The result was that the Torah became a Torat Chayim, a living Torah, as it has often been called.

EARLY INTERPRETERS

The most eminent of the early scholars who interpreted the Torah and made it a relevant, living document were Hillel and Shammai of the first century B.C.E. These two giants and their disciples continually clashed in their interpretations of Torah law, Shammai being extremely rigorous and Hillel taking a more liberal and sympathetic approach. Hillel, for example, would permit an aguna (one whose husband has disappeared) to remarry even if only in direct evidence of the husband's death has surfaced, while Shammai would insist that witnesses come forward with direct testimony before a new marriage would be allowed. The interpretations of these scholars and their contemporaries, known as tannaim, meaning "teachers," are recorded in the first part of the Talmud, known as the Mishna. In compiling the Mishna, which was completed around the year 220 C.E., Judah the Prince, his coeditor Nathan, and their associates sifted through, evaluated, and edited a vast number of legal opinions that had been expressed over the centuries in the academies of learning, primarily in Palestine.

The second part of the Talmud, known as the Gemara, is a commentary on the Mishna. The scholars whose views are presented in the discussions in the Gemara are known as amoraim, meaning "interpreters" or "speakers." For the most part they lived in Babylonia, where the great academies were situated following the destruction of the Temple and the continuing Roman occupation of Palestine. The Gemara of the Babylonian scholars was edited and finalized by Rabina and Ashi and their associates around the year 500 C.E. Together with the Mishna it comprises the Babylonian Talmud.

A second Talmud, the Palestine (or Jerusalem) Talmud, was also created. The Mishna of Rabbi Judah the Prince is the central text of this work as well. However, the Gemara of the Palestinian Talmud consists of the discussions that took place among the amoraim in the academies of learning in Palestine. The academies that continued to flourish in Palestine, primarily in Tiberias, during the Roman occupation in the early centuries C.E. were not equal in stature to those of Babylonia, and the Palestinian Talmud therefore enjoys a lesser status than the Babylonian Talmud.

The Palestinian Talmud, which is often called by its Hebrew name, Yerushalmi, meaning "of Jerusalem," is only about one-third the size of the Babylonian Talmud, which is often referred to as the Bavli, meaning "of Babylonia." Only in recent centuries have scholars begun to study the Yerushalmi.

Analysis of Scripture did not cease with the final editing of the Babylonian and Jerusalem Talmuds, and the most important Bible commentary to emerge from the post-talmudic period is a library of books called the Midrash. Each of these books records random comments on the Bible by scholars who lived during the talmudic period. The earliest midrashic volume is Genesis Rabba, composed some time after the final editing of the Talmud in the sixth century, and the last is Yalkut Shimoni, a compilation by Simon Kara, also known as Shimon Ha-darshan, a thirteenth-century scholar who lived in southern Germany. These volumes contain primarily the wisdom and insights of the scholars of Palestine, although many of the sayings, parables, legends, and interpretations were culled from the teachings of Babylonian scholars who were no less ardent students of the Bible.

CLASSICAL COMMENTATORS

Not until the eleventh century did commentators begin to address themselves to the text of the Torah in sequential fashion. The greatest of these commentators of the Middle Ages was undoubtedly the French scholar Rabbi Shlomo Yitzchaki (1040-1105), popularly known as Rashi. He interpreted the Bible literally and achieved renown because of his manner of explaining difficult words and phrases, enabling the student to understand the simple meaning of the text.

Rashi's commentary is profusely illustrated with quotations from the Talmud and Midrash that have a bearing on verses being discussed. All of this earned Rashi the honorary title parshandata, Aramaic for "supreme commentator."

Four other medieval commentators, along with Rashi, are considered to be the classical Bible commentators. The first of these is a grandson of Rashi, Rabbi Samuel ben Meir(1085-1158), often referred to by the acronym Rashbam. He revered his grandfather and followed his method of presenting the direct, simple meaning of the text. But he avoided interpreting the text in a homiletical (sermonic) manner because, he believed, this might distort the true meaning of the Torah.

Abraham ibn Ezra (1089-1164) was a scholar and poet who lived in Spain until he was fifty years of age and then spent the balance of his life traveling. Ibn Ezra ("Son of Ezra"), as he is often called, was an astrologer, physician, and grammarian with a special interest in etymology. Like the Rashbam, he concentrated on uncovering the primary meaning of the text while avoiding homiletical interpretation.

Rabbi David Kimchi (1160-1235), known by the acronym Redak or Radak, was the most prominent member of a family of Hebrew grammarians and translators who were originally from Spain but later settled in southern France. Although primarily concerned with grammar and etymology, Radak's commentary often speculates on moral lessons implicit in the stories of the Bible.

Rabbi Moses ben Nachman (1194-1270), often referred to by the Greek name Nachmanides, "son of Nachman," is best known by the acronym Ramban. Born in Gerona, Spain, he spent his last three years in Acre, Palestine. Extremely well versed in languages, the natural sciences, philosophy, and mysticism, Ramban was a scholar's scholar and earned the approbation "the great lion in the lair of lions." Although in his interpretations of Scripture he favored following the literal meaning of the text, he often interjected a rational or mystical explanation.

METHODS OF INTERPRETATION

At the very end of the thirteenth century (1291), the Bible scholar Bachya ben Asher of Saragossa noted that there are four ways of interpreting Scripture. These came to be known by the acronym pardess, spelled "pay, resh, dalet, & samech."

- The "pay" (P) of pardess stands for peshat, meaning "literal explanation of the text." The commentator seeks to explain the plain meaning of the text and no more.
- The "resh" (R) of pardess stands for remez, meaning "allusion, allegory, symbolism." The commentator compares words and phrases in one part of the Bible to similar words and phrases in other parts of the Bible and draws inferences from them.
- The "dalet" (D) of pardess stands for derash, a form of the word midrash, meaning "interpretation." Here the commentator probes beneath the literal meaning of a word or phrase in order to uncover an ethical or moral lesson that is thought to be implicit in the text.

- The samech (S) of pardess stands for sod, meaning "mystery, secret." Kabbalists (mystics) in particular are fond of probing the stories of the Bible to uncover the secrets of the Torah and of life itself.

These methods of interpretation are used in varying degrees and combinations by biblical commentators. The selected verses that follow show how some of these authorities have used these methods of interpretation to resolve obscurities and contradictions in the biblical text and to extract moral lessons from it. The range of interpretation that has been given the Torah by commentators from earliest talmudic times to the present is vast and impressive. And yet, diverse as the interpretations often may be, they are all within the authentic tradition of Judaism.

Thus, it is evident that there are numerous legitimate approaches to achieving an understanding and appreciation of the Torah. The Midrash put it very well long ago when it said, "There are seventy faces [facets] to the Torah." To which other Rabbis have added: Whatever any diligent student offers as an interpretation of the Torah may be considered as if it, too, came from Sinai. Professor Abraham J. Heschel summed it up when he wrote: "Judaism is a minimum of revelation and a maximum of interpretation."

The Torah is alive, compelling, and pertinent to the life of the individual Jew as well as believeing Gentile God-fearer.

EVERY WONDER HOW WE GO SO FAR FROM THE FAITH OF JESUS?

The headlines of our newspapers cry out to us - murder, rape, gang violence, drug related crime, incest, child abuse, divorce, fraud, homosexuality, etc. The financial industries of our country are collapsing at a higher rate than ever before in the history of our nation, including during the depression. Our political, judicial and law enforcement agencies are no longer considered trustworthy by a majority of the population. The inability of the Church to do anything about any of these problems is simply a recognized fact.

Before we begin let me state emphatically that first-century Israel and the Jewish people, people like James, Peter, and Yeshua, would find this condition startling and repulsive. No doubt about it, first-century 2nd Temple Judaism does not hold to many beliefs that Christianity cherishes today, and because of such, were protected from such fruits of apostasy we have today which is directly attributable to Christian doctrines.

Answer for yourself: Could some of the traditional beliefs cherished and held today by traditional Christianity be responsible for the sorry state of affairs we find enumerated above? As far as I am concerned there is no doubt it. Let me prove my point.

Answer for yourself: How did we get here and what can we do about it?

GALLOP POLLS TELL US WE ARE A CHRISTIAN NATION

America is supposed to be a Christian nation, but I must ask you a serious question.

Answer for yourself: If that is the case, with a Church on every corner and Evangelists on every other channel of our televisions, and with the proliferation of the "Christian Gospel"...could it be "the message" of Christianity that has brought about such shameful fruit to the discredit of our Nation as well as Christianity as we see today?

Answer for yourself: How could Christianity evolve into something that would allow such things to happen for so long unabated?

Answer for yourself: Who is to blame for this dilemma?

I recently read a book The Day America Told The Truth by James Patterson and Peter Kim, and I was shocked to find that in a survey taken people were asked across the country to rank 73 occupations for their honesty and integrity. Americans said that the four sleaziest ways to make a living in America are (worst first): (1) Drug dealer (2) Organized crime boss (3) TV evangelist (4) Prostitute. Notice that prostitution was considered a more "honorable" way to make a living than TV preachers and evangelists.

Answer for yourself: How did we get into this sorry shape?

WELL AMERICA'S CONDITION DID NOT HAPPEN OVERNIGHT ...BUT CAN BE TRACED TO 3 THINGS

We have all heard of the "Great Falling Away". First the word "great" is not used in scripture (2Thess.2:3) regarding the "falling away".Second, the term "falling away" is from the Greek "apostasia" from which we get the word apostasy. It means simply "to change doctrine" in a negative way; i.e. from truth to falsehood.

I hate to inform you and those who are yet expecting such a "falling away" in the future, but it has already happened!

Although the falling away from truth was "great", it came subtly and gradually over a period of about 300 years; one doctrine at a time.

It may be surprising to you but the foundation was laid in 325 C.E. with the first Ecumenical Church Council at Nicea and the house was built totally by the 16th century. Three independent decisions, made by four different men who never knew each other, are responsible for the state of affairs that confront us today. These decisions set the stage for the current state of affairs we see today in Christianity and in our nation. The four men who made the very important decisions probably never realized the impact of their actions. As a result of these decisions existing religious belief systems were altered and new beliefs were created.

WHO ARE THESE MEN?

Answer for yourself: Can you guess who these three important men are?

- Yeshua
- Marcion
- Roman Emperor Constantine
- Martin Luther

To their credit or discredit these three men are known for giving mankind a religion. Fundamental to religion is that there cannot be a religion without a revelation. Revelation is a foundational belief of both Judaism and Christianity. The basic concept inherent in any religion is that man's knowledge of God is limited to what God chooses to reveal to man about Himself.

Over time a revelation is written down, combined with other revelations, canonized (becomes a recognized standard) and becomes an authoritative document for a community of people. Your Bible is simply a book which contains a number of different recorded revelations. Religious leaders of both Judaism and Christianity ultimately rely upon a canon as proof for their authority.

History has clearly shown that there have been many challenges to the different groups in authority. However, the number of ways to challenge religious authority are very limited. The challengers are forced to use one or more of the factors below:

HOW TO CHALLENGE AND CHANGE AN EXISTING RELIGIOUS REVELATION

Let me state up-front that the existing religious revelation that was challenged was the religion of Yeshua as it was lived, taught, and spread through the Great Commission unto all the world following the death of Yeshua. I maintain that Sinai faith, the religion of Yeshua, is the goal and standard given by God for all men. Again, upon critical study and inquiry, it can be shown that Biblical Messianic Judaism was the faith once given to the saints which originally went into all the world in fulfillment of the Great Commission and existed until early 4th century before challenged and destroyed by non-Jews. Such actions robbed millions of their rightful heritage that God desired all men have. Let us look deeply into this issue and the dynamics of how it occurred..

- (1) Produce a new revelation
- (2) Change the words of an existing revelation
- (3) Reinterpret the words of an existing revelation
- (4) Physically destroy an existing revelation
- (5) A combination of one or more of the above factors

MARCION BEGINS THE APOSTASY BY CREATING A NEW BIBLE

By the time of the death of the last Jewish apostle following the destruction of the Temple and the dispersion of the Jewish people and leaders, the leadership of the Church had shifted from Jewish men to Gentiles who were basically ignorant of the Jewish culture and the Jewish religious mind set. Don't underestimate the importance of that event. The first challenge to the existing revelation of Yeshua was successfully accomplished by Gentiles who changed the words of existing revelations and reinterpreted these same words. In other words they changed the Hebrew Massoretic Text. The written authority for the Gentile Church leaders was the Septuagint, a Greek translation of the Hebrew Bible, not the Hebrew Bible itself. Numerous questions were raised in the minds of the Gentiles as they read the Greek translation of the Hebrew Bible. With the advent of questions came those who provided the answers. Many of these answers were wrong and biased due to anti-Semitism. History records that previous Hebraic authority was challenged at an increasing rapid pace. As a result, tension between those with conflicting positions escalated (Jew vs. Gentile).

With the appearance of Marcion (the "heretic") a new tactic entered into the arena. Marcion created a new canon of revelations to replace the old Jewish revelation. He decided to do away with what Christians call the Old Testament, Yeshua's Bible. Marcion produced the first "New Testament" and forced the Roman Church leaders to create their own "New Testament" in response to his.

Marcion produced his new canon in 140 C.E., only 100 years after Yeshua, 80 years after Paul and 50 years after John. I have often wondered why he felt the need to create a new "Bible." The answer is that because the Gentile Church leaders could not justify their position as God's "new" appointed leaders from the existing revelation that was given to the Jews, the Jewish Bible of Yeshua, they had to create a "replacement" document which transfers all authority and power to them. Not only that but such a document must label the Jews as "blinded" in order to justify Gentile claims. Such was done and you have such a document in your Holy Bible today if you are a Christian. It is called the New Testament. The Gentile authorities could not use the Hebraic Old Testament to substantiate that they had "replaced" Israel in the plan of God because repeatedly the Jewish Old Testament states the Israel is the chosen people of God and not those as the non-Jews who are "strangers from covenant promised, strangers from the commonwealth of Israel."

The Roman authorities produced their response to Marcion in 150 C.E. Rome's revelation consisted of writings very similar to those found in today's New Testament. However, for many years after the first "New Testament" was created, the decision to include or exclude certain books from it seemed to rest with each local congregation in different areas. For example, some groups decided to include Second Peter and exclude the book of Revelation. Other groups may have decided to do just the opposite. Some accepted Hebrews, others did not. The debate over which books should be included or excluded in the Roman Catholic Canon extended from 150 to 380 C.E. and beyond. Some books were not settled until 1000 C.E. Even though Church leadership officially closed the Catholic Canon in 380 C.E., the debate over the book of Revelation continued until well into the 10th century.

CONSTANTINE AND THE POWER OF THE STATE

It was 55 years before the official closing of the New Testament canon that Roman Emperor Constantine wrestled the control of Christianity from the grip of this loose network of independent Church leaders. These men were powerful religious leaders in their respective regions of Alexandria, Antioch, Constantinople, Rome, Jerusalem, etc.

However, they were completely subject to the Emperor's decisions to give them either peace or cruel persecution. Church leaders were invited to meet with the Emperor at the Council of Nicea in 325 C.E. The announced reason for this gathering was to solve a religious issue which was threatening the Church. Constantine called an assembly of Church leaders and set out to resolve the issue. Constantine relied upon his power as Emperor of Rome (wealth, armies, etc) and his personal revelation from either the God of Israel or the sun god.

Constantine's revelation included the best of the two most influential religions in his empire; Christianity and Mithraism (worship of the Sun god). He saw both the cross and the sun in his vision. We must remember that one way to challenge existing religious authority is through a "new revelation." History recounts for us what Constantine did with his new religious power.

The following summary may be shocking but the truth sets you free.

CONSTANTINE CHANGES THE RELIGION OF YESHUA FOR THE WHOLE WORLD

Answer for yourself: How did Constantine challenge and change the religion of Yeshua and Jewish authority?

- (1) Created a new powerful group to rule the Church (his pagan friends)
- (2) Funded the new group through public funds (taxes)
- (3) Gave the new group judicial power
- (4) Divided the new group into small units which could easily be controlled and kept from rebelling
- (5) Changed the Passover to Easter (Ishtar…a pagan holy day for fertility rites)
- (6) Changed the Sabbath (Jewish and church's day of worship) to Sunday which is the Sun god worshipper's day of worship
- (7) Prohibited the Church from having anything to do with "those detestable Jews or their ways"
- (8) Forbid the celebration of the Festivals of the Lord as had been the current practice of Jews and Christians alike
- (9) Forbid circumcision as a sign of the covenant.
- (10) Prohibited the Jews from making proselytes.

I guess Emperor Constantine failed to realize that Yeshua, Paul, Peter, Jacob (James), John, etc. were all Jews. They all kept Passover and worshipped on the Jewish Sabbath. This might be shocking to you but it would have been a sin for Yeshua to participate in an Ishtar fertility rite (sanctify Easter with his presence) or worship on the day of the Sun god (sanctify Sunday in place of Saturday). Christians to the tune of 2.5 billion do with yearly without such knowledge. God had commanded the Sabbath to be sanctified, not the first day of the week. God rested on the "last" day, not the first, and the early believes obeyed this injunction.

Now comes a truth that might be hard for you to swallow, but if you can get by this you can begin to truly worship God in spirit and in truth, rather than in tradition and ignorance. Yeshua and his apostles were Jews who never renounced their Judaism (the religion that God had given His people and the religion of Israel), they never gave up their Jewish observances or told other Jews to renounce their Judaism in order to become members of a "new Christian Church."

Don't believe me, check it out for yourself. History does not lie. Even though the Gentile leaders of the Church had been working to achieve the same results as Constantine they were unable to accomplish it. What they lacked was the absolute authority of the Roman Emperor.

The Roman Emperor authority model became the model followed by the Roman Catholic Church. The Roman system had councils and senates, but at the peak of the power structure was one man, the Emperor. The Church had its bishops, priests, elders and deacons, but at the peak of its power structure was one man, the Pope. In a short while the Roman Empire along with its Emperor disappeared. However, a new "spiritual Roman Empire" had been created and it still survives today and contains the largest number of Christians in the world.

The pope's voice is considered as the "inerrant and infallible voice of God." The power in the hands of the pope excels that of the gods of Mt. Olympus. He not only had the ability to reward or punish in this life, but could reach beyond the grave. On the one hand the pope could reward a friend with heaven, while on the other sentence an enemy to the fires of hell. If there was any doubt he could hold them in purgatory until he made up his mind. The Roman model prevailed against every major attack until the arrival of Martin Luther and a new model of authority: subjectivism.

MARTIN LUTHER AND SUBJECTIVISM

Martin Luther's decision to reform the Roman Catholic Church wasn't taken lightly. As a matter of fact, Luther soon recognized the immense force that the pope could generate from the Roman Authoritarian Model. When Luther, a Catholic priest, made his decision to bring certain reforms to the Catholic Church he had no intentions of creating a new religion. He liked being a Catholic priest, practiced and taught Catholic doctrines, and actively participated in the Catholic Church. He accepted the Catholic doctrine of salvation and its absolute tie to membership in the Roman Catholic Church. Prior to his showdown with the pope, he had never suggested that there was any other way of salvation.

Luther quickly discovered that the wrath of the pope could only be appeased by his complete submission to Roman Catholic authority. Not giving in, Luther chose to continue his reform activities and soon found himself excommunicated. For a Catholic this is much more serious than simply being "kicked out of church" to a modern Protestant. Luther was no longer "saved." For Luther to regain his salvation he had to successfully challenge the authority of the Catholic Church. In order to do so the following obstacles had to be overcome:

- (1) The absolute power of the pope
- (2) Salvation based on membership in the Catholic Church
- (3) The Catholic priesthood's power forgive sins
- (4) The Catholic priesthood's power interpret the Bible
- (5) The doctrine of Apostolic Succession

We must remember that challenges to religious authority are linked to new revelation (remember Constantine). Luther conveniently received new revelation and this is the summary of what he taught:

- (1) The authority of the Bible replaces the authority of the pope (and remember only the clergy of the times had the scriptures so they held authority over the people)
- (2) Salvation is based on the faith of each believer (mental accent to a creed is enough)
- (3) He created the doctrine of the priesthood of the believer. Everyone could go directly to God for the forgiveness of sins (confession to a priest was no longer necessary)
- (4) Each believer could interpret the Bible himself.

Luther had overcome almost all of the roadblocks of the Catholic Church. However there remained one obstacle and that was the doctrine of Apostolic Succession. The Catholics had taught that Christ transferred his authority to the Apostles and they transferred it to the papacy. From that time forward the authority was passed on from pope to pope. Luther's response was the doctrine of the Holy Spirit residing in every believer. the presence of the Holy Spirit may one an authority! Because of the Holy Spirit's presence each believer could interpret the Bible for himself and the Holy Spirit would keep him from error.

I hope you can see the serious error that was made here. Everyone can have special revelation and who is to challenge it? This is one of the main weaknesses of the Charismatic churches today for everyone goes about saying "God told me" and who is to disagree? Maybe that explains why in Christianity we have 2000 different denominations and no two agree! No doubt about it.

Since everyone can interpret the Bible for himself without any prior understanding of the foundations of his faith, it was only inevitable that the ultimate course of events would ensue.

- (1) The individual was his own ultimate authority
- (2) The individual's faith was a requirement for salvation`
- (3) The individual could go directly to God for forgiveness
- (4) The individual could interpret the Bible
- (5) The individual's authority was from the Holy Spirit

THE PROTESTANT REFORMATION....IN REALITY CONTINUING THE SINS OF THE MOTHER

I am sure that you can easily recognize that abuses can and have come from the practice of millions of people adhering to #1, #4, and #5. The foundation had been laid for the Protestant Reformation (individual's protesting against the Roman Catholic Church). There was an immediate exodus from the Catholic Church and Luther made multitudes of disciples. If you are a Christian you are the fruit of such nonsense!

But something happened that Luther had not expected. Within a very short time Luther's disciples were using their new found "individual freedoms" and personal authority to challenge even Luther. Before long there were two Protestant Churches, then three, four, five, and so on. This new movement had the potential of establishing as many churches as there were individuals. As of now there are 2000 official denominations in the United States.

Answer for yourself: You may ask "what does that mean for me today"?

Authority within a religious organization (church) is unlike that of any other type of organization. Religious authority is determined by and absolutely linked to the ability of the organization to persuade its members that it speaks for God. The followers must be persuaded that the organization has been given the power to communicate God's will. Thus, we go to church.

But with the advent of mass media and the improvement in mass communications, the average church member is today bombarded by many different winds of doctrine from not only TV, radio, but often guest speakers in their churches. No longer do we hear only the lone voice of God. Unfortunately, the selection of a religious authority today is likely made without any considerations as to the leadership's credibility or knowledge of the subject about which he speaks.

Answer for yourself: After all, his is on TV or the radio isn't he?

With the advent of the radio and television, the international electronic church was created, and, everything changed. Suddenly the consumer was being bombarded with countless voices all claiming to be "the voice of God." The only problem was that God seemed to be contradicting Himself as each servant had a different message.

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE FAITH YESHUA'S PRACTICED?

Answer for yourself: What happened to the "the faith once delivered to the saints?"

Answer for yourself: Is there any hope for the religious confusion that confronts us on every side?

Answer for yourself: Who do we believe and what are we to believe with so many conflicting voices out there?

Answer for yourself: Do we find the answers in the Catholic Church as the creation of Constantine or the Protestant Churches which was the legacy of Luther, who, until his death believed and taught in infant baptism for salvation and was still buying people out of hell through indulgences?

Answer for yourself: Where can we go to find the truth concerning the revelation God gave to Israel and which the real Yeshua both lived and believed?

THERE IS HOPE…BUT IT IS UP TO YOU

The solution can only be found when the church returns to the faith of its founder: Yeshua (the Jewish Rabbi). Jews by record numbers are returning to the land of Israel. The Jews who choose to remain in the Diaspora (the exile) also seem to be returning to the practice of their faith. There is also another return taking place, a more startling return than Soviet Jews or Ethiopian Jews returning to Israel. A record number of Christians are returning to Yeshua's teachings, practices and faith. The journey begins with study to determine what truly is the mind of the anointed Rabbi from Galilee.

As Gentiles believers we must return to the original faith of the man to whom we look to for the message and way of our of salvation. Teshuvah (repentance unto truth) occupies a central place in Judaism (the religion of Yeshua). At the root of the notion of teshuvah lies the concept of return to the faith of our fathers. One is to return not only to the past (one's own, or one's ancestors'), but to the Divine source of all being: "You shall return (shavata) to the Lord your God. There must be a standard or guide to direct us as we return. Christianity's ultimate rise or fall, beginning or end is linked to one person - Yeshua. Without Yeshua Christianity would not exist.

Therefore, it is only logical that every Christian doctrine should be compared to Yeshua's position on the subject.

If he had no recorded position we should then turn to the words of those who walked with him on this earth. Yeshua's teachings must become the standard by which every Christian doctrine is to be measured. We must keep this concept continually locked in our minds. We cannot use the Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox or Protestant interpretation of Yeshua's words as "the standard. " We must look through Jewish eyes and view Yeshua's teachings in their proper cultural, historical linguistical context. Only through this process will his words be reattached to their original meanings and only then can we be assured we have the truth.

Bet Emet is devoted to the restoration of the Early Church's Belief System to modern Christianity. It will be the goal of this ministry to help Gentile Christians rediscover the faith of Yeshua and his apostles. Gentile converts to the Yeshua Movement were first taught the laws of the movement. Their first lesson consisted of the seven "Noachide Laws": idolatry, blasphemy, unchastity, bloodletting, robbery, eating the flesh of still-living animals, and justice. Every Gentile entering the Yeshua Movement was obligated to obey the Noachide Laws. Their next lesson was to become "God-Fearers. " In addition to living up to the seven Noachide laws, they were expected to obey the Ten Commandments, observe the Sabbath, abstain from outrageous behavior, and pay the Temple tax. Though not admitted to sacrifices, they could take part in rituals and ceremonies. However, they did not have to be circumcised. This is it in a nutshell. Now all one must do is investigate what the above entails and then pattern their lives and faith around their discovery. I have along with millions who know something is desperately wrong with Christianity today.

It is logical that the Apostolic Church of Jerusalem should accept the view of the Synagogue on the conditions which Gentiles needed to fulfill in order to be saved. It can easily be shown that, according to Jewish opinion, the fulfillment of other commandments of Judaism was not prohibited to Gentiles. On the contrary, the Noachide precepts were only seen as minimal condition for Gentiles to be recognized as God-Fearers. They were so understood by the God-Fearers themselves, who were attracted to the Jewish way of life and accepted many Jewish commandments without becoming full Proselytes. This was also the attitude of Christian God-Fearers, as may be seen from the Epistle to the Galatians; as many of them wished to observe as many Jewish precepts as they could. It is evident that, while leadership of the Mother Church decided to lay no burden upon the-Gentile believers beyond the Noachide precepts (Acts 10:28-29), it did not object to their voluntary observing more. After all the years of study I am convinced that Yeshua did not create a new religion that was either authoritarianism or subjectivism. Yeshua did not replace Judaism with something else. He worked to purify the lives of the Jewish people by bringing them back to the Torah, God's will.

Neither Yeshua or any of his Apostles preached anything related to any salvation messages preached today.

He simply called God's people back to their faith through repentance and resultant obedience to the commandments of God. Modern Christianity intellectual concept of salvation is one of the most destructive forces ever released on the face of the earth. It attracted millions of adherents who believe that they are "no longer under the Law." Such was never the message of Yeshua and he would be horrified to hear what is preached in his name today. Please don't confuse Subjectivism with grace. Many have been taught that they belong to "the new spiritual Israel," the replacement for the old Israel. Too often we forget that God made a covenant with the Jews "Berit Olam"-forever. Many say that God ended his relationship with Israel because of their disobedience. The fact of the matter is that the spiritual and moral condition of the Church today makes ancient Israel look spotless. According to Paul, Gentile Christians were grated onto the Olive Tree of Israel, not the opposite. Jews were never to be grafted into the Gentile church. As Gentile Christians we must not only recognize the position of Israel to God, but we must establish a relationship (be grafted into) with God's people. The Shofar is beginning to sound and the Church is being called back to the faith of the Jewish Rabbi Yeshua. It is time for us to know his God, his people and his land. I hope you enjoy your journey as we both discover our "Origins".

Now you know how it happened. Not a pretty story to say the least, but until you have the facts repentance is not possible for you. Until you have the facts obedience is not possible for you. The Christian Church continually talks of grace, grace. I maintain it is God's grace to reveal this apostasy and allow us to repent of our errors and sins of religious ignorance, and return to the faith once given to the saints. Shalom.

ever wonder how we got so far from the faith of jesus?

netfirms | Web Hosting by Netfirms | Free Domain Names by Netfirms

IN VAIN HAS YOUR CHURCH LED YOU IN THE WORSHIP OF JESUS?

In this article, we shall demonstrate that most of the practices of today's Gentile "Christianity" as well as most of it's beliefs were "borrowed" from the ancient Spiritual Wisdom religions. As the reader will by now have become accustomed, this will be proven through the writings of Christians themselves. We shall demonstrate how all of these practices and beliefs were well established among many other ancient mystery religions centuries before the arrival of Paul and his "visions".

The expanse of land between the river Nile and the river Euphrates was home to the Jews for centuries before the time given for the supposed birth of this Jesus of Nazareth. During this period, this land fell under the rule of many empires, including the Babylonians, the Persians, and the Romans, all of whom themselves had extensive contact with many other cultures and beliefs. Before that even we find the Jews highly influenced by their extended stay in ancient Egypt. Needless to say; the Jewish people could not help to have been influenced by the religions of the nations in which they pilgrimaged as a people. We shall see in what follows that the religion of Jesus was highly influenced through the influence of all of these cultures and beliefs and how it now bears characteristics of many of these religions, including Buddhism, Roman and Greek worship, Hinduism, Persian and Egyptian beliefs, in addition to Judaism and many others.

The following information has been obtained from Bible Myths And Their Parallels In Other Religions by T. W. Doane. I recommend every Christian read it.

HOW FAR OFF ARE WE?

The general impression among Christians today is that the difference between today's "Christianity" and Paganism is so great that any similarity between them is scarcely recognizable.

Answer for yourself: What is "paganism" that the Christian religion so strongly denounces? Well, in reality, it is the proper understanding of the Christian religion. Let me explain.

Paganism can be rightly understood as the "metaphysical" understanding of all world religions; even Christianity. Paganism is a religion of nature, in other words Pagans revere Nature as the laboratory of God. The invisible things of God are revealed by the visible things of God. We only need to look at Nature to see behind the "veil" and see the workings of God that all operate according to a "pattern".

Rom 1:20 20 For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse: (KJV)

Pagans see the divine as immanent in the whole of life and the universe; in every tree, plant, animal and object, man and woman and in the dark side of life as much as in the light. Pagans live their lives attuned to the cycles of Nature, the seasons, the cycles of birth, life, death, and rebirth. It is the wheel of life. Unlike the patriarchal religions (Christianity, Islam, Judaism) the divine is female as well as male and therefore there is a Goddess as well as a God. Only only has to look at the Hebrew words for God and we find both "feminine" and "masculine" names for this same God. The book of Proverbs clearly states:

Prov 1:20 20 Wisdom crieth without; she uttereth her voice in the streets: (KJV)

The Goddess represents all that is female and the God represents all that is male. But because nature is seen as female the Goddess has a wider meaning. Often called Mother Earth or Gaia she is seen as the creatrix and sustainer of life, the mother of us all which makes all the creatures on the planet our siblings. These deities or divine "forces" and "powers" are throughout the whole cosmos as well as within us and without us (immanent); they are constantly working in this "matter" we call flesh. They are us. They are not simply substitutes for the Muslim or Judeo-Christian God. This is because the Gods of the major religions tend to be super-natural i.e. above nature whereas Pagan deities are seen in nature, symbolizing aspects of nature or human nature. Having said that God and Goddess are split from the Great Spirit or Akashka which equates to the God of the patriarchal religions.

The more knowledgeable a Christian becomes with today's "Christianity", the more they realize that Christianity is the end result of a continuous effort to foist upon the Jewish Faith and the "Mind of Christ" as expressed through the Jewish Faith the "literalized" and "materialized" divine truths of the ancient religions termed "paganism" by Rome. Such a "buzz word" has been so conditioned by Rome that when one heres this term he is automatically conditioned to think "bad" or "evil" when such is not the case.

The great luminary of the Church, Saint Augustine himself (354-430 AD.), is quoted to have said

"The same thing which is now called CHRISTIAN RELIGION existed among the ancients. They have begun to call Christian the true religion which existed before".

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that?

"Our love for what is old, our reverence for what our fathers used, makes us keep still in the church, and on the very altar cloths, symbols which would excite the smile of an Oriental, and lead him to wonder. Why do we send missionaries to his land, while cherishing his faith in ours" ...James Bonwick from Egyptian Religion

Answer for yourself: Where to start? There is so much to say. The examples are so numerous. Why not start with the very symbol of Christianity itself: the cross.

THE CROSS:

Current historical knowledge recognizes the fact that the cross was well recognized as a religious symbol long before the advent of the first century and the Roman use of crucifixion. It was adored in India as the symbol of the Hindu god Agni, the "light of the world". It was placed in the hands of Siva, Brahma, Vishnu, Krishna, Tvashtri, and Jama. The cross was also well known among the Buddhists from ancient times and the followers of Lama of Thibet.

The ancient Egyptians also adopted the cross as a religious symbol of their gods. Countless Egyptians drawings depict themselves holding crosses in their hands. Among them, the Egyptian savior Horus is depicted holding a cross in his hand. He is also depicted as an infant sitting on his other's knee with a cross on the seat they occupy. The most common of the crosses used by these pagan Egyptians, the CRUX ANSATA, was later adopted by the Christians The Egyptian savior, Osiris, the Egyptian god of the dead and the underworld, is sometimes represented holding out this cross to mortals signifying that this person has discarded mortality for the life to come. Another cross has been unearthed in Ireland. It belongs to the cult of the Persian god of the sun "Mithra" and bears a crucified effigy. The Greeks and Romans too adopted the cross as their religious symbol many centuries before Christianity did the same. An ancient inscription in Tessaly is accompanied by a Calvary cross. More crosses can be found to adorn the tomb of king Midas in Phrygia. The examples are far too numerous to list here, however, anyone wishing to learn more is encouraged to read the books mentioned above.

Early depictions on Jesus usually showed Jesus in the form of a shepherd carrying a lamb. Tertullian (140-230 CE), a Montanist heretic, commented in his essay De Corona: "At every forward step and movement, at every going in and out, when we put on our our clothes and shoes, when we bathe, when we sit at table, when we light the lamps, on couch, on seat, in all the ordinary actions of daily life, we trace upon the forehead the sign." This might be an early reference to individuals tracing the sign of the cross on their body.

The use of the cross as a symbol was condemned by at least one church father of the 3rd century CE because of its ancient origins. The first appearance of a cross in Christian art is on a Vatican sarcophagus from the mid-5th Century (B.M. Metzger, M.D. Coogan, "The Oxford Companion to the Bible," Oxford University Press, (1993), Page 57). It was a Greek cross with equal-length arms. Jesus' body was not shown.

Answer for yourself: Why not before? Can you imagine 500 years passing before the use of a cross in Christianity if this Jesus actually was crucified "literally" on a cross?

The first crucifixion scenes didn't appear in Christian art until the 7th century CE.

Think about that. Seven hundred years before Jesus was depicted on the "old rugged cross".

The original cross symbol was in the form of a Tau Cross. It was so named because it looked like the letter "tau", or our letter "T". One author speculates that the Church may have copied the symbol from the Pagan Druids who made crosses in this form to represent the god Thau (B.G. Walker, The Woman's Encyclopaedia, op cit, Page 188-190). They joined two limbs from oak trees. The Tau cross became associated with St. Philip who was allegedly crucified on such a cross in Phrygia. May Day, a major Druidic seasonal day of celebration, became St. Philip's Day. Later in Christian history, the Tau Cross became the Roman Cross that we are familiar with today.

The shape of the original crucifixion device is a matter for speculation. Sometimes, the Romans executed people on a Tau cross, sometimes on a Roman cross and sometimes on a simple stake. The gospels, which were originally written in Greek, use the word "stauros" to refer to the execution structure (Mark 15:21, Mark 15:32, Matthew 27:32, Luke 23:26, John 19:17). This appears as the word "cross" in all but one of the English versions of the New Testament. But in reality, the Greek word "stauros" means a vertical pole without a crossbar.

The New World Translation, sponsored by the Watchtower Bible & Tract Society, translates the word as "torture stake." Hermann Fulda, author of The Cross and Crucifixion has said:

- the description of Jesus' suffering during the last hours of life indicates that he was crucified on a stake rather than a cross.
- that some of the writings of the early church fathers confirms the use of a pole.
- that the very earliest depictions of Jesus' crucifixion in Christian art show him on a stake.

"From its simplicity of form, the cross has been used both as a religious symbol and as an ornament, from the dawn of man's civilization. Various objects, dating from periods long anterior to the Christian era, have been found, marked with crosses of different designs, in almost every part of the old world" (The Encyclopædia Britannica, 11th Edition, Vol. VII, Page 506).

The cross symbol was found in:

- Scandinavia: The Tau cross symbolized the hammer of the God Thor.
- Babylon: the cross with a crescent moon was the symbol of their moon deity.
- Assyria: the corners of the cross represented the four directions in which the sun shines.
- India: In Hinduism, the vertical shaft represents the higher, celestial states of being; the horizontal bar represents the lower, earthly states.
- Egypt: The ankh cross (a Tau cross topped by an inverted tear shape) is associated with Maat, their Goddess of Truth. It also represents the sexual union of Isis and Osiris.
- Europe: The use of a human effigy on a cross in the form of a scarecrow has been used from ancient times. In prehistoric times, a human would be sacrificed and hung on a cross. The sacrifice would later be chopped to pieces; his blood and pieces of flesh were widely distributed and buried to encourage the crop fertility.

As we can see there is much doubt as to the "literal" and "historical" understanding of the "crucifixion of the Christ". Only only has to do more study into many of these ancient origins of "the cross" and the "crucifixion of God" to see that is has a metaphysical origin whereby Divine cosmic energy, as Spirit, descends through "planes" of existences in its descent into "matter". Each "crossing" for plane to plane, from level to level, as God "humbles himself and takes upon the likeness of matter" in its various manifestations, was termed a "crossification" by the ancients or the crucifixion of God on the cross. This "cross" was symbolized not only in nature but in the Heavens. One has only to study the article "The Sun Dies On The Cross....To Be Later Personified Into The Son That Dies On The Cross" to see it in its entirety.

THE TRINITY:

Now let us note that the word "Trinity" does not appear anywhere in the Bible at all, certainly such an important doctrine would at least be mentioned by Jesus if it was part of his teachings. Actually it is to be found all through the Bible; we just don't recognize what we are reading because we are not enlightened to the metaphysical meanings of the stories that we mistakenly read as if "literal" or "historical" events. The roots of the Trinity go all the way back to the ancient Egyptian religion. The Christian "Trinity", as defined in the creed of Nicea (325 AD), is a merging of three distinct entities into one single entity, while remaining three distinct entities. We are told to speak of the three gods as one god. The are considered to be co-eternal, co-substantial, and co-equal. However, only the first was self existent. The others preceded from the first. This sort of self-contradictory philosophical warping of divine concepts has it's roots not in the inspiration of God, but in Rome's rejection of this ancient "paganism" that it has sadly taught the world to despise. Rome has succeeded in so misrepresenting these ancient metaphysical Mystery Religions and Sacred Sciences of the ancients that today most Christians consider any such information from these eras to be worthless and to be cast upon the trash heap of "paganism". Amazingly, when you study, we find that most ancient religions were built upon some sort of threefold distinction as Rome teaches; only not viewed as if "literal" or "historical". Deities were always trinities of some kind or consisted of successive emanation in threes.

In India we find the doctrine of the divine trinity called "Tri-murti" (Three-forms) consisting of Brahma, Vishnu, and Siva. It is an inseparable unity though three in form. Worshipers are told to worship them as one deity. Such concepts posed no problem to the logic of an ancient Indian worshipper since they were already used to worshipping gods with the body of a man and the head of an elephant, or gods with six arms, and so forth.

The Brahmas also have their trinity. In their trinity, Vajrapani, Manjusri, and Avalokitesvara form a divine union of three gods into one god called "Buddha". The citizens of China and Japan also worship Buddha, but they know him as "Fo". When they worship him they say "Fo, is one god but has three forms".

Sir William Jones says: "Very respectable natives have assured me, that one or two missionaries have been absurd enough to in their zeal for the conversion of the Gentiles, to urge that the Hindoos were even now almost Christians; because their Brahma, Vishnu, and Mahesa (Siva), were no other than the Christian Trinity"(Bible myths and their parallels in other religions, p. 370.)

An ancient Indian sculpture embodying a three-headed "god" is depicted in Mr. Doane's book (page 371), it was taken from "a very ancient granite" in the museum at the "Indian house" and was dug from the ruins of a temple in the island of Bombay.

The ancient Egyptians also worshipped a trinity. Their symbol of a wing, a globe, and a serpent is supposed to have stood for the different attributes of their god.

The Greeks also had their trinities. When making their sacrifices to their gods, they would sprinkle holy water on the alter THREE times, they would then sprinkle the people THREE times also. Frankincense was then taken with THREE fingers and strewed upon the alter THREE times. All of this was done because the oracle had proclaimed that all sacred things ought to be in THREES. Remember that the philosophy of these people (The Greeks) is what was primarily responsible for defining the Christian "Trinitarian" nature of God. This was done through the writings of the great Greek philosopher Plato regarding his "Logos" ("word"). Further, remember that the Gospels of the Bible were named the "Greek Gospels" for a reason; because they were written in their language and based upon their philosophy. T. W. Doane says: "The works of Plato were extensively studied by the Church Fathers, one of whom joyfully recognizes in the great teacher, the schoolmaster who, in the fullness of time, was destined to educate the heathen for Christ, as Moses did the Jews. The celebrated passage: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word Was God" is a fragment of some Pagan treatise on the Platonic philosophy, evidently written by Irenaeus. It is quoted by Amelius, a Pagan philosopher as strictly applicable to the Logos, or Mercury, the Word, apparently as an honorable testimony borne to the Pagan deity by a barbarian.....We see then that the title "Word" or "Logos", being applied to Jesus, is another piece of Pagan amalgamation with Christianity. It did not receive its authorized Christian form until the middle of the second century after the time for the Christian Christ. The ancient pagan Romans worshipped a Trinity. An oracle is said to have declared that there was 'First God, then the Word, and with them the Spirit'. Here we see the distinctly enumerated, God, the Logos, and the Holy Spirit or Holy Ghost, in ancient Rome, where the most celebrated temple of this capital - that of Jupiter Capitolinus - was dedicated to three deities, which three deities were honored with joint worship". From Bible Myths And Their Parallels In Other Religions, pp. 375-376.

Trinities were not confined to these groups alone, but the Persians, the Assyrians, the Phenicians, the Scandanavians, the Druids, the inhabitants of Siberia, the ancient Mexicans, the Peruvians, and many others, all worshipped "Trinitarian" pagan deities long before the council of Nicea of 325 AD. officially recognized this to be God's "true" nature.

Behind all these "trinities" we find pure metaphysics.

Ancient Egypt taught that the essence of all Creation is a Duality which is yet a Unity of "the One". To achieve unity, we must put the pieces together. To accomplish such an objective, Egypt taught that a person needed to study, know, and realize the essence of all creation that is Dualism. The world, as we know it, from the smallest particle to the largest planet, is kept in balance by a law that is based on the balanced dual nature of all things (wholes, units). Without polarized dualities, there would be no creation, i.e. no universe. Among noticeable polarized pairs are: male and female, odd and even, negative and positive, active and passive, yes and no, true and false, etc. Each pair represents a different aspect of the same fundamental principle of polarity. And each aspect partakes of the nature of unity and of the nature of duality. Adam is the Perfect Person who combines both the male and female principles. That is why the female part of Adam had to be removed. The nature of duality is best expressed in the Ancient Egyptian text, known as the Bremner-Rhind Papyrus: "I was anterior to the Two Anteriors that I made, for I had priority over the Two Anteriors that I made, for my name was anterior to theirs, for I made them anterior to the Two Anteriors...". The dual principle in the creation state was expressed in the pair of Shu and Tefnut. The pair of Shu and Tefnut. These were Ra's/God's children. Shu is the god of air and is depicted as being the god who held up the sky and the goddess of dew and rain was Tenfut. They were likened to be husband and wife, is the characteristic Egyptian way of expressing duality and polarity of cosmic powers, forces, and spirits. This dual nature was manifested in Ancient Egyptian texts and traditions. The most ancient known texts of the Old Kingdom (ca. 4500 years ago), namely the Unas Funerary (Pyramid) Texts §1652, express this dual nature: "and though (God) didst spit out as Shu, and didst spit out as Tefnut". This is a very powerful analogy, because we use the term, spitting image to mean exactly like the origin. In the Ancient Egyptian texts, Shu and Tefnut are described as the ancestors of all the neteru (gods/goddesses/forces/powers/spirits) who begat all beings in the universe. All of the Ancient Egyptian accounts of creation exhibit well defined, clearly demarcated stages, as detailed in several Ancient Egyptian texts. The principle of dualism is also found in our perception of the universe. It seems that there are basically two aspects of the universe: the physical that we can sense, and the metaphysical that we don't see and hear; not because it does not exist but because its frequency and vibration is outside the range of what our senses can detect. There is no distinction between a metaphysical state of being and one with a material body, as now accepted in scientific circles, since Einstein's relativity theory; that matter is a form of energy, a coagulation or condensation of energy. As such, the universe is basically a hierarchy of energies, at different orders of density. Our senses are most familiar with matter—the densest form of energy. This matrix of energies came as a result of the initial act of creation and the subsequent effects of the Big Bang that created the universe. This matrix consists of an organized hierarchy. Each level of the hierarchy of existence is a theophany—a creation by the consciousness of the level of being above it. The self-contemplation by each stage of existence brings into being each lower stage. As such, the hierarchy of energies is interrelated, and each level is sustained by the level below it. This hierarchy of energies is set neatly into a vast matrix of deeply interfaced natural laws. It is both physical and metaphysical. After creation that separated this Unity the sole purpose of life is the reconciliation of these Dualities Into THE ONE. Ancient Egypt called this the "Tying/Untying the Knot".

In order for the mystical seeker to find the Divine Essence, one must progress in the reverse sequence of creation. In other words, the soul's progress in the journey along the Path is the upward movement from the sphere of the manifested created world, by reconstructing/reassembling the pieces into one unit again—as it was prior to the Big Bang that created the world. The active faculties of the Perfected Man, one who has experiences "enlightenment", or as the Bible states, "born again", is to use the "awakened Divine Mind" within him to unite once again these dual aspects of himself and the the manifested world. This theme permeates Ancient Egypt, whereby both Heru/Horus (the Krst/Christ) and Tehuti are depicted in numerous places, performing the symbolic act of uniting The Two Lands. Egypt is known as the "two lands"; an upper and lower Egypt. Man, like Egypt, has a higher and lower "self". It is the function of the "birthed Christ" in man, the product of the union of these two Dual Living Energies in man, to unite flesh and Spirit into this Unity that is exampled in God. These "two lands" had actually nothing to do with physical soil. Rather, these "two lands" are within mankind. The "two lands" represent the two earthly realms, where we exist in one, and each's twin of the opposite sex exists in the outer. The two "twins" are subject to the same experiences from the time of birth to the time of death. In other words, the two represent the perfect mirror image of God. To be married (flesh and Spirit) is to tie the knot, just like the Ancient Egyptian symbolic rite of uniting The Two Lands. Harmonizing the opposites is tying the balanced polarities in a marriage-type form. Everything in Ancient Egypt is about the marriage of balanced polarities. When apparent opposites are reconciled (through intellect and intuition), the mystical seeker becomes complete, transcends the bounds of ordinary humanity, and becomes immensely powerful. When tying two polarized opposites, thereby birthing a 3rd Living Energy within him (trinity), the mystic is making the two parts into one. This births the "3rd power in man" known as the Trinity or "Krst/Christ" Mind. The Bible portrays this in the immersion of Jesus which is the symbolic representation of being "born again"; the water representing both a "womb" and "death" from which one enters and emerges "anew". This is the "new creature" of Paul where he admonishes people to:

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

As you see, the whole purpose of this "new birth" above our animal nature and fleshly being is that we can "walk" in live not as fools but wise as the gods. In other words, to tie is to resolve the apparent differences, i.e. to find that opposites are two sides of the same coin. It is to realize the Divinity resides in man both in "matter" and "spirit". Each pair represents a different aspect of the same fundamental principle of polarity of cosmic forges And each aspect partakes of the nature of unity and of the nature of duality. When the mystical seeker reaches the second level of consciousness, he recognizes the dual principle in everything in the universe. He like Paul says, has "awakened from the dead".

The third and final level of consciousness is reached when the mystical seeker finds that the dual nature of a thing is the thing itself—the Two are One. In other words, God is in "matter" as He is "in Spirit". Instead of a warfare between the two, the two are to become "one" and does so by the uniting of these two powers into one harmonious unity. The simplest illustration of this level is the examples of harmonizing/reconciling apparent opposites whereby the observer comes to realize that there is no distinction between: "Sacred and mundane". A good example is the saying, "one reaps what one sows". On a mundane level, it describes the farming process. But on a sacred level, it means that good deeds will result in fruitful results. In reality, there is no difference between sacred and mundane interpretations. Also, another is the duality between "physical and metaphysical"; to see a thing (with eyesight) and to see what the same thing signifies (with intellect and intuition). Again, "inner and outer realities"; to discover how the human being is a miniature universe, and that all the powers that operate in the universe are also operating within each one of us. The essence of the Egyptian mystical progression is based on the premise that man is the microcosm in which all attributes are united. This higher consciousness is in truth "the resurrection of God's Christ" in you. This metaphysical reality has been sadly limited to a "physical" and "literal" interpretation but the real truth behind it, especially when the historical Jesus cannot be found outside of Christian forgeries, is that this "Jesus Story" is the personification of a metaphysical reality and no more. Such has been the interpretation of the ancient nations and their metaphysical understandings of their religious mysteries since time began. Only in the 2nd through the 5th century has Rome so defaced it and rejected it that a substitute and replacement religion has taken its place.

CHRISTMAS:

Let us now move on to the "birthday of Jesus", Christmas. Jesus is commonly considered to have been born on the 25th of December. However, it is common knowledge among Christian scholars that the date for his birth could not have been December 25th. It is well known that the first Christian churches in ancient history held the festival commemorating the supposed birth of this Jesus in May, April, or January. Scholars of the first two centuries AD. even differ in which year he was supposedly born. Some believing that he was born fully twenty years before the current accepted date.

Answer for yourself: So how was the 25th of December selected as the birthday of Jesus?

Grolier's encyclopedia says:

"Christmas is the feast of the birth of Jesus Christ, celebrated on December 25.... Despite the beliefs about Christ that the birth stories expressed, the church did not observe a festival for the celebration of the event until the 4th century.... since 274, under the emperor Aurelian, Rome had celebrated the feast of the "Invincible Sun" on December 25. In the Eastern Church, January 6, a day also associated with the winter solstice, was initially preferred. In course of time, however, the West added the Eastern date as the Feast of the Epiphany, and the East added the Western date of Christmas"

Answer for yourself: So who else celebrated the 25th of December as the birth day of their gods before it was agreed upon as the birth day of Jesus?

- Well, there are the people of India who rejoice, decorate their houses with garlands, and give presents to their friends on this day. The people of China also celebrate this day and close their shops. The pagan god Buddha is believed to have been born on this day when the "Holy Ghost" descended on his virgin mother Maya. The great savior and god of the Persians, Mithras, is also believed to have been born on the 25th of December long before the coming of Jesus.

- The Egyptians celebrated this day as the birth day of their great savior Horus, the Egyptian god of light and the son of the "virgin mother" and "queen of the heavens" Isis. Osiris, god of the dead and the underworld in Egypt, the son of "the holy virgin", again was believed to have been born on the 25th of December.
- The Greeks celebrated the 25th of December as the birthday of Hercules, the son of the supreme god of the Greeks, Zeus, through the mortal woman Alcmene. Bacchus, the god of wine and revelry among the Romans (known among the Greeks as Dionysus) was also born on this day.
- Adonis, revered as a "dying-and-rising god" among the Greeks, miraculously was also born on the 25th of December. His worshipers held him a yearly festival representing his death and resurrection, in midsummer. The ceremonies of his birth day are recorded to have taken place in the same cave in Bethlehem which is claimed to have been the birth place of Jesus.
- The Scandinavians celebrated the 25th of December as the birth day of their god Freyr, the son of their supreme god of the heavens, Odin.
- The Romans observed this day as the birth day of the god of the sun, Natalis Solis Invicti ("Birthday of Sol the invincible"). There was great rejoicing and all shops were closed. There was illumination and public games. Presents were exchanged, and the slaves were indulged in great liberties. Remember, these are the same Romans who would later preside over the council of Nicea (325 AD.) which lead to the official Christian recognition of the "Trinity" as the "true" nature of God, and the "fact" that Jesus was born on the 25th of December too.

In Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, Gibbon says:

"The Roman Christians, ignorant of his (Christ's) birth, fixed the solemn festival to the 25th of December, the Brumalia, or Winter Solstice, when the Pagans annually celebrated the birth of Sol" vol. ii, p. 383.

Christmas is not the only Christian festival which was borrowed from ancient religions and foisted upon the religion of this Jewish Jesus. There is also Easter, the Feast of St. John, the Holy communion, the Annunciation of the virgin, the assumption of the virgin, and many others have their roots in ancient Spiritual wisdom. What was "metaphysical" later became "literal" and "historical" to the creators of the "Jesus Story". Since we can not get into the details here, therefor, the interested reader is encouraged to read about them in the books mentioned above.

GENERAL SIMILARITIES WITH PAGANISM:

As we have seen, the common thread among most of these pagan sects is their worship of the sun as their deity and their selection of the Winter Solstice (25th of December) as the time of the birth of their supreme god. The winter Solstice is the time of year when the sun would reach it's last stage of decline and once again begin to rise and become "re-born".

Let us not forget that God allowed man to look at the Sun as His teacher:

Rom 1:20 20 For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse: (KJV)

This rise would continue until day and night become equal in length. At this point, the god of the sun would appear to be at a stand off with the "prince of darkness" (darkness being evil, the "dark evil" or the "d-evil" or the "devil" of the Bible). This would occur at the Vernal equinox, or Easter. This situation, however, would not last for long, as the god of the sun would triumph after Easter, and days would become longer than nights.

We notice that the church too received divine "inspiration" that Jesus, as a supposed "literal" and "historical" person was also born on the 25th of December, and also that he too "triumphed over the prince of darkness" on Easter day, just as the pagan gods of the Greeks and Romans had done centuries before. Behind what we mistakenly believe is "literal" history is metaphysics. Remember, the Pagan Romans were the rulers of the Christians and took it upon themselves to "preserve" Christianity. Let us have a brief look at the popular beliefs of the pagan Gentiles who would later take it upon themselves to spread his religion to the world:

Attis:

The pagan god Attis was the son of the virgin Nana. He was the "savior" and "only begotten son". His blood was believed to have renewed the fertility of the earth. As such, he was a symbol of immortality. He was believed to have died on March 24th and been resurrected shortly thereafter. Sacramental meals and baptism of blood were features of his church.

Adonis aka Tammuz:

He was born of a virgin and was the "savior" of Syria. He died in redemption for mankind and was later resurrected in the spring.

Dionysus or Bacchus:

He was the "only begotten son" of Jupiter, the king of the gods of the Romans and the lord of life and death (For the Greeks, his father was the almighty Zeus). He was named the god of wine and revelry. Dionysus died at the hands of the Titans, who tore him apart, roasted the pieces, and began to eat them. At that point Zeus intervened, saved some of the pieces, and had Apollo bury them at Delphi. There, it was believed, Dionysus arose from the dead. He said to mankind "It is I who guide you; it is I who protect you, and who save you; I am Alpha and Omega". He was slain for redeeming humanity and was called "the slain one", "the sin bearer", and "the redeemer". In celebrating his festival, his worshippers would observe the "sparagmos": the tearing apart of a live animal, the eating of its flesh, and the drinking of its blood; participants believed they were in fact partaking of the god's body and blood. Plays were also staged at these festivals. Wine had a central place at his festivals.

Answer for yourself: Does any of this sound familiar?

Answer for yourself: Do we dare to think that accounts possibly were "fabricated" by the early Gentile Church to make this Jewish Yeshua more acceptable when clothed in Gentile "garb?"

Baal aka Bel:

He was the sun god of Babylon. The story of his life and his passion play is almost an exact carbon copy of that of Yeshua . Called the lord of the universe, he was killed by monsters but restored to life. His death and resurrection were celebrated annually as a part of Canaanite fertility rituals.

Osiris:

He was the Egyptian's god of the dead and the underworld, born of the "virgin of the world" on the 29th of December. He preached gentleness and peace. Wine and corn were both his discoveries. He was betrayed by Typhen, slain and dismembered. He remained in hell for three days and three nights. He would be the judge of mankind in a future life.

Mithras aka Mithra:

He was the sun god of the Persians and the son of a virgin. He was born on the 25th of December. Christmas and Easter were two of the most important festivals of his church. His worshipers observed baptism, confirmation, and Eucharist supper at which time they would partake of their "God" in the form of bread and wine.

Krishna:

The Indian god Krishna too bears a tremendous resemblance to Yeshua in the story of his mission and his divinity. He was the incarnation of the Indian's supreme god Vishnu (the preserver and protector of the world) in the womb of Devaki. Upon his birth, a great chorus of angles proclaimed "In the delivery of this favored woman, nature shall have cause to exalt". His birth was indicated by a star in heaven. Although of royal blood, he was born in a cave. He was presented with gifts of sandalwood and perfumes. His foster father was told to flee and hide him lest king Kansa might take his life.

King Kansa had ordered all male infants born on that night to be slain. One of his first miracles was the healing of a leper. He was later slain and this resulted in an eclipse of the sun and a black circle forming around the moon. Spirits were seen on all sides and he descended into hell, rose again, and ascended into heaven with many people being witnesses to his bodily accent. He will have a "second coming" in the future which his followers continue await.

There are countless other similarities with what is known today as "Christianity" even though his religion was well establish centuries before the birth of Yeshua . The accounts of Krishna's childhood agree quite closely with the apocryphal accounts of Yeshua's childhood. In the ancient epic poems, Krishna is simply regarded as a great hero, it was not until about the 4th century BC that he was elevated to the position of a god.

Answer for yourself: Is all of this a mere coincidence?

Buddha:

Both books mentioned above have compiled a very detailed comparison of the legends of both Yeshua and Buddha. The similarities are astounding. T.W. Doane has gone so far as to dedicate an entire chapter to this comparison, including a 48 point side-by-side narration from the time of their birth till the end of their lives on earth. Their conception, birth, mission, miracles, temptation, preaching, worship, prophesies, death, ascension, divineness, judgment of mankind, and many other matters are almost word-for- word exact carbon copies of one another. Dr. Ansari records in his book the following words of the eminent Christian scholar S. M. Melamed: "Yet the fact remains that Buddhist canons were already known to the Western world before the coming of Yeshua. Today hardly any Indologist of note denies the organic connection between the two redemptive religions. So close is the connection between them that even the details of the miracles recorded between Buddhism and Christianity are the same. Of Buddha, too, it was told that he fed five hundred men with one loaf of bread, that he cured lepers and caused the blind to see". As far back as 1884, a German historian of religion by the name of Rudolph Seydel published a very detailed study demonstrating that all of the tales, miracles, similes, and proverbs of the Christian Bible have their counterparts in the much more ancient Buddhastic gospel.

T.W. Doane, the author of Bible Myths observes that even though Buddha has been elevated today to the position of God, still, Mr. Doane observes that "There is no reason to believe that he ever arrogated to himself any higher authority than that of a teacher of religion, but as in modern factions, there were readily found among his followers those who carried his peculiar tenets much further than their founder. These, not content with lauding during his life-time the noble deeds of their teacher, exalted him, within a quarter of a century after his death to a place among their deities - worshipping as a god one they had known only as a simple hearted, earnest, truth-seeking philanthropist". Once again, this conforms exactly to the vision of that God whereby He selects prophets from every nation on earth (not just the Jews) and sends them to their people (and only to their people) to return them to the true worship of God alone, and that after their departure, their followers would not be content with themselves until they had managed after the death of their prophet to totally corrupt what he had come to preach to them and even to go so far as to make this prophet himself the object of their pagan worship..

We will notice that when ancient poems and writings of such people prove that Buddha started out simply as a "religious teacher" and never claimed for himself divine attributes, then we will readily conclude that his followers have corrupted his original teachings. However, when the same is discovered in the early Christian writings of the first three centuries A.D. regarding Yeshua, now these writings are labeled "apocryphal" lies. They "blaspheme the Lord Yeshua". "How could anyone ever dare say such a thing about our god Yeshua?" they will ask. And this is the exact same response you can expect to get from a worshipper of Buddha. If you show him the writings of the first centuries A.D. regarding Yeshua, he will be forced to conclude that Yeshua was a "religious teacher" and never attempted to promote himself to any higher level of divine authority. However, he will never accept such claims against his "god" Buddha. Notice how personal prejudice prevents one from accepting what their own logic dictates.

We have already seen how Christian scholars today readily recognize the fact that for the first three hundred years AD., "Christianity" remained a sect within Judaism and that the first fifteen Bishops of Christianity were circumcised Jews who worshipped in the synagogues of the Jews.

We have seen how it was only after the introduction of Christianity to the Romans and the official "Guardianship" of the Roman empire of the religion of Yeshua that it began to see many of the "truths" of the mission of Yeshua which were hidden from the very first apostles of Yeshua. We have seen how the "trinity", the birth of Yeshua on the 25th of December, the Easter festival and many other founding doctrines of Christianity were not "recognized" to be the "truth" until after the religion of Yeshua was "adopted" by those people who for many centuries before that had been spoon fed doctrines of "trinity", "savior from sin", "incarnation of the almighty", "death and resurrection", Christmas and Easter, "three days and three nights in hell", "only begotten of the almighty", "killed by the enemy", and many other matters which were later "inspired" to them by God in order to be "clarified" in the Bible so that they could be seen clearly.

Sadly enough, once all of this detailed and irrefutable evidence has been presented, by the Christian's own scholars, in support of the fact that all of these matters were acts of pagan worship and belief centuries before the coming of the time for this Jesus, some will still refuse to accept the facts of the matter when shown to them. I cannot force a person to use their mind. I can only present the evidence. It is up to that person themselves whether they will choose to accept the facts or not.

Let us never forget that Rosh Ha Shannah (on Judgment day), many shall come to me saying

'Lord, Lord, we did many great works and cast out demons in your name' and I will tell them: "Get out of my sight, your works were evil. I never knew you"

"But in vain do they worship me [YHVH], teaching for doctrine the commandments of men" Matt 15:9

God is one god. He is indivisible and inseparable. There is no God but He. He has no equal. He does not hold mankind responsible for the sin of others, but only for their own worship. And He alone shall be the final judge of all of mankind on the day of judgment.

There are many other parallels that could be brought up in this comparison. However, we can not get into the details here, and therefore, we leave it up to the interested reader to read about them in the book mentioned above as well as my many articles and other books cited on the website below.

For more intense study into these areas of the paganization of the "Jesus Story" I suggest your further study in this site: http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com

Answer for yourself: So, have we been led to worship a "supposed literal" and "historical" person by Rome when in fact the stories of the gods and goddesses, which are like our "Jesus Story", are to teach us about our true Self as a Divine Being in whom God lives, and moves, evolves, and has His being?

JESUS...WHAT WERE HIS BELIEFS ABOUT THE TORAH?

Answer for yourself: What does it mean to be or attempt to be like Jesus? Assuming you understand that to be like Jesus does not mean to have His same being it means... of course...

- to follow His kindness (He cared for the needs of others), and
- to follow His selflessness (He laid down his life that others may come to know God), and
- to follow His morality (He was honest, pure, and trustworthy).

Contrary to the Gentile's depiction of Jesus in the New Testament in selected places, Jesus walked in obedience to the Torah of God. So, to be like Jesus means to follow his full righteousness and holiness, which also means...

- to follow his walk as a Jew, and
- to follow his keeping of the Sabbath, and
- to follow his keeping of biblical Kosher, and
- to follow his wearing of the Arba Kanfot (Talit/Talis) and Tzitzit (Fringes), and
- to follow his keeping of the holy Feasts, and
- to follow all other things that the Almighty Father has commanded from the beginning.

Let us set the stage. The vast majority of Christianity today are falsely reassured that they are followers of Jesus. Of course we never think to consider that there are over 2000 different denominations today which have teachings that often contradict the teachings of other supposed "followers of Jesus".

Answer for yourself: Considering the conflicting doctrines within the multiples of Christian denominations, who is the true follower of Jesus?

Answer for yourself: Who is really like Jesus and who is not?

Answer for yourself: How can we know for sure?

Answer for yourself: How can anyone say they walk after Jesus, when they do not follow his ways of religious beliefs, conduct, and behavior? The answer is simple. One cannot be like Jesus and have an opposite religious belief system which causes them to do otherwise than what Jesus did. To a Gentile Christian this is most problematic when he compares his religious belief system to that of the typical Jew of the first century Second Temple Judaism!!!

If you have never considered this before, you must realize there has been a partial blindness until now. But, now the truth is revealed for you to consider and to follow.

DID JESUS ABOLISH THE LAW FOR THE CHRISTIAN?

Matthew 5:17-19.

Matt 5:17-19 17 Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. 18 For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. 19 Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven. (KJV)

Bet Emet Ministries has the unenjoyable task of having to expose, reveal, and correct the many errors and areas of disobedience that has crept in unaware in the Christian faith. It has been our purpose to reveal to our readers the tragic truth concerning how we have been led so far astray from obedience and proper worship of God in the majority of Christian churches of today. This has not always been as easy task for me as I have had to use a "sharp" pen to confront you with the tragic failure on our parts to worship God "in spirit and in truth" as I hope is your desire. Having spent the last years exposing these many errors and sins, we now can devote much needed time to investigating in depth the life of Jesus as pictured in the Gospels. In this way, we will come to understand more accurately how we are to pattern our lives after him, for it is he who said "when you see me you have seen the Father." Understanding that we are to follow after his example, let us continue our pilgrimage to holiness as we study to learn in order to obey, thus ensuring we are truly becoming more like God who is to be our model for life and perfection.

The natural starting point in the study of Jesus's teaching as seen from the Jewish perspective is his attitude toward the Law, for the Jews are first and foremost the people of the Torah (the Torah is the Jewish word for the Bible, primarily the first five books of the Bible). In first-century Judaism, as is in much of Judaism today, the Law was virtually synonymous with authority. The traditional view, still held by Orthodox Jews, is that God's revelation of the Torah to Moses on Mount Sinai included not only the Written Law (Pentateuch-Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy) but also the Oral Law (the "traditions of the elders"). This "tradition of the elders" is the interpretation of the written law which has been handed down in Rabbinical literature as found in the Mishnah (the collections of Jewish Oral Law) and its commentaries (which together make up the Talmud). The religion of Jesus (Second Temple Judaism) is founded upon the Law. And since the Law constitutes the very essence of Judaism, one's view of the Law determines one's validity of Judaism itself. One's view of the Law determines if the religion of Jesus is still valid for today or if it has been replaced by another religion; namely Gentile Christianity which, for the most part, rejects the Law that Jesus upheld. The attitude of Jesus toward the Law is therefore of the greatest importance to not only the Jew, but the Christian as well.

It is not surprising to note that in the Gospels it is clearly the Law that is the focal point of disputes between Jesus and some of the Jewish leaders. The majority of scholars hold to the belief that the Law has been the basis of separation between Jews and Christians, not the crucifixion (J. Parkes, The Conflict of the Church and the Synagogue, pp. 45). C. Montefiore, a Jewish author that esteems Jesus highly, states that "the quarrels of Jesus with the Jews of his age, and more especially with the Pharisaic Rabbis, were not about the nature of God, His unity, His justice, His mercy; they were about the Law and its authority, and about the relations of outward ceremonial to morality, of ritual ordinances to spiritual religion" (Montefiore's The Religious Teaching of the Synoptic Gospels in Relation to Judaism).

HOW JUDAISM VIEWS JESUS

Without study on your part, the stance taken by Jesus with respect to the Law and its authority will be vague and hard to comprehend. It seems to the casual reader of the Bible that at times Jesus speaks of the permanent validity of the Law as seen in Matt. 5:17-18; yet his actions and words, as portrayed the New Testament, often seem contrary to the Law: (Mark 2:18-27 records the plucking of grain on the Sabbath, a form of work which the New Testament would lead us to believe is forbidden on the Sabbath...but in truth is not).

Answer for yourself: How are we to interpret his intentions as he seems to contradict himself? Much learning is necessary to arrive at the truth of the matter.

The majority of Jewish scholars, consistent with their affirmation of the Jewishness of Jesus (this means that he was not rejecting his religion and his faith when he, for instance, calls for repentance within his faith by rebuking those leaders who were leading the people astray). Take note of the strong emphasis of Jesus' faithfulness to the Law. A survey of the writings brings us to a consensus of opinion concerning Jesus's faithfulness to the Law of Israel. With this understanding it is easy to see that Jesus upheld the Law and did not create a new religion. Notice with me:

- Jesus restricted not only his but his disciples' ministry to Israel (until after the resurrection).
- Jesus had a high regard for the Temple and its worship.
- Jesus advocated the paying of the Temple tax (to support the building…but not doing so by robbing the rightful recipients out of the tithe).
- Jesus supported the offering of sacrifices.
- Jesus advocated the reciting of Pharisaic-like prayers.
- Jesus said grace at meals and the blessings over wine.
- Jesus wore the tzitzit (fringes or tassels) attached to the four cornered garment in fulfillment of the commandments of Num. 15:37-41 and Deut. 22:12.
- Jesus regarded pagan Gentiles ("dogs") and swine as unholy.

Such attitudes of Jesus reflect not only his obedience to the Written Law and his agreement with the social customs (Oral Law) of his day.

To the casual reader, when reading Paul and the New Testament, he is confronted with the assumed paradox of Jesus' affirmation and denial of the Law. This false dichotomy must be understood if we are ever to arrive at a correct conclusion regarding Jesus either continuing in the faith of his fathers or else replacing it with a new faith. Upon correctly understanding what we read in the Synoptic Gospels we shall be able to understand Jesus and his relationship to the Judaism of his day. It is this issue, which we at Bet Emet Ministries maintain is of crucial importance to properly understand if we as Christians are to justify our current practice of our faith, or are in need of correction and repentance. Let us look at various positions regarding Jesus and the Law and then draw some conclusions.

MODEST BREAK WITH THE LAW?

The majority of Christian scholars and only a few Jewish scholars speak of Jesus in terms of breaking the Law or replacing the Law. Even so, if you read their works, they only imply a break, and several who imply it make other statements that seem to contradict their implication. This is very confusing; either Jesus did or he didn't violate or replace the Law. It is important to note that where a break is spoken of or implied, it is always with the insistence that this in no way lessens Jesus's true Jewishness. This in itself is a paradox, for the Jews are the people of Law. Those who imply a break see in Jesus a novel attitude toward the Law, even some go so far as to say "revolutionary." Some see in the Gospels that Jesus minimized the Oral Law by distinguishing between moral and ceremonial laws (the moral in every case taking precedence over the ceremonial laws). They also point to Jesus' emphasis upon the inward over the merely outward as well as his stressing of the importance of the higher law of love. It is this "unique" emphasis that the supposed genius of Jesus is said to consist. Thus, these scholars (primarily Christians) see that Jesus' teaching regarding the Law forms a new departure from and a break with the Judaism of his age. What they fail to understand if they had studied Judaism as I have, that within the religion of Judaism are allowances to do just that; to choose the ethical over the ritual to promote life. The Commandments were given by God in order that we might "live by them" and "not die by them." What I find hard to accept about the conclusion of such important scholars is that in ascribing to Jesus that he makes a radical departure from Judaism, then Jesus would have violated and broken the Law in certain of his teachings and actions and also contradicted his own assertion of the permanent validity of the Law (Matt. 5:17-18). To the Christian this poses a very important question; "how could Jesus be the Christian's substitutionary atoning sacrifice without spot and blemish and yet have sinned because he violated and disobeyed the Law? Such would be sin. This would be impossible and a very serious problem for Christian theology!

Some scholars see Jesus' departure and break from the Judaism of his day in his relaxing the rigid observance of the Sabbath as well as the dietary restrictions. Such a stance is unsupported by a proper understanding of the text as well as the Biblical Judaism practiced by Jesus. Jesus taught the people of Israel that they must observe the Law in every particular aspect (jot and tittle) and that loyalty to the Law was essential.

Samuel Sandmel, a Jewish Biblical scholar, is willing to admit a break with the Law if Jesus actually spoke the words of Mark 7:15: "There is nothing outside a man which by going into him can defile him." He believes that this was added to the text by the early Gentile Christian community. For Jesus to say this is for him to repudiate the Mosaic food laws of Leviticus 11 and Deut. 14. Again this would be sin to Jesus. According to Sandmel one cannot be certain that Jesus did say these words because they stand against the general picture given in the Gospels, which is one of basic agreement between the Jews and Jesus (conservative Pharisaism), with only "hints" at any profound differences (primarily the school of Shammai which was ultra-strict). What we have then is a tension between Jesus' affirmation of the Law on the one hand and his supposed neglect and infraction of it on the other hand, and this view is not held by the majority of scholars to say the least. This tension is dealt with by understanding that for Jesus the "Law should be obeyed unless a higher principle intervenes." Those holding to this viewpoint point to Luke 6:4 according to the Codex Beza (early Greek manuscript) as reflecting this viewpoint. There, seeing a man working on the Sabbath and thus violating Torah, he says, "O man, blessed are you if you know what you are doing; but if you do not know cursed are you and a transgressor of the law."What escapes most Christian commentators and what is beneficial to our study is that we understand that it was always permissible to violate Sabbath Law if one was to do so to preserve life. Possibly the meaning might be intended that with knowledge and increased understanding, one might violate Sabbath Law for the intended purpose of honoring and observing a higher Law, but to do so without such understanding that you are responding to a higher Law would be considered sin. So, I believe that Jesus did not violate or set aside the Law for a new religion that maintains that the Law is ended.

NO BREAK WITH THE LAW?

The vast majority of Jewish scholars are inclined to understand Jesus as differing only mildly with the typical Jewish understanding of the Law in his day. Again, this can be seen somewhat in the above account. Jesus is thus regarded as not essentially different from the Pharisaic Rabbis of his day. Let me interject, that there were two types of Pharisaism in the days of Jesus; one of which he ascribed and supported, and another to which he would rebuke in Matt. 23. But by no means, was Jesus rebuking and calling for the abolition of all Pharisees in his day. Failure to under-stand the two currents within Phariseeism has been responsible for the erroneous conclusions drawn by the majority of Christians that Jesus condemned all the Pharisees and that all the Pharisees plotted against Jesus.

It is necessary to remember that Jesus taught in a period of transition, during the development of different schools of exegesis (interpretation) in Judaism. It is thus inevitable that there would be variant interpretations of the Law as recorded in the Gospels. These variety of interpretations would clash daily. With the Pharisees, Jesus accepts the Law of the Sabbath; he differs only in the interpretations of that law as found in the Oral

Law. The Oral Law detailed the many conditions that allowed for the breaking of the Sabbath. Grace was provided by God for those who needed to break the Sabbath for a higher ethic and moral law. For example, the Rabbis of the Hillel School of Phariseeism declared that is was permissible to violate the Sabbath to preserve life, that in doing so you violate a Sabbath to ensure the observance of future Sabbaths. This was accepted halakhah (interpretation) by the Hillel Pharisees (of which Jesus belonged), but not to the Shammai Pharisees or the Sadducees who were ultra-strict, always adhering to the letter of the Law over the spirit of the Law (Oral Law). It has been said that in elevating the spirit of the Law over the letter of the Law one can understand the minimizing of the ceremonial laws. But it is not that simple according to Jesus. Most Christians are not aware that the Oral Law brought a proper understanding to the Written Law if matters were in doubt. Let us not forget that the Sadducees rejected the Oral Law, and Jesus and the Pharisees did not.

Luke 11:42 says "these (least commandments) you ought to have done, without neglecting the others (grave-weightier commandments)." In drawing such a contrast, Jesus does not annul the Written Law (613 laws), nor even the ceremonial laws; he only brings priority to our obedience of all the Laws.

Some mistakenly see in his words his opposition to Judaism, and these are usually Christians. This "supposed" opposition to Judaism would be carried to its final conclusion by Paul; namely the replacement of Judaism with a "new Judaism" called Christianity. What was only a re-prioritization of the Law with its many statutes, was mistakenly assumed by others to be a call for abolition of the ceremonial laws (Sabbath, Festivals), and eventually the Law itself. Many have assumed that when Jesus placed only a "little stress" on the ceremonial Laws, his intention was to abolish them. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Such a concept is not in the context of the Scripture because Jesus goes on to say "these (ceremonial laws) you ought to have done!" This is far from abolition of the ceremonial Laws in my opinion. Those who have read into this text the abolition of ceremonial Law (for example the celebration and observance of the Festivals) have unwittingly given ammunition to the founding of a new religion that has rejected then tenets of the real faith of Jesus. Repentance and ethical deeds, as important as they are, are not to be set above or replace the Law, either ethical, moral, or ceremonial Laws. Repentance and ethical deeds are the appropriate response to the Law. Again, Jesus states "these ought to be done" along with the "weightier matters of the Law" which regards love, the tithe, the Tallit, alms, and benevolence. Failure to understand the mechanics of these verses properly have led well-intentioned people to erroneously believe that Jesus and Paul set aside ceremonial Laws. More true to the point, is that Jesus understood that people in daily life cannot retain their distinctiveness solely by means of abstract ethical views. He understood that if Israel were to abandon the ceremonial Laws peculiar to itself, it would gradually be absorbed into the Gentile cultures and would disappear. This is the tragic story of the Christian Church, for when casting off its Hebraic roots (many of which were obedience to ceremonial laws), it has assumed many of the beliefs of paganism and its Hebraic distinctiveness has disappeared.

Jesus did not stand against the Written Law or Oral Law, nor even Pharisaism, but only against the elevation of the letter of the Law above the spirit of the Law. Jules Isaac states "Jesus was born and lived under the Jewish Law. Did he intend or announce its abrogation? Many writers hold that he did, but their statements exaggerate, distort, or contradict the most important passages in the Gospels." The supposed violation of the Sabbath by Jesus was a violation of Pharisaic scruples held by only one sect of the Pharisees (Shammai) and not Hillel Phariseeism. Such a violation for a higher principle (preservation of life) was not in and of itself a violation of the Law. On the matter of dietary restrictions, Jesus did not declare all foods clean despite the passage as it reads in Mark 7:19. Jesus tells us in John 8: 26 "I speak to the world those things I heard from Him." How could Jesus contradict the words of his Father in Heaven as God spoke the dietary Laws in Leviticus? Again in John 12: 49-50 he says "I have not spoken on my own authority; but the Father who sent me gave me a command, what I should say and what I should speak...whatever I speak, just as the Father has told me, so I speak."

Answer for yourself: Now, do you think that God would contradict His Word which He overlooks to perform it?

"Take just a minute and remember Peter's vision of the unclean animals on the sheet lowered from heaven and that he heard God tell him to "take and eat." It was later he understood fully what the vision had originally meant; not that God was abolishing the laws concerning the eating of clean and unclean food, rather that God was cleansing the Gentiles (whom Judaism had previously considered unclean as was certain foods).

Now back to Jesus. Jesus's intention was to separate morality from the strict interpretation of Laws of the Old Testament as held by one of the two major branches of Pharisees (Shammai school). Although those Pharisees were resentful of this, the majority never desired to be rid of Jesus or to kill him. It would be the chief Priests and their scribes (Sadducees) who would be responsible for handing over Jesus to the Romans. These were Sadducees and not Pharisees.

Having stated the above, it is the opinion of Bet Emet Ministries that Jesus was a faithful holder of the Law all of his life. Any portrayal of Jesus as one deliberately and consciously opposed to the Law is the reflection our lack of understanding of the religion of Jesus and the hostility between the early Gentile church and the Synagogue. The only real differences between Jesus and the Pharisees are to be found in matters of halakhah (interpretation) and other major differences do not in fact exist, but are due to the misunderstanding of the Gospel data by modern readers (especially when comparing their church's theology to that of Jesus). So, we can summarize as the bottom line on the matter that any hostility between Jesus and the Pharisees are due to differences of interpretation of Law (school of Hillel as against the school of Shammai).

NO ESSENTIAL DIFFERENCE WITH RABBINIC JUDAISM?

Recent Jewish writers on Jesus are beginning to see Jesus as an authority within Judaism of the first century. This is great news! Although Jesus does speak with his own special authority ("But I say to you"), it is a mistake to regard this as a break with Judaism. To one familiar with Biblical Judaism, Jesus is not seen to challenge the authority of Scripture and never violated the Law in any sense at all, either Written or Oral Mosaic Law. Not seeking to abolish the Law or even reform the Law, the mistaken impression that Jesus did oppose the Law is in part due to the exaggerated wording contained in the Gospels; this wording reflects the later and growing rift between the synagogue and the church (who would write the anti-Semitic documents we have called the New Testament).

David Flusser sees only one explicit violation of the Law attributed to Jesus in the Synoptic Gospels (the plucking of gain on the Sabbath). This, however, is understood as coming from a Greek translator who added the "plucking" of the grain to make the scene more vivid. What actually took place was only the rubbing of grain in the hands, which was allowed by Torah (rubbing was not considered work which was forbidden on the Sabbath). Even so, it was Jesus's disciples who were guilty of the supposed infraction, and not Jesus.

Having understood the Greek copyist addition to the text, we find in Jesus a "Torah-true" Jew, who never and nowhere in the Gospels transgressed against the Mosaic and orthodox Rabbinic legislation. Nowhere and never does he condemn or reject one single Mosaic or Rabbinic institution.

Answer for yourself: If we are to be like Jesus then how can we reject the Law or believe it has passed away?

Where Jesus appears to go against the Law in the synoptic tradition, closer examination reveals repeatedly that this is the result of Christian misunderstanding or, as in the case of Mark 7:19, a later Gentile Christian addition. The overwhelming evidence of the Gospels is that Jesus upheld the authority of the Torah and the Prophets and did not attack a single Biblical Law. On this point Jesus is in the good company of Hillel, Akiba, and the Hasidim. There is no serious rift between Jesus and conservative Phariseeism; what minor disagreements there were are properly understood as an "in-fighting" and not untypical of the Rabbinic tradition, which was itself in the process of change. What does set apart Jesus is his prophetic rhetorical stress of the ethical over the ritual, as would be expected from a preacher of repentance. Where the Law is concerned, the real distinction of Jesus' devotion is in his extraordinary emphasis on the real inner religious significance of the commandments. Of this view Bet Emet Ministries can concur.

INFLUENCE OF THE GREEK -GENTILE CHURCH

Whereas Jesus himself never contemplated abolishing the Law, the Gentile-Greek converts "by putting their words in Jesus's mouth (altering existing manuscripts or adding to existing manuscripts) made it appear that it was Jesus himself who undertook to tear down the whole fabric of the Mosaic Law. Thus, whenever Jesus appears to go against the Law, most reputable scholars tell us we encounter the opinion of the later church and not that of the historical Jesus. A prime example again is Mark 7:19 where we are supposed to believe that Jesus nullified the Kosher Laws. Nothing could be further from the truth. Upon study you will find that there was a deliberate twist in misrepresenting a play on words in the Aramaic as meaning "thus he declared all foods clean." This, more than likely, is the view of the writer's church rather than an accurate account of what Jesus actually said.

BET EMET'S POSITION

Many today are confused concerning Jesus's standing toward the Law. Many either cannot fit Jesus and his view of the Law into their current church's theologies, while others, upon study, see that he fully agrees with first-century, Second Temple, Hillel-Phariseeism. G.F. Moore is content to assert that Jesus's attitude toward the Law, even the ceremonial law, was completely orthodox. This view I support. Others see that Jesus' teaching supersedes the Torah since the authority appealed to by Jesus is radically different from the authority appealed to by the Pharisees. To this I disagree. Conflict is inevitable and without further study the differences are irreconcilable.

THE TRAGIC RESULT OF ANNULLING THE LAW....THE MAIN ERROR IN THE CHURCH

It is evident in the headlines of every newspaper almost every day, America in a state of moral decay. It is my opinion this can be traced to the churches leaning more on grace than Law in their messages. I feel strongly that this major loss of moral standards is because the American Church has lost its way and are not following the message and teachings of Jesus, a Jew. The moral climate in America has been weakened because it has a loss of reverence for the Law and the Old Testament. What the American Church badly needs is to be awakened to the need to restore the Hebraic Roots of her faith. But, this, as you will see as your studies continue, is only but the "first step" in a progressive evolution of one's Soul. Much is left to be discovered and experienced after one awakens to the beauty and truth of Biblical Judaism. As you will find all roads lead from Judaism to the Divine Mysteries of the Soul that are expressed in mystical Judaism and in the greater understanding of ancient Egypt and the Divine Mysteries of the Soul which they taught. I firmly believe that this loss of reverence for the Law has caused a lowering of Biblical standards across the board in our society and darkened the minds of our people to the deeper things of God and His Spirit.

As stated before, I strongly believe that the above condition can be changed by the restoration of the Hebrew Roots of the Christian faith. This, again, is only the first step of many more in repentance and the awakening of the Soul of mankind. It is my ambition to help others have a higher regard for and return to the Old Testament, the Bible Jesus used. It is my hope to point the way for the return of many who will hear the message and in time grow beyond just the "literal" and "historical" understanding of these texts whereby they come to see the mystical and metaphysical understanding and deeper meanings hidden in these same Biblical Texts, both Old and New Testament, which enlightens our Souls. Those of you who have ears to hear, hear what the voice within my voice is saying. Discern the time. Be wise. It is my humble prayer that not only I have a part in restoring the reverence for the Law of God, but you contribute as well. Shalom.

COULD YESHUA BELIEVE AND ENDORSE WHAT IS TAUGHT IN CHRISTIANITY TODAY?

Let us begin with a little background as we set the stage for the current teaching. The adherents of the teaching propagated by the apostles and disciples of Yeshua began to be known by the early AD forties as "Christians" (Acts 11:26), not only within their own communities (I Peter 4:16), but also among outsiders (Acts 26:28). Part of Josephus' Testimonium makes an allusion to the 'tribe of the Christians' which at the time of writing the Jewish Antiquities in the nineties of the first century had 'still not disappeared' (Ant. xviii. 63). This attestation of Josephus represents the earliest reference to the title outside the New Testament. Ignatius, bishop of Antioch, called the religion to which he belonged, and for which he gave his life in c. AD 107, Christianismos. From the second century onwards, the new faith spread and flourished further and further beyond the confines of Judaism, mostly, though not exclusively, among the slaves and the down-trodden of the Mediterranean world in the first instance. Persecuted repeatedly for over two centuries by the Roman state, it eventually became from the fourth century onwards, first the dominant, and later the official religion of the empire. Now, at the end of the twentieth century, the various churches of Jesus continue to command the real or nominal allegiance of a substantial portion of mankind (2.5 billion at last estimate).

After nearly two millennia of development, today's Christianity has been formulated in authoritative creeds, and since the churches of the East and the West continue to recite in their liturgies one of these almost timeless confessions, I give below the Nicene-Constantinopolitan Creed, composed in the fourth, and re-worked in the fifth century, as a short-hand expression of ecclesiastical orthodoxy. It is important for the reader to understand that the following Nicene-Constantinopolitan Creed expresses the foundational beliefs upon which Christianity is built. Again of importance for this article is the investigation if Jesus believed any of which is supposed to be the foundation of the religion he began. Let us see for ourselves.

THE BACKBONE OF THE CHRISTIAN FAITH---ITS CREED

The English text is borrowed from the Book of Common Prayer of the Church of England.

- I believe in one God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth, And of all things visible and invisible:
- And in one Lord Jesus Christ, the only-begotten Son of God,
- Begotten of his Father before all worlds,
- God of God, Light of Light,
- Very God of very God,
- Begotten, not made,
- Being of one substance with the Father,
- By whom all things were made:
- Who for us men and for our salvation came down from heaven,

- And was incarnate from the Holy Ghost of the Virgin Mary,
- And was made man,
- And was crucified under Pontius Pilate.
- He suffered and was buried,
- And the third day he rose again according to the Scriptures,
- And ascended into heaven,
- And sitteth on the right hand of the Father.
- And he shall come again with glory to judge both the quick and the dead:
- Whose kingdom shall have no end.
- And I believe in the Holy Ghost, The Lord and giver of life, Who proceedeth from the Father and the Son, Who with the Father and the Son together is worshipped and glorified, Who spake by the Prophets.
- And I believe one Catholick and Apostolick Church. I acknowledge one Baptism for the remission of sins. And I look for the Resurrection of the dead, And the life of the world to come. Amen.

WHAT WOULD Jesus HAVE THOUGHT ABOUT THIS STATEMENT OF FAITH?

The New Testament Jewish Christ would have found the first three and the final two lines of the Christian creed familiar, and though not theologically minded, would have had no difficulty in assenting to them, but Jesus would no doubt have been mystified and aghast by the remaining twenty-four lines. These other 24 lines of theological beliefs as expressed in the Creed have little to do with the religion preached and practiced by him.

Answer for yourself: Does that not bother you?

Yet the doctrines this Christian Creed proclaims such as Christ's eternal divine status and bodily incarnation, the redemption of all mankind achieved through his crucifixion, his subsequent exaltation and, above all, the Trinity of the Godhead, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, form the basis of the faith of which Jesus is supposed to be the architect. Anyone who is remotely familiar with Second Temple Judaism knows the difference and that these Christian doctrines cannot be found in Moses, the Law, the Prophets, or the Writings. The reason 2.5 billion Gentile Christians in the world today don't this is due to their lack of knowledge about the true faith of Jesus. To believe such a thing, as expressed by this Creed, only attests to the fact that this is the biggest lie of all time, and that you have fallen for it! Jesus would have nothing to do with such rubbish.

WHERE ARE WE TO LOOK FOR TRUTH?

Today as in past centuries, the believing Christian's main New Testament source of faith lies, not so much in Mark, Matthew and Luke (where it should be) and their presentation of an earthly Jesus, but sadly in centuries of speculation by the church on two things:

- The theological Gospel of John with its eternal Word become flesh, and
- Perhaps even more on the letters of Paul with their drama of death, atonement, and resurrection.

The Christ of Paul and John, on the way towards deification, overshadows and obscures the man of Galilee.

HOW DID WE LOOSE THE TRUE JESUS OF THE SYNOPTIC GOSPELS AND GRAVITATE TO THE COSMIC JESUS OF JOHN AND PAUL?

The first thing I need to state will be hard for most readers to deal with. Whether you know it or not, or whether your Pastor has told you or not, it is widely understood today by critical scholarship that much of the New Testament was written and re-worked by the Gentile Church long after its original writing. In other words the New Testament, especially in its Christology, was edited continually in parallel with the successive Catholic Councils as they formulated their beliefs and theology concerning Jesus during the early centuries of the Church. Comparison of manuscript fragments testify to these alterations. This to me is astonishing because such an institution, completely devoid of a Jewish background or a background in Biblical Judaism, displayed no fear of God in altering and adapting such writings to agree with their evolving theology. Statements were often created and put into the mount of Jesus by the early Gentile Church and subsequently were written into the documents which were later called the "New Testament". Understand these statement were added after the fact by the early Gentile Church which, by the way, a first century Jew like Jesus, would never have said or believed. We also have the alteration of many of the "Romanized" Paul's letters which result in the preaching of "another Gospel" totally foreign to the one both believed and taught by the real New Testament Jewish Christ.

You can argue all day long against such statements, but if you will do your homework in these areas the evidence is overwhelming. Over and over I did not want to believe what I was discovering upon my research, but finally had to bow my knee at truth as God is the author of all truth and is watching over my search for Him. Even though much of what I discovered contradicted what I had been told and believed which I had accepted on "faith only" and without question, I was finally forced through shame and the quest for truth and acceptance by God to admit my religious deception and return to the faith once given to the saints….the religion of Jesus…..the faith of the early Jewish Church which originally went into all the world….Biblical Judaism of the Second Temple Period…..and reject the lies of Gentile Christianity as seen today which claims to be the truth but which can be shown to be anything but that if one will honestly enquire.

Answer for yourself: What were the dynamics for such alterations and changes as found in the Gospels, along with the Gospel of John and many of Paul's letters? Let us investigate.

The disappearance of Jesus, the believed Messiah of Israel, called for a radical rethinking and re-orientation during the years and decades following Golgotha, when Jesus' disciples had to explain to themselves, and then to their listeners, the significance of the cross and the 'resurrection'. Being Jews, and at first addressing only Jews, they fell back on the standard explanation of Jewish religious innovators: these events had all been foreordained by God and were the fulfillment of biblical prophecy. Their task was not easy because of the absence in the Bible, as well as in Biblical Judaism, of contemporary evidence of an expectation of a suffering and dying Messiah, or of one executed but resurrected before the final Judgment. Peter's laborious effort to discover the forecast of Jesus' rising from the dead in Psalm 16:8-11 must have carried little weight, so Paul cleverly abstained from specifics and assured the Gentile Christians of Corinth, who would not have known the difference in any case, that Christ died for man's sins, was buried and raised on the third day 'according to the scriptures' (I Cor. 15:3), without giving book, chapter and verse.

Answer for yourself: Why did Paul say "Messiah died, was buried, and raised for sins according to not Scriptures" and NOT give a reference for Christ dying, being buried, and being raised for man's sins "according to the Scriptures"? Well, that is easy. There are none to be found in the whole of the Jewish Bible!

Answer for yourself: Have you, like me, read that passage over and over and never sought the Jewish Scriptures to which he refers? You bet!

If you are like most Christians, you read the New Testament without questioning anything and believing everything. Such I found out is not wise and not pleasing to God.

However, influenced by the difficult days of tribulations as suffered by the Jewish people by the foreign oppressors (Rome), and needing deliverance and salvation from such difficult times, the early believers were unable to see Jesus in any context other than that of the awaited Messiah. Let us not forget in bad times people hope for deliverance. It is the Jewish answer to the Christians' pre-tribulation rapture. What the Jews understood from their Prophets is that when Messiah comes, he would first of all judge the Gentile nations. Rome's goose was cooked, or so they hoped. This was Israel's salvation and the answer they sought when up against such a formidable foe such as the Roman Empire. It is hard to read the New Testament and not notice the often recurrent theme of the expectation of the return of Jesus as Messiah in the life-time of his followers to extract vengeance upon the persecutors of Israel. They died without his coming and, two thousand years later, we await such a coming of Messiah today.

THE RE-INTERPRETATION OF A JEWISH MESSIAH BY THE GENTILE CHURCH

Now let us look at the Gentiles who would later both come to faith in God through Jesus, but in sheer numbers come to dominate the faith. Later, the first-generation Gentile Christians reinterpreted the notion of Israel's redeemer, the Anointed of God, in light of the life of Jesus, a crucified and risen Christ who, after a short and esoteric post-'resurrection' existence on earth ascended to his heavenly throne. The claim that a Dead Sea Scrolls fragment alludes to a slain Messiah is ill-founded. It is now advanced with greater caution by R. Eisenman and M. Wise, The Dead Sea Scrolls Uncovered (1992), 24-29. The notion of a risen Messiah seems to be unknown in extant ancient Jewish literature. Hence there can be no question of the fulfillment of a traditional expectation and if it were true that Jesus repeatedly foretold his death and subsequent rising, the profound bewilderment of his closest companions before and after the crucifixion would need some explanation. Moreover, the claim of Jesus' bodily resurrection added to the belief in his spiritual survival can be seen only by those who have faith in him and appears under such a strange guise that no Jews can recognize him. Added to that is was to these Jews that the Messiah was promised and to them he would be revealed. They yet wait the Biblical Messiah. By contrast, the less emphasized doctrine of Jesus' ascension to heaven, prefigured in the Bible by Enoch and Elijah and in post-biblical literature by Moses and Isaiah, evoked familiar resonances in first-century Jewish ears. Jews in Judaea and Galilee found this new kind of Messiah alien, untraditional and . . . unappealing, and it can cause no surprise that apart from the melting pot of Jerusalem with its substantial immigrant population from the Diaspora, the New Testament is silent on any progress of the new movement in the Palestinian homeland.

Another important element of the religion of Jesus, his teaching concerning the eschaton, the day of the Lord, the coming of his Kingdom, required significant recasting. This is hard to admit, especially in light of being raised in the Christian Church, but the great event which Jesus was convinced would happen, the coming of the Kingdom of God to this world, in his life-time failed to materialize, but since first-generation Christianity was still imbued with eschatological enthusiasm, the end had to be rescheduled to coincide with the impending Parousia, the triumphant return of the exalted Christ from heaven, surrounded by the host of angels. Although the fresh scenario was no more successful than the first, in fact it opened the door to unending postponements and the practical extinction of the real eschatological hope, nonetheless, Christ's 'coming again in glory' to inaugurate his Kingdom is still on the lips of every Christian worshipper.

Such a revised edition of Jesus' message entails also a total shift in religious thought. Jesus' eyes were fixed on God and his Kingdom. This focus for Jesus was "earthly". The Kingdom was literal and intended for that generation. The world and the physical laws of nature were to be changed and the people of God were to inherit God's Presence in the world as well as the hearts of all mankind. It did not occur.

But this view was negated by Paul who had a different focus. Those of Jesus' followers, in particular Paul and his Gentile converts, focussed on the risen, cosmic, and glorified Lord. The purely theocentric religion of Jesus became a christocentric faith in which the heavenly Father plays practically no role. For Jesus, teshuvah (repentance) and emunah (faith) rendered everything possible; no mediator was needed. In Gentile Christianity, however, nothing is possible, not even teshuvah or emunah, without the atoning death of Christ bringing salvation to the world. This is a totally opposite message from the lips of these two men. Jesus'immediacy in practicing and commending imitatio Dei (the imitation of God) is also diluted, and whilst it still appears as a spiritual counsel in, 'Be imitators of God as beloved children' (Eph. 5:1), the man from Tarsus presents himself as an imitator, strangely not of God as Jesus taught, but of Christ, and as such offers himself for imitation to the members of his churches (I Cor. 11:1). The irony of this whole thing is that the "Jesus" Paul imitates never existed in history; the "cosmic" figure of Paul's theology and vision is a long, long way from the historical Rabbi who taught repentance as atonement for one's sins.

What most Christians fail to realize, in part because of a lack of knowledge in this area, is that Paul's powerful, brilliant and poetic imagination as seen in his writings echo the pagan mystery cults of his age, in which through baptism into the death and resurrection of Yeshua-Christ the new initiate enters into communion with the great act of salvation by means of which the New Adam removes from human nature that universal sinfulness which resulted from the fall of the first man in the garden of Eden. If any Christian has read anything about Gnosticism this is the cornerstone of it's "gnosis"....mystical unification with cosmic deity as the salvation experience. Literally ascends a stairway to Heaven by mystical incantations and unifies with this other worldly god. This is the heart of Pauline theology. The only difference is that Paul attached a vicarious atonement to the death of this god which was foreign to all other types of Gnosticism of his day. That explains why Marcion the Gnostic, the first "heretic" of the church which produced the "first New Testament," considered Paul the only follower of Jesus who understood him correctly...and this is the link that begins to open our eyes to the "Gnosticism of Paul" that passes for Biblical Faith in the New Testament to unsuspecting non-Jews.

The migration of Christianity from the Jewish to the Graeco-Roman world, another consequence of Paul's masterly apostolate, necessitated a further drastic interference with Jesus' religion. Since the obligatory imposition of the Torah on Gentiles, including circumcision, would have stopped many from joining the church, the Jewish Law, the innermost source of Jesus' piety, was not only made optional, but had to go, be abolished in the name of Christ. In 'Paulinism', which is largely identical with Western Christianity, the Torah is perversely metamorphosed from a well-spring of life into an instrument of death: "While we were living in the flesh our sinful passions, aroused by the Law, were at work in our members to bear fruit of death. But now we are discharged from the Law . . ." (Rom. 7:5f). "Christ is the end of the Law" (Rom. 10:4).

It is not an exaggeration to suggest that light-years separate Paul's Christian Gospel from the religion of Jesus the Jew.

The place of Israel whose lost sheep Jesus was sent to save had to be reappraised in this new world-view. The unbelieving Jews, supposedly blinded by their Torah as taught in the New Testament, were judged and found guilty of obstinacy and deprived of their privileges as the chosen people in favor of the new 'Israel of God' (Gal. 6.I6)…ie., the Gentile Church. To be fair, it has to be said that Paul, despite many harsh polemical comments against Judaism, shies off in the end from damning his people for ever. His inventive poetic mind imagines that the rejection of Christ is a dreadful but only temporary lapse. The apostle of the Gentiles by attempting to graft the whole converted non-Jewish world on to the Jewish stock, thus making them the heirs of all the divine promises granted to Abraham and his posterity, secretly hoped that elevation of the Gentiles would excite the jealousy of the Jews, and bring them to teshuvah and submission to Christ so that 'all Israel' might be saved (Rom. 11:26). This whole idea of Paul about the "blinding" of Israel to Paul's unique understanding of "his gospel," as well as later Paulinist writers, is tragic when one considers that Romans chapters 9-11 were not written and added to the New Testament until long after 180 A.D.; most likely by Irenaeus. And today Christianity relies heavily on these chapters in their evaluation of Israel as no longer a "light to the nations" when God commanded such. Such is the fruit of Gentile hatred of the Jews and just another manifestation of anti-Semitism as found rampant in the New Testament.

The author of the Fourth Gospel had no such kindness or love for the Jewish people; and yet we are told to believe that he was a Jew; no less an apostle. That is a first; an anti-Semitic Jew! The term, Ioudaioi, originally applying perhaps just to Judaeans, but by the time of the redaction of the work at the end of the first century incorporating all the evangelist's 'unconverted' fellow countrymen, i.e. the near totality of the Jewish people, acquired ominous overtones in John's Gospel. In John's account of the life of Jesus, the Jews are a blood-thirsty gang who seek to kill Jesus from the outset and do not desist until they have succeeded in their deadly plan. John's Christ, who had nothing in common with the real Jesus, declares to his compatriots:

You are of your father the devil, and your will is to do your father's desire. He was a murderer from the beginning... John 8.44).

Here is the origin of the Christian tendency to demonize the Jews, the source of all mediaeval and much modern religious anti-Judaism, which directly or indirectly led to the Holocaust. Tragically, it took six million lives to persuade the largest of the Christian churches to annul the charge of deicide levelled for so long against the people of Jesus.

The de-Judaization of the pristine gospel in the Graeco-Roman world was no doubt unintentionally helped by the underlying universalism of Jesus' doctrine of imitatio Dei (the imitation of God), a God whose providence includes all, and his primary concern for the individual, thus permitting an easier dispensation from the mostly communal and social aspects of the Law of Moses. This went also hand in hand with the decline of Judaeo-Christianity of the original Church, consisting of Torah-observing Jews who followed the teaching of Jesus without such 'Christian' creations as the doctrine of the virgin birth or the deification of Christ. These people were unpopular both in the Jewish camp, and among the members of the Gentile church; though they probably remained closest to Jesus, the Jews considered them as Christians and the Christians as heretics. 'While they wish to be both Jews and Christians', wrote Jerome to Augustine, 'they are neither Jews, nor Christians'. The so-called Ebionites or Nazarenes cannot be compared with the present-day "Messianic Jews" or "Jews for Jesus", who under the disguise of the ordinary observances of Judaism seem to be plain, fundamentalist, evangelical Christians who yet hold dear religious doctrines and beliefs that would infuriate Jesus that such is taught in his name. Such blasphemy is condemned in the courts of Heaven and sadly most have to die to find that out since they lack the study to see these truths this side of the grave.

The Torah observant Jews who originally followed Jesus vanished from the scene, the few surviving pockets having no doubt reverted to the Jewish fold. With it, the last, and by then no doubt distorted, vestiges of the religion practiced by Jesus and preached to Jews disappeared, allowing a free run for the triumphal progress of Hellenized Christianity in the non-Jewish world of Late Antiquity.

Despite all this, in fairness, it must be emphasized that notwithstanding all its alien dogmatic and ecclesiastical features, Christianity still possesses fundamental elements of the piety of Jesus, such as his emphasis on purity of intention and generosity of heart, exemplified in a Francis of Assisi who relinquished wealth to serve the poor, and even in our century, an Albert Schweitzer, who abandoned fame to heal the sick in Godforsaken Lambarene, and a Mother Teresa who, age-old, cared for the dying in the filthy streets of Calcutta.

To consider Jesus as the Founder of Christianity is a misnomer. Though admittedly not totally unconnected, the religion of Jesus and Christianity are so basically different in form, purpose and orientation that it would be historically unsafe to derive the latter directly from the former and attribute the changes to a straightforward doctrinal evolution. It was more of a mutation. No doubt, on a meta-physical level, Christian faith and theology attribute these changes to the work of the "Holy Spirit": "When the Spirit of truth comes, he will guide you into all the truth" (John 16:13). That's a laugh to those who know the truth about Gentile Christianity. But such simplistic rationalization is done completely devoid of the facts in the case. Study to show yourselves approved so that one day you won't have to stand before God ashamed.

It would seem no less unjustifiable to continue to represent Jesus as the establisher of the Christian church or churches. For let it be re-stated for a last time, if Jesus meant and believed what he preached - and I for one am convinced that he did- namely that the eternal Kingdom of God was truly at hand, he simply could not have entertained the idea of founding and setting in motion an organized society intended to endure for ages to come. A great challenge, perhaps the greatest of them all, which traditional Christianity of the Pauline-Johannine variety has therefore still to confront does not come from atheism, or agnosticism, or sheer materialism, but from within, from the three ancient witnesses, Mark, Matthew and Luke, through whom speaks the chief challenger of Christianity as it exists today, Jesus the Jew.

Whether this challenge is accepted will be seen in the decades, even centuries, to come, though faint signs indicate that the most perceptive Christian New Testament scholars are already conscious of the task awaiting them. But it would seem also that muted sounds are audible in Jewish scholarly circles suggesting that the antique taboo on Jesus, mistakenly held responsible for Christian anti-Semitism, is beginning to fade and that hesitant steps are being made to re-instate him among the ancient Hasidim in initial fulfillment of Martin Buber's 'prophecy': 'A great place belongs to him in Israel's history of faith.'

Nor is this all. For the magnetic appeal of the teaching and example of Jesus holds out hope and guidance to those outside the fold of organized religion, the stray sheep of mankind, who yearn for a world of mercy, justice and peace lived in as children of God.

In closing I believe we have answered our primary question. The faith that carries Jesus' name today is a far cry from the New Testament Jewish Christ and what he both believed and practiced, and if you desire to be a follower of Jesus then you cannot practice Gentile Christianity as it exists today yet hold to a majority of its creedal beliefs. To do so invalidates any claim to be a "follower of Jesus" as he would have nothing to do with such apostasy.

COMPARISON OF HEBRAIC AND CHRISTIAN RELIGIOUS DOCTRINES...WHICH REFLECT THE "MJesusIND OF CHRIST" THAT IS TO BE IN US?

In Seminary I remember taking courses in Systematic Theology. In other words, what do the Baptist's believe about God, man, sin, redemption, forgiveness, etc. The course was a theological analysis of the Baptist Faith and the rationale for its beliefs in these different areas.

I never will forget after graduation I sat down and asked myself some rather simple question: "How come I didn't learn much about a Jewish Rabbi named Jesus while at the Seminary", How come I know so much about Paul but the life of Jesus was not stressed". From there my thoughts graduated even deeper as I asked myself such heart-stirring questions like these:

- 1. What did the New Testament Jesus believe about God, man, sin, redemption, atonement, forgiveness, salvation, etc.?
- 2. Would the New Testament Jesus hold to my Baptist religious belief system in all areas?
- 3. Did the New Testament Jesus believe differently in these areas from which I had been taught by the Baptists?
- 4 Were there doctrines I held and were taught which the New Testament Jesus could not believe in personally? Which were they?
- 5. If the New Testament Jesus could be demonstrated to believe differently from my religious beliefs in the above areas why do I continue to hold beliefs which can be shown not to be Yeshua's views in these areas?
- 6. What beliefs do I currently have which the New Testament Jesus could not accept and why continue in them when it can be shown that they oppose what the New Testament Jesus both believed and practiced as his faith?
- 7. How could I find out such information in order to verify that I truly was a follower of the New Testament Jesus? For after all the Seminary surely did not present us with such information.

MY PERSONAL QUEST FOR THE TRUTH ABOUT JESUS

Well I had my Masters degree. I began my Pastorate. All was well until I began my study in earnest. My reading into such areas brought me into contact with many scholars, many of which were Jewish. In trying to understand Jesus the Jew I found that by reading Jewish authors who were writing and "reclaiming" Jesus as a valuable part of Jewish history that I would benefit most. My thoughts were quickly rewarded.

After reading hundreds and hundreds of books over the next ten years, I was totally shocked to find that the Real Historical Jesus was anything than what was represented by the Christian Church as the Protestant "Jesus". My blind-spot had been removed.

What was most shocking in analyzing the copious amounts of data over the years was that in the vast majority of areas my Protestant "religious beliefs" were shown to be contrary and opposite of what the New Testament Jesus both believed and followed as his faith. That was hard for me to take at that time in my life. I had invested years and untold resources only to find out that in the final analysis my "beliefs" about Jesus were contrary and conflicting with his in most areas of religious inquiry.

I present this information to you not to anger anyone but to warn good Christian people that they have not been told the truth about this man from Galilee. There was only one true Rabbi named Jesus of Nazareth. What we need if for the "real Jesus" to please stand up! In hopes of helping your decipher the truth from error concerning the real Jesus I have categorized in summary fashion points of Systematic Theology for your examination.

If you are reading these pages most likely you are a follower of Jesus. If that be true then it is impossible to follow someone "correctly" unless you know what the person really believed. The following is a summary of religious positions taken from Second Temple Judaism and the religion of Jesus; for after all Jesus is a Jew and not a Christian. Contrasted with them are current mainline Christian positions. I leave the analysis up to you as well as the conclusions to which you arrive based on your comprehension. I would only ask yourself when reading the following to ask yourself at every junction: "Which would the Jew Jesus believe"?

WHAT WOULD Jesus OF SECOND TEMPLE JUDAISM BELIEVE?

The following is a comparison of theological interpretations of the Bible by both Judaism and Christianity. One is in error of many of the points of Scripture. With your current understanding and knowledge of the Word of God I invite you to read and compare the respective stances of both camps against the revealed word and will of God in the Bible. Remember our standard is the Word of God and not Catholic and Protestant pronouncements upon the Bible. Next I invite you to investigate it out for yourself in more detail and verify to yourself which views are more in line with Biblical teaching. I thank God I did.

NATURE OF GOD:

Judaism- Monotheism, oneness of God as opposed to Trinity.

Christianity-Dualism or Trinitarianism, the doctrine of the Trinity had not yet been accepted by the Church in the 3rd Century (cf. Encyc. Jud., Vol 10, p. 16.). The Trinity would be a religious creation borrowed from non-Jewish paganism stemming from Babylon.

NATURE OF MAN:

Judaism-Man is born good. Until the age of accountability (13 male, 12 female) one's sins are the responsibility of one's parents. At that age one became responsible before God for the commandments and the Law. It is at that time Paul would remind us..."when the Law came I died". For you see, there is not that sinnith not. With such responsibility come the penalty for violation of the Law...death. From the age of accountability one is considered a responsible adult who can choose not to sin.

Christianity-Man is born evil, a "victim" of original sin; man therefore has no choice but to sin. There is no concept of "Original Sin" in the religion of Jesus.

FORGIVENESS OF SIN:

Judaism-There is no provision for willful sin except repentance and restitution. Man is cut off from God. The Jewish view challenges the doctrine of "eternal security" or "once saved always saved" and the resultant imbalance of "grace and not law".

Christianity-Man may sin and still be pardoned by God in the next life no matter how he lives if he only "believes" in the Christian creeds and theology concerning Jesus. This results in the unbiblical doctrines concerning "once saved always saved" & "eternal security of the believer". Purgatory is the "fire-escape".

SATAN:

Judaism-The adversary is a created angelic being who is in complete subjection to the sovereignty and will of God. Satan is neither fighting God nor man, but is God faithful servant to bring man to a point of decision where he must choose for or against God. Based on such a decision man is rewarded or punished. Also in Biblical Judaism "Satan" is used for the personification of the flesh of mankind which leads man to sin. Such willful decisions to sin is truly adversarial to mankind.

Christianity-Dualism; there are two equal forces of good and evil in the universe and they are constantly fighting it out (derivation of Persian captivity). This is the legacy of Persian religion and Zoroastrianism which infected parts of Israel following the Babylon Captivity.

MARRIAGE AND SEX:

Judaism-Sex is good, mandated by God as the first positive commandment in the Bible. (The marriage bed is undefiled.)

Christianity-Sex is inherently sinful (in sin was I conceived...which refers not to original sin but sexual conception prior to the mikvah following a woman's menstruation). The sex act is always sin unless for the purposes of procreation. In marriage sex is no longer a "mortal" sin but only a "venial" sin. Christianity maintains that absence from sex is meritorious.

ORGANIZATION STRUCTURE OF THE COMMUNITY & ASSEMBLY:

Judaism-The synagogue is the core of the religious and secular life of the community following the loss of the Temple. It is not an ecclesiastical structure, and the leaders are paid no salary. It is not hierarchical but rather emphasizes the priesthood of all members of the community.

Christianity-The church is a building or something one does on Sunday, a religious service instead of a community. It does not have the same organizational structure and leadership levels as ancient Judaism & the early Church (Nasi, Chazan, etc.) It is ecclesiastical and hierarchical.

FREQUENCY OF ASSEMBLIES:

Judaism-Met once a week on the Sabbath except for Festivals (emphasis is building families).

Christianity-Usually twice-three times a week unless special events then can meet nightly (emphasis is building a congregation).

THE MISSION OF THE SYNAGOGUE VS CHURCH:

Judaism-The strongest emphasis is placed on teaching and study of Torah (discipleship) to build spiritual maturity in the person. Such fruit is seen in making this world better by helping others imitate God.

Christianity-Preaching has replaced teaching; focus on evangelizing the already saved Sunday after Sunday instead of instructing & teaching them for growth & spiritual maturity through the release of their gifts and service.

SALVATION:

Judaism-Righteous non-members of the assembly will also have a share in the world to come and be saved ("righteous Gentiles"-the righteous of all nations-Noahide Laws) (Matt. 25:1, Rom 2:12-15).

Christianity-If one does not "believe in Jesus" or "the theology of Jesus as created by Gentile Christianity" & "go to church" he will go to hell.

SPIRITUALITY:

Judaism-The sanctification of all of life to God; down to earth where rubber meets the road where the focus is on living in the kingdom of God now; not just other-worldly (after death).

Christianity-Departmentalizes life in sections: secular and spiritual. Main focus is other-worldly with preparation mostly centered on the world to come.

GIVING:

Judaism-1/3 of your gifts go to the 1) Teachers, choir, maintenance, 2) 1/3 to the benevolence (poor/almsgiving), 3) 1/3 goes to yourself to build yourself up in God (festivals)

Christianity- Give to churches and ministries; no accountability over the direction and handling of the funds. Does not follow the Biblical tithe.

DAY OF REST:

Judaism-Saturday as commanded in the Ten Commandments.

Christianity-Sunday; as based on later traditions-early Church councils of the 4th century and their compromise with sun-worship (loss of Jewish roots).

RELATIONSHIP TO ISRAEL IN THE BIBLE:

Judaism-The world is divided into 2 camps: Jews & Gentiles, chosen and not chosen. One is either born a member of the chosen people or become a member either as a proselyte or by becoming a Godfearer.

Christianity-Not a part of Israel, but is a Gentile replacement of the chosen of God. The Jews have been rejected and replaced as God's chosen people by the Gentile church (replacement theology). The church is the "new Israel". Israel is spiritualized and when you read "Israel" in Scripture you are to think of the church, not of physical Israel (at least when blessings are concerned and not the curses; the curses are left for "physical Israel"). The world is divided into 3 camps: Jews, Gentile Christians, and Gentile pagans. Christians have lost their Jewish roots and identity.

NATURE OF THIS LIFE:

Judaism-Life is seen as a preparation for the world to come. Trials & temptations are from God's hand and are blessings in disguise because they refine our character (James 1:2).

Christianity-Prosperity; One can write your own ticket by speaking to God, Satan, or the situation using scriptural promises as a formula. Trials & tribulations are a curse, not from God but from Satan, and there is no reason we should experience them if we are uttering positive confessions.

PROPHECY:

Judaism-One cannot know the time of the coming of the LORD nor should one speculate about the future; one should keep his garments white by continual repentance because His coming will be sudden and unexpected.

Christianity-The LORD's coming is imminent; not to be unexpected for the believer since he will be able to interpret the "signs" of the LORD'S coming. Many offer exact predictions.

FAITH:

Judaism-Expressed as a response to a religious belief system through obedience and good deeds (Jas. 2:14-26) which is faith in action; a living faith.

Christianity-Faith in God, elevating belief above tangible action and obedience. Agreement to an accepted set of doctrine at each particular assembly brings guaranteed acceptance within that same assembly. Any religious doctrinal divergence from the norm jeopardizes one's standing in the assembly.

RESPONSE TOWARD EVIL:

Judaism-Permitted self-defense, legitimacy of defending oneself.

Christianity-Passive resistance, pacifism.

THE BIBLE:

Judaism-Hebraic background of the whole Bible (even the New Testament). Proper understanding only possible when viewing the Bible in its original history, culture, and original language.

Christianity-Hellenization of Scripture (viewing the Bible through the eyes of Greek culture and language instead of Hebrew).

THE LAW (TORAH-OLD TESTAMENT)

Judaism-All men and under the laws of God; to the Jew he was given the Noahide Laws & Mosaic Law as a foundation; to the Gentile he was given the Laws of Noah only. It is the obedience to the laws of God that brings blessing, social order, and blessings from God.

Christianity-The Law is evil and we are delivered from the commandments of God by faith in Jesus and the religious creeds formulated about him. The Law has passed away and we are under grace and if anyone tries to live according to the Commandments he is under a curse.

WEALTH:

Judaism-There is no merit in poverty.

Christianity-There is merit in poverty.

BAPTISM:

Judaism-Practiced continued immersions throughout life to enter into a heightened Presence of God (every Sabbath, before each Festival, after repentance from sin, after a woman's menses each month to remove uncleanness due to contact with blood, etc.).

Christianity-Baptized only once into Messiah.

THE LORD'S SUPPER:

Judaism-Every week the Sabbath entailed 3 meals: Friday evening to begin Sabbath, followed by two Sabbath meals. This is called the Lord's Supper and is connected with the Sabbath.

Christianity-Name given to Christian Communion consisting of a cracker and a cup of grape juice which can be traced to pagan mystery religions as representing the body and blood of their gods.

HOLY DAYS:

Judaism-Celebrates the Festivals of the Lord according to Leviticus 23.

Christianity-Celebrates the Gregorian Holidays which are all derived from Paganism and have Yeshua's named now connected to give them pseudo-legitimacy.

WAS JESUS REJECTED BY FIRST CENTURY ISRAEL....AND WHY IS HE REJECTED BY THE JEWS TODAY #1

My whole life I heard in Church that "Yeshua was rejected by Israel". Possibly you have heard the same thing yourself. If you are like me I am sure this is not news to you by any stretch of the imagination. As I grew in my studies and developed the ability to think for myself it always struck me strange that Yeshua was "rejected" by the very ones who desired the Messiah come. And be not mistaken the majority of Israel at that time pinned their hopes upon Yeshua that he would be the long-awaited Messiah. When I would read about his triumphant entry into Jerusalem at Passover on a donkey I was always amazed that literally pilgrims, numbering in the millions at Festival times, would cry out to him "save us", which was a demonstration of their faith in him and their expectations in him. What always struck me was that a mere 4 days later the New Testament paints a picture of his total rejection by the people of Israel and I am expected to believe that the whole nation turned on him and rejected him. That is beyond belief if you think about it for a moment.

Answer for yourself: Why would such a thing happen?

It would seen to any thinking believer that their expectations would be even higher as the Passover approached and not the opposite. Elijah was to appear before the Passover and announce the imminent appearance of the Kingdom of God as well as her king. Everything was ready and the people were in a Messianic fevor the likes of such have not been seen since.

It is to this subject that I wish to deal with in this series of articles. Let me say the teachings in this article are profound, even if I say so myself. I strongly encourage all "thinking believers" to read the following with both their minds and their hearts. Upon completion of these articles you should be better equipped to deal with the subject at hand and come to a more accurate conclusion about the matter than at present.

DID ISRAEL REJECT THEIR PROMISED DELIVERER?

Let me reassure that there is a big difference between the Yeshua of first century Judaism and the Yeshua you have heard about today in the Christian Church. My answer to the above question might sound confusing to some but bear with me. Without a doubt, Israel did not reject the Yeshua of the first century, but also, without a doubt the Israel of today rejects the Yeshua they have been presented by the contemporary Gentile Christian Church. So at one time Israel in whole did not reject Yeshua but came to reject Yeshua afterwards; especially after he was refashioned by the Gentile Christian Church of the earliest centuries into a Gentile Messiah.

Said another way, Israel rejected and yet rejects:

- The Gentile Christian view of Messianism and in is place retains what they always did concerning Messianism

- Paul's onslaught on the Law
- 3 Paul's gospel of redemption through the atoning death and resurrection of Yeshua
- 4. The doctrine of God incarnate in man.

Answer for yourself: How could it have been otherwise?

Israel was the "light to the world". Israel is still the "light to the world". God had entrusted to them, and not the Gentiles, with the revelation of salvation and Messianic deliverance.

Eph 2:12

> 12 That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world:

This will be hard for a Christian to swallow, but as a Messianic movement Christianity failed, as have all such movements in Jewish history and in the history of other peoples. The new order of things, the Kingdom of God, which was expected hourly, did not materialize with Yeshua or after Yeshua. It has not materialized in the two thousand years which have elapsed since that time. The appearance of Yeshua did not mark the end of history, and the mission and teachings of the Christian Church today are not greatly influenced by considerations of his Second Coming. If it were, then we would not have had an inquisition or the mass extermination of 18 million believers by the Catholic Church during the Dark Ages. We would not have had to witness in this century the extermination of 6 million Jews by a Christian nation. So I stand by my statement. The postponed Parousia (coming of Messiah) has long since lost its theological importance for considerable sections of Christendom, even as the coming of the Messiah has for considerable sections of Jewry.

SO WHAT DID THE JEWS REJECT ABOUT YESHUA?

The Jews did not reject the "God" concepts of Yeshua.

Yeshua's ideas and beliefs about God was Jewish in essence and Yeshua derived it from the Torah. Yeshua was a strict monotheist and never would have accepted let alone teach ideas espoused by Christian believers today; such ideas as the Trinity for example. The New Testament adds nothing to the content of the idea of God which is not already present in the literature and faith of Israel. It is often argued that Yeshua held a unique conception of God, by which is usually meant the fatherhood of God. However, if you are familiar with the Jewish Scriptures, the divine characteristics which the term 'fatherhood' denotes are fully evident in the Old Testament.

The Jews did not reject the "ethical teachings" of Yeshua.

The ethics of Yeshua, too, were standard Jewish ethics except as regards nonresistance, nonconcern with the material needs of life, and the love of one's enemies—extreme doctrines not part of normative Jewish thought. These ideas were undoubtedly entertained by some apocalyptic groups in Jewry, but were certainly not of a nature to take one out of Judaism. In other words a person could possess such ideas and yet still be considered a good Jew. Yeshua's moral code, with the exceptions noted, was the code of Pharisaic Judaism in his day. It is time to face the facts. Yeshua held a mixture of Pharisee-Essene beliefs and was in good standing with the School of Phariseeism called The House Of Hillel. The morality which the Church taught the heathen world—again with the exceptions noted—and which appealed so strongly to it, was Jewish morality, the healthy minded, clean, and regenerative morality of Israel.

HOW DID YESHUA'S BELIEFS DIFFER FROM OTHER JEWS?

Answer for yourself: Did Yeshua's teachings ever differ from that of his contemporaries? Sometimes…let us see.

"In what way did the teaching of Yeshua differ from that of his contemporaries?" query the editors of The Beginnings of Christianity, and they reply:

Not by teaching anything about God essentially new to Jewish ears. The God of Yeshua is the God of the Jews, about whom he says nothing that cannot be paralleled in Jewish literature. Nor was it in his doctrine as to the Kingdom of Heaven that Yeshua differed markedly from the Jewish teachers.... The differences which are important concern three subjects of vital and controversial interest,

1. resistance to the oppressors of Israel,

2. the fate of the People of the Land,

3 the right observance of the Law.

On the first point Yeshua conflicted with the tendency to rebellion which ultimately crystallized into the patriotic parties of the Jewish war in BE. 66; with the second and third he conflicted with the Scribes.

RESISTANCE TO OPPRESSION

The pacifism of Yeshua was not directed specifically to the Zealots, the Sicarii, those who sought to rebel against Rome. It was a thoroughgoing doctrine of nonresistance applicable to all of life's situations and directed to all men. On this score Yeshua did differ from the prevalent prophetic-Pharisaic teachings of Judaism, although his views were surely not unknown in certain mystically-minded groups in Israel: "And if anyone seeketh to do evil unto you, do well unto him, and pray for him and ye shall be redeemed of the Lord from all evil." It was not a doctrine which was calculated to arouse any widespread active hostility in his day. It was not until the war with Rome began a generation later that the advocacy of pacifism became contentious and dangerous.

THE FATE OF THE PEOPLE OF THE LAND

As regards the fate of the "People of the Land"—the "Ame Ha-arez" the authors of The Beginnings of Christianity maintain that Yeshua offered the opportunity of entering the Kingdom of God to publicans and sinners through a repentance which "could be obtained by attention to principles rather than by . . . an extreme and meticulous attention to the details of the Law, such as rendered repentance impossible to ordinary badly educated men." In other words lack of understanding and knowledge of the Law did not preclude one's entrance into the Kingdom of God.

There appears to be some confusion here between the repentance of publicans and sinners and the relation of the 'Ame Ha-arez' to matters of ritual purity and the tithes. The publicans and sinners were not necessarily the "People of the Land."

The publican was considered a moral outcast not because he did not observe meticulously all the details of the Law. He was, as a rule, an unscrupulous and pitiless taxgatherer, serving a hated and usurping government, who shamefully fleeced the people of their last extractable moneys. His repentance would be indicated only by a radical change in the conduct of his calling. This is the advice which John gave to the publicans who came to him to be baptized: "They said to him, Master, what shall we do? And he said to them: Extract no more than that which is appointed you" (Luke 3:1-13). This is the advice which any Rabbi of that day would have given them. It had nothing to do with scrupulosity in the matter of the observance of the laws of the Torah. If a man sinned he could readily repent and be forgiven. Restitution, wherever possible, and sincere contrition were all that was required. A man did not have to be a scholar, a saint, or a pietist to have his repentance accepted.

Yeshua befriended publicans and sinners, and dined with them in the hope of leading them on to repentance. This is the act of a loving moral guide and teacher. He taught men, as he did in the parable of the Pharisee and the Publican (Luke 18:1-14), the superiority of sincere repentance over self-righteousness. This too, is profoundly spiritual. It could hardly be maintained, however, that such attitudes and instructions were unknown and unshared by others, Rabbis and teachers, in his day. They could not have been subjects of controversy in the days of Hillel, a contemporary of Yeshua and a leader of the Pharisees, who taught: "Be a disciple of Aaron, loving peace, and pursuing peace, loving all thy fellow-creatures, and drawing them nearer to the Torah."

There is no mention in the New Testament of the technical term "People of the Land." The term "publicans and sinners" is not a synonym for it. There was no animosity between the "People of the Land" and the Pharisaic teachers in the days of Yeshua.

The 'Ame Ha-arez' is very often placed in the Mishnah and the Tosefta in juxtaposition to the Haber ("Associate" or "Fellow"). Both are technical terms. The .Haberim were the more exacting Jews, who formed themselves into associations or Haburot for the sole purpose of being in a position to observe more strictly and with greater security the laws of ritual cleanness and of tithing. All those who did not join the Haburot, whether priest or layman, were to that extent known as 'Ame Ha-arez'. In the eyes of the Haber every Jew who did not obey the laws of Levitical purity and proper tithing in their highly developed form was an 'Am Ha-arez'. Such a man need not at all be a sinner or an ignorant man, or of a disposition inimical to the Sage or the Scribe. An 'Ame Ha-arez' could be a teacher of the Law to the children of a Haber. The marriage of the son of a Haber to the daughter of-an 'Am Ha-arez', or vice versa, is considered a matter of common occurrence. The Tosefta relates that Rabban Gamaliel the Elder married his daughter to Simon b. Nathaniel—a priest and an 'Ame Ha-arez. A Haber and an 'Am Ha-arez' may belong to the same family. An 'Am Ha-arez' may at any time join a Haburah, and the doors were always open to welcome him..

The highly particularized laws of ritual cleanliness which entered so considerably into the daily life of the Haber interfered with close neighborly contacts with the 'Ame Ha-arez', but we have no reason to think that this led to animosity and bitterness—any more than we have reason to think, or any evidence to show, that the masses of the people resented the Pharisees, whose rigorous religious discipline they admired, even though they could not always follow their example. Josephus frequently emphasizes the fact that the Pharisees had great influence with the multitude, that they were able greatly to persuade the body of the people, and that the multitude sided with them against the Sadducees.

The 'Ame Ha-arez' included all the elements of the population who were not in Haburot. Just as the Carrot counted among their membership men from every walk of life, so did the 'Ame Ha-arez' include men from all classes of society, the scholar and the priest, the merchant and the farmer, the rich and the poor. If Yeshua defended the 'Ame Ha-arez', for which there is no evidence, he was certainly not defending the "common people" against any aristocracy either of wealth or of learning.

The bitter criticisms of the 'Ame Ha-arez' which one finds occasionally in Rabbinic sources all date from the second century onward. The authorship of the statement, attributed to Hillel: "An 'Ame Ha-arez' cannot be a .Hasid," is doubtful. In Abot De Rabbi Nathan 13 it is attributed to Akiba (a c.), and we think with greater likelihood. A demoralization spread in the religious life of the people consequent upon the wars with Rome, the destruction of the Temple and the scattering of the priesthood, the Hadrianic persecutions and the closing of the schools and synagogues. Laxity in the observance of all laws set in. The Christian Church under Pauline inspiration was energetically pressing its attack on the Law generally. Pharisaic "legalism" became a controversial issue. The Rabbis therefore reached out for a stricter discipline and a greater stability in doctrine. Periods of great social decomposition create a desire among the faithful for a more rigorous discipline.

In the second century the center of the people's life was shifting from Judea to Galilee. The religious laxity of the Galileans and their general ignorance of the Law were proverbial. Their religious standards and their educational facilities were inferior to those set by the Rabbis. The term 'Am Ha-arez' now came to include not only those who did not live up to the strict observance of Levitical purity and tithes as the Haber understood it, but all those who disregarded moral and religious standards, who neither studied the Law nor taught it to their children, who would not cooperate in the heroic efforts of the Rabbis to save Judaism from total destruction.

All these conditions were non-existent in the days of Yeshua. It is doubtful, therefore, whether the fate of the "People of the Land" could have been a subject of vital and controversial interest to him or to his contemporaries.

CORRECT OBSERVANCE OF THE LAW

On the matter of the right observance of the Law—the Sabbath law, for example, or the law of divorce—the attempts to draw a critical distinction between the teaching of Yeshua on these subjects and that of the Rabbis have not proved convincing. On the subject of divorce, the Rabbis themselves differed as to the correct meaning of the Biblical law which grants a man the right to divorce his wife if "he found some unseemly thing in her" (Dt. 24: 1). Yeshua took the position also taken by Bet Shammai, that no man may divorce his wife, save on account of adultery. If Mark (10:1-12) represents the true position of Yeshua, he seems to have been opposed to divorce altogether. This is doubtful. Matthew 19:9 appears to reflect his true position. Certainly the clear meaning of the law in the Torah was to make possible the annulment of an unsatisfactory marriage, not to prohibit divorce altogether.

As regards Sabbath observance—"that the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath" (Mark 2:27)—this did not represent any break with the basic attitude of Pharisaic Judaism. In the second century of the Common Era, when Sabbath laws had been elaborated much further by the Rabbis and culminated in the thirty-nine chief categories of prohibited work, R. Jonathan b. Joseph (2 C.) employed the almost identical words of the Gospel: "The Sabbath is committed to your hands, not you to its hands." Both the Gospel and the Rabbis were probably quoting a popular folk saying long in vogue among the people.

It was an established principle that in the case of danger to human life, in war, in sickness or accident, all the laws of the Sabbath may be suspended. Even when the danger was not clear, the Sabbath law was to be suspended. Quick action in its suspension is praised, delay condemned. Yeshua's controversy with the Pharisees over the charge that his disciples plucked ears of corn unlawfully on the Sabbath day and ate them because they were hungry (Mark 2:23-28) could have involved no real difference of opinion as regards the law. Such action could quite properly be justified under the law on the ground that it was necessary to preserve life. This is true also of the other Gospel references to the Sabbath. They are rather the reflections of the antinomist (anti-Law) controversy, developed in later times by other men, which sought to establish that "the Son of man is Lord even of the Sabbath day" (Matt. 12:8), that he could abolish the Biblical law of the Sabbath altogether, as well as all other laws, and that "Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law" (Gal. 3:13). So be advised when you read from Christian commentators that Yeshua broke the Law, or changed the Law, such ideas reflect their anti-Law biases and is not trustworthy to the Judaism practiced by Yeshua.

Answer for yourself: How would I know such things?

Well, simply said, you would never know such if you have not spent time learning of Judaism, for after all, Yeshua is a Jew and practiced Judaism his whole life. In order for you to understand your Christianity correctly it requires a basic understanding of Biblical Judaism. Without such you are often misled when reading Christian commentators because their anti-Laws biases are read into accounts in the life of Yeshua which both deceive you and rob you of truth. If you desire to be a true follower of Yeshua you need to put your Christian literature down and begin to read about Judaism for that is where you find Yeshua; not in the denominations Christian churches of today which are full of replacement religion!

Some Jewish rigorists sought to make the Sabbath a day of total inactivity, even to the point of refusing to engage in self-defense on it. But long before the days of Yeshua, during the Maccabean revolt, this strict view of Sabbath observance, which was probably held by the Hasidim, had been relaxed. It was relaxed in other regards by the Sages and Rabbis of later generations in order to make it a joyous day as well as a holy day. Numerous legal fictions and simple expediencies like the 'Erub' (enlarging the private domain within which certain activities on the Sabbath, otherwise prohibited, could be carried on) were evolved to liberalize the inflexible Biblical injunctions not to go out of one's place on the Sabbath (Ex. 16: 29), not to kindle any fire in one's dwelling place (Ex. 35:3), and not to do any manner of work (Ex. 20:10). Here the motive was not "to bind heavy burdens, hard to bear, and lay them on men's shoulders" (Matt. 23:4), but to lift what in the course of time had turned out to be heavy burdens.

This, too, was the case with the dissolution of vows. Scripture makes no provision for it. Vows, often made thoughtlessly or under great stress, turned out at times to be chains too heavy for men to bear. The Rabbis accordingly declared that under certain conditions a Sage or three private persons could declare a vow invalid and absolve the taker of the vow from its consequences. The teachers of the Mishnah knew that "the rules about release from vows hover in the air and have naught [in Scripture] to support them"; nevertheless they prescribed these rules to make it easier for men. Similarly the Rabbis declared: "There never has been a 'stubborn and rebellious son,' and there never will be and there never was a condemned city and never will be." So they surrounded these inoperative Biblical laws which prescribed the death penalty for the rebellious son (Dt. 2 l:18-21) and for the city beguiled into idolatry (Dt. 13:13-18) with so many restrictions that to all intents and purposes they abrogated them. Other Biblical laws such as the ordeal by means of the Bitter Waters for the woman suspected of adultery (Num. 5:11) and the rite of the breaking of the heifer's neck in the case of the slain found in the field (Dt. 2l:1ff) were likewise abrogated.

Let us return to the Sabbath. The Jewish people throughout the ages loved the Sabbath and welcomed it as a queen and bride. It was not a day of gloom and austerity. "The Holy One, blessed be He, said to Moses: I have a precious gift in my treasure-house, called the Sabbath, and I desire to give it to Israel." "They who keep the Sabbath and hail it with delight will rejoice in Thy Kingdom. The people who sanctify the seventh day will be filled and delighted with Thy goodness. For Thou didst find pleasure in the seventh day and didst sanctify it. Thou didst call it the most delectable of days, a remembrance of creation itself."

It is of interest to note that the Sabbath had a strong attraction for many non-Jews in the pagan world, and it retained its hold for centuries upon Judeo-Christians. The Church had to fight against the translation of the Jewish Sabbath into the Christian Sunday for nearly the whole of the first millennium of its existence.

The above considerations lead one to the conclusion that there were no such decisive differences on the subject of law between Yeshua and his contemporaries as to make inevitable a complete break between Yeshua and his faith; Biblical Judaism. The break was due to other causes and was made inevitable by other hands.

Certainly the Jews did not reject Yeshua because of his alleged total abandonment of the Torah, for Yeshua never abandoned the Law in whole or in part. On the contrary, he made it abundantly clear that he came not to abolish the Law and the prophets but to fulfill them. "Whoever then relaxes one of the least of these commandments and teaches men so, shall be called least in the Kingdom of Heaven; but he who does them and teaches them shall be called great in the Kingdom of Heaven" (Matt. 5: 17-19). Yeshua did not oppose even those laws which the Scribes and Pharisees developed out of the Torah and which the Sadducees, for example, opposed (the Oral Law). He denounced these teachers because he believed that they were not practicing what they preached—and what true prophet and teacher in Israel ever failed to denounce pretense and hypocrisy? "The Scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat; so practice and observe whatever they tell you, but not what they do; for they preach, but do not practice" (Matt. 23:2-3). He denounced them for giving tithes of mint and dill and cinnamon but ignoring "the weightier matters of the law, justice and mercy and faith; these you ought to have done, without neglecting the others" (Matt. 23:23). Centuries before, Amos and Isaiah had uttered the selfsame diatribe. Yeshua's attack was certainly no new note to Jews who in their synagogues on Sabbaths and holidays listened to the readings from the prophets. They knew that Isaiah had said: "Bring no more vain offerings I cannot endure iniquity along with the solemn assembly" (Is.1:13), and that Hosea had proclaimed, "I desire mercy and not sacrifice, the knowledge of God, rather than burnt offerings" (Hosea 6:6).

Yeshua taught the Law "as one who had authority" (Mark 1:22), that is, not as the Rabbis taught it; not, for example, as Hillel taught it, in accordance with a generally accepted technique of Halakhah employed in the Schools, but as a prophet would have taught it, on direct authority received from God. All the apocalyptists spoke in the name of revelation. Yeshua saw his role as that of a prophet announcing the approach of the Millennium. He accordingly did not feel himself restricted to the Pharisaic technique of interpreting the Torah. It was generally accepted that with the coming of Messianic times prophecy would return to Israel. In fact, the return of prophecy would be one of the signs heralding the coming of the Messiah. A prophet was assured privileges under the Law which were not possessed by any other religious teacher. No prophet, of course, could advocate the abrogation of any fundamental Biblical law, such as the prohibition of idolatry, without branding himself a false prophet, deserving of death. But a prophet had considerable leeway in other matters. A prophet whose credibility was well established could, for example, order the temporary suspension of any law of the Torah (short of idolatry) in order to meet an emergency, and the people were obligated to obey him.

Yeshua evidently sought to exercise this prophetic privilege, but only in his exposition of the Law, for he announced no new laws nor did he attempt to abrogate any existing law, and he never questioned the authority of the Torah as such. When he told his disciples, "Do you not see that whatever goes into a man from outside cannot defile him?" (Mark 7:18), he was directing himself specifically to the criticism made by the Pharisees against some of his disciples who ate with hands unwashed, thus violating "a tradition of the elders" (Mark 7:2-3). The law of the washing of the hands was not a Biblical law and was not in common practice among the people at this time. The inference drawn in Mark that "thus he declared all foods clean" (7:19) is clearly unwarranted and is not mentioned in Matthew 15 where the episode is also recorded. It is out of keeping with Yeshua's consistent and positive attitude toward the Law. Mark here reflects the later Pauline influence and his anti-Law bias. This seems to be the case also with the claim, attributed to Yeshua, to forgive sins (Mark 2:5-12; Matt. 9:2-8). This has no basis in Jewish law. The core of Pauline Christianity was Yeshua's role in the forgiveness of sin—by his death and during his life. This authority came with the possession of the Holy Spirit. According to John, Yeshua bestowed the authority to forgive sins also upon the apostles, after he had breathed the Holy Spirit on them (John 20:23). Yeshua's assumption of the role of prophet certainly did not please the Rabbis, but it was not on that score that the Jewish people rejected him.

The Jews would certainly not reject Yeshua on the strength of his conception of the role of Israel in history. "Salvation is from the Jews" (John 4:22), he told the woman of Samaria. The charge which he gave to his disciples was specifically limited to Jews: "Go nowhere among the Gentiles, and enter no town of the Samaritans, but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And preach as you go, saying: 'The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand"' (Matt. I0:5-7). His mission was exclusively to the Jews. This was a deviation from the prophetic tradition. The prophets of Israel never restricted their prophecies to the Jewish people. "I appoint you a prophet to the nations," was the word of the Lord to Jeremiah. "See, I have set you this day over nations and kingdoms" (Jer. 1:10). The text of Matt. 28:19, "Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit," is clearly of a later time and was added because of the Trinitarian influence later seen in the Gentile Church.

Yeshua would not heal the daughter of the Canaanite woman who pleaded with him. He would not answer her. He was sent only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. "It is not fair to take the children's bread and throw it to the dogs"—a sentiment which cannot be paralleled for severity in the whole literature of Judaism. It was only after the distraught mother pleaded, "Yes, Lord, yet even the dogs eat the crumbs that fall from their master's table," that Yeshua recanted: "O woman, great is your faith! Be it done for you as you desire" (Matt. 15: 21-28).

In these pages I have tried to show that there was not a reason for Israel to reject the Yeshua of history as we have been told repeatedly by the Christian Church.

One thing is for certain; Israel and the Jewish people reject the Yeshua that is preached to them today.

Answer for yourself: Why is Yeshua rejected by the Jewish people today?

Answer for yourself: What is it about "the Yeshua" that the Christian Church teaches about and preaches about that is so offensive to the Jewish people that they will not accept him today?

It is to these issues we turn in the second part of this article. Shalom.

WAS JESUS REJECTED BY FIRST CENTURY ISRAEL...AND WHY IS HE REJECTED BY JEWS TODAY #2

It has been correctly observed "that Gentile Christianity in the latter first century and second century achieved a synthesis between the Greco-Oriental and the Jewish religions in the Roman Empire." Whether this synthesis was actually achieved in the first century or somewhat later through Gentile Christian influence is not the issue at hand. Three stages may be noted in the synthesis of Greco-Oriental and Jewish religion—in the transition from Judaism to Christianity.

3 STAGES IN THE SYNTHESIS OF A NEW RELIGION...THE MIXING OF JUDAISM AND HELLENISM (BASICALLY THE CULMINATION OF SUN-WORSHIP OF THE GENTILES)

Let us summarize these 3 stages:

- Yeshua and the gospel of the Kingdom
- Paul and the sacrifice on the cross
- Gospel of John and the Word become flesh.

Each was distinctive and all three were ultimately merged, though not without great controversy and confusion, in the final orthodox version.

YESHUA AND THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM

Paul is the bridge between the Judaic gospel of Yeshua concerning the coming of the Kingdom of God and the urgent need for repentance, and the thoroughly Hellenistic Logos gospel of John, wherein the Word which was God became flesh in Yeshua, the Son of God, one with the Father, who was sent by God to overcome the dominion of Satan in the world and, having accomplished his mission, returned to God. More on Paul in a moment.

"When Yeshua came into Galilee, spreading the gospel of the Kingdom of God and saying the time is fulfilled and the Kingdom of God is at hand" (Mark 1:14), he was voicing the opinion widely held that the year 5000 in the Creation calendar which was to usher in the sixth millennium—the age of the Kingdom of God—was "at hand." Induced by the popular chronology and corresponding eschatology of the day, the mass of the people came to believe that they were on the threshold of the Millennium. The advent of the Millennium carried along with it the appearance of the Messiah and his appointed activities. Yeshua's essential mission was messianic, and he sought to save men from the "birth throes" of the messianic times by calling them to swift and thoroughgoing repentance so that they may be found worthy to enter the Kingdom.

There was nothing in Yeshua's doctrine of repentance and the approaching Kingdom of God which the Jews of his day needed to reject in defense of their faith.

There was nothing in it which endangered their faith. There were apocalyptically-minded Pharisaic Jews who believed that the order of the world was about to change and that they were on the threshold of the Millennium. There were those who did not believe it. It was not an issue involving a fundamental creed. To those who did believe in the approaching cosmic catastrophe, thoroughgoing repentance would logically put them in position to be inheritors of the Kingdom.

Because there were many at that time who were expecting the coming of the Messiah, or his forerunner, to announce the beginning of a new age, the generation abounded in Messianic movements, each one fraught with grave political consequences for the peace of the nation. The Roman imperium was ruthless in the suppression of all such messianic claimants because they were suspected of seeking the overthrow of Roman authority and the reestablishment of Jewish independence. The Jewish Messiah, when he appeared, would be proclaimed King of the Jews.

When Yeshua was put to death, his faithful followers were confronted with a dreadful dilemma and embarrassment. It was to them a crushing catastrophe. Their master had been arrested, tried, condemned, and crucified.

As far as Yeshua's disciples were concerned, Yeshua's death was proof that he was not the true Messiah, that he was no different from the many others who had recently appeared as pretenders to that role and who had been liquidated by the Romans.

Answer for yourself: If Yeshua were the true Messiah, why did he die?

Answer for yourself: Was not his mission a failure? Why were not the Messianic prophecies fulfilled?

Facing obstacles such as the death of Yeshua, the people of that day understood that Isaiah 53 never referred to a person but to the whole nation of Israel which is the suffering servant, and that nowhere in the Jewish Scriptures was the expected Messiah every to be killed. This meant that the disciples were forced to come up with some answers. Two answers were soon supplied by the faithful. But what is of importance for our study is "who" came up with these answers.

Answer for yourself: Was it the Jewish followers who came up with these answers in total or were their ideas elaborated on by the soon emerging Gentile Church? You better read this question again and never forget it for the heart of the issue is wrapped up in this one question; who changed the religion of Jesus!

It was taught that Yeshua died, it was true, but he was soon resurrected. He was seen alive after his entombment. Where is he now? It was believed that he ascended to heaven and will soon reappear on earth to complete his mission and usher in the Millennium. This was the Jewish belief. With the lack of the Messianic prophecies being fulfilled the Jewish nation could only hope that their Messiah would return and fulfill the prophecies at a later date; then the Messiah would be revealed as the prophecies were fulfilled!!! So Israel waited as they yet await today the fulfillment of the "true" Messianic prophecies; knowing that what is passed off as "fulfilled Messianic prophecies" in the New Testament are little more than purposeful mistranslations, misquotations, and "fixing" of various Old Testament texts to make Jesus the Messiah of the Gentile world.

PAUL'S ANSWER: THE SACRIFICE ON THE CROSS

Answer for yourself: But why did Yeshua die?

Paul is responsible for bringing Gnostic thoughts and connecting them to the death of Yeshua. According to Paul, himself a Gnostic mystic, Yeshua died in order to atone by his death for the Original Sin with which mankind was fatefully burdened since Adam. Understand that this is not normal Gnosticism. It is true Gnosticism provided salvation to the initiate through special "gnosis" or knowledge [knowledge known only to Paul and "his gospel"] whereby one ascended a cosmic ladder of spirituality to a Gnostic Savior God. Paul incorporated a rather novel aspect in that he identified this Gnostic Savior as Yeshua. Yeshua had called upon men to repent of their own personal sins in preparation for the Kingdom, but there was also a collective sin, it was argued, the primordial sin of Adam, in which all men shared and for which no individual could atone. According to Paul's unique synthesis of various religious ideas from both Judaism, Gnosticism, and Zoroastrianism, it was necessary for the Messiah, who had been sent by God, to take upon himself the universal sin of mankind, and by his death to atone for it so that the tragic debt would be paid for all time. This was the Gentile contribution thanks to the teachings of Paul.

Now we come to Isaiah 53 and related chapters. This was Paul's contribution to the theological complex of Christianity—vicarious expiation, for which Biblical proof was soon sought and discovered in Isaiah 53. But there is only one problem and it is a major one: Isaiah in the Jewish Bible is considerably different from the Isaiah in the Greek Bible. Notice with me that Paul will use the Greek and not the Jewish Bible for his quotes and his doctrine concerning Yeshua!

Answer for yourself: Why won't Paul, himself a professed "Pharisee of Pharisees" use the Jewish Text and chooses to quote all his passages from the Greek LXX (Septuagint)?

This is a major study in itself and we have devoted a whole website to the Essene problem: http://bennoah1.freewebsites.com

We need to now understand what we find about this other website and it's relationship to Paul's unique "gospel" which is little more than a synthesis of Judaism and pagan sun-worship. The Essene problem involves the Essene's of Alexandria, Egypt, and their purposeful corruption of the Jewish Bible as it was translated into the Greek whereby a synthesis of solar and astral-myths and sun-worship was incorporated among the pages of the Greek translation of the Jewish Bible by them and its impact upon all the following translations of the Old Testament which affect every Christian Old Testament today not to mention ALL the quotes from the New Testament as taken from it which can be shown to not agree with Jewish original texts when compared. This study is a comprehensive and challenging investigation into the true origins of the Christian faith as we begin in Egypt and it's Sun-worship where astral-theology and solar-worship was personified into "savior godmen"...Osiris being both the first and the "pattern" of all that followed; tracing such solar beliefs through successive Gentile nations and making note of similarities as well as differences, until we come to the Essene/Qumran cult, who we show evolved away from Biblical Judaism and adopted these astral-theological religious ideas which had more in common with Egypt, Persian, Zoroastrianism, Buddhism, Pythagorianism, etc., than with Judaism, until we end up with a "corrupted Judaism" which is more commonly known today as Gentile Christianity; we show how these ideas were purposefully included in a falsified translation of the Jewish Old Testament called the Septuagint which becomes the Old Testament for the Christian Church; thus providing the substrate for all the quotes of the New Testament; the bottom line being that personified Sun-worship was applied to the life of Jesus as recorded in the New Testament. And without this knowledge no one will ever know that they are believing in the wrong Jesus: that is until they die and found out when the meet God face to face and are told they spent their whole life in idolatry and never knew it!

Thus the Isaiah as taken from the Greek texts contain in special places these pagan ideas of "vicarious atonement" which cannot be found if one searches the Jewish texts from which these Greek translations were supposed to come..but didn't!

We must look to Isaiah 53 and other texts containing such corruptions of the Jewish texts as this was the second step in the development of Christian theology. There is only one problem with Paul's view. When Isaiah 53 is read in context, and along with Isa 40-66 one quickly can see for themselves that Isa 53 is not about a man, or a Messiah, but about a corporate nations that has suffered for hundreds and hundreds of years at the hands of Gentile anti-Semites. If you would like proof inquire of our series on Isa. 53 and the facts will quickly become clear for you. This unorthodox interpretation was and yet is rejected by the vast majority of Jews who know their Prophets and their messages.

With Judaism, Torah was central; with Yeshua the Kingdom; with Paul it was the redemptive role of Yeshua. Their messages and the gospel of Yeshua and the gospel of Paul are not the same.

PROBLEMS WITH PAUL'S IDEA

Let us first of all say we have devoted again another complete website to Paul and the problems surround his gospel when compared with the Jewish Jesus and his gospel and message. Let us direct your attention there for further study if you desire to know the truth about Paul which lies underneath his false depiction in the New Testament as many sources exist today which reveals Paul in this "true" colors: http://paulproblem.faithweb.com

There are several problems encountered with Paul's contribution. First of all Biblical Judaism has no concept of Original Sin. That means Yeshua, being an orthodox Jew would not have believed such a premise as espoused by Paul. If Paul was a Jew, and there is much doubt in that, as many scholars today believe he was a Gentile convert, then it is not surprising that such concepts foreign to Judaism would be espoused by him. Such is the creation of the Gentile Catholic Church, the legacy of Paul, and read backward into the era of Yeshua. But to do so in a total deception and clouds the events and meaning of Yeshua's death.

Along with this is the total absence in the Torah and the Prophets of a Messiah coming to die for sin, let alone coming to die. If one does his study in these areas, you will find what I did. Pagan Gentiles and their false pagan religions are replete with examples of pagan gods dying and shedding their blood for the salvation of their followers. Along with this add the misinterpretation of Isa. 53 and no wonder the Christian believes what he does about the death of Yeshua. Again this issue is of major importance to those who look to or believe in Yeshua and we have again devoted a complete website showing how beliefs surrounding sun-worship and crucified sun-god men for thousands of years were later applied to Yeshua by Paul and the early Gentile Church; basically Yeshua becomes just another in a long line of "crucified sun-gods in the heavens before the foundation of the world." GOSPEL OF JOHN AND THE WORD BECOMING FLESH

The third step was taken in the Diaspora in the course of the missionary preaching about the resurrected redeemer to the Roman world. Here the Hellenistic idea of the Logos was widely current both among Jews and among pagans—the Logos, the Word of God, the instrument by which God, the Transcendent, worked His will in the world. The Logos took on many degrees of personification, from what might be called a pure abstraction among the Jews to a God in submission and a co-worker with the Supreme Deity. It was necessary to come to terms with this Logos idea, whether as attribute, instrument, or divine personality, if the Christian gospel was to be widely accepted. This fusing or reconciliation was achieved and is reflected in the Gospel of John. "In the beginning was the Word . . ."

THE GREAT SYNTHESIS OF THE GENTILE CHURCH

This was the third stage. Yeshua became the Logos, the incarnate Word of God, the God made flesh. Orthodox Gentile Christianity, after many bitter disputes and conflicting church councils, finally accepted and fused all three doctrines into one—the historic messianic role of Yeshua, the resurrection and the atonement death of Yeshua preached by Paul, and the Incarnation as reflected in the Fourth Gospel.

Paul marks the dividing line between Judaism and Christianity. He was a Jew of the Diaspora (most likely a Gentile convert), a rigorous monotheist, and a bitter foe of all forms of idolatry. He had observed the ceremonial law of Judaism, but reluctantly, and at a later stage abandoned it and "died to the Law" (Gal. 2:19). His final disillusionment came when he saw that some of the very champions of the Law among Judeo-Christians, like Peter and Barnabas, were acting insincerely and inconsistently in the matter (Gal.2:11-14).

Paul claims to have been extremely zealous, before his conversion, for the traditions of his fathers. But he must have been impatient with the Law even before he was converted or he could not have spoken of the Law as "a curse" from which men were finally redeemed by the atonement of Yeshua.Again such statements betray Paul's Gentile background, for no good Jew would every say such things about the Torah.

Answer for yourself: How could the vision of the resurrected Yeshua on the road to Damascus have made him such a bitter and violent enemy of the Law?

Answer for yourself: What made Paul oppose all of Judaism in his opposition to the Laws of God?

Certainly Yeshua was not of the same persuasion as Paul. There must have been other Jews, even before the days of Paul, especially in the Hellenistic Diaspora, who fretted under the restraints of the Mosaic ceremonial code, who found the Law a serious hindrance to their free social and economic contacts with the non-Jewish world, and who in their hearts preferred a purely spiritual Judaism which was based solely on faith in the One God of Abraham, and not cumbered with the legislation which Moses ordained. This was Paul's stance as well. But they had no authority upon which to base their views such as Paul found in Yeshua the Messiah who by his appearance ushered in a new age and a new dispensation. In any event, it is clear that Paul wished to bypass Moses and the covenant of Sinai altogether and return to the original covenant of Abraham, to the universal monotheistic faith, which all the nations of the earth could share. Paul wanted to reject the Torah, but he could not reject it outright. The Torah was needed to substantiate and bear witness to Yeshua and to his role in history. Paul therefore appealed from Moses to Abraham—from the Sinai covenant, which in his view was a restrictive, negative, and temporal covenant, to the covenant of Abraham which was universal and eternal. Again this is another mark of Gnosticism; using for their examples for a Law-free interpretation of the Torah subjects that existed prior to Sinai and Moses....Abraham for that matter and this is the key example used by Paul over and over again.

Five hundred years later Mohammed adopted the same line of Paul in rejecting both Judaism and Christianity. He, too, went back to the universal monotheism of Abraham. To quote from a recent study:

He [Mohammed] stated that he did not come to abrogate the Old and New Testaments, but rather to fulfill the spirit and letter of the Book. He maintained that Abraham was neither a Jew nor a Christian, but the true expounder of ethical monotheism, and that the Koran, as revealed to him by Allah, through the angel Gabriel, embodied the true revelation which the Jews and the Christians had failed to follow. Tracing his genealogy to Abraham through his son Ishmael, Mohammed claimed to be the rightful heir to Abraham's high rank.

The Law which was given to Moses at Sinai [as the greatest manifestation of God's love when He shared with mankind Who He is and how we can be in relationship with Him as obedient children] was, according to Paul, a punishment for the sins of the people of Israel. The Ten Commandments were "a dispensation of condemnation." Any written code of laws kills; only the spirit gives life (II Cor. 3:6). The Torah is such a written code. It is not merely the law of the Rabbis which Paul condemns. Actually, the law of the Rabbis was not yet as extensively developed in his day as in the subsequent centuries. It is the laws of the Torah which he principally had in mind. "Where there is no law, there is no transgression" (Rom. 4:15).

At times Paul argues that while the Law itself is not sin, it suggests and arouses sin. "If it had not been for the Law, I should not have known sin" (Rom. 7:7). Paul here has in mind not merely the ceremonial law, but the ethical law as well. "I should not have known what it is to covet if the law had not said, 'You shall not covet"' (ibid.). At other times Paul argues that the Law is too weak to safeguard against the promptings of the flesh, the evil inclinations, within him (Rom. 8:3). At best the Law was a regrettable interlude, a custodian until the true faith was revealed. "Now that faith has come, we are no longer under a custodian" (Gal. 3:25).

Paul was not interested in the healing miracles and exorcisms which others reported about Yeshua and which are found so plentifully in the Gospels. He shows little interest in the human career of Yeshua altogether. The sole miracle which profoundly stirred and affected his life was the miracle of the resurrection. He knows nothing of Yeshua as God incarnate, and nothing of the Virgin Birth. He was especially eager to preach his gospel to the Gentiles and to convert them to the faith of "Christian" monotheism, thereby erasing all distinctions between Jew and non-Jew according to the promise made to Abraham: "in you all the families of the earth will be blessed" (Gen. 12:3).

The Law, as Paul saw it, was the stumbling block to the conversion of the Gentile world to the true faith. The demands of the Law—Sabbath observance, circumcision, the dietary regulations, the laws of purity—were sufficiently exacting to discourage many from accepting the faith. Paul did not care that these "Laws" frame each Covenant and literally consist of Covenant stipulations that when obeyed guaranteed one' acceptance with God! His passionate devotion to the resurrected Yeshua and the salvation which he was convinced flowed from him for all mankind, and his proselytizing zeal, made him bitterly intolerant of the Law. "Christ is the end of the Law" (Rom. 10:4). The covenant of Sinai is Hagar, bearing children for slavery. The covenant of Abraham is Sarah. "Cast out the slave and her son!" (Gal. 4:30)

Nevertheless, Paul was prepared to practice the Law himself if by so doing he might win over those under the Law to the true faith (I. Cor. 9:2). For this reason he advised the faithful to avoid eating of food which might have been sacrificed to idols, a very grave matter in the eyes of law-abiding Jews, not because he regarded the act itself as unlawful, for "all things are lawful," but so as not to give offense and make the work of conversion more difficult (I Cor. 10:23-33). The faithful should not make an issue of food or Sabbath observance, of clean or unclean, or of circumcision, but "pursue what makes for peace" (Rom. 14: I 3f.).

Paul was thus ambivalent on the subject of the Law, even as he was on the election of Israel, his other troublesome theological inconsistency. Paul assigned to the Jewish people a special role in the new dispensation. Like Yeshua, he too evidently believed that "salvation is from the Jews." "God has not rejected this people whom he foreknow" (Rom. 11:2). "As regards the gospel they are enemies of God for your sake: but as regards election they are beloved for the sake of their forefathers. For the gifts and the call of God are irrevocable" (Rom. 11:28-29). It is an advantage to be born a Jew. "Then what advantage has the Jew? . . Much in every way. To begin with, the Jews are entrusted with the oracles of God. What if some were unfaithful? Does their faithlessness nullify the faithfulness of God?" (Rom. 3:1-3). "They are Israelites, and to them belong the sonship, the glory, the covenants, the giving of the Law, the worship and the promises; to them belong the patriarchs, and of their race, according to the flesh, is the Messiah" (Rom. 9:4-5).

The universalism of Paul was not free of local patriotism. Israel "after the flesh" was still the chosen people. At times there appears to be no contradiction in his mind between a national faith and its universal mission. At other times there decidedly is.

The total effect of Paul's opinion on the Law and his ambivalence was to denigrate its sanctity in the eyes of assimilation-minded Jews and to nullify it completely as far as Gentiles seeking conversion were concerned.

BUT FEW ACCEPTED PAUL'S THEOLOGY BACK THEN...I SAID BACK THEN

There was violent resistance among the early Judeo-Christian brotherhoods of Palestine and elsewhere to Paul's attitude toward the Law. They looked upon the Law—the Torah—as sacred and eternally binding upon themselves and their descendants, and not as a punishment but a privilege. The Jewish-Christian Ebionites, according to Irenaeus (2 C.), rejected Paul because he was an apostate from the Law. The early Christians among the Jews saw no contradiction between their loyalty to traditional Judaism and their belief in the Messiahship of Yeshua. They were aware of no new covenant or dispensation. Jewish Christians who observed the Sabbath and the festivals, circumcision, the dietary laws, and the laws of purity persisted well into the third century. Orthodox Gentile Christianity attacked them bitterly. "It is monstrous," wrote Ignatius (2 C.), "to talk of Yeshua and to practice Judaism." Some Rabbis, on the other hand, like Simon the Pious (3 c.) and Simon ben Lakish (3 c.), defended these Judeo-Christians, and did not wish to exclude them from the Jewish community.

The "burden of the Law" was regarded by loyal Jews not as a burden at all, but as a wholesome discipline. The purpose of the Law was to increase personal holiness and to refine the spirit of man,"—not to make him aware of his inability to fulfill it and thus force him to rely exclusively upon grace and redemption. God wished to increase the merits of Israel, wherefore he multiplied for them laws and commandments. The Jews found the Torah and its statutes and ordinances "perfect, reviving the soul; rejoicing the heart . . . enlightening the eyes . . . more to be desired than gold, even much fine gold; sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb" (Ps. I9: 8-10).

With everlasting love hast Thou loved the House of Israel, Thy people. Torah and commandment, statute and judgment hast Thou taught us. Therefore, O Lord our God, when we lie down and when we rise up we will meditate on Thy statutes. We will rejoice in the words of Thy Torah and in Thy commandment forever; for they are our life and the length of our days. Blessed art Thou, who lovest Thy people, Israel.

The Jewish people—Pharisees, Sadducees, and Essenes alike could not have accepted Paul's conception of the Law under any circumstances. It was utterly alien to them, as it was to the Jewish-Christians of Palestine, as it would have been to Yeshua himself, who did not oppose the Law at all and who did not seek to abrogate it for the sake of making proselytes among the Gentiles. Paul's position cut at the very roots of their faith. There has always been a debate among Jews as to the extent to which one is free to interpret the Written Law and by what technique, and whether the Oral Law is binding and to what extent. Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform Jews have continued the debate to this day. But no organized Jewish religious group ever maintained that the Law could be dispensed with altogether, that the Law was a curse or that faith alone was sufficient.

In fact, it was the Law around which the faithful in Israel rallied in the disastrous days which followed the destruction of the Temple and the collapse of the state, and again during the savage Hadrianic persecutions. The spiritual chaos of those times, the crushed and beaten morale of the people, the danger of complete prostration, are nowhere so movingly portrayed as in the Apocalypse of Baruch (2c.C.E.), written contemporaneously with some parts of the New Testament; and its exalted faith, rising from amidst the ruins, reflects the indestructible strength and nobility of a Judaism based on Torah:

"For the shepherds of Israel have perished, And the lamps which gave light are extinguished, And the fountains have withheld their stream whence we used to drink, And we are left in darkness, And amid the trees of the forest, And the thirst of the wilderness." And I answered and said unto them: "Shepherds and lamps and fountains come from the Law: And though we depart, yet the Law abides. If therefore you have respect to the Law, And are intent upon wisdom, A lamp will not be wanting And a shepherd will not fail, And a fountain will not dry up."

One is forced to the conclusion that not all the Jews who lived in the century in which Paul and other Christian antinomists preached regarded the Law as a curse! Many looked upon it lovingly, as a blessing and a refuge, even as centuries before it had been for the sorely afflicted "a lamp to my feet and a light to my path" (Ps. 119:105). One hundred and seventy-six verses are devoted in this psalm to an exuberant exaltation of the Torah...and Paul would have us believe that this is a "curse."

THE HYPOCRISY OF THE GENTILE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The Christian Church itself soon came to have laws—ceremonial laws—of its own, and in time they were codified into canons of religious and ecclesiastical practices—baptism, the eucharist, the sacraments, communion feasts, fasts and Sunday laws, penance and unction, priesthood and confession, ecclesiastical regulations and privileges, tithes, pilgrimages and shrines, rituals, incense and vestments—a Halakhah quite as meticulous and burdensome as that of the Scribes and the Pharisees. The Church, too, came to acknowledge the importance of canons in the regulation of faith and discipline. The great experiment in building a Church on pure faith did not succeed!

Certainly, no one who is acquainted with the determined and persistent struggle for the pure monotheistic faith among the people of Israel since the days of Moses and the Prophets could have assumed for a moment then or since that Judaism would find acceptance for the concept of a God such as one finds in the Fourth Gospel, a God who came down to earth, assumed human form, and suffered death for the salvation of men—a doctrine which Yeshua himself never taught. These ideas were known to the Jews long before the time of Yeshua, and had been rejected by them. They were popular and current in the ancient world. As Professor Murray correctly states:

The idea of an "only begotten son" of God was regular in the Orphic systems, and that of a son of God by a mortal woman, conceived in some spiritual way, and born for the saving of mankind, was at least as old as the fifth century B.C.... That this Saviour "suffered and was buried" is common to the Vegetation or Year religions, with their dying and suffering gods; . . . That after the descent to Hades He should arise to judge both the quick and the dead is a slight modification of the ordinary Greek notion, according to which the Judges were already seated at their work, but it may have come from the Saviour religions. The belief in God as a Trinity. or as One substance with three "personae,"…is directly inherited from Greek speculation....

Judaism had resisted these notions for centuries.

It is understandable that Fourth Gospel ideas should have found acceptance among those in the pagan world who had long been habituated to them through mystery religions, or among Gentile pagan proselytes to Judaism to whom such ideas would appear neither strange nor startling and among whom the Christian propaganda actually made its first converts. These concepts might not be strongly resisted by those who, in the Hellenistic world, entertained the current ideas of a Logos, the Word made flesh, the Incarnation of divine wisdom and the mediator between God and man. They certainly could not be accepted by Torah-trained Jews to whom the concept of the unity of God, simple and undifferentiated, was the bedrock of their faith.

The Jewish people could not but reject such a doctrine unless it were prepared to abandon the most treasured and essential conviction for which it had struggled through the centuries and of which it believed itself to be the covenanted guardian and spokesman to the world. It could not accept a renewed mythologizing of God, which it had resisted for a thousand years, even though the concept of a born, dying, and resurrected God might now be presented as a metaphysical idea and not as a concrete event which took place on a specific date in history or as a Trinitarian conception of monotheism. Judaism could find no room in its monotheism for the concept of Yeshua as "Son of God, born of the Virgin Mary" (The Apostles' Creed), or as "Very God of Very God" (Nicene Creed), or as "Perfect God and Perfect Man" (Athanasian Creed).

It was not the rejection of the Rabbinic law which made of Christianity a Gentile faith; the Sadducees had also rejected it, and centuries later, the Karaites, who remained, however violently opposed, a minority within the borders of Judaism. Though some Rabbinic authorities would have nothing to do with the Karaites, others like Maimonides urged that they be treated as erring brothers and ministered to as members of the household of Israel.

It was the rejection of all authority to the Law and the idea of a God incarnate which placed Christianity outside the bounds of Judaism. Here was the fork in the road!

Judaism rejected nothing in the teachings of Yeshua which, if accepted, would have added one cubit to its stature or in any way re-enforced its monotheism or its moral code. It was to the Gentile world that Christianity made its monumental contribution. It was upon the Gentile world that Christianity, profiting from the momentum of the frontal attack upon polytheism and idolatry which Judaism in its proselytizing activity had been carrying on, and equipped with much of Judaism's lofty and cleansing moral code, made its powerful impact. Where Judaism in its proselytizing efforts could attain only a limited success because it would not yield in its requirements for full acceptance of the Law on the part of those who sought conversion, Christianity, making no such requirements, scored heavily. Christianity was able to bring large sections of the Gentile world —then in the throes of a prolonged spiritual crisis resulting from the breakdown of its ancient beliefs and the failure of its ethical philosophies to satisfy the spiritual needs of men —to a vision of a noble faith and a clean way of life which it derived from Judaism. In so doing, Christianity contributed mightily to the spiritual progress of mankind. One cannot but salute in reverence and admiration its many teachers and leaders who through their devotion, courage, and often through their martyrdom, carried the message of their faith through the centuries to the far-flung corners of the earth.

Maimonides and other Jewish spokesmen regarded Yeshua as well as Mohammed as divine instruments in preparing the way for mankind's universal conversion to faith in the one true God. Maimonides wrote: "All these teachings of Yeshua the Nazarene and Mohammed who arose after him were intended to pave the way for the coming of the King Messiah and to prepare the whole world to worship God together as one."

But it was not the pristine monotheism of Judaism which Christianity in its missionary zeal conveyed to the Gentile world, nor exclusively its sturdy, practical, this-worldly ethics. It was a syncretistic faith—strongly salvationist in character, with a major accent on the promise of immortality—far in advance of anything in the Greco-Roman world, but not the uncompromising monotheism of Judaism. Its moral idealism excelled anything the ancient world had to offer, but it was unlike Judaism in that it was oriented toward a Kingdom not of this world.

It is time to end with a quote from a source long forgotten:

"Thus a mighty stream of influence flowed out of Judaism at the beginning of the common era and, dividing from it, watered benignly many lands and cultures. Other streams were in time to flow out of it and, again dividing, were to pursue their independent courses through history. But the river which is Judaism, replenished by the ageless springs of it's own inspiration, continued to follow its own course to its appointed destiny known only to God."

BOTH HOUSES OF ISRAEL HAVE STUMBLED OVER THE NEW TESTAMENT JESUS AND HIS JEWISHNESS #1

Answer for yourself: What is the relationship between the New Testament Jesus and Jewishness? What has happened to the "Judeo" in "Judeo-Christianity" today?

Some think that Jesus was a deceiver of the Jewish people and responsible for much of the suffering among the Jewish people since the first century. Dr. Samuel Sandmel, professor at Hebrew Union College, states, however, that "Jesus, by the standards of first-century Judaism, was in all probability a good and loyal Jew" (Samuel Sandmel, We Jews and Jesus, New York: Oxford University Press, 1973). Others say of this New Testament Jesus; He was a good rabbi; he was a prophet; he was a misguided leader of a Jewish rebellion against Rome; he was a sectarian ascetic, perhaps a member of the Essenes. Some say that he was only a Godly example; a personification of the Spiritual Christ within each child of God. Some say he was never historical or a "literal" person. Some maintain, as did the earliest Gnostic Chrestians/Christians that he was the personification of the indwelling "Krst/Christ" in man and served as a "pattern" for mankind's Spiritual evolution of his Soul. Others would later disagree. The only hope we ever come to obtaining the truth of this matter is dedicated study. Others would arise in the 2nd century and oppose such Metaphysical understandings of the Mystic Christ. But one thing is for certain: God gave the revelation of Himself through Judaism during the Age of Aries and it was shared with the whole world through great Spiritual giants like Moses, and the Prophets. The message of Israel and Judaism encompassed the whole world. Never great by world standards, the small nation of Israel was repeatedly defeated and finally dispersed throughout the world. But the Jews are unique in that they maintained their identity in the midst of a large number of diverse cultures. Thus, although a religion closely tied to one ethnic group, Judaism has had a profound effect on beliefs and practices throughout the West and the Near East. Inherent within it, and not to be mistaken or confused, was an expected "historical messiah" from the loins of King David as well as a Mystical Judaism that teaches the deeper things of God.

Above I shared with the reader an amazing catalogue of responses. But despite this divergence of opinion, to many people one thing seems certain: if a Jew becomes a follower of this Jesus (becomes a Christian) he is no longer considered a Jew and forfeits any claim to Jewish identity. The same can be said for Gentiles who become followers of Jesus; having come to faith in God through Jesus; for it is more often than not that he is indoctrinated in "Gentile-religious" practices which replaced a Jewish oriented faith which was both "modeled" and "practiced" by the Jewish Christ intended for both the "Jew" as well as the "non-Jew".

Yet the facts of history are clear. Jesus as depicted in the New Testament himself was a Jew. His original name was Yehusa. Not only was Jesus a Jew, but so were all of his first followers. The Divine Mind of the Creator was shared with mankind during these many centuries through the Jewish people and the Jewish Faith (Judaism).

A wealth of evidence is available to support this statement; e.g., Acts 21:20 and the summary of evidence from Eusebius and Josephus given in Hugh Schonfield's The History of Jewish Christianity (New York, 1933), especially chapter 3. The whole movement for the first several years of its existence was a movement within Judaism. When I share with others this fact, it often "blows their mind" to find out that all of the early followers of Jesus were "orthodox practicing Jews;" and were so until the Jerusalem Council of 50 C.E. (almost 20 years later)!

Yet we are told today, and our experience testifies, that if one is a follower of Jesus, any claim to Jewish identity is to lost and forfeited and thus replaced with Gentile "trappings". Hardly any Christian Churches today observe the Festivals of Israel or the Sabbath; instead the follow Constanine's Church calendar that replaced Judaism. Only only has to read Constantine's Easter Letter to see the birth of "replacement religion" for themselves. Our original question concerning the relationship between Jesus and Jewishness has led us to a great paradox:

How can it be that one who follows a Jew named Jesus (all of whose original followers were Jews and practiced Judaism) is no longer Jewish in even the smallest regards as to celebrations, observances, and religious beliefs?

Answer for yourself: Can we unravel the mystery of Jesus and Jewishness? I believe we can if we examine the documents of the history of the first few centuries of the common era.

THE FIRST FOLLOWERS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT JESUS WERE JEWISH

The original followers of Jesus believed that through the life and teaching of Jesus, they found the clearest exposition of life with God (Luke 24:32; Acts 2:32; Matthew 5-7). They perceived a deeper purpose for their lives, forgiveness and even the certainty of everlasting life with God.

The decades during which this movement first prospered were filled with turmoil. The mighty Roman empire ruled over the nation of Israel. In the most difficult times the Jewish people often looked for the coming of the Messiah, the descendant of King David. At his coming they were to be delivered from all oppression. The world kingdom of peace would prevail. It is not surprising then that under the heavy hand of Rome messianic hopes and speculations were nurtured in many sectors of the population (Floyd V. Filson, A New Testament History (Philadelphia: Westminster, 1964, pp. 49-57). Many political messiahs sought to overthrow the yoke of Rome. An example would be Judas the Galilean whose revolt ended in crucifixion. For a balanced appraisal of the situation I recommend Oscar Cullman, The State in the New Testament (New York: Scribner, 1956), pp. 14ff. The followers of this Jewish Christ believed that they were the generation to inherit the long awaited Jewish messiah and their hopes were set upon the setting up of the long-awaited messianic kingdom.

Meanwhile, they occupied themselves with the task of spreading the life-giving message of their master among the people of Israel. They were busy encouraging a spiritual renewal in the Jewish community. The Jewish people have known other renewal movements in their history, but none were like this one. There are some important parallels, however. For example, the Hasidic renewal movement, like the early movement for Jesus, caused much opposition among the established leadership, but gained great support among the common people. The Baal Shem Tov also was both praised and maligned. The followers of Jesus hoped to prepare the way for Messiah's reign by their preaching and new way of living; the Hasidic movement had similar overtones.

The movement for Jesus provoked much controversy, as did many first-century movements in the Jewish community. Yet no scholar of repute questions the fact that this was a Jewish movement; the evidence is too strong. Josephus, the first-century Jewish historian, describes James, the leader of the Jerusalem following, as a loyal orthodox Jew who was greatly respected by his fellow countrymen (Josephus, Antiquities, XX, 9:1...a first-century Jewish history). This reference is universally acknowledged as accurate. Josephus seems to be writing his history to give a favorable impression of his people to Roman circles. Though Josephus is maligned for his desertion of the war effort (he was a Jewish general), his history reflects positive Jewish motivations. There would be no reason to picture James in this light other than the fact that it was the case.

A wicked high priest, wishing to eliminate James's disturbing moral presence, had him murdered. However, the righteous moral influence of James was so great that the orthodox Pharisees protested to the governor, and this wicked priest was deposed. Such was the high esteem for James in the Jewish community (Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History, 11, 23...an early fourth-century history).

The book of Acts describes the Jewish followers of Jesus in these terms up to thirty years following the cross: "You see, brother, how many thousands there are among the Jews of those who have believed; they are all zealous for the law" (Acts 21:20). We know from other records of history that the communities of Jewish followers of Jesus after biblical times remained Hebraic, biblical-law-keeping communities in most cases (Irenaeus, Adv. Haer. (Against the heresies), 1, 26 (an early second-century work). Jewish heritage and identity was part of following the teachings of this Jewish Christ for both Jew and "non-Jew" well into the earliest centuries of the common era.

Answer for yourself: How is it, then, that Jewish followers, as well as Gentile followers of Jesus are no longer to be concerned with "Biblical" as well as "Jewish" manifestations of the faith of Jesus?

Answer for yourself: When did this paradoxical switch occur?

FROM A JEWISH MOVEMENT TO AN ANTI-SEMITIC GENTILE CHURCH...HOW COULD THIS HAPPEN?

One of the astounding facts of this early history was that the leaders of the movement of the Jewish Christ became convinced that Gentiles were to be given the opportunity to respond to the message of Gods salvation. Extraordinary events created this conviction.

Simon, one of the head disciples, had a vision (Acts 10) that convicted him of God's love and salvation were to be offered to Gentiles without requiring them to become Jews in the full (conversion which required circumcision), Torah-abiding sense. Paul, a student of Rabbi Gamaliel 1, was miraculously touched by God and commissioned to bring the message of Jesus to Gentiles (Acts 9, 13). This prompted, among the followers of Jesus, a council of leaders which discussed gentile participation in the movement. After deliberation, the leaders adopted an open-door policy toward Gentiles. Mainline Judaism was untouched by such events!

Jews, they decided, are called to a specific task; Gentiles, however, are not necessarily called to be Jews. Gentiles could be considered accepted by God and one with Jews in faith through the legacy of Jesus' ministry if they followed the basic way of life taught by him. This is parallel to the Jewish notion that the Noahide commands were incumbent upon all peoples (Genesis 9; see also Schonfield, A History Of Jewish Christianity, pp. 28-29 for summary).

Some rabbis did not believe that righteous Gentiles were called to follow all of the Jewish law but only those Noahide principles. Some did not. Yet the Jerusalem Council said, in effect, that there could be two wings of this Jewish messianic movement: a loyal Jewish wing and a Gentile wing. Each group was to consider the other as accepted by God. Neither was to seek to dissolve the other wing into its culture. There could be unity without uniformity; oneness within diversity. Jews were still called to be Jews, but Gentiles were not asked to take upon themselves the whole of Israel's calling as a people, but only those parts which pertained to them as Gentiles as God had declared since the book of Genesis when the Covenant of Noah was given byGod.

The issue before the council was the social form of the movement. It is clear from the Scriptures that Jesus' followers were to reflect the unity of Jews and Gentiles in a common "faith.: Table fellowship was the greatest image of this unity. This point is well made by John Yoder in The Politics of Jesus (Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1972). Yoder explains, "The heresy Paul was struggling against was not that Jewish Christians continued to be committed to keeping the law; Paul was quite tolerant of those who held to such a conviction. He went out of his way to share their ritual faithfulness when in Jerusalem. Nor was it their thinking that by keeping the law they would be saved, for the Jews, neither the Jewish Christians, ever believed such theology. The basic heresy he exposed was the failure of those. . . to recognize that the covenant had been broken open to include the Gentiles." Ritual laws were not to prevent Jews and Gentiles from showing that they were brothers by eating at a common table (Marcus Barth, "Jew & and Gentiles: the Social Character of Justification in Paul," Journal of Ecumenical Studies, Spr. 68).

In Jewish areas, the congregations were predominantly Jewish, in Gentile areas predominantly Gentile. In areas of mixed population congregations were mixed. All these forms were natural and perfectly valid. There was no quota system for maintaining proportions. This validity remained as long as actions were taken to show unity and acceptance of the others in their various styles of practice and calling. "Paul's great concern for the contribution being collected, largely from Gentiles, for the Jewish believers in Jerusalem reflects this unity (I Corinthians 16:1-4; 2 Corinthians 9).

This decision was a great spur to the movement of Gentiles who maintained a belief in Jesus. Soon Gentile followers of the Jewish Christ outnumbered Jewish followers. However, the leadership of living disciples kept the movement in accord with the basic decision of Acts 15. Unfortunately this understanding was soon lost. The period from 60-90 C.E. has been designated by one scholar as the tunnel period of biblical history (S. G. F. Brandon, The Fall of Jerusalem and the Christian Church (London: S.P.C.K. 1951). Brandon's point is that events of great importance were taking place and we have little source material from the period. When the dust of war and tragedy settled, the situation had drastically changed.

THE EARLY GENTILE CHURCH AND THEIR BIASED -ANTI - SEMITIC WRITINGS STILL INFLUENCES US NEGATIVELY TODAY

The Gentile followers of Jesus Christ gradually began to understand Jesus in non-Jewish ways. Though Jesus and all his first followers were loyal Jews, Jewish practice and identity came to be considered antithetical to what was then dubbed "Christianity." The word Christianity was derived from Christos, a Greek translation of the word Messiah. Both mean words mean "anointed." The New Testament was written in Greek because it was a universal language. However, this created a gap between the church and its original Hebraic roots. Besides the terrible problem of the purposeful mistranslations and misquotations in this Greek translation of the Jewish Scriptures whereby numerous verses had been altered to reflect the Essene belief in a cosmic "messiah" instead of a "Davidic messiah," we have also the passages in the New Testament condemning general hypocrisy among religious leaders and these were now interpreted as a condemnation of all things Jewish by the Gentile church.

The fall of, Jerusalem to the armies of Rome (70 C.E.) was incorrectly taken as further proof to these Gentiles of God's rejection of the Jewish nation and encouraged them to intensify their rejection of the value of Jewish practice and identity. This is the central, valid point of Brandon's book. Incorrectly, the Gentile church came to see itself as the new, true Israel which had replaced the old nation. The claim of the nation was completely dismissed. Israel as a nation was finished, rejected! This was not biblical theology, for Paul had declared that the "gifts and the call of God are irrevocable" (Romans 11), and that Israel is "beloved for the sake of their forefathers." This anti-Jewish theology by the Gentile Church, or what one writer has called the "Christian anti-Jewish polemic," caused great ambivalence to the Scriptures which Christians called the Old Testament (Rosemary Ruether, Faith and Fratricide, The Theological Roots of Anti-Semitism, New York: Seabury Press, 1974, pp. 117-139). Ruether's book provides a superb summary of these points with thorough documentation.

THE EARLY CHURCH FATHERS REJECT THE JEWISHNESS OF JESUS AND THE EARLY CHURCH

Consequently, Gentile church fathers of the next centuries spoke of Jews and Judaism with great disdain. Though they were men of wisdom, their vision was not free of blind spots. A few tragic examples reflect the direction of the institutional church.

The Epistle of Barnabas at the end of the first century speaks negatively of Jewish biblical practice (Epistle of Barnabas IV a late first-century pseudonymous work). H. L. Ellison says concerning this epistle, "Already the so-called Epistle of Barnabas, which may go back to the last decade of the first century, uses such language about the Jews, Judaism and the Law, as to make any effective contact between the two sides virtually impossible. As soon as it had the power the Church did its utmost to defeat God's purpose. It persecuted and bullied, thereby automatically putting itself in the wrong. It spread the vilest calumnies about the Jews" (H. L. Ellison, The Mystery of Israel Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1966, p. 82).

Ignatius of Antioch in the same century is clear also concerning the uselessness of Jewish things (Ignatius, To the Philadelphians, VI, I an early second-century letter). Request our article from Bet Emet and I will share with you how hatred toward the Jews were espoused wholesale by the earliest non-Jewish writers who considered themselves followers of Jesus.

Justin Martyr in his Dialogue with Trypho speaks in the most condescending terms to his Jewish opponent. Justin could not understand why Jewish followers of Jesus were maintaining their biblical-cultural identity and practice. They will not go to hell for it, he said, but it is not good. He did not understand that this was their way of expressing their faith in God and their mode of perceiving His meaning. Justin thought the coming of Jesus eliminated these things (Justin Martyr, Dialogue with Trypho. Note the general tone of these early second-century dialogues).

Practices developed by the Gentile church were seen as pagan by the Jews. Nothing in the church enabled them to see that Jesus was the Jewish Messiah for nothing in the church appeared to be Jewish. Ellison states that the church "scandalized them by apparently worshipping images and giving honor to mortal men and women which should have been reserved for God alone" (Ellison, pp. 82-83).

Statutory aids to worship, the veneration of saints and of Mary (who was the mother of a gentile god named Jesus) summarize how Jews perceived the church. Loyal Jews could see no sense in being followers of Jesus in this context.

Even though Judaism was the original context of the faith, the Christian polemic against Jews and Jewish practice continued. With Bishop Ambrose the theological polemic was translated into external acts (James Parkes, The Conflict of the Church and the Synagogue, New York: Atheneum 1969, pp. 166-167).

To burn a synagogue was no sin, for the Jews were said to have rejected Jesus. (This overlooked the great company of Jews who were followers of Jesus, and in any case, provided no justification for burning synagogues.)

Augustine explained the continued existence of the Jewish community as being only for the purpose of witnessing to the truth of Christianity. The reprobate state of the Jews would prove that the church alone was true Israel (Augustine, Tract against the Jews 6(8)).

The most viscous anti-Semitic attack by the Gentile church comes from St. John Chrysostom. Chrysostom was upset because many Christians in Antioch frequented the synagogue seeking to understand their faith through its Jewish roots. This had to be stopped for, according to Chrysostom, Christianity eliminates the value of Jewish practice and identity. To wean Christians from such practices, he painted a picture of the Jews as veritable devils. His eight sermons against the Jews are remarkable for their poisonous hate.

All of this would have been only a manifestation of religious bigotry had it not been for another momentous change: the emperor Constantine became a Christian and soon made Christianity the official state religion. The wedding between church and state translated religious bigotry into economic and social sanctions. James Parkes's research in this area is outstanding. He catalogues the history of legislation in the first eight centuries of the common era. The church-controlled state maintained this posture of discrimination of the Jews for fifteen centuries.

The images of the "insidious Jew" were the images that prepared the way for Auschwitz. Nazi leaders defended themselves by saying that they were following in this tradition of the institutional church. The church could not understand this because, though it had sought to lower the value of the Jewish people, it had not pursued the implication that the Jews had no right to exist. Since the institutional church had attributed to the Jew no positive value, there was no church tradition which could off-set Hitler's onslaught.

In fairness we must mention those individual Christians who stood outside of this tradition of death. In their close walk with Jesus they gained a deep love for Jewish people and risked their lives for their Jewish friends. Sadly, this has always been a small minority of "Righteous Gentiles."

Some have stated that the origin of this attitude was the early Jewish persecution of Christians. Although there was fierce persecution against Jewish followers of Jesus, Jewish persecution of Gentile Christians is now considered by the most competent scholars in the field as an unwarranted assumption. There were some minor incidents, but these were nothing in comparison with the hate received (Accounts are found in Ellison, pp. 82-84; Parkes, chapter 4; and Ruether, chapter 3, especially 180-181).

The irony of all this is that the disciples of Jesus opened the door to anti-Jewishness by adopting a liberal policy to Gentiles. They were allowed into the movement without being forced to take upon themselves a full Jewish identity. This freedom from cultural restriction spurred the growth of the Gentile wing of the movement. Though Judaism was the original identity and way of life in the movement, the Gentile majority took over the helm and would not allow Jewish identity within it. During the inquisition in sixteenth century Spain, those of Jewish origin who claimed to follow Jesus were burned at the stake for having Passover seders. The great vision of a Jewish and a Gentile wing of one movement, each accepting the other without dissolving the other was lost.

BOTH HOUSES OF ISRAEL HAVE STUMBLED OVER JESUS CHRIST AND HIS JEWISHNESS #2

THE NAZARENES

Answer for yourself: What happened to the great Jewish wing of the Jesus movement?

Known to historians as the Nazarenes or Ebionites, Jewish followers of Jesus broke from the Gentile wing and were branded as heretics by the Gentile church because they maintained Jewish loyalty. Today many texts are replete with such stances of bias as the truth has been lost through history by many.

Even earlier the "Nazarenes" (Messianic believing Jews in Jesus as the long awaited Messiah) were estranged from their very own Jewish community. There were several reasons for this. Put simply, however, the majority of the leaders of the Jewish community rejected the Nazarene viewpoint. Through the influence of these leaders who did not ascribe the title of Messiah to Jesus, the Jewish community as a whole did not follow nor accept Jesus as their Messiah. It is a fact that after the death of Jesus the Jewish prophecies relating to the long-awaited Messiah stood yet unfulfilled. He had not come because nothing had changed. This bears much study and we at Bet Emet have many articles on such events which help explain the rejection of Jesus by mainline Judaism as its Messiah. There are valid points for this "rejection" that need to be understood by followers of Jesus today. Personally I believe, sine the vast majority of the world has centered around Jesus to this day and because the knowledge of God went into the Gentile world in Jesus's name, that more than likely Jesus will be the coming Messiah, but as I have stated elsewhere this is just a "hunch." But these points of rejection by mainline Judaism need to be understood in all fairness because not only do our Jewish brothers still await the fulfillment of the Jewish Scriptures and the coming of Messiah, the Christian awaits for his coming and the fulfillment of them as well. For those interested I recommend Hugh Schonfield's book The Passover Plot which makes a case for Jesus being the Messiah but yet not fulfilling the many Messianic Prophecies expected of "the" Messiah. It has helped me more than you know to deal with the tension between expected prophecies unfulfilled and the centrality of this man from Nazareth in the history of mankind.

THE MESSAGE IN THE BOOK OF ACTS

The beginnings of this side of the story are also to be found in the book of Acts. The Nazarene movement reaped the anger of part of the Jewish community basically for two reasons. First, the community found it difficult to believe that the Messiah could come without setting up the world kingdom of peace as the Hebrew Scriptures prophesied. In fact, this was not done by Jesus while he lived, but the adoption of the Essene's second coming of their Teacher of Righteousness was later applied to Jesus and today Christians likewise hope for a second return of Jesus in which the "lion will lay down with the lamb." Because leaders were divided on the concept of "two Messiahs" the people were misinstructed concerning their Messiah. Also, the shameful death

Jesus suffered was incompatible with the common concept of Messiahship. The Nazarene Jews argued that according to Scripture the Messiah would suffer before reigning as King as seen in Daniel chapter nine where Messiah is to be "cut off." Not all agreed. The debate still rages today.

Second, the Nazarene movement stole the Gentile proselytes from the synagogue. There were many Gentile pagans —"God-fearers"— who saw that Judaism was superior to the pagan religions. Through the work of the Pharisees (predecessors of the rabbis), they attached themselves to the synagogue. They were not willing, however, to become fully Jewish (conversion) by undergoing a Mikveh bath, circumcision and taking upon themselves the full yoke of the Jewish law (613 Laws and Mitzvoth when as "God-Fearers" they had only 66).When the Nazarenes offered them the same moral and ethical values they appreciated in Judaism without requiring adoption of the whole of Judaism, Gentiles came in droves to the Nazarene side, for circumcision (a main hindrance in conversion) was not required by the Messianic community (Nazarenes) for full fellowship with God and His people. But, this was nothing new, for such had been decreed since Genesis with the Laws of Adam and the Laws of Noah, however, the ruling Pharisee party headed by R. Shammai so "hated" Gentiles that no efforts to proselytize them was being made during the days of Jesus. And if any attempt was to be made at all, then "full-conversion" with circumcision was mandatory by Shammai. Such surgical procedures on grown men, with their attendant infection and often death, was not welcomed by the vast majority of pagans and was a chief hindrance in their coming to the God of Israel, thus relegating them to remain as pagans which ensured their loss of "eternal life" once they die. Jesus and the Nazarenes came to reject such traditional treatment of the non-Jew and revived the ancient teaching; through acceptance into Covenant by God through the Laws of Noah the non-Jews need no longer suffer circumcision for inclusion into the people of God as intended by Shammai and other Jews who hated Gentiles. Jesus and events after his death, which were yet attributable to him, opened the door for salvation and inclusion of the non-Jews into the Israel of God through his followers' ministry. Beginning with Paul, and later including the Apostles, the evangelization of the Gentile world was begun in earnest following the Church Council mentioned in Acts 15. It was in the aftermath of Jesus' death and believed resurrection that the mission to the non-Jewish world was begun. In a way you can see Paul saying that they are “saved” by the blood (death) of Jesus.

Now understand what most do not today. These non-Jews were “saved” not by some miracle attached to the red blood cells of Jesus, but by his death which literally catalyzed a movement from within a previous Gentile hating Judaism that would not accept them. Thanks to Jesus and his legacy through his followers no longer would Judaism lift up obstacles such as adult circumcision that had previous precluded non-Jew’s acceptance into the Israel of God by those like Shammai and other Jews who both hated and were bigoted toward non-Jews.

Still, these two sources of tension were not fatal to the relationship between the Nazarenes and the larger Jewish community. There were after all many rival sects within the Jewish community, yet the Nazarenes continued to make headway. The more orthodox in practice among them were not excluded from the Jewish community and the synagogue. Other events proved to be tragically divisive.

THE 70 C.E. WAR AND THE FURTHER SEPARATION OF THE FOLLOWERS OF Jesus

The first Jewish revolt against Rome (70 C.E.) was a stunning defeat. Not only were Jewish hopes of independence snuffed out, but reconciliation between Nazarene Jews and the larger Jewish community became an unlikely dream. Many Nazarenes did not fight for Israel in this revolt. A minor reason for this was probably that the teaching of Jesus produced pacifistic tendencies. The major reason was that Jesus had predicted the fall of Jerusalem. He counseled his followers to flee for safety when they saw Roman armies approaching (Luke 21: 20-22; Matthew 24:15-20). Though the Nazarenes pleaded that they were loyal Jews (and had left Jerusalem in obedience to Jesus), they were branded as traitors. While some of the people became Nazarene Jews because of the prophecy of Jesus, the leaders of the Jewish community became hostile. Soon after, the prayer condemning heretics—with Nazarenes and the followers of Jesus primarily in mind—was added to the eighteen benedictions which is the standard central prayer of the synagogue service (Schonfield, pp. 40-46, 60-63, 88ff). Schonfield's history of the break between the church and the Nazarenes, and the Nazarenes and the larger Jewish community has not been surpassed. See also Parkes as quoted from the first article, pp. 106-115.

Perhaps in time these wounds would have healed. But there was no time. In the 130s of the common era another revolt against Rome was led by Bar Cochba and this time supported by the Nazarene Jews. They intended to show their loyalty to Israel! They may have thought that this was the final battle leading to the return of Jesus and his worldwide reign. During the revolt, the venerated rabbi, Akiba, proclaimed Bar Cochba to be the Messiah. The Nazarenes thereupon pulled out of the revolt since believing Jesus was the Messiah expected to return. Jesus alone was Messiah for them. Bar Cochba massacred those who did not give him unquestioned loyalty (see Parkes, p. 93, and Justin Martyr, First Apology, chapter 31, 6).

The Nazarene Jews were not exceptions. Again they were branded as traitors despite Akiba's responsibility for his mistake. Jewish tradition retains no honor for the ruthless Bar Cochba, yet the Nazarene Jews were not accepted back into the community.

The Nazarene Jews were thus ostracized by both the Jewish community and the Gentile church. The synagogue surpassed all rival sects and orthodox rabbinical Judaism became the Jewish view. Church-synagogue relations deteriorated through the centuries, for both had rejected the only bridge of understanding—the Nazarenes.

The same is true today, for the hope for the synagogue is not the Gentile church, but the Messianic Gentile assemblies that are springing up everywhere today who have studied enough to know the errors of the Gentile Church and no longer follow such sinful ways. Bet Emet is one such hope. As the church and the synagogue became established in highly defensive postures, neither learned from the other. Nazarene Jews still gained some adherents but, largely ignored, they slowly dwindled until Mohammed destroyed their last communities. Through debate and persecution, the theologies of both Jews and Gentiles were honed into sharper opposition.

The synagogue rejected, and still rejects the Gentile image of Jesus projected by the church, and the Gentile Christian Church rejected a Jewish view of Jesus. Both houses of Israel have stumbled over the Messiah in fulfillment of prophecy.

Answer for yourself: How can we expect the Jew to listen to the Christian message when we tell him of a Jew named Jesus who changed the Sabbath to Sunday, thus violating the Fourth Commandment, who made non-existent the Festivals of the LORD which were proclaimed "forever" by His Father, and who sanctions the perversion of the tithe as practiced by the vast majority of Gentile Churches today who build more television stations than feed and clothe people, and who has a Greek godman as the center of all of the whole movement which is little more than personified Sun-Worship?

THE GENTILE CHURCH NEEDS TO HEAR THIS..AND HEAR IT CLEARLY

Let us never forget that Matt. 25 defines plainly that after the coming of Messiah the nations who had not "followed the true message of God" will be judged during the "sheep and goats" judgment. Notice if you will the criteria of judgment. It is not on whether they "believe in Jesus," "believe in some kind of Osiris atonement connected with Jesus's death," "are under the blood of the lamb or the bull" and not if they "built more television stations and spread the Gospel" (if you have ever studied a little comparative religion then you know of what I speak).

It is truly shocking to learn the truth, but the nations will be judged worthy of eternal life if they fed the poor, gave drink to those thirsty, took in the homeless, clothed the naked, visited the sick, and visited those in jail.

Answer for yourself: Is this the salvation message you have heard preached in your church?

Notice that these are not called "lost" as the church would call them today, but "righteous" by Jesus and, to top if off, he will tell them "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Notice these were not the "bride" taken in the rapture, but those "unbelievers" who remained, yet practiced the "faith of Jesus" better than many "church-folk" today who are led to give their money to build bigger churches, higher steeples, gyms, and television stations which, which sadly for the most part, teach just the opposite of what Jesus said mattered for "eternal life."

Reference Matt. 19 about "what must I do to inherit eternal life" along with Matt. 25 and begin to practice the "faith of Jesus" instead of Gentile one which only "believes in him." Such is the true salvation message of Jesus and all of Judaism. It has never changed and never will! Don't wait until you die to find that out!

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE JEWISHNESS OF Jesus...WHO HAS IT?

This tragic story, as mitigated by some good Biblical monotheism, though often in a form unpalatable to Jews, was spread to Gentile lands by who else, other Gentiles. Despite the alteration of Jesus and his faith by the Gentile Church, the Bible was a good and powerful influence in many cultures. The progress of the last two centuries in science can be traced to biblical roots. This point is well-known and has been argued by W. F. Albright, Herbert Butterfield and Alfred North Whitehead in many of their works.

When the Scriptures became available and were known in the major languages, pagan practice, superstition and magic decreased. Even pagan influences in the church were greatly eliminated through the Reformation, which stressed knowledge of the Bible.

But yet between Israel and the Gentile church misunderstanding remained.

Answer for yourself: Was there an event at the root of the church-synagogue conflict that neither fully comprehended, resulting in tragedy?

I believe there was. This event was the life, death and believed resurrection of Jesus. A true understanding of Jesus as a loyal Jew who loved his heritage would be an antidote to anti-Semitism; this understanding is needed by church and synagogue. The church would then appreciate Jewish people, never seeking to assimilate them into the larger Gentile community or convert them to their pagan ways or their pagan godman. The synagogue could find in Jesus the true son of Israel and the personal embodiment of the meaning of the Torah. A bridge between church and synagogue can be made without dissolving the distinctive of either. To clarify these concerns, let's look at last at Jesus himself.

THE MEANING OF Jesus...WHAT DID HE REALLY ACCOMPLISH

For the nation of Israel the first century of the common era was a volatile period. Many false messiahs fomented revolt against the hated Roman oppressor, leading time and again to mass crucifixions. Into this turbulent scene came Jesus.

The records of Jesus in the New Testament (although erroneous in context) claim his Davidic descent (Matthew 1: Luke 3). He is the one who is presented who will be Messiah. Yet it soon becomes quite clear that his purpose at this time of visitation differed from common conceptions of what the Messiah would do as taught by the Prophets and expected by the people. According to prevailing ideas the Messiah would destroy the enemies of Israel and set up a Jewish-dominated kingdom of peace. The very word Messiah inspired revolution. As Jesus did not come to start a revolution, he was reluctant to use the term Messiah because of these connotations. Thus Jesus chose a more neutral phrase, son of man, which he could fill with his own content.

Answer for yourself: Since the true Jewish Prophecies were not fulfilled in or after the life of Jesus, then what did he really accomplish?

Careful examination of the records reveals several of Jesus's purposes. One was to teach the "truth." As the great rabbi, Jesus interpreted the Torah in its true, essential meaning. He emphasized the issue of the motives of the heart and not merely the external act. The Torah was the instrument with which he uncovered the underlying motives that led to violations of God's standards.

Speaking on the command against murder, for example, he said, "You have heard that it was said to the men of old, 'You shall not kill; and whoever kills shall be liable to judgment.' But I say to you that everyone who is angry with his brother shall be liable to judgment (Matthew 5:21)." In relation to oaths he said, "I say to you, Do not swear at all, either by heaven, for it is the throne of God, or by the earth, for it is his footstool, or by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great King. And do not swear by your head, for you cannot make one hair white or black. Let what you say be simply "Yes" or "No"; anything more than this comes from evil (Matthew 5:34-37)."

In other words, complete honesty is the standard of God. A true motive of righteousness needs no oath to assure honesty.

Continuing, Jesus spoke of sexual purity, saying, "You have heard that it was said, 'You shall not commit adultery.' But I say to you that everyone who looks at a woman lustfully has already committed adultery with her in his heart" (Matthew 5:27-28). The problem must first be handled at this level. Concerning revenge he said, "I say to you, Love your enemies and pray for those who persecute you, so that you may be sons of your Father who is in heaven; for He makes his sun rise on the evil and on the good, and sends rain on the just and on the unjust. For if you love those who love you, what reward have you? Do not even the tax collectors do the same? And if you salute only your brethren, what more are you doing than others? Do not even the Gentiles do the same? You, therefore, must be perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect (Matthew 5:44-48)."

With the Torah, Jesus stressed that vengeance is God's business and not our personal right (Deuteronomy 32). He taught, as does the Torah, that if even our enemy's ox has fallen under its load we should help. Jesus drew out the implications of this teaching and repeated the Torah's call for perfection (Leviticus 17).

All of Jesus's teaching emphasized a return to God for forgiveness and an urgent plea for a change of heart. He taught and lived the way of love. Only as people act out of a motive of love that is not self-serving is there hope. In compassionate love Jesus healed the sick, associated with the social outcast, and even died a cruel death with forgiveness on his lips (Luke 23:34). This was Jesus, the supreme teacher.

Jesus was also the supreme prophet in the great tradition of the Jewish prophets. To the sinner, the troubled and the needy he offered love and forgiveness (John 4; Matthew 8:10-13). To the religious hypocrite he thundered biblical prophetic denunciations. He was concerned to establish a simpler, spiritual Torah Judaism that would be applicable to all people. The religious leaders at that time often despised the common people because they could not live up to the rigorous demands of the ritual tradition ("For example, the tradition concerning the "am ha aretz' (the people of the land, that is, commoners) is reflected in the Bible in John 7:49 and various Talmudic passages).

Jesus condemned this attitude and spoke for a simplified spirituality with depth. It would be applicable to farmers, artisans and traders, not just to full-time students. Jesus spoke with authority and never rejected the validity of the Torah, for he said, "Think not that I have come to abolish the law and the prophets; I have not come to abolish them but to fulfill them. For truly, I say to you, till heaven and earth pass away, not an iota, not a dot, will pass from the law until all is accomplished. Whoever then relaxes one of the least of these commandments and teaches men so, shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven; but he who does them and teaches them shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven (Matthew 5:17-19)."

Jesus also came to fulfill the meaning of man being created in the image of God. Scripture teaches that, more than any animal, plant or even the whole material creation, human beings, created in God's image, are supposed to reflect the nature and character of the Creator. We are to reflect this image in wise rulership over the earth, in love, and in the active exercise of our moral capacity. But according to the Bible, all people have fallen far short of God's standards of perfection (Psalm 14:1-3; 53:1-3; Romans 3:23); all have turned to selfish ends instead of godly ends; all worship created things—money, success, power and security—instead of the Creator. People are fallen, separated from God, alienated. In the words of the prophets, the covenant has been broken and God has become distant, hidden. We do not sense God's reality and purpose in our lives.

In Jesus, we see the true meaning of the image of God, undiminished and unmarred. We see in him what all of us are meant to be like. In his love, compassion, justice and mercy, we also see what God is like. This is how he is the son of man and the true image of God. Indeed, he is the meaning of God focused in human form. This is the true message of incarnation if there be one.

What I say next will anger almost every Christian. The same could be said for many great Rabbis, Prophets, and righteous men of Israel!

The prophet Isaiah glimpsed the truth of an "anointed's" divine nature when he said, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given and the government shall be upon his shoulders and his name shall be called Wonderful-Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government there will be no end, and upon the throne of David. . . to establish it ... for evermore" (Isaiah 9:5-6). This idea is attributed to any who claim to be an anointed sent by God, whether Hezekiah or Jesus.

Yet amazingly, Jesus said he came to die. He lived out the true meaning of Judaism. He loved and celebrated the feasts—the celebration of Pesach was one of his last acts before his death. And he even used Pesach symbolism to describe the meaning of his death for us: Jesus, realized that the Kingdom of God would be postponed and that he would suffer the death of all who taught it and contributed efforts to establish it in light of the conflict with the then-existing Kingdom of Rome. Israel was not worthy of the Kingdom at that time as her repentance and lack of love for all men disqualified her from accepting her eternal role in the salvation of all mankind. Just refer back to Shammai's ideas concerning the non-Jews. God could not reward them for such hatred and bigotry. Repentance was not wholesale. Jesus saw that in his rejection in Galilee when he sent out the 12 and the lack of testimony of the repentance of the people along with the shallowness of their reports upon their return. Jesus realized that if he did not succeed among those who knew him best, what chance would he have when he would take the same message to Judah and Jerusalem. Jesus came to an understanding that his purpose at this time was not to be used as God's agent for the establishment of the long-awaited, worldwide kingdom of peace. Rather, through his death he would open the way for fallen people (non-Jews as well as Jews) to turn back to God. Centuries before Jesus, the prophet Isaiah explained it best:

G-ds's anointed messenger (call him or them "Messiah," as part of the Israel of God), is a suffering servant: He (the Jewish nation which includes the Messiah when he comes) was despised and rejected by men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; and as one from whom men hide their faces, he was despised, and we esteemed him not (Isaiah 53:3).

He, as a part of the Nation of Israel, is an innocent sufferer: And they made his grave with the wicked and with a rich man in his death, although he had done no violence, and there was no deceit in his mouth (Isaiah 53:9).

He, as a part of the Nation of Israel, is a willing sufferer: He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; like a lamb that is led to the slaughter, and like a sheep that before its shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth (Isaiah 53:7).

He, as a part of the Nation of Israel, suffers for the sins of Israel: By oppression and judgment he was taken away; and as for his generation, who considered that he was cut off out of the land of the living, stricken for (because of) the transgression of my people (Isaiah 53:8)?

He, as a part of the Nation of Israel, is the sin-bearer and the means of redemption: But he (the nation from whom the Messiah will come) was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; upon him was the chastisement that made us whole, and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned everyone to his own way; and the Lord has laid on him the iniquity of us all.... He poured out his soul to death; and was numbered with the transgressors; yet he bore the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors (Isaiah 53:5-6, 12).

He, as a part of the Nation of Israel, saw that his death is followed by resurrection: When he makes himself an offering for sin, he shall see his offspring, he shall prolong his days; the will of the Lord shall prosper in his hand; he shall see the fruit of the travail of his soul and be satisfied (Isaiah 53:10-11).

For a fuller understanding of the nation of Israel as the Suffering Servant and the role of Messiah within it, I suggest you get and read our series of articles on Isaiah 53 and then all will be made plain for you once you understand the correct interpretation of Isaiah 53. The Gentile Church today lacks such an understanding thus they read into Jesus's death concepts not intended by God or given by God through Isaiah the prophet.

WHAT SHOULD THIS MEAN TO YOU TODAY?

Answer for yourself: So what should this mean to you personally?

Well, God respects man's power of choice, and so in this age all Gentile peoples have an opportunity to turn back to God through the legacy of Jesus's work. The Law, especially as seen through the teaching of Jesus, and others, shows us that we have fallen far short of God's perfect standard. Only perfection will be acceptable to God (Leviticus 17; Matthew 5) so that none of us can possibly approach God on the basis of our own good works (Mitzvoth) alone. God has provided another way of approach called Teshuvah ("repentance") in the Jewish tradition. Repentance is turning from sin to God. In Teshuvah we depend upon God's forgiveness alone (Psalm 51).

In the accounts of Jesus's death at the hands of Rome and through the plotting of corrupt collaborationists in the Jewish state, we see the terrible results of human evil. All of us are implicated in the dilemma of sin which led to the death of God's anointed as well as all other of His "anointed servants" over history. God has sent many and has in our day as well if only we would hear His voice within the voice of others. We deserve to suffer and die for our own sins. Jesus was sinless; he did not deserve to die. But that can be said for many other messengers that God has previously sent. Yet the good news of the mercy of God is that when we own up to our own sin and turn from it, then God accepts and forgives us. Through our spiritual union with God through the legacy of Jesus and his followers who, because of his death and believed resurrection, took the Covenant of Noah into all the world, we receive a covenant with God, are given new hearts (Jeremiah 31:31-34; Ezekiel 36:25-27) and are considered righteous by God. This was the clear message of Isaiah. Thus peace and fellowship with God are established through repentance and faith in God.

There is wonderful good news in the teaching of the Scriptures. They teach that if we return to God on this basis, he will become a reality in our lives. His Spirit, the Ruach haKodesh will abide with us. As we live according to God's will by the power of his Spirit, our prayers will be answered. As we fellowship with the creator God who is love and justice and follow his will revealed in the Scriptures, we will begin to love all people.

Beneath all the conflicts between the church and the synagogue we can now glimpse the true meaning of Jesus. The meaning of Jesus is good news—a Jewish message for all the world (both Jew and Gentile). As Jesus's earliest followers were Jews, so Jews today continue to be Jews and to live lives of biblically consistent Judaism. Likewise, our identity as Gentiles is not lost in any way because we are grafted into Israel; rather than lost, it is fulfilled in the deepest sense. We know God! We know of His gracious offer of His Covenant to the non-Jew and no longer make up our own! He loves us and has forgiven us! And perhaps, God willing, Messianic Gentile followers of Jesus (Bet Emet Ministries as well as others who know and appreciated the Jewishness of Jesus) can be that bridge of understanding between the Gentile church and the Jewish synagogue that will unite them, without destroying either.

The paradox of Jesus and Jewishness is solved when we see the meaning of Jesus. It is a paradox born of fear and prejudice which is best laid to rest. If you decide to be a follower of Jesus, then understand that means adopting a Biblical life-style and this called by no other name than "Jewish." Find a fellowship of other like-minded followers, or start your own, and grow in the study of the Scriptures (For further reading: Basic Christianity by John R. W. Stott (Downers Grove, IL: Intervarsity Press, 1971), Christianity Is Jewish by Edith Schaeffer (Wheaton, IL: Tyndale Publishers, 1975), and The Lord from Heaven by Leon Morris (Downers Grove, IL: Intervarsity Press.). Seek to live from this day forward for God and follow His Torah. Test every spirit by the Word (Torah-the Bible Jesus used), and that includes those you esteem as your spiritual leaders. If what they teach is contradicted by the Jewish Scriptures and the Jewish Bible (not the corrupted Christian Bibles), then find a place which will teach you the truths of God's Word without compromise, for the way is narrow, and few that be shall find it. Shalom.

WHO ME? GUILTY OF IDOLATRY?

By agreeing to read this article you have shown that you have the courage to critically examine your faith. These thought-provoking articles and the questions they elicit are directed toward you, the educated Christian. This is one in a series of articles that examine Christianity for both truth and error as it now stands.

Throughout history believers have simply followed the crowd. Children have grown up believing what their parents and their priests said instead of making their own decisions. By reading and attempting to answer the questions presented in Bet Emet's Newsletters you are proving that your faith is based upon your own thought and convictions. You are no longer a passenger on the "bandwagon" of religious fanaticism, but a pioneer in the search for truth.

Discussing any religious faith on the basis of logic and knowledge is a difficult task for two reasons.

- First, the majority of "believers" inherit their religion from their parents, and most of them do not use their intellectual faculties to question the status quo.
- Second, any criticism at a logical fallacy can be countered with a logical shield such as: "We cannot comprehend God" or "We cannot understand God's wisdom."

So, throughout history, questioning minds have created tension in traditional religious circles. Asking "Why" and even sometimes "how" is considered a threat. "Close your eyes, have faith and enter our tunnel; then at the end you will see the light" is the ultimate invitation. Many corrupted religions and cults use "personal experience" to maintain their survival.

Einstein, having had a hard time with bigoted scientists, expressed this attitude in terms of physics: "Removing fixed misconception from the people's mind is as difficult as breaking the atom into pieces." Nevertheless, when you remove a fixed misconception from someone's mind, it starts a chain of reactions which can ignite intellectual explosions and revolutions in the walls of bigotry.

ONE GOD, ONE RELIGION

There are many examples of intellectual revolutions in the history of religion. All of them were triggered by unpopular, intellectual revolutionaries, such as Abraham, Moses, Socrates, Buddha, Jesus and Mohammed. All of them fought against clerical exploitation, idolization of humans, and blindly following parents. Their common struggle was to stop leaders from abusing the name of God and to prevent professional religionists from oppressing people mentally, politically, and economically. They invited people to One God and one religion.

Ironically, whenever those brave pioneers passed away, they became popular and their "followers" started idolizing them and putting them in competition with one another, making claims such as, "Buddha is the Lord; he is the savior," or "Jesus is the Lord; he is the savior," or "Mohammed is the greatest; he is the savior."

Further, leaders and religious scholars started to abuse the pioneer's names in order to make money and gain authority and power over people. The Crusades, the Inquisition, papal indulgences are just a few words from that rich "holy" history!

Today, there are more than half a million clergy members of all faiths in the United States. All of them make money from their religious preaching or service. The U.S. Department of Labor estimates a $38,000 average annual income for Protestant ministers, in contrast to the fact that neither Moses nor Jesus, neither Buddha nor Mohammed asked for or made money for their teachings. Indeed, in the USA alone, hundreds of thousands of clergy members make quite a bit of money from preaching doctrines that has been falsely attributed to Jesus.

Though we at Bet Emet Ministries direct our challenging questions to clergy members, our real audiences are you; the sincere followers of God. We do not expect the majority of clergymen to evaluate these questions seriously, or even the Pope to answer them. Very few people can accept the truth at the expense of losing their jobs and followers. If you are making money from Christianity; if you are a respected member of a religious corporation as I once was, you have many reasons to defend falsehood. My prayer for you is that once you come to the truth, you like I will truly consider all is "dung" for Christ. In other-words, let every man and denomination/un-denomination be liars, but let God's Word be true. It is such "truths" which I discovered that forced me to leave the traditional Christian Church and my esteemed position, because, when confronted with facts of Biblical language and history that exposed our religious error, instead of repentance by spiritual overseers I found only that all too common "ostrich" mentality of looking the other way and ultimately failing to see and confront the conflicting facts.

The issue I wish to deal with in this article is the question of whether Jesus ever claimed to be LORD (Yahweh).

DID YESHUA EVER CLAIM TO BE "LORD" OR "GOD"?

"There is condensation and editing; there is choice, reproduction and witness. The Gospels have come through the mind of the Church behind the authors. They represent experience and history." (Kenneth Cragg, the Anglican Bishop of Jerusalem, The Call of the Minaret, p 277)

Jesus never claimed that he was literally the son of God, or God. There are many verses in the Bible confirming this fact. None of the verses quoted directly from Jesus support the concept of the Trinity or the deity of Jesus, if we eliminate the interpretations of John and St. Paul and their disciples. It is a well known historical fact that today's Christianity is the product of the Nicene Conference (325 AD) and not the Judaism of Jesus.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that in that conference, the clergy established the Trinity and banned many Gospels that did not contain their distorted ideas?

In today's New Testament there are a few distorted verses about the divinity of Jesus, which contradict the whole Old Testament, and the majority of the Synoptic Gospels.

Some outstanding Christian scholars have reached the conclusion that the deity of Jesus is a mere fabrication. As the examples of critical studies on Christianity, here I list the name of two books: The Myth of God Incarnate, John Hick, ed., The Westminster, Philadelphia, 1977, and Jesus: Myth & Message, Lisa Spray, Universal Unity, Fremont, California, 1992.

The doctrine of modern Christianity with its implication that God Almighty has a multiple personality, and that He sacrificed one of His personalities for the salvation of human kind, has nothing to do with Jesus, as we have discussed in previous articles.

TWO TRANSLATIONS, TWO MEANINGS

Here are two translations of Matthew 7:21. One is from the version authorized by a king (not God), King James, The other is The New American Bible, which was translated by the members of Catholic Biblical Association of America. Notice the contradiction between the two translations in the first three words of that verse:

King James Version:

> "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

The New American Bible (1970):

> "None of those who cry out, 'Lord, Lord,' will enter the kingdom of God but only the one who does the will of my Father in heaven."

Answer for yourself: In light of the verses that follow (Mt 7:22,23), which clearly indicate Yeshua's anger and displeasure at people who call him "Lord, Lord", is it obvious to you that both translators distorted Mt 7:21 in a different manner?

Ironically, by comparing them side by side, the true account inevitably emerges: "None of those who call me, 'Lord, Lord,'. . ."

Our question for Christian Scholars on Mt 7:21 has two parts. The simple part of the question is:

Answer for yourself: Which One Is Correct:

"Not every one..." OR "None of those..." ?

Answer for yourself: And of the two possibilities, why is more correct than the other?

Answer for yourself: Could Jesus be telling us in this verse that although he is Messiah in the minds of many people, we are not to connect or confuse him with Yahweh his Father, for such would be idolatry since only the Father is to be worshipped?

1+1+1=1 or 1=1+1+1 TRINITY?

- "We worship one God in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity; neither confounding the Persons, nor dividing the Substance (Prayer Book, 1662).
- The Father is God, the Son is God, and the Holy Spirit is God, and yet there are not three Gods but one God." (Athanasian Creed).

Millions of Christians believe in the "Holy Trinity" on faith as expressed the above creed. Through this formula they have made Jesus the "Son of God", and even God himself. However, history, logic, mathematics, the Old Testament, and the New Testament prove the contrary: Jesus was not LORD Yahweh, he was a human who was anointed at the Jordan (the Word becoming flesh without measure-called adoptionism today), thus becoming anointed just as we all are, yet him above the measure of all men.

WHAT IS THE TRINITY?

The doctrine of Trinity is found in many pagan religions. Brahma, Shiva, and Vishnu are the Trinitarian godhead in Indian religions. In Egypt there was the triad of Osiris, Isis and Horus; in Babylon, Ishtar, Sin, Shamash; in Arabia, Al-Laat, Al-Uzza, and Manat. The Encyclopedia Britannica (1975) gives a critical piece of information:

"Trinity, the doctrine of God taught by Christians that asserts that God is one in essence but three in 'person,' Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Neither the word Trinity, nor the explicit doctrine as such, appears in the New Testament, nor did Jesus and his followers intend to contradict the shema in the Old Testament: 'Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord' (Deut. 6:4)"

This information on Trinity contradicts the faith of most Christians. They mistakenly believe that Matthew 28:19 and John 1:1 and some other verses clearly provide a basis for the doctrine of Trinity. However, the New Catholic Encyclopedia (1967 edition, Vol: 14, p. 306) acknowledges that the Trinity doctrine does not exist in the Old Testament, and that it was formulated three centuries after Jesus.

THIS ALL HAPPENED OVER 300 YEARS AFTER JESUS...LONGER THAN AMERICA HAS BEEN A NATION

It is unanimously accepted that the doctrine of Trinity is the product of the Nicene Conference (325 AD). H. Parri Owen, a former professor of Christian Doctrine at King's College, University of London acknowledges this fact:

". . . the early Church formulated the doctrine of The Incarnation. Here the two main landmarks are the council of Nicaea in 325 and the council of Chalcedon in 451. Throughout the centuries christology has been determined, directly or indirectly, by the formulae that these two councils produced. . . . After Nicaea, then, there was no doubt in orthodox circles that Christ was divine." (Christian Theism, T&T. Clark, Edinburg, 1984, p. 38-39).

However, this information alone is enough to create a lot of doubt about the divine source of the Trinity in intellectual circles. The Zondervan Pictorial Encyclopedia of the Bible in the article "Deity of Christ" suggests the same fact:

"The clearest and fullest expression of the deity of Christ is found in the Nicene Creed which was originally presented at the Council of Nicea, AD 325. In the English Book of Common Prayer the translation appears as follows: '. . . one Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, Light of Light, Very God of Very God, Begotten, not made.' " (Vol. 2, second ed., 1977, p. 88)

Answer for yourself: After reading just this little which I have presented, do you dare ask yourself why it was that Jesus himself, in his teachings, did not express the doctrine of the trinity "as fully and clearly" as the anti-Semitic Gentile Church at the Nicene Council did 300 years after his departure?

GUESS WHAT: IT'S A DIVINE MYSTERY.... ROME'S CATCH PHRASE WHEN ALL DOES NOT LINE UP

Questions such as, "How could the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit be totally different and yet participate in the one undivided nature of God?" have given Christian scholars a hard time for centuries. To explain the nature of the Trinity, they have written volumes of books full of interpretations and speculations ending up with a divine paradox, or a divine mystery. So, it would not be worthwhile to question the meaning of Trinity further as the answer, ultimately, will be that it is a divine mystery which cannot be understood. Instead, we will question the compatibility of the doctrine with the Bible.

USING GOBBLEDYGOOK TO CONFUSE THE ISSUE

Christian clergymen have enthusiastically praised the Trinity for centuries. They have employed impressive language to defend this fictitious concept. Let's read E. J. Fortman's glorification:

"If we truly believe that 'the ground of reality is not the nuclear composition of matter but the Trinity,' not the division of the infinitely small but distinction at the heart of the infinitely great, we cannot but dedicate all the resources of our logic, all the energies of our mind, all the fire of our heart to the loving study of the Father, his Word and their Spirit." (The Christian Trinity in History, J. Fortman, St. Bede's Publication, 1982, Introduction).

Answer for yourself: What did he say?

Fortman tries to hide the plain contradiction between the Trinity and Unity by using gobbledygook and inflated language, starting with a big "if". This is one of the common defense strategies of priests when they encounter a difficult problem regarding their teachings. William Lutz, a professor in the English Department at Rutgers University has a clear definition of this attitude:

"A third kind of doublespeak is gobbledygook or bureaucratese. Basically, such doublespeak is simply a matter of piling on words, of overwhelming the audience with words, the bigger the words and the longer the sentences the better. . . . The fourth kind of doublespeak is inflated language that is designed to make the ordinary seem extraordinary; to make everyday things seem impressive; . . . to make the simple seem complex." (Doublespeak, William Lutz, Harper Perennial, New York, 1990, p 5).

FROM YESHUA-CENTERED TO GOD CENTERED...AN ADJUSTMENT IS NEEDED TODAY IN CHRISTIANITY

As a matter of fact, modern studies on the historical development of the doctrine of Trinity lead many researchers to the same conclusion that the Trinity is a deviation from the original teachings of Jesus.

"Returning, then to the theme of the exaltation of the human being to divine status, the understanding of Jesus which eventually became orthodox Christian dogma sees him as God the Son incarnate, the Second Person of the Trinity living a human life. As such he was, in the words of the Nicene creed, 'the only-begotten Son of God, . . ." (The Myth of God Incarnate, John Hick, Westminster Press, Philadelphia, 1977, p. 171).

In this book, John Hick suggests a "Copernican revolution" in the theology of religions, consisting in a paradigm shift from a Christianity-centered or Jesus-centered to a God-centered model of universe of faiths.

In answer to John Hick, H. Parry Owen, the author of Christian Theism, tries to defend the doctrine of incarnation. After making a distinction between the irrational and supra-rational, he asserts that the doctrine of incarnation is supra-rational, not irrational as claimed by J. Hick.

"We cannot understand how God became man. We cannot explain it through any concept drawn from our experience. This is inevitable. If God himself is incomprehensible his act in becoming man must also be so." (Christian Theism, Hugh Parry Owen T&T. Clark, Edinburg, 1984, p. 30).

There is another thing that we don't understand: the source of this "incomprehensible" paradox which is INCOMPATIBLE with the clearest verses of the Bible.

Although there are distortions in the existing Bible, the overall message of the Bible can be heard clearly: there is no God besides God; do not worship any except Him.

In order to expose the contradiction between the main theme of the Bible and the doctrine of the Trinity, I will ask some simple questions concerning the Bible.

CAN JOHN'S GOSPEL BE TRULY CONSIDERED A "GOSPEL" SINCE IT NEVER MENTIONS REPENTANCE?

One of the most striking facts about the doctrine of repentance in the Bible is that this doctrine is totally absent from John's gospel. There is not even so much as one reference to it in John's twenty-one chapters! Yet one lordship writer states:

"No evangelism that omits the message of repentance can properly be called the gospel, for sinners cannot come to Jesus Christ apart from a radical change of heart, mind, and will."

THIS IS AN ASTOUNDING STATEMENT

Answer for yourself: Since John's gospel does omit the message of repentance, are we to conclude that its gospel is not the biblical gospel after all?

The very idea carries its own refutation. The fourth evangelist explicitly claims to be doing evangelism (John 20:30-31). It is not only the theology of the gospel of John that is deficient; it is the theology found in lordship salvation. Indeed, the desperate efforts of lordship teachers to read repentance into the fourth gospel show plainly that they have identified their own fundamental weaknesses. Clearly, the message of John's gospel is incomplete and inadequate without any reference to repentance whatsoever.

In fact it is even plain that John the evangelist avoids the doctrine of repentance at a point where it could have been introduced with ease. The point in question is found in the very first chapter, for it is in this chapter that the fourth evangelist reports a dialogue between John the Baptist and a delegation from the religious leadership of Jerusalem. After listening to John deny that he is either the Christ or Elijah, or "the Prophet," the delegation hears him identify himself as simply a "voice of one crying in the wilderness" an 1:19-23). Exasperated, they pose a new question: "Why then do you baptize if you are not the Christ, nor Elijah, nor the Prophet?" (Jn 1:25).

As everyone who has read Matthew, Mark and Luke knows, John the Baptist preached a "baptism of repentance" (Mk 1:4; Lk 3:3; see Mt 3:11). At this critical moment in his dialogue with this influential delegation of Jews, we expect John to announce the purpose of his baptizing ministry in terms of repentance.

But this he doesn't do. Instead, he simply says:

I baptize with water, but there stands One among you whom you do not know. It is He who, coming after me, is preferred before me, whose sandal strap I am not worthy to loose (1:26-27).

Not a word-not a syllable-about repentance. And if ever there was a perfect place for the evangelist to inject this theme into his gospel, this is the place. But his silence is deafening!

Many Bible scholars have thought-no doubt correctly that the unnamed disciple of John the Baptist who is mentioned in John 1:35-40 was none other than the fourth evangelist himself. But if the evangelist was a personal "pupil" of the Baptist before he attached himself to this new teacher (Yeshua), his silence on the theme of repentance is made all the more amazing.

The silence of chapter one persists to the very end of the book. The fourth gospel says nothing at all about repentance, much less does it connect repentance in any way with eternal life.

Only a resolute blindness can resist the obvious conclusion: The writer of the Gospel of John did not regard repentance as a condition for eternal life where as the other Apostles did! If he had, he would have said so.

Answer for yourself: After all, that's what his book is all about: obtaining eternal life..is it not (Jn 20:30-31)?

CAN WE FIND JESUS IN JOHN 1:1?

There is no other word misrepresented in Christianity as much as the word, "WORD". The greatest perversion of the use of this word is in the understanding of the text of John 1:1. The use of the word, "WORD" in John 1:1 is translated from the Greek word "LOGOS" which has its root in the Greek word "LEGO".The only correct Biblical interpretation for the use of this word in John 1:1 is the spoken utterance emanating from "God, the almighty energy force of power", or the "utterance of God's power".

An objective study of the application of "WORD" as used in the complete passage of John chapter 1 will readily uncover this misuse for all to see. If a person would view "WORD" in John 1 as the "spoken utterance of God's power", they would readily see God's power", they would readily see its true meaning as it was intended "Thus saith the LORD, thy redeemer, and he that formed thee from the womb, I am the LORD that maketh all things; that stretcheth forth the heavens alone; that spreadeth abroad the earth" (Isaiah 44:24).

If we are to believe the "LORD GOD ALMIGHTY", we must conclude He created the heaven and the earth all by himself with his "spoken WORD". God said he created all things by himself and was all alone.

The personal pronouns used to refer to the "Word", in John 1, are incorrect usage. Tyndale's Bible translated these pronouns as "it", not giving personal meaning, but referencing the "WORD". The "WORD" is a process of power, not a person or being. The Tyndale Bible was translated earlier than today's commonly used Bibles, including the King James Version.

Before you read the following verse substitute "it" for "him" and notice what it actually says by translating the following verse as Tyndale did. "All things were made by him; (Word) and without him (Word) was not any thing made that was made. In him (Word) was life; and the life (it...my paraphrase) was the light of men...That was the true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." John 1:3-9 This passage corresponds to Isaiah 44:24 above. Thus reiterating that God created all things and gave life to all men by His "spoken Word of power". Remember God's own words, that "he did it all by himself and alone".

The above passages prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that the word, "WORD" as used in John 1:1 is in fact the spoken word of God's creative power, and not Jesus as many have been led to believe because their Pastors have "read" Yeshua into the context. Such does great disservice to the Greek text as well as the Old Testament. It was God's spoken word that was with God and was God, and not Yeshua.

The word, "made", as used in verse 3 was translated from the same Greek word, "ginomai" as was the word "made", in verse 14. The correct meaning for "ginomai" is: "came into being", according to The Englishman's Greek New Testament from the Greek text of Stephens 1550. The correct translation from the Greek grammar as used in verse 14 should read like this,

"And the word came into being, and tabernacled among us, and we discerned his glory as of the only begotten with a father full of grace and truth". John 1:14

If you did not notice you should have; the "word" came into being and that means it did not have a prior existence but has a time of origin. This "word" was not preexistent with God from the beginning but had a point of origin in the scheme of time. It is thus proven, the incorrect translation of "ginomai", used different English words in verse 3 and 14. It should have been, "came into being", both in verse 3 as well as in verse 14, according to, "The Englishman's Greek New Testament, from the Greek text of Stephens 1550.

In the King James Version Bible, According to Strong's Concordance, the Greek definition #1096 for ginomai: "verb; to cause to be ('gen'-erate), i.e. (reflex) to become (come into being), used with great latitude (lit, fig, intense., etc.):" the correct choice of English wording for verse 3 and 14 should have been: "Came into being".

The choice of the words used in the Englishman's Greek New Testament stating, "And the Word, flesh came into being, and tabernacled among us," better depicts the "indwelling Spirit or Word of God", that entered into the body of Messianic believers in the "Christ", and remained there, independent of the spirit and person of a later supposed "literal" or "historical" person which many came to believe was the literal Messiah. The "Word" tabernacled among us in the corporate body of Krst/Christ, which was the "temple" of the Holy Ghost (Word). We have been "brainwashed" by Christianity to see "Jesus", a solitary person in everything when simply he is just not nor is it limited to but one person! The "Word", which was God, now resided in the body of believers as well as the Old Test "Adoptionist Christology" as taught by the Ebionites and Natzrim.

Contrary to the Catholic teachings of the "incarnation" where they believe the "word" became flesh in the womb of one woman, Mary, it is rather to believed that according to the "pattern" in our Christian "Krst/Christ" story it is at one's anointing following his "second birth" (Spiritual) that one become one with God. In our "Jesus Story" this Jesus is representative of the evolving and developing "God in man".

The Biblical definition of verse 14 is plainly given by Paul in I Timothy 3:16 and reads as follows:

"And without controversy great is the mystery of Godliness: God was manifest in the flesh (via the anointing and "second birth" of Jesus is representative of the whole of humanity who experiences a "born again" or "second birth" and does not occur at one's birth or incarnation), justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory."

This is the correct interpretation of John 1:14. You must understand what is being taught; that "God was manifested in the flesh" and connected to the immersion and allegorical death of the animal nature in man. Emerging from the water the Soul that comes down from heaven is awakened in man where before he was not and never would have been a "new creatures". This is the true "born again" experience. It is here that man is awakened to the slumbering and indwelling Divinity within him. This is the "birth of Christ" within him.

John 3:34 34 For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.

The correct translation of John 1:14 must agree with II Corinthians 5:19 which reads, "To wit, that God was IN Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation." This does not say "Yeshua is God". Again this refers to "anointing" associated with the "new birth" and not "incarnation" which is a very common religious belief of pagans and sun-worshipping Gentiles. No wonder Rome, known for it's sun-worship, teaches such doctrines (Athanasius...On The Incarnation).

John 1:14 must also agree with Colossians 2:8-9 which states:

"Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ. For IN him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily."

Again this does not mean that Yeshua is God, but rather God's Spirit dwelt in Yeshua as our "example". What is pictured in the "Jesus Story" actually occurs in each of us when awakened from Spiritual deadness and then and only then Christ will give us light:

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

Notice if you will, anointing is connected to rising from the waters of immersion which symbolized rising from the death of the water, the water of the womb for example to enter a "new birthing experience". The toomb of the Soul is broken and now enlightned and free the "gnosis" of your true Self is awakened in you. You are now a "new creature" ready to live and walk the rest of your Earthly existence as the evolving Christ. Now your path is different than before and the Divine Mind quickened in you is ready to lead you in paths of righteousess and love not traveled before.

Answer for yourself: In light of Paul's admonition in II Timothy 3:16-17, is John 1:14 correctly interpreted to mean that the "WORD" turned into the flesh at the immersion of Yeshua at the Jordan by John the Immerser or should it mean that the WORD tabernacled within Yeshua through his anointing as his baptism a more correct understanding? Of course both are correct now that you have seen it for yourself; but again I stress that this is a long cry from incarnation and virgin-born saviors which are purely pagan concepts owing to their origin in sun-worship.

Answer for yourself: What about John 14:10, where Yeshua said, "Believest thou not that I am in the Father and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works."

Answer for yourself: Where do we draw the line?

Answer for yourself: Which scriptures do we reject to support a preconceived premise, or doctrine?

If the reader would read the scriptures in light of this truth, the "Godhead" would make sense, and the doctrine of the "Trinity" would vanish away. Instead, many start with the false premise that Yeshua, in some substance or another, was in the beginning, with God, and turned into the flesh body or was incarnated in the son of Mary, thus becoming God. Such is idolatry. This is a false doctrine that is not supported by the original manuscripts nor the Old Testament as we have observed above.

Yeshua, the son of Mary, was not, and is not, God, an incorporeal entity. The "incorporeal entity God" was in the "corporeal human entity, Yeshua", the son of the human Mary and her husband Joseph. Thus saith the Holy Scriptures of the Holy Bible!

Answer for yourself: Why do the proclaimers of Christianity refuse to accept this truth, which agrees with both the spirit and the letter of the written word of the Holy Bible?

THE GOSPEL OF JOHN AND RELATED PROBLEMS WITHIN IT

The Johannine material (Gospel of John) is a radical departure from the synoptics Gospels of Mark, Matthew, and Luke. John's pseudepigraphical author (written and attributed to someone other than who truly wrote it) relied solely on the Greek Septuagint (Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures), did not have a Semitic-language background (the author was Gentile and not Jewish), and the Greek language used in the Fourth Gospel echoes what other scholars agree with, that being that the text of John "shows language and vocabulary paralleled in pagan usage of the first century A.D."
Additionally, I should like to explore the contextual differences between the Gospel of John as king-maker who turns Yeshua into a sacrificial soter man-god, Philo's Logos, and a Creator (of the universe), versus the synoptic tradition of Yeshua as eschatological Messiah and messenger who heralds the kingdom of God. This fact escapes most traditional Christians, but we much study to understand that two different Christs are presented in the Gospels and they are mutually exclusive of each other. This is not my opinion, but objective conclusion once you have viewed the facts at hand. Let us look a little deeper.

I refer to E.P. Sanders [1993] for a contemporary review of the literature that concentrates on how "John and the synoptics are again very different." I'll outline them:

- The synoptics tell that Yeshua performed exorcisms, but John does not.
- The synoptic Yeshua refuses to give signs of his authority (Mark 8:11f) but John's Yeshua is prominent in lavishing a series of signs in order to prove his authority. (2:11, 23; 3:2; 4:48, 54; 6:2, 14; 7:31; 9:16; 11:47; 12:8, 37; 20:30)
- The synoptic Yeshua asks his disciples who people say that he is but never comments on the topic himself. (Mark 8:27; 11:27-33) The Johannine Yeshua departs from this greatly by having Yeshua speak of his authority, identity, relationship with God and his disciples and so on. Nothing is privately discussed (per the synoptics) and this is all publicly open.
- The synoptic Yeshua is primarily concerned with the Kingdom of God and uses the Parousaic end-of-the-world (eschatological) message as a basis for much of his ministry. The Johannine Yeshua is primarily concerned with his own role as a "soter" or sacrifice to God. Only in 3:5 does Yeshua mention the Kingdom of God, but only conditionally, dependent upon being "born from above."
- Most striking is the style. Unlike the synoptics, in John there are no stories, no actions, that illustrate how God deals with his people. "Just as there are no synoptic-like similes or parables in John, there are no symbolic metaphors in the synoptics.

The synoptics often describe discourse in simile form: the Spirit of God descends "like" a dove (Matt. 3:16); the Kingdom of God is "like" a mustard seed (Mark 4:31); the Kingdom of God is "like" leaven (Luke 13:21). John however makes liberal use of categorical statements such as "I am" (the true vine [15:1]) or "I am from above; ye are of this world." (8:23). John for the first time, makes his Yeshua state definitively those things that early Christians thought that he was, but that he himself did not say that he was.

- The Johannine Yeshua is ripped from the synoptic and Judaic traditions and made into a Orphic mystery religion. In the manner of the soter-gods (Dionysus and Osiris) Yeshua is made into the role of a mystery soter god and declares that he is "the Bread of God."

Answer for yourself: The question we must ask yourself is this: "did God intend to send His son as a Jewish Rabbi and quote pagan mystery religious rituals or would he more likely of have quoted Moses or His Father from Sinai? Let us investigate.

"For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world. Then said they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread. And Yeshua said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst. (John 6:33-35)

Answer for yourself: This sounds so beautiful doesn't it? But the facts of the matter may alarm you. This non-Jewish concept is an abomination to the very Jews who Yeshua lived among, taught, and himself believed accordingly. The Johannine Yeshua is made to declare: "He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him. (6:56) This distinctly pagan element that John grafts onto the Yeshua-story gets to the core of the god-man pagan mystery-cults of the Gentile world such as Mithra. Yeshua's own disciples told him that the pagan soter (savior) motif was "a hard saying; who can hear it?" (6:60) Of course the historical Jesus never would have said this and to the pseudepigraphical author of John, the Jews were incapable of understanding the mysteries that he wrote about anyway. Their fate was predestined to turn away from his pagan construct and retain their own Jewish ways.

These, and other Johannine elements attached to a "paganized Yeshua" were so close to the cult of Dionysus that Justin Martyr found himself apologizing for their similarities. Additionally, the cult of Dionysus and pre-200 CE Christianity were often confused with each other so that people accused the Christians of infanticide, sexual orgies, and omophagia, (eating of human flesh as a transubstantiation of the god), practices which were widely known as Dionysaic.

Answer for yourself: Just ask yourself if the Catholic Christian Church adopts transubstantiation in its mass? It sure does. Justin found himself defending Christianity against these charges declaring, and I quote him:

"Do you also...believe that we eat human flesh and that after our banquets we extinguish the lights and indulge in unbridled sensuality?" (Trypho 10).

Tertullian likewise wrote, "We are accused of observing a holy rite in which we kill a little child and then eat it...[and] after the feast, we practice incest...." (Apology 39).

Of course we know a great deal of early Christian Eucharist practice from many sources, most revealing Cyril (315-386) of Jerusalem and his Lectures. These Christian practices entitled "mystagogical" (after the pagan mysteries) describe the process whereby initiates are to become "wedded to Christ" (as Orphic initiates were wedded to Dionysus) and led into a grand processional to the chapel for esoteric study and final initiation.

Eighteen of Cyril's lectures are a catechism concerning the fundamentals of Christian faith warning adherents to beware of the Devil and his machinations, told of the world's end, and the secrets of heaven, hell, and the resurrection. Perhaps most revealing due to its striking connection to the pagan soter mysteries, Cryil describes an eventual Eucharist ceremony where the initiate accepts a eucharist as a substitute for the literal body of the Christ: "Thus we come to bear Christ in us, because His Body and Blood are distributed through our members; thus it is that, according to the blessed Peter, we become partakers of the divine nature." (22,3).

Additionally, as expressed by Lohfink (former Catholic Theological professor at University of Tubingen, now at Munich) [1987] we are in a serious exegetical predicament as to the nature of the "kingdom of God" due to the Gospel of John's success in "transforming the concept into the ideas of God's righteousness." Almost from the beginning the synoptic kingdom of God that Yeshua spent so much time preaching others to aspire to, was quickly misunderstood and lost. John successfully places Yeshua in the role of the savior through whom all must pass in order to achieve the kingdom of God. Clearly, Yeshua did not teach this himself in the synoptics.

Yeshua taught that the kingdom of God was a "present-tense" manifestation (or a gift) which was readily available to those who repent and follow the Law. "Blessed are the eyes which see what you see. For I tell you: Many prophets and kings desired to see what you see, and have not seen it..." (Luke 10:23ff) and when tempted by a lawyer who asks "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?" Yeshua replies: What is written in the law? how readest thou? And [the lawyer] answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself. And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live (Luke 10:26ff).

Later Yeshua emphasizes the present-tense gift of the kingdom of God by telling his disciples that "the kingdom of God is already at your disposal." (17:21) Lohfink says that "Yeshua's message is simply misunderstood if it is formulated in such a way that God gives his kingdom, but not entirely; that He allows it to break forth, but only part way."

None of these Judaic elements survive in the Hellenic Gospel of John. Yeshua's words are ignored and the pagan soter mysteries are preferred instead. The two cannot be reconciled against each other: either Yeshua was originally correct in the synoptic tradition in saying that rigid adherence to the law would bring the worshipper to God or John's mysteries that place Yeshua in the central role of eternal life-giver are correct. Either Yeshua was a Jewish Messiah (eschatological messenger) per the synoptics, or he was a Johannine Logos and Creator of the world. But he cannot be both because again they are mutually exclusive of each other.

We have a long way to go in explaining these contextual discrepancies before we can say with any certainty that the Johannine soter is reconcilable with Yeshua, the Palestinian Jewish Rabbi of the synoptics.

DID JOHN MEAN FOR US TO INTERPRET THE "WORD" AS "JESUS"?

Answer for yourself: From the prologue of John's Gospel, I have a very valid and legitimate three part question:

(a) Was not Yeshua God from the beginning?

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. (John 1:1)

(b) Were not all things made through Yeshua?

He was in the beginning with God. All things came into being through him; and apart from him nothing came into being that has come into being. (John 1:2-3)

(c) Was not Yeshua made flesh and dwelt among us?

And the Word became flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, glory as of the only begotten from the Father, full of grace and truth. (John 1:14)

This three part question is so often repeated, collectively or individually, that I will try to answer them from various perspectives. For an uncomplicated comprehension, I am going to separate the three part question into three separate questions. I will deal with part (a) above:

Answer for yourself: Was not Yeshua God from the beginning? Only if you mistranslate the passage.

The verse insinuates "Yeshua was God from the beginning" because Christians have, for the last numerous generations, embraced the concept of SUBSTITUTING the word "Word" (Greek term "Logos") with "Yeshua". John did not write "Yeshua". It is a SUBSTITUTION.

One can only SUBSTITUTE (of course with admissible logic), the original term IF the LITERAL translation of the used term fails to reconcile with the rest of the text. Unfortunately, as you will soon discover, the situation here is the other way around.

Please read the last two lines from (a) with the SUBSTITUTION. It reads; "and Yeshua was with God and Yeshua was God."

Answer for yourself: How can Yeshua be "with" God and "was" God, as well? It defies logic.

The SUBSTITUTION creates an enigmatic dilemma to which the Christian scholars have yet to find an answer.

The norm of accepting the SUBSTITUTION has been so deep rooted that no believing Christian scholar has sincerely attempted to find out what in reality is the LITERAL translation. Let us do it together.

The Greek term "Logos" is derived from the root word "Lego" meaning "to speak". The literal translation of "Logos" is "something spoken or thought". The verification of the above translation is simple. Please pick up your English Dictionary and look for the word "Decalogue". Surprised! It reads; "The Ten Commandments": (deka=ten; logous=commands). Now please flip a few more pages of your dictionary and go to the word "Logos". Please look for the word origin. In my pocket Oxford Dictionary it reads; "[Gk, = reason, discourse, (rarely) word]."

Having discovered the LITERAL translation of the word "Logos" used by apostle John, let us read (a) again:

In the beginning was the "spoken word, command", and the "spoken word, command" was with God, and the "spoken word, command" was Divine. (John 1:1)

The LITERAL translation is not only logical but it coincides perfectly with the prologue of the Book of Genesis.

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." "And God said, Let there be light; and there was light." (Genesis 1:1 and 3)

Answer for yourself: You may now ask, why did I translate "Divine" instead of "God" in the last line? The answer is based upon the usage of Greek grammar. In the second line, the phrase used by John for "God" is "ho theo", meaning "the God". In the last line it is simply "theo", the definitive article "the" is not used.

Answer for yourself: Why?

Because, it is a predicate of the subject "ho theo". The predicate is used to denote the nature, quality, attribute or property of the subject. Here the in this instance the nature of the God's spoken command was Divine.

In The New Translation of the Bible (1922) by the famous Dr. James Moffatt, it reads; "the Logos was Divine." And, also in The Complete Bible - An American Translation (Smith-Goodspeed) and The Authentic New Testament by Hugh J. Schonfield.

Paul wrote; "...if any man is preaching to you a Gospel contrary to which you received, let him be accursed (anathema)." Gal. 1:9. That means we cannot read John 1:1 and interpret that this means Yeshua! Thus "Yeshua" is not from the beginning like Yahweh who has no beginning and no end. Yeshua has a beginning and no end. This idea is the backbone of the Council of Nicea. Unfortunately, this pagan controlled synod voted against the then-current belief and tradition and forced its will upon millions. Today we have the fruit of such hypocrisy as we worship Yeshua mistakenly thinking that he is God in the vast majority of churches today. You simply cannot use John 1:1 to prove it as others have tried to do. Those ignorant of Bible facts that I have shown you have arrived, and continue to arrive at conclusions from reading only the English that cannot be supported when read in the original languages.

THE GOSPEL OF JOHN AND THE HELLENIZATION OF JESUS

I suppose of all the Gospels in the Bible the Gospel of John is the most familiar and beloved by the readers of the New Testament. When one repents and comes to God often he is told to read the Gospel of John first for it reveals the love of God for men. What is often overlooked by most is that the picture of Yeshua in the Gospel of John is completely different from the pictures of him in the Synoptic Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke.

Answer for yourself: Why so?

Answer for yourself: If the Yeshua one sees in John can be shown to be less than the authentic Yeshua who really lived and taught and died, then is this "the Yeshua" we are to have faith in?

Answer for yourself: If one was to do in-depth study and find that the picture painted for us in the Gospel of John of Yeshua is in reality based upon pagan mystery religions and Greek philosophy instead of the Torah and the Prophets, what are we as believers to do?

Answer for yourself: Should we trust out eternal life and our fate to a fictionalized rendition of "a Yeshua" who never existed except in the minds of pagans who altered the documents we revere as the New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Do you know the facts of what happened to Christianity over 1700 years ago? Do you know the difference?

Answer for yourself: Do you want to know the truth before you die and meet God face to face?

Answer for yourself: Will paganized concepts and beliefs about God and His son do us well on that day? The time to repent of such errors and false doctrines is now because adherence to them constitute Idolatry!

Knowingly I don't believe anyone would willfully commit such a sin, but unknowingly we do. In the article that follows I will reveal to you what I found throughout my search for the Historical Yeshua and you be the judge.

THE HELLENIZATION OF JESUS: MAKING JESUS GOD

Unaware to the average Christian TODAY but well aware to the Jews in the first few centuries CE (that's why they could not believe and accept the message and picture of the Jewish Rabbi Yeshua in John's Gospel), in the Gospel of John we find the culmination of Greek philosophy that has created the Yeshua that we are the most familiar with today. However, we are not aware of how we came to such a picture of the Yeshua we accept today. A fully-formed Hellenized (Greek influenced) Yeshua has emerged to become an equal with God in the Gospel of John. This alone repudiates the monotheism of Judaism as well as the first two commandments of Exodus chapter 20. The Gospel of John, written as late as 120 CE and long after the apostle John had died, is complex and mystical (although the early Catholic Church attributed it to the apostle). The Gospel of John's purpose is to propagandize the message that "Yeshua is God Himself" and not the real message he brought to the world. In the Gospel of John we find Yeshua pictured as the creator of the universe, and so powerful that "whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (3:16). Hardly ever do we interpret this verse as "believing in him...Him being the Father instead of the son as it was intended. By such misinterpretation, we focus on believing "in Yeshua" instead of believing in "his Father and His Word..the Torah."

The anonymous author of John makes liberal use of allegory to illustrate this theme that Yeshua is God. The literary style of the author matches the mysticism of his subject perfectly: "The writer of John achieves a rather constant variation through the use of synonymous words and phrases, restatement of phrases and clauses, changes in word order of repeated statements, and the repetition and restatement of certain thoughts on the same subject, even to the point of outright contradiction" (Freed, Edwin, The Son of Man in the Fourth Gospel, Journal of Biblical Literature, p. 402.)

For John, nothing is at it seems and Yeshua symbolizes the catalyst for eternal life and the path with which to achieve everlasting life in the divine realm where Yeshua has descended from. We are erroneously led to believe that believing in Yeshua (and his identity as being equal with God as directed by the Catholic Church of the first three centuries) instead of his message of repentance and deeds of practical love leads to eternal life. Even the casual reader of the four gospels can easily discern the jump between the Synoptic tradition (first three Gospels with parallel pictures of Yeshua) and the apocryphal John. If you will be truthful with yourself, if all you read was the first three Gospels there is no where you could come away with a belief that Yeshua is God, however, by reading the Gospel of John you arrive at that conclusion. Curiously enough, even Paul makes a distinction between the Lord (meaning respected one of authority) and God the Father. It is to us I speak today to warn of unsuspecting Idolatry in our worship of God.

We see in John a desire to use Greek pagan concepts and philosophies as a tool for communicating Yeshua as the "Logos" to a Christianized Gentile audience. John's Logos would not be understood by Jews of Yeshua' day and his book would only be familiar to someone (Gentiles) practiced in the pagan mystery cults that flourished in the Hellenistic world.

It has never ceased to amaze me that an apostle of Yeshua would choose to use Greek concepts to relay the message of Yeshua to the world. What is even more staggering is that this document was written when Judaism was in a life and death struggle for survival with Hellenism which sought to assimilate it entirely; both politically and religiously. With such a battle for existence, I find it rather perplexing that in the expression of God's revelation to mankind that He would choose to use Platonic (Plato) and pagan concepts to reveal a Jewish Yeshua and a Jewish message.

ORIGIN OF THE LOGOS:

Heraclitus of Ephesus used the word Logos around 500 BCE to describe his concept of the regularity with which the universe seemed to operate. The universe was a divine machine and Heraclitus credited the Logos (literally the reason) as the ultimate rationale which secretly operated the universe and the heavens above.

The Logos was often ill-defined, but was responsible for keeping the ratio of all things in proportion, much like the balance of Eastern yin (dark) and yang (light). The cult of Hermes made use of this to describe their Hermetic corpus written about in the Poimandres: "The [Poimandres] writer fell into a deep and heavy trance, in which there appeared to him a being who introduced himself as Poimandres (Shepherd of Men), "the Mind of Authority." Poimandres then shows the mystic a vision, in which he sees a great light and a great darkness, respectively reality and matter. From the light comes "a Holy Logos," ...the "shining Son of God," who proceeds from Mind itself...".

Answer for yourself: Now, does this sound like God's revelation to Israel to be a light to the Gentile nations?

By the beginning of the Common Era (the days of Yeshua), the Logos was a deeply felt and intricate part of Greek thought despite its mystical and sometimes confusing machinations. It was well established that the Logos was a divinely felt presence of God, but no philosopher could find a more practical implementation for how the Logos actually mattered to humans and their lives. The man who would provide this meaning and give personified substance to the Logos at the beginning of the Common Era was Philo.

Philo of Alexandria (30 BCE - 45 CE) introduced the concept of the Logos as an allegorical force of Yahweh. He was a Jew of the dispersion, and observed the mitzvot, yet like a lot of cosmopolitan Alexandrians of the time, worshipped the Greek gods too.

Answer for yourself: Can we trust what one such a Philo has to say since he was little better than a pagan polytheist?

Philo believed that the two worlds were not irreconcilable and the Logos was his attempt at melding Yahwism with the Greek vision of God. The Greeks, armed with the powerful philosophy of Plato, and later Aristotle, believed that God was inherently "unknowable." He was beyond human understanding and all attempts to describe God would end in failure. However, a glimpse of God could be attained through rational thinking and deep meditation. If one could achieve the Hermetic level of mystical awareness as chronicled in the Poimandres, one will be able to experience God.

Yahweh, however, was much different in that he was easily accessible and constantly busied himself with the details of everyday Jewish life. Yahweh could be experienced and explained in traditional human terms: fear, envy, hope, and of course, revenge. When the Israelites needed a victory on the battlefield against their enemies, Yahweh, the "god of war," was there to assist them and even to plan battle tactics with them (Exodus 15:3; Numbers 10:9; Deuteronomy 1:41, 4:34, 21:10). He promised unending war with the Amalekites that would last "from generation to generation" and that he would be with them always in their battles (Exodus 17:16). Yahweh was the opposite of the philosophic construct of the Greek Unknowable; he was nearby and could be reached easily just by calling out to him.

Philo's work bridged this gap, postulating an "ousia" of God, or a singular essence, which is the unknowable, and an "energeiai" (energy) which was the very thoughts of God. God's energy could interact and touch the lives of mortals despite the remote ousia which was inaccessible to man. Philo believed that humans interact with God by experiencing the energy of where he had been; God's shadow could come into a mortal's life even if only briefly. The Logos was a mediator for God; making it possible to realize the energy of God, and thus, by extension, the impossible ousia of God Himself.

Answer for yourself: Now, let me ask you, does this sound like the representation of a Jewish Rabbi named Yeshua? Even more, do you think that God would have His son represented to us in such terms?

Answer for yourself: Then who wrote the Gospel of John, or at least, who altered it by adding pagan and Greek concepts? Why express God as "logos" instead of "Torah?"

Because of Philo's allegorical interpretation of the Old Testament, Moses, when descending Mount Sinai with Yahweh's Torah is depicted as experiencing Yahweh's energy and we are told that the people who saw Moses were 'blinded' by the energy of God's presence which still emanated from Moses' face. In the New Testament, Philo's Logos ushers in a new way of thinking about Yeshua, leaving behind the Messianic messenger of the Q source (circulating oral traditions by his followers concerning the authentic Yeshua) and the early Synoptics (the Gospels of Matt., Mark, and Luke).

Philo never explained clearly what his Logos was, but it often took on the form of the essence or divine nature of God. Philo's "Word-Logos" was extremely popular among Hellenized Jews and non-Jews (Gentiles) alike, successfully splitting God into multiple personifications that pagan worshippers would later refine further from Bi- to Trinitarian concepts (Trinity) that we are familiar with today.

We first see the application of the philosophy of the Logos in the prologue of the Gospel of John which begins by proclaiming Philo's triumph: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God The same was in the beginning with God ...and the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father [God]." (John 1:1-14).

THE TRANSFORMATION OF JESUS:

the Gospel of John is distinct from the Synoptic Tradition (other three Gospels) because of the nature of the transformation of Yeshua. The shift takes us from the Judaic idea of a chosen people's messiah and Jewish Rabbi, to a Greek form for Wisdom, a "sophia", that pervades all things and all people. The Word that has existed from the beginning, and while the Word came and dwelt among men, "they knew him not" (1:12). John has promulgated the Logos in a radically new way. Suddenly, man is not only capable, but deserved from the beginning of time, to accept the Logos, the Word, the Christ, as a gnosis (knowledge), an available knowledge of "the Elect." This gnosis provides the foundation for fellowship whereby man's evil nature and the perfect God can meet and establish a relationship. Like other Greek philosophical constructs: beauty, wisdom, and truth, Yeshua, as the Logos, becomes God for Philo and others.

The Hellenization of Yeshua is complete in John. Yeshua' eschatological, or end of the world, message of repentance is removed and Yeshua instead comforts those who have vigilantly awaited his second coming: "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also" (John 14:2-3).

John's Yeshua relieves the tension that filled the early Christians; the long overdue wait and the tardiness of the apocalypse (return of Yeshua) which never came. However, such has been explained at last. By the beginning of the second century, when it was realized that Yeshua was not coming as promised, John comforts his fellow Christians and allows them the luxury to carry on in life as normal. John's Yeshua is preparing their proper place and it is on his timetable, not theirs, and in due course he will let them know when it is ready. Nearly two thousand years later, we are still waiting for John's mansions to materialize.

Also, the author of John was heavily influenced by the Essenes, a mystical ascetic Jewish sect who sequestered themselves from civilization and waited for the Parousia, the apocalyptic end of the world. There are similarities between Essenic writings such as the famous Dead Sea Scrolls and John such as the belief that men must repent spiritually and then be baptized to become purified in that spirit. This concept is alien to Messianic Judaism, but baptism was practiced by the Essenes who, in turn, learned it from the Greek Pythagorean mystery-cult (http://bennoah1.freewebsites.com).

Other similarities include the numerous allegories between the "light" and the "dark." We are told that the "light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not" in John 1:5 and later: "While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light. These things spake Yeshua, and departed, and did hide himself from them" (John 12:36).

The Essenes wrote extensively about the Children of Light who were constantly engaged in a battle against their nemesis, the Wicked Priest who was of darkness. The contrasts of those who walk in the light and those lost in the dark are played heavily in John. Dialogues are set up between dupes who are of the dark (the world), and Yeshua of the light (heaven). There is no hope for these children of darkness who are doomed to take Yeshua' rhetoric literally. The woman at the well in Samaria is told that "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again. But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst, but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life" (4:13-14). She does not understand Yeshua' meaning, but John's intended readers who are already well-versed in Philo's allegory are well aware of the spiritual water that Yeshua is referring to.

John portrays Nicodemus as having misunderstood Yeshua' mysterious teachings that one must be "born from above" or again to enter the kingdom of God. Laying aside the Jewish concept of "being born again" which Nicodemus must have fully understood since being "the" teacher of Israel (the best and most knowledgeable), and taking Yeshua quite literally, Nicodemus asks, "How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?" (3:4). The allegorist-minded reader can smile along with John and rest assured that as one "chosen" they can understand the message of Yeshua although Nicodemus does not (John 15:9). Further, Nicodemus plays the fool in order to strengthen and legitimize the underlying spiritual journey of being born anew. The Johannine Christians were particular in isolating themselves from the Children of Darkness, i.e., anyone who was not "born from above."

Answer for yourself: Why so?

Answer for yourself: What did Gentile readers understand and know then (in the first centuries of the Gentile church) that we do not today that would have made the Gospel of John especially important to them and instrumental in their conversion from paganism to a modified-paganism we call Christianity today?

Early Christians most likely practiced then-common spiritual journeys that were widespread and written extensively about in Persian, Egyptian, Babylonian, Greek, Roman, Jewish and Christian literature. Grese writes: "John 3:3 and 3:13 are concerned with heavenly journeys, and only the meaning "born from above" fits this connection.... Yeshua is the only one with access to the heavenly secrets...[which] demonstrated [the Christians] superiority over those who surrounded them (Grese, William, "Unless One is Born Again": The Use of a Heavenly Journey in John 3, Journal of Biblical Literature, 107/4 (1988) p. 679-681).

The early Christians, like all of their religious contemporaries from whom the Christians drew their converts, desired to verify their religion by making a spiritual journey and seeking the divinity on the higher planes of existence where he dwelled. The Logos, dwelling therein from the beginning, could be "felt" by this heavenly trip through the higher planes. Yeshua is made to say in John that unless one undertake this journey, they cannot achieve everlasting life. The liturgy of the Eucharist that John prescribes to the converted in being "born again" is necessary "so that the speaker might gaze upon the immortal beginning (Yeshua) with the immortal (Holy) spirit ... and be born again in thought."

I know this sounds foreign to us today, but we must understand this was "common knowledge" then. Thus the bridge to the Gentile communities in hopes of their conversion from the multiplicity of cults that existed and the gathering in of them under the banner of "Christianity" which was done as much for the stability of the Empire of Rome as was done for religious reasons.

Some modern Christian believers are familiar with this concept of being born again through a spirit and regard it as unique to Christianity. Such is not so, because in the discourse between Nicodemus and Yeshua the real Jewish meaning is overlooked or not known (see previous newsletters addressing being born again).

The just-quoted text ("born again" is necessary "so that the speaker might gaze upon the immortal beginning (Yeshua) with the immortal (Holy) spirit ... and be born again in thought") however is from the pagan Mithras Liturgy, a guidebook of sorts that assists in the Eucharist and prepares the sojourner for his heavenly journey. It advises the seeker of the Sun-god (father of Mithras) to pray saying: "First beginning of my beginning, ...spirit of spirit, the first spirit in me, ...now if it be your will, ...give me over to immortal birth and, following that, to my underlying nature, so that, after the present need which is pressing me exceedingly, I may gaze upon the immortal beginning with the immortal spirit, ...that I may be born again in thought."

Answer for yourself: The question I must ask you is this: If Yeshua says that he speaks only what the Father speaks, then are we to believe the Father is speaking such as I have shown you, let alone use concepts such as "Logos" to express Himself to the world when he previously ONLY revealed Himself to Israel in Jewish formats?

Answer for yourself: Are we to accept and make connections that the LOGOS is referring to Yeshua because we have heard it said, or are we to understand the origin of such concepts and be wary of them, not letting them lead us to conclusion foreign to the Ten Commandments by making Yeshua the Logos and thereby making him God? You be the judge.

Many Greek and Roman texts survive which describe similar transformations that are necessary before one may ascend to heaven. In John, we find this same message merging between this unique Mithraic Eucharist ritual (Lord's supper which in reality has no mystical intention what-so-ever, but was in context only a reference originally to the three Sabbath meals in observance of the Sabbath) and the Jewish Messiah of Yeshua.

Answer for yourself: Are we to believe John's Yeshua acts as the Mithraic communicator (this is out and out paganism) in the heavens (where Yeshua was believed to be born and lives)? Knowing this, we must be on guard for other places in the writings of the New Testament whereby Cosmic Mediators are inserted by Gentile Monks to alter the original message of a Jewish Rabbi.

The heavenly journey, familiar to the Christianized pagans who were converting en masse and for whom John writes, needed more than the Judaic discipline of strict adherence could provide. They needed assurance that their conversion would not be in vain. End of the world messages and doomsayers were rampant during the time of Yeshua and a healthy skepticism benefited the would-be believer. But, as the Samaritan woman and the example of Nicodemus the foolish disciple show, the spiritual journey was not for everyone, only the Elect. These victims of Yeshua' spiritual revelations and allusions are caricatured for the benefit of the Christianized Johannine reader, who is well aware of the role they wish their "non human savior" to play. That Yeshua himself is particularly void of human characteristics, typical of a Jewish messiah is strikingly apparent: "To his participants in the story, Yeshua reveals little other than their ignorance. He leaves them baffled, confused, and angry while he moves on, serenely untroubled, through the highly charged atmosphere that he has created. ...Yeshua is not quite human. He does not laugh; he does not appear to suffer; he remains impassive through all the confrontations that he provokes with both Jews and Romans, until he accomplishes his goal: the cross. He dies only when he knows all that has been fulfilled, expiring in complete control and saying only, "It is finished."

WHAT IS THE BOTTOM LINE:

John was written for the Greek Christian of the beginning of the second century. These recent Gentile converts were more educated, wealthy, and despised the Diaspora (exiled) Jews who resided in their cities and who enjoyed the respect of Rome. John removes from his Gospel the offensive references to Yeshua as a Jewish Messiah that are particular to the earlier three gospels, in order to present the Logos in more palatable form for his Gentile readers. In so doing, John creates a "person" that is barely human. Therefore, he must be a god! The earlier Synoptic traditions are emphatic in presenting Yeshua as the Jewish Messiah, descendent of David, and eschatological messenger of the end of the world where God collects his Chosen People. John removes the unpleasantness of Jewish genealogy as well as all references to Palestinian and Davidic descent.

Yeshua is distanced from the Jews who are the children of darkness:

"Ye do the deeds of your father. Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication; we have one Father, even God. Yeshua said unto them, If God were your Father, ye would love me: for I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me. Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word. Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it"* (John 8:41-44).

Yeshua is made to condemn the Jews as Satanic by John, while the Christians are now the Essenic ideals of the Children of Light with a special gnosis (knowledge) of revelation in understanding the Logos in its true form (as had the pagans before them). John's non human "superman" loses several qualities that we are familiar with from the Synoptic tradition. Notably, the birth narrative of Yeshua is missing, we are told in the prologue only that "in the beginning" Yeshua coexisted with God and that he is "full of grace and truth."

Answer for yourself: How could this one be human? John feels that to inform us of the particularly human trait of birth, even if virginal (that is another story) and thus not actuated by lust, would not be fitting of a God who is the Word.

Human characteristics that Mark informs us of, such as the need for cleansing through baptism (1:9) or the Temptation (1:13), are conspicuously absent from John. These would not be "godlike" characteristics. To John's author, Yeshua has no need for cleansing, he is already without sin. Likewise it would be foolish to narrate the temptation in the wilderness, for Satan is obviously no match against God and John's intended reader would be confused over such an idea. By the time John was first written at the end of the first century, the tales of Yeshua grew to such an extent that Yeshua was now fully transformed into a Hellenized god. And for the most part he has remained that way today, no thanks to Constantine and the Council of Nicea in 325 C.E. which established the fact for us today. The only thing you should know is this: Constantine had a multitude of gods he worshipped, what was one more? He already had his father "deified" upon his death, and planned to do so with his own demise; thus, what stops us from adding another god to the picture?

Only one thing I can think of..Exodus 20 and the First Two Commandments.

So you must come to the knowledge of the truth....and choose between the Yeshua of History or the Christ of Faith, the Rabbi Yeshua or the "Logos-God-man" creation of the mystery religions. Only though serious study will one be able to come to the truth of this matter. Shalom.

BET EMET MINISTRIES: COMPLETE STUDIES ON CD & SUGGESTED PLAN OF STUDY

As many of our readers have come to know, Bet Emet Ministries has been an "evolving" study over the last twenty years since dedicating myself to coming to the correct understanding and interpretation of the "Jesus Story". Following Seminary, what had once seemed to me to be a simple story worthy of belief in the New Testament from the perspective of the pew, was shown to be nothing of the sort. In fact, in Seminary it became evident that it was a collection of jumbled and conflicting texts in Hebrew, Greek, and English, which when compared with teach other, contradicted it each other in so many ways that a Divine hand behind them stretched believability to the max. Surely, I reasoned, that God, if the author of such writings Christian texts, could have agreed with Himself. Surely, if God was behind the writing of this New Testament. The disagreements between these New Testament texts are astounding. Mill, in 1707 C.E. listed over 30,000 and today estimates of textual differences in the New Testament exceed 400,000. What I mention is not simply copyist errors and omissions; rather I was introduced to a new world of conflicting theologies and beliefs depending upon which manuscripts you choose to include in your "Bible". The Jews had theirs, Catholicism, and Protestantism had theirs. Even other ancient nations like Egypt had theirs. Central to all of these texts and all of these Bibles since the beginning of time is the idea of Divinity mediating with material existence through "the Krst/Christ" or whatever each nation called Divine Mind that "fell" and "incarnated" into physical existence and "matter" and exits as Consciousness. The stories of this creation, Divine consciousness, and mankind's awareness and existence of it were told since the beginning of time and from ever nation to nation down through history. Being born in America we grow up with the "Judeo-Christian" story of this same ancient creation account along with stories to help man understand that behind all that his senses can see and experience that there exists is a God, a Creator and Ultimate Origin and His Krst/Christ. What concerned me was that my "religious belief" was centered and was founded upon certain "texts" that I was told to trust for my understanding of this God and His outreach to me. But, seeing the unreliability of these texts in Christianity alone, I had to wonder, as studies advanced, why my Christian texts and Scriptures deviated so drastically, not only from each other, but the earlier Hebrew Scriptures and later use in the New Testament in "key" theological positions regarding, for example, the Jewish Messiah as well as "the Christ" (termed Jesus) in the New Testament. When this awareness of the textual problems in Christianity is factored in to other religious studies like comparative religions, gnosticism, hermeticism, astronomy, ancient Egyptian religion, etc., a blind man can could see that in the 2nd through the 5th centuries a concerted effort was made to "change the Krst/Christ" story that had been held sacred since the beginning of time. I wanted to know why, the greatest and most ancient story ever to mankind, the story of God's Krst/Christ, was so distorted and corrupted and given different meanings in the 2nd through the 5th century from what it had been understood by the whole of mankind for over ten thousand years.

Matt 16:13-14 13 When Jesus came into the region of Caesarea Philippi, He asked His disciples, saying, "Who do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" And, question 2… Matt 16:14-16 15 He said to them, "But who do you say that I am?"

Little did I know at that time that my life would become dedicated to finding the answer to this question. That was twenty years ago and my personal studies would become the foundation for Bet Emet Ministries to help others wade through all of the conflicting theologies and find the answer to the greatest question that life will ever pose to them.

If this CD is to prosper you then you need to accept the following axiom:

"A Christian's religious belief system, when tested and exposed to contradictory facts from Biblical languages, unbiased Biblical history, Biblical culture, Archeology, Gnosticism, Egyptian Religion, and Astronomy, must in the Spirit of Truth and Repentance be flexible enough to change....that is, if "truth" is your goal"...Craig M. Lyons Ms.D., D.D., M.Div. The only religion that God ever gave mankind is Truth!

The results of my search for this truth concerning "the Krst/Christ" are most exhaustive and comprehensive and are on various websites but also available on a CD for those wishing to speed up their studies in these important areas. I know this amount of information and knowledge on this CD and Ministry's websites can be overwhelming at times but remember this is a collection of studies into the origins of Christianity that separated from its mothers' faith of Judaism and which has told the world that it is the only way to "Salvation" and all other paths to God guarantee damnation and a burning hell and torture for those who reject the traditional Christian message that "Jesus saves". If Christianity, as its exists today, is to be validated as God' truth then it has to stand up to scrutiny of its beliefs and the texts from which these beliefs are derived. I will let the student decide these issues for himself when he is acquainted with the evidences presented on the CD but he needs more than "belief" in texts that today can be shown to be more than unreliable when examined with a critical and scholarly eye.

There is a proper sequence to the study of this CD. If not followed, then the student could lose way and not come to the truths that he desires and become frustrated and put down this most information concerning his Soul and never take advantage of this opportunity presented him. Therefore, we begin our studies with a "literal" and "historical" study of "Jewish Roots". Along the way we move beyond the "literal" and "historical" understanding of the Christian Bible once seeing that, simply, it is seen in the light and evidence of today to be a pseudo-history at best to which "mystical" and "metaphysical" concepts are inter-dispersed. The "key" to proper understanding is to know "when" and "where" these interpretations change. We end our studies with the goal before us with the "mystical and metaphysical" study of the Divine Sacred Mysteries which is the "hidden knowledge" behind what appears at first glance in our Bibles to be a simple "literal" and "historical" story. It is here in these beginning websites, when seeing the "literal" and "historical" interpretation of the "Jesus Story" for what it really "is" an and what it is "not" along with personal awareness of the corrupted Hebrew Scriptures on which it is made to stand by Rome during the 2nd through the 5th century, that we can in full confidence move onward to find the truth behind the "Jesus Story".

The Rabbis always taught there are 4 levels of interpretation of Sacred texts. You cannot give a baby what it cannot digest until he grows and matures. The same is applicable to Spiritual food.

Heb 5:12-14 12 For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat. 13 For every one that useth milk is unskillful in the word of righteousness: for he is a babe. 14 But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil. (KJV)

Our simple "Jesus Story" suffices for most until the Soul in man cries out for more. There is more, much more! The truth beyond the "simple" lies in "awaking from the dead" whereby we no longer want Spiritual gerbers' food but the "strong meat" for those who desire to come into the "fullness and stature of Christ". This, admittedly, and sadly, is not for everyone at the point in life to which you find yourself possibly today. But if you want "strong meat" and the "Secret to Life" and your "True Self" and "Krst/Christ" then this is the "mystery hidden from the foundation of the world" and it is for you. Your time has come and it is now. Understand that the ancients who handed down to us this Sacred Book, these Hebrew Scriptures, had its origins in ancient Egypt. The Jewish people came out of Egypt where they were born into higher Spiritual Truths than the "simple" stories of our Bibles appear to teach. The Bible, at best, is a pseudo-history to which "encoded" Divine "mysteries" are hidden in symbol and glyph and lie sleeping behind "simple Simon" stories; the "keys" to which are need to open the eyes of the dead. This will become familiar to you as your studies advance.

Again, there is an order in which this CD is to be "studied and followed". There is a "step-by-step" awareness that must be adhered to if you don't want to get "lost" in such abundance of information. Looking back on my life, I did not always know to follow "the path" from step to step, but sorted it out over the years and when stepping back ever so often to analyze the horizon of my studies. In so doing the "order" became apparent. You are recommended to follow the "path" but if your current studies are at a certain level beyond the "first steps" then by all means begin where you feel comfortable. But it is important that you follow the "evolution" of "thought" as we first must deal with all of what we have been taught in "literal" and "historical" way in order to prove "it is not" and then begin to look at what we do have lying in wait for us behind the hidden mysteries in the "Osiris Story", called today the "Jesus Story". The Spiritual enlightenment you will receive will be the most incredible journey of your life. In fact, your incarnation is purposed in discovering this Divine Truth in this plane of existence. In fact, this knowledge and understanding revealed by the ancients and incorporated on this CD is the sole purpose of our incarnations, to "become the fullness and stature of this Christ" while living in an "animal body". Plato said, "God is a man in an animal body". It is time we find that out. Here is the suggested order for the study of these various websites and the path I would recommend they be studied:

Following this "pattern" of study, the one in which we start out scrutinizing the Old and New Testaments texts "literally" and "historically" as we have been taught since children we, step by step, we eventually come to see that such a "literal" and "historical" interpretation of these Sacred Texts as we have them in the New Testament is foolish let alone unbelievable to a sound mind. We have to examine our inherited "Jesus Story" both "literally" and "historically" because we have been told that we must "believe and be baptized" or be damned. We come to see that God never said that; the religious clerics did. What we do find, however, step by step, is that under the religion of Judeo-Christianity, under the typical "literal" and "historical" understanding of the "Jesus Story", an interpretation that cannot hold up when exposed to many infallible proofs today that prove it faulty, lies a completely different understanding of this "Jesus Story". This "Jesus Story" is the oldest story in the world, told for over 10,000 years or more and never was it "literal" or "historical" and about "another"; it was always about God's child, you and me as we come to know and understand it. On the surface Bet Emet will show the student that the "Jesus Story" cannot be "believed" in such a manner as we have been given it (a lesser mystery), but should be understood on a much deeper level. As our studies continue to advance, we will come to see the "Jesus Story" as a much higher Spiritual revelation given to mankind about his True Self and the God within him. It is this understanding of one's True Self and his inherent Divinity that the ancients connected with man's second birth called being "born again" in our texts. But reading these texts today with Rome's imposed understanding and without the ancient understanding completely nullifies the true meaning of being "born again" as well as our incarnational purpose as your continued studies will reveal. Ironically, the studies on this CD can be compared to the dying and resurrection seen in the "Jesus Story"; revealing what the "Jesus Story" is "not" since being taught as children to approach it as a "literal" and "historical" story of someone else, while at the same time revealing "what it truly is" when understood as did the ancient Spiritual masters "mystically" and "metaphysically". As Christians we inherited this wonderful story built upon 2,000 years of imposed mistranslations and misquotations of the Hebrew Scriptures. It is time to see the truth about Jesus.

What you must keep in focus in such a study is that when ALL of the present knowledge is sifted looking for truth using as unbiased scientific method as possible then we find that down through history the spiritual masters of our race has understood "this Christ" that dwells within us as the manifestation of God in 2 basic ways:

· The Mystical Christ

· The Mythical Christ

Over time we find that from these above two methods of interpretation of God and His Christ "within us" there developed a 3rd interpretation of "the Christ"

· The Historical Christ

No matter how far you go back in time and no matter in what nation you look you find that the first, and in my opinion the most correct understanding of God and His relationship to "matter", ie, mankind, is found with Egypt and the nations that learned of the Creator from them. It is here we find "the Mystical Christ" and the "Mythical Christ" and when correctly understood these religious beliefs and understandings of the Divine hold the greatest understanding and secrets of the Divine that exist on our planet today. Opinions on Egypt are divided today but there are scholars emerging today that challenge the current understanding of Egypt expressed by such current voices as Mark Lerher and Z. Hawasse and these modern scholars are restoring the greatness and understanding of Egypt as the world's first monotheistic nation which we see when correctly understanding their Ancient concepts of God and the Egyptian "Krst/Karast". We call him "the Christ" today. It all began a long time ago, over 10,000 years ago or before, and archeology today is overturning the erroneous understandings we have inherited of that time and beliefs which are largely due to Roman religious censorship down through church history. As your studies grow in these areas you will see why we are challenged to our very core by what these Ancient Spiritual Fathers understood of God and His Cosmos and His Christ in lieu of what we have been taught today about the "historical Christ" and the "historical Jesus" from Rome with their Second New Testament.

Being born into Christianity we inherited a "Literalistic" interpretation of almost everything we read in the Bible never knowing without serious study that this book was at best an allegory placed in the historical development of the Jewish people (the biological children of Egypt). We, not knowing this, read this book with "literal glasses" never realizing that what we were reading is at best "blurred" religious concepts of the Ancients which they never interpreted "literally" but only "allegorically" or "metaphorically". Make no mistake about it, these stories, when understood as "allegories", expresses a "literal" Divine Truth that is not about another, but about the person who comes to an awareness of them. We must never forget that when told through the medium of legend and myth the identifies of the characters (Osiris, Horus, Dionysus, Attys, Mithra, Jesus) were but anthropomorphic vehicles designed to express such Heavenly truths and were never to be understood as if "real people" or "historical characters". In other words these "gods" and "goddesses" and "godmen" were never real but expression of the "godman" in each of us when we come to understand that man truly is the "Temple of God" or the "Temple of the Holy Spirit". We are the Divine Himself trapped in matter through the Descent of the Soul from Heaven into material existence....flesh. These concepts began with Egypt as did most of what we have heard taught in our churches today in one way or the other although, more often than not, they have lost their original understanding and interpretation as taught by the Ancients who first gave mankind these Divine messages and truths. In its place, we have been given a "radical reinterpretation" that has caused us to fail to grow Spiritually in ways our Father intended, all the while looking for a Cosmic-God-man to do for us what we are to do ourselves as we come into the fullness of our true identity as God's Christ through our Earthly experiences. We have lost so much through the "literalization" of these Divine Allegories and Myths. The incarnation of Jesus in a manger is only to show us that Divinity has incarnated into an animal body. This is not another's story; it is our story as the children of God. This principle is applicable to every part of the "Jesus Story". The "Jesus Story" is "our" story.

To see and fully comprehend this beyond any doubt, since having learned so much incorrectly, we must unlearn error by being "retaught". That is why I present the beginning studies and websites with a "literalistic" and "historical" method of interpretation as that is where we both began our pilgrimage to God in our birth faith of Christianity. In so doing I chose to use this method of interpretation to help the "babes in Christ" grow to see at first, for example, the beauty of Judaism as the legacy of Egypt since it is the best and truest expression of these Ancient religious beliefs and revelation of these Ancient Spiritual Masters that we have existing today in the world. There is no "literal" "godman" in Judaism unlike Christianity and therefore no threat of idolatry unlike what we innocently inherited with our Roman Christianity and Protestantism. This "literalism" of these Divine Concepts as confined to but one person as we find in the "Jesus Story" is to be understood not as a blessing but as a curse when your depth of study advances to see the "Gnostic Christ" within which, by the way, modern scholarship teaches us today was the earliest understanding of "the Christ" as held by both Jewish and non-Jewish Gnostic Christians in the early Church before the rise of Roman Christianity. Let us not be so naive to not know that winners of wars write history from "their view" and that this has been done by Rome and the world fed "their book", the New Testament. As your studies advance, the insightful reader will come to notice the blending of both the "Gnostic Christ within" and the "historical Christ without". The "radical reinterpretation" of "the Krst/Christ" has begun. Rome should have done a better job editing and altering these New Testament texts as they left trace evidence "here and there" in these same texts which they corrupted and forged that betrays their untrustworthiness in "key" theological places. Rome forgot to change them all! The insightful reader and scholar comes to see these over time and the dichotomy and tension between "two different Pauls" for example, or the differences between one of the Paul's message and the message of Jesus becomes apparent. One Paul agrees with the message of "the Christ"; the other Paul does not. It is all on the websites. That explains why so much of the Pauline epistles contradict what he has said in other places and people believe Paul to be schizophrenic. Trust me, the real Gnostic Paul had it right! Rome, will not!
